NINETY GOLD STREET  NEW YORK CITY
THE KING OF THE AIR

A drama played in two elements and reels. An aeroplane falls from the sky with its aviator and is wrecked on the ground. This is as thrilling a scene as has ever been shown in motion pictures. It's an ill fall, however, that does nobody good and the aviator falls into luck more to be prized than the $40,000 prize he loses. 1-6 sheet posters.

The Count That Took the Count

1-part Robbins-made American comedy. There may be an Irish Count—papa thought there was, but neither he nor the real count counted with daughter. The son, however, counts with you and with every funny-bone in your audience.

THE PERILS OF PAULINE

Inside your theatre or out Pauline is the favorite. She's the first lady of the screen. Pauline inside your theatre reaches to the crowds outside and draws them in. Once in to see Pauline they'll come again.

PAULINE PLAYS TO CAPACITY HOUSES

The TICKET OF LEAVE MAN

3-part Pathe-American-made drama. A man's rust in his friend forces him to stand for the crimes for which the friend himself is guilty. In the face of forgery and bribery the wrong man is compelled to hide his time in a Tropical Convict colony, and from a scuttled ship becomes a castaway in company with the right man's fiancee. Chock full of adventures, escapes, and the most tense situations. Featuring Eleanor Woodruff. 1-3-6 sheet posters.

ON THE ISLE OF SARNE
A Comedy-Drama adapted from "The Picaroon" by H. B. Mariott Watson

Countess Dorothea was plunged into the depths of despair on learning that her uncle, the Duke, was determined upon her acceptance of Count Sigimund. She and her tutor were taken to the Isle of Sarne until she should submit. One day a yacht approached supposed to have on board the dreaded Sigimund; but instead it brought a stranger, Peter Seabrooke, with whom the Countess eventually fell in love and with whom she fled to England. Meanwhile, however, Seabrooke impersonated Sigimund so well that the Duke never suspected he was anyone else until the very last. An exciting, well planned film.

The High Cost of Circulation

THE other day I overheard two men discussing the effect of the war upon the newspaper business. One thought the newspapers were reaping a harvest because the public was buying so freely.

"On the contrary," said the other, a publisher, "we are losing heavily. It costs us one and one-eighth cents to put in the street the paper you buy for a penny—this in normal times."

"Take from this the distributor's profit, and you'll see that we lose heavily on every unit of circulation.

"The more copies we vend the more money we lose—unless the advertising revenue increases in proportion. That never happens when the circulation is suddenly jumped by war news. On the contrary, it is more apt to diminish—to go below its amount in normal times."

The other man was vastly surprised. He didn't know that it costs more to produce a paper than it sells for.

It would seem that the general public—advertisers included—not only knows less about the advertising business than almost any other industry, but has a complete misconception of it.

This is due in large measure to the fact that—for some reason—the publisher is disinclined to take the outsider into his confidence.

That makes little difference so far as the reading public is concerned—except that not one reader realizes what a value he is getting for his money.

But the advertiser should know the basic fact of the publishing business; else how can he buy his space intelligently—as he buys labor, goods and commodities in general?

His general idea of the publisher is that the latter is bent upon acquiring as large a circulation as possible.

That is true—provided advertising is acquired at a rate sufficient at least to make up the inevitable loss in circulation.

It will surprise him to know that there are several metropolitan dailies sold at one cent and at least two national weeklies sold at five cents that are scared to death of big circulation, for fear the advertiser will not pay the necessarily increased rates.

And of the thousands of publications issued in the country, there are only a few isolated and unimportant instances where a publication makes money on circulation alone.

These publications have no advertising promise, whereas every publication of well-known advertiser is a heavy loser in circulation revenue.

In fact, the better a publication, the more he will lose on its price to the reader, provided its price is made popular.

"Better" means heavy editorial expense, and the paper and paper of a superior character.

The newspaper form is the cheapest way to get a publication; but even this kind of publication on circulation revenue unless its editorial expense is very cheap and its price comparatively high.

In each case its circulation will be so restricted not to interest the advertiser.

The Motion Picture News loses a good-size tune each year on circulation revenue.

It costs us many times the subscription for the production.

But we give the subscriber big value, and interest and confidence.

And then we deliver these substantial units of circulation—each one a man generally in business a buyer—to the advertiser, charging him definite any honest commodity is sold.

Naturally, we are not interested in acquiring non-business, non-buying circulation, for the reason that it is a loss to us and no gain to the advertiser.

The thing for the advertiser to consider buying space, is, first, the number of buyers of his product, and then, the fact that the only satisfied when he pays for any circulation.

We contend—and know—that the statistic's mate of 18,000 picture theaters in the U.S. and Canada is wrong by more than one million.

MINNEAPOLIS EXHIBITORS Plan Big Convention

Association Officers Expect a Turn-Out of About 350 in Minneapolis During the Three Days’ Session, October 27-29

The Motion Picture Exhibitors’ Association of Minnesota will hold a convention at the West Hotel, Minneapolis, for three days, commencing October 27.

The first day of the convention has been set aside to enable out-of-town exhibitors to get acquainted with the exchange men. It is the intention of the committee in charge of the entertainment to escort the out-of-town exhibitors to the local exchanges, and have them get an idea of how a film exchange is really run.

It is generally understood that 60 per cent. of the out-of-town exhibitors have never seen the inside of a film exchange.

The officers of the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ Association of Minnesota are: Harry H. Green, president; J. Gilowski, vice-president; W. A. Steffes, secretary, and D. G. Rodgers, treasurer.

About 350 of the exhibitors are expected, and this coming convention promises to far surpass anything ever attempted along this line. The whole parlor floor, the entire lobby, gallery, and assembly hall and adjoining rooms on the floor have been reserved for exhibits.

Film exchanges will display their products. There will also be a projection room in which motion pictures will be run continuously during the three days.

Mr. Green declares that 85 per cent. of the members of the league are working day and night to make this coming event the biggest one ever accomplished anywhere. The convention will close with a banquet and dance.

Mr. Green further states that an open meeting will be held every day, to which all are not only welcome but urged to attend as well.

Any manufacturers or film men of the Northwest desiring to make reservations for accommodations and display rooms are requested to address the secretary for price and space.

The general office of the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ Association of Minnesota is located at 240 Temple Court, and Mr. Steffes, the secretary, has expressed himself more than willing to do everything in his power to look out for advance reservations for hotel accommodations, etc.

The general feeling is that this coming convention is bound to be a success, judging from the enthusiasm displayed by all members of the league.

The Minnesota league is one of the few not associated with the national organization, but its membership is increasing week after week, and this convention is bound to boom things along.
Exhibitors Declare War Tax An Injustice

Protests from Harrisburg and Washington Theatre Managers Against $100 Levy on Theatres in Town of Over 15,000 Population Urge United Opposition to Fight the Measure—Some Think Size of Theatres Should Be Considered

The proposed war tax of one hundred dollars to be assessed on motion picture theatres throughout the country to assist the government to raise $100,000,000 in the deficit crisis, is considered unjust by exhibitors.

Their objection does not imply a lack of patriotic feeling or a desire to get out of paying their share of revenue. They object to a loosely drawn bill which works hardship on those who can afford to pay the hundred dollars.

Managers feel that the tax should be graded according to the amount of business done. It is obviously unfair to exact the same figure from, say, a man running a four hundred capacity house as the man who has a theatre holding one thousand.

The following reports contain vehement protests against the proposed measure, and the motion picture managers voicing these objections base their stand on facts which Congress should be apprised of before allowing the one hundred dollar tax to remain in the bill.

In this part of the measure, working such hardship on those who are least able to afford it, exhibitors see the value of solid organization, and decry the unpreparedness of the association at this time for making strong representations to the government at Washington.

The United Theatrical Managers' Protective Association, recently organized for the purpose of looking after the interests of "legitimate" and screen interests, have protested against the tax through Marc Klaw, who sent a telegram to the Senate Finance Committee last week, calling the attention of Congress to the grave injustice that will be exercised toward the industry if the one hundred dollar clause is retained in the bill.

Harrisburg Exhibitors Regard War Tax as Unjust

Special to THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS
Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 29.

"It is outrageous to propose to put a war tax of $100 on motion picture theatres," said J. M. Lenney, owner of the new Grand Theatre, at Fourteenth and Derry streets, and the Lenney Theatre, 5 and 7 South Thirteenth street.

"The exaggerated ideas the politicians have of the money-making ability of picture theatres is ridiculous. Here in Harrisburg each theatre now has to pay $35 a year for the State tax and $25 a year State tax. By adding $100 war tax the total will be $175.

"This will simply drive the little fellows out of business. It is a great injustice, and I am in favor of our local organization doing whatever it can to help defeat the proposition. The ordinary picture house is estimated by about 50 per cent, the earning capacity of a picture theatre."

Tax Would Close Many Houses

His case may be regarded as typical of those of many other small motion picture houses in this section of the State in which the proprietor and members of his family do almost all the work and are just able to make a comfortable living.

"One hundred dollars a year is about all I can expect to clear beyond a living and the payment of expenses," said Mr. Miller, "and if that is taken away from me by a war tax I will simply get out of business. I am patriotic enough to be willing to stand a part of the financial burden that the war imposes on the government, but to tax a five-cent theatre with three hundred seats the same as a big ten-cent house with one thousand seats that can give many more performances a week than my house is the grossest sort of an injustice."

"At the next meeting of our local organization," said James George, manager of the Victoria, 233 Market street, "I am going to propose that we take what steps we can to protest against the one hundred dollar war tax. I believe this is an excellent opportunity to learn what organization can do for the motion picture business.

"Individual protests here have amounted to nothing in the past in the matter of preventing unfavorable legislation at the State capital. I cannot forecast what our local organization will do, but I feel very confident action against the war tax will be taken after the subject is thoroughly discussed by the members."

Urges United Opposition

"State-wide organization is the most effective medium for fighting the unjust war tax which Congress proposes to impose on the motion picture theatres," said Oliver Bender, of Bender Brothers, proprietors of the new William Penn Theatre, which is about to be opened at Thirteenth and Thompson streets.

"I am a thorough believer in the saying that 'in union there is strength.' An individual protest amounts to nothing in a matter of this kind. The thing to do is to get together and let the law makers know that we will fight the imposition of this tax with full and united strength of the men of the motion picture business. This should serve incentive for the various local organizations to be strongly welded together for their self-protection."

"This $100 tax is entirely unfair," said Isaac Marcus, proprietor of the Royal, 1205 North Third street, the handsome new National Theatre just opened at Sixth and Dauphine streets.

"Our local organization, I understand, is going to take the subject up at the next meeting when some practical opposition to the tax is less will be agreed upon. I am un

Would Help Some

C. E. Hanshaw, for years a successful merchant, who has just opened a large motion picture house at Third and Harris streets, said:

"We have to pay fifty dollars to the city and twenty-five dollars for a license, and now we are confronted with this additional one hundred dollar tax. I am against war profiteering and don't think much of a local organization of exhibitors who say for the general principle of organization, however, that our local association of coal dealers has accomplished a great deal for that business and I am a firm believer in making a united stand to prevent injustice."

Isaac Silverman, of the Photo Theatre, 221 Market street, is opposed to the proposed war tax. He said:

"I am against war profiteering and don't think much of a local organization of exhibitors who say for the general principle of organization, however, that our local association of coal dealers has accomplished a great deal for that business and I am a firm believer in making a united stand to prevent injustice."

Sam has in some way to raise $100,000,000 to offset the loss in revenue due to motion picture business. I would rather pay fifty dollars than to see the foods and other necessities that the people have to buy take the place of those which are now on sale. Besides, the $100 tax would help those of us who have theatres in the central part of Harrisburg, with the exception of the outlying districts, where they are nickel, to put their prices on level as ours."

THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS
Washington Exhibitors to Fight Proposed War Tax

Washington, D. C., Sept. 30

The motion picture exhibitors are reacting with a strong protest against a proposed tax by Congress of $100 on each theatre in a city of 15,000 population or over. Already Fulton Bracken, secretary of the Exhibitors League of the District of Columbia and vice-president of the National League, wrote to Congress setting forth the unjustness of such an indiscriminate taxation.

Tom Moore, who operates a chain of theatres, including the largest exclusive-pictures houses with seating capacities of 200 and 1,500, made these statements:

"The motion picture exhibitor is all very well for the motion picture exhibitor to be taxed along with his other amusement, but it is not fair for the man with the small theatre to be called upon to pay as much as his larger competitor. Personally, I can readily afford $100 for large theatres, but it would work hardship with the smaller, residential ones. Above all things, we must not let Congress to put a tax on the exhibition of the large theatres. To the exhibitor have the tax, must come, and let him regulate his own business to make up that sum as he sees fit. And he will not put it on the admission, but he will to work a little harder perhaps, expenses here and there, or be con- with a little less profit. As six cents and eleven for admission does not please the class exhibitor, and it is quite likely patrons would not tolerate it. We consider the patrons, for they are source of revenue. If this is a matter for the local League to protest to Congress. Many of the local exhibitors have no weight at all. The State organizations should collect data in their community and send the National League, so that it has all necessary facts to present for a bill. A hearing will be given in organization and then the men at capital will have the proper information at hand. Something must be done now."

Unfair

Allan Airey, manager of the Alva, was also interviewed, and he had this to say:

"If the tax has to come, it should be proportioned according to the capacity of the theatre. The picture exhibitor should not be showing as the big theatre. He has all sorts of stringent laws for fire, building, license and the Sunday shows must be done very quietly; yet the houses have practically the same show on Sunday as during the week. There is no fairness in the matter. Congress thinks we are making all sorts of money, but the reason because it has not the facts. We must protest and we are going to protest."

Alan Backrach, manager of the Casino, who has charge of the picture end of the Brylawley chain of six theatres, also spoke of the unfairness of the tax and the fact that it was a tax on the theatres. He also spoke of the unreliable information Congressmen appeared to have in hand as to the wonderful profits of the industry.

"Let them come look at the books of the motion picture theatres and the Congressmen will then see how we stand. Reels are getting more expensive, service is more expensive, rentals are higher and regulations more exacting, and yet the price of admission is practically the same as when all these items were lower."

"War is coming, the great profit. More than this, Congress should realize that in this present moment, with the war occupying the minds of the people, the motion picture business—in fact, all amusements—are suffering. The mind of the public is turning to reading matter of the war or its discussions and not so much to amusements. Our business has felt this greatly this summer and the outlook is not so promising for the fall."

"Amusements are always one of the first to feel the financial depression of any national movement. Through the local and national leagues Congress will certainly be given the proper facts. We are going to protest, to be sure."

Size Should Be Considered

T. H. Johnson, manager of the Maryland, with a seating capacity of little more than two hundred, was loud in his protest against being expected to pay $100 along with his neighbors who operate houses of 1,200 and 1,500. "It is not just," he said. "Besides, there seems no reason why all kinds of business enterprises should not be included in this tax. Let the department store, the shoe man, and a whole lot of others help to pay this tax. I don't see how the small exhibitor can stand it. We can't raise the price of admission, for it is the low price that has brought us the people, and it takes a heap of nickels to make up the price of the ticket in the large theatre houses."

Harry Crandall, manager of Crandall's theatre, was also of the opinion of the foregoing exhibitors in the unfairness of the amount set in the proposed tax. "If we must come in for our share of the war tax, we are willing to do so, but it should be proportionate to the man's business," said Mr. Crandall. "Similar taxes have been proposed on railroad and other big corporations, but they have been nipped in the bud when the Congressmen realized what a power these corporations had upon their voting chances."

"Does the Congressman realize what a power the motion picture man has if he wishes to use it? Think of the pictures they could in one day read about certain Congressmen tampering with an amusement which has become a vital source of the daily relaxation and education of the people."

"Some men now in Congress would soon begin to lose their popularity in their own community. Somehow the motion picture industry does not want to resort to that, but it does want justice and it is going to fight for it."

Advantage to Small Towns

In addition to the same protest of unjustness in the sum proposed for all exhibitors, Nat Glasser, manager of the Leader, made this point:

"The fact of making a tax less than $100 for cities under 15,000 population is not fair either. For many of the small towns having fewer houses do a great deal more profitable business than the houses in the larger towns, but they are not from personal experience. The competition is less, rents are cheaper, and regulations are less exacting. Many an exhibitor in a town of 10,000 will be better able to pay a $100 tax than an exhibitor in the city of 50,000."

"Besides, the motion picture is well recognized as of educational value, and it is also an important factor in community interests. All this should be taken into consideration when proposing a tax. It seems that it would be better if the manufacturer were taxed proportional to the film he produced, and then the exhibitor could better stand the slightly additional price of his service."

"For somehow the exhibitor gets the bit of it all, but he wants it as soft as possible. Of course, this is a matter for the National League, but it needs the co-operation of all local and State organizations. It is organization alone that will count."

ROCHESTER TOUCHED HIGH PRICE MARK

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 30.

Good business is reported from all sections of Rochester by exhibitors, both the downtown houses and those in the outlying districts enjoying excellent patronage. Though the weather has been warm and fair, the theatres have been thronged.

"Neptune's Daughter," featuring Anneta Kellermann has concluded a three weeks' engagement at the Winter Garden, playing at twenty-five cents admission. It was here able to go through a three weeks' engagement, at the highest prices ever asked for motion pictures in Rochester, was a revelation to many of the local exhibitors.

It is realized that the picture is an unusual one, but the prices obtained and the length of the engagement taught the local picture theatre proprietors and managers a lesson.
POLICE CENSORSHIP BREAKS OUT AGAIN ON COAST

Department, Ignoring the Rights of Exhibitors Implied in the Stillwell Injunction, Makes Arrests on Flimsy Charges, Confiscates Films and Shows Unnecessary Activity—Managers Regret Not Taking Firm Stand at Beginning of Trouble

San Francisco, Sept. 28.

The censorship of motion pictures in San Francisco has not come to an end, as might have been expected by the victories recently secured in the courts by exhibitors, notably the Silver Palace Theater Company and the San Francisco Independent Theatres Company. Temporary injunctions against molestation by the chief of police, and that official will give no definite information when the ban will be lifted.

When his original order was issued to stop the showing of all pictures thought objectionable by the police, it was understood that it would be in force but a few days, or until the preliminary excitement had died away. It is now almost two months since the censorship of war pictures was taken over by the self-appointed censor, and both exhibitors and exchange men are chafing at the annoyances and losses that are being suffered.

Evils of Delaying Concerted Action

The general opinion is that a grave mistake has been made in not combining forces at the very start and making a vigorous stand against the order, as it is acknowledged on all hands that the chief of police has absolutely no authority to enforce such a ruling.

The brunt of the battle against this police censorship has been borne by a few, and while the latter have been successful, new and trivial ones are being brought up constantly, and these exhibitors are being annoyed at every opportunity.

Why are the police officials of San Francisco persecuting the motion picture men of this city? That is a question that is agitating the minds of members of the trade. Not only are motion picture men being subjected to inconveniences, but the public funds are being wasted in making arrests on flimsy charges, in confiscating films, in obtaining search warrants, and much more excitement is being created than is caused by the exhibition of war films.

Undue Police Activity

The chief of police expresses the opinion that the display of war pictures may cause a disturbance in the audience of a theater, something that has never occurred here as far as is known. He thinks nothing of sending armed members of his force to a theater in break into the operating room seizure films during a performance, arrest exhibitors and disturb the audience by loud and threatening talk. The only disturbances that have been caused in local theaters showing war films have been provoked by the police themselves.

The arrest of Charles Stillwell of the Silver Palace Theater for showing the film, "Faithful unto Death," was followed by his dismissal by the court and the granting of an injunction to prevent Chief of Police David A. White from interfering with the exhibition of war films there.

However, when an effort was made to show "The Kaiser's Challenge," this exhibitor was again arrested on the former charge, with the added charge of maintaining a public nuisance, the police objecting to the crowd that was attracted.

This arrest occurred on a Saturday afternoon, when it was probably felt that it would be impossible to secure the $600 bail money demanded, but the sum was raised, and Mr. Stillwell was released, the films being held. When this case came up for hearing later the charges were dismissed.

The Apex Film Company, which owns the feature, "The Kaiser's Challenge," has engaged Attorney A. S. Newburgh, Pacific Building, to contest the right of Chief of Police D. A. White, and Peter Peshon, of the censorship board, to interfere with the exhibition of this and similar films.

File Damage Claim Against Police

A damage suit has also been filed against each of these in the sum of $500 to cover losses that have already been sustained, and Mr. Newburgh is confident that damages will be awarded.

Judge J. M. Seawell, of the Superior Court of San Francisco, recently issued a restraining order, and an order to show cause, the plaintiff being P. P. Grav, doing business as the Apex Film Company, and the defendants D. A. White and Peter Peshon. To show the scope of this it is appended in full, as follows:

"The plaintiff having filed herein a verified complaint from which it appears that the defendants and persons under them and by their orders, without right, prevent the plaintiff and plaintiff's customers and patrons from exhibiting in this city and county of San Francisco, a certain moving picture called 'The Kaiser's Challenge,' and other moving pictures of a kind similar to said 'Kaiser's Challenge,' of a class of pictures known as war pictures, and that if-said prevention continues the plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury and that the plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law for such injuries and it appearing that this is a proper case, therefore:

It is Ordered, That defendants show cause before this court in Department One thereof, at the hour of ten o'clock, on the 25th day of September, 1914, and then and there show cause why a temporary injunction should not issue out of this court restraining the defendants and all persons and officers of police of the city and county of San Francisco during the pendency of this action from preventing the exhibition of said moving pictures or interrupting the exhibition of the same or from seizing the same.

Ordered to Keep Hands Off Films

It is Further Ordered, That in the meantime and until the further order of this court, the defendants in this action and all persons acting under them or either of them, and said officers of police are restrained and enjoined from preventing or interrupting or hindering the exhibition of said war pictures in the city and county of San Francisco, and from intimidating and deterring proprietors and managers of moving picture theaters in said city and county from exhibiting the same by threats that the exhibition of said pictures will be suppressed, or that persons exhibiting the same will be molested by the police of said city and county; and from seizing and detaining said pictures." grounds that a drama was only a story in words, and as the play was not suggestive, there was nothing in the constitution to prevent its being shown.

In the case of war pictures, these are merely photographic reproductions of current events, and in the opinion of legal lights there is no more liable to police interference than are the daily newspapers.

Article 1, Section 9, of the State Constitution reads: “Every citizen may fully speak, write and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right. But such a law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press.”

This section of the State Constitution is plain enough in its guarantee of personal rights to the citizens of the community and it is hoped that the police department will be compelled by the courts to acknowledge this right. The exhibitors feel that the matter has gone far enough.

BOISE CENSOR LIKELY
Boise, Idaho, Sept. 29.

The proprietors of motion picture theatres are somewhat up in the air over the stir here for a city censorship board, which, being agitated by one of the newspapers in the city, spoken of favorably by the mayor and endorsed by the Boise Ministerial Association.

Not being organized locally or having a state organization in Idaho, the theatre managers are not in a position to make a combined and drastic fight against the appointment of a city censorship board. All but one theatre manager, however, is bitterly opposed to such action upon the part of the city’s head, and feels that it would be an injustice to the business, especially when Boise is located several hundred miles from a film exchange.

Organization Shows City Council Impossibility of Dividing Theatres to Keep Sexes Seated Apart During Performances
Los Angeles, Sept. 28.

MOTION picture theatres of this city will not be forced to have separate sections for men and women, and women with escorts, as was the desire of Chief of Police John Sebastian, as a united effort of members of the exhibitors’ league, led by the president, Judge A. P. Tugwell, succeeded in killing the segregation ordinance when it came up for hearing before the public welfare committee of the city council.

The ordinance was framed by the city attorney at the suggestion of Chief Sebastian after the police department had received complaints from women and girls that mashe rs frequented the motion picture theatres. The police officer thought it would be impossible to prevent flirt ing unless the sexes were segregated and recommended the ordinance.

The exhibitors in the defense of their rights, and to prevent further action on the part of the police, showed that such an ordinance would increase the daily expense because of the need of additional ushers; that at times it would be necessary to keep many people waiting outside in case there were more men than women or vice versa; and that inasmuch as various religious denominations had for centuries tried to segregate the sexes and failed, it was more than probable the motion picture theatre managers would be unsuccessful.

California League Ready for Convention
Members Expected to Make a Strong Showing in San Francisco on October 6-9—Exchange Men and Producers Invited
San Francisco, Sept. 28.

THE California Motion Picture Exhibitors League will hold its annual convention in Convention Hall, Phelan building, San Francisco, October 6-9 inclusive.

The league has extended a cordial invitation to exchange men and producers for the purpose of promoting harmony among the various branches of the industry.

It is expected that a large number of visitors directly interested in the motion picture business will attend, and the organizers predict an assembly numbering a thousand exhibitors.

At first the city of Sacramento was selected for the conclave, but San Francisco was finally agreed upon by the members of the organization on account of its location and its nearness to the exchanges.

The entertainment committee has planned a sightseeing trip on a large automobile for the guests, and has chartered the steamer Arrow for an afternoon’s ride on the bay. A masquerade ball will be held at Wurlitzer’s Music Hall when Mayor Ralph will lead the grand march. A banquet is scheduled for the occasion, at which Governor Johnson will preside.

Rochester Wants New Exhibitors’ Club
Several Managers Dissatisfied with the Old Organization—Local Association Having No State or National Affiliations Is Proposed
Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 30.

THERE is a growing sentiment among those connected with the motion picture business of Rochester that there should be a local organization here, such as a Screen Club, through which those engaged in the business might become better acquainted with one another, and work to better advantage.

There is an organization of exhibitors at present, but, owing to the political situation in the state and national organization, it is not very active and its meetings are not very largely attended. It stuck to the old ship when the big break came some time ago, and has been lying low for months.

Some of the men engaged in the motion picture business here are beginning to talk about the formation of a Screen Club, and it would not take much urging to induce the majority of men here to join such an organization, the club to be entirely independent of other organizations, state or national.

“We never have an opportunity to get together for business or pleasure,” one of the younger men in the business said, in discussing the project.

“There are many of us who would like to do so, but the way does not seem to be open through the local exhibitors’ league. If some one would take the initiative, a club could be formed readily, and started off with a whoop. It would soon become a powerful factor, too, in the motion picture business of Rochester.”

Milwaukee Exhibitors Dissolve Association

Lack of Support or Part of Members Brings One of the Best-Known and Most Active Exhibitors’ Bodies in the Country to the End of Its Existence—Phillips’ Final Appeal Calling Upon the Managers Throughout the State to Stand by Milwaukee, Is Vain

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 29.

HE Motion Picture Association of Milwaukee is to disband and with it will undoubtedly go the newly organized Wisconsin Photoplay Association, as the local exhibitors make up the major part of the State organization.

This disbandment will come as a distinct shock to the exhibitors all over the country, for the local organization was the one that so successfully combated the censorship agitation in this city and which succeeded in having the local citizens’ committee appointed, a body which the National Board has recommended as a model to all cities endeavoring to solve the censorship problem. The Milwaukee Association was also honored by having one of its members, C. H. Phillips, president of the International Motion Picture Association.

The letter, calling the meeting to disband, is dated September 26 and is signed by S. Trinz, the secretary. It is as follows:

IMPORTANT.

Mr. Exhibitor:

The directors of the Motion Picture Association of Milwaukee decided to call a meeting Friday, October 2, 1914, for the purpose of disbanding the association and making a division of the money in the hands of the treasurer in proportion to the amounts paid by the respective exhibitors.

The reason for taking this step is the lack of interest shown by the exhibitors in organization for the protection of their interests.

The amount in the hands of the treasurer runs into three figures, and we have decided that only the exhibitors who will appear at the meeting will participate in this distribution.

Now, therefore, if you fail to appear as above stated, you will not be one of those who will derive the benefit of this fund.

Respectfully yours,

S. TRINZ, Secretary.

“We have been forced to take this step,” said Mr. C. H. Phillips, counsel for the organization, “on account of the attitude of many of the local exhibitors, an attitude that can be best illustrated by a speech made by one of the Milwaukee exhibitors who when he was approached for his dues, sent word that he could get along without those —

“I am very sorry that this should come up at the very time that such a splendid campaign is being waged for new members, but we have no other course left to us.”

Mr. Phillips’ last act was to send a state-wide appeal to all Wisconsin exhibitors to support the new organization.

In his speech at the opening of the convention at which the State body was organized, Mr. Phillips made an urgent appeal to the State exhibitors present. Owing to the fact that many were not present, however, he for the last time made an appeal to the State men through the columns of The Motion Picture News.

“I am today appealing to all the exhibitors in the State to help in the work of organizing a strong association in the State preparatory to fighting proposed legislation to be introduced in our next Legislature.

URGE EXHIBITORS TO RESPOND

“It seems to me that the exhibitors in this State do not realize the necessity of organization and have not responded as they should.

“The Milwaukee exhibitors are organized, and unless the exhibitors outside of Milwaukee will join the State organization, Milwaukee will take care of its own interests and protect itself against any legislation which might affect the city of Milwaukee.

“Two years ago Milwaukee exhibitors defrayed all the expenses in successfully killing seven legislative bills introduced, several of which had no effect on Milwaukee exhibitors.

“We will now put ourselves on record, and I speak for the Milwaukee exhibitors, that unless the exhibitors who failed to join the organization or respond to the call of this convention will come in within one month by paying their dues as requested in the call, Milwaukee will withdraw from the State organization and take care of and protect its own interests.

“Milwaukee asks for nothing and wishes to make itself understood that it is not looking for offices.

WHAT SEVEN-DAY LAW MEANS

“Milwaukee exhibitors do not any longer intend to assist those who cannot see the danger in adverse legislation which would eventually put them out of business.

“And the only successful way to fight legislation is through organization; individually one cannot accomplish anything.

“Do you know what it would mean to you if the seven-day rest law should be passed by our Wisconsin Legislature?

“You would be forced to employ an extra force for the seventh day in order to enable you to continue your business on that day.

“I therefore appeal to you, gentlemen, to come in and assist us in our efforts to protect our interests.

“Milwaukee is capable of taking care of its own affairs and has always contributed largely to that end; and to prove that I ask you, gentlemen, to look at the work already accomplished in preventing legislation in the city of Milwaukee that would have put many of the small exhibitors out of business.

“You gentlemen from outside of the city of Milwaukee, do not seem to realize what organization means.

“Less than two years ago the city of Racine called me to their city as president of the then alleged State organization, and also as vice-president of the International organization, to appear before a committee of their Common Council against the sixteen-year-old child ordinance, with which ordinance Racine was then threatened.

INDIVIDUALS POWERLESS

“After I had shown to the committee the dangers in which it placed the exhibitor, the Mayor stated: ‘After hearing the gentleman from Milwaukee I move the indefinite postponement of this ordinance.’

“It was indefinitely postponed and has not since been touched.

“This same ordinance was successfully killed in the city of Milwaukee together with many others.

“If the exhibitors had appeared before this committee in their individual capacities, this could not have been accomplished because without organization legislative bodies will pay no attention to the individual for the reason that they know that it is not for the protection of the entire industry.

“And the exhibitors, unfortunately, whose investments are enormous, are the only large industry without proper organization.

“The merchant and manufacturer, the professional man and the retailer all have organizations intent upon protecting their interests.

“You gentlemen from outside of Milwaukee are not playing the game squarely because you believe that Milwaukee exhibitors, who have all the time championed your cause, will continue to play the game for you.

YET TIME TO RESPOND

“Milwaukee is square and is asking for nothing but a solid organization and, contrary to apparent belief, is not working for its own aggrandizement, but rather for the good of the industry throughout the entire State.

"There is yet an opportunity to respond to the call, and unless very shortly definite arrangement is reached between the exhibitors of the city of Milwaukee and the exhibitors of the State, the exhibitors of the city will take the matter into their own hands and feel themselves relieved of the responsibility attendant upon the welfare of the exhibitors in the State of Wisconsin, outside of Milwaukee."  I. W. MARTIN.

AN EDISON-COMEDIENNE

Gladys Hulette, although comparatively young in years, has had a large amount of stage experience. She has played under such stars as Bertha Kalich, Mme. Nazimova and Henry Miller. Her last appearance on the stage was made in 1911, when she played Beth in "Little Women." Since that time she has been with the Edison company.

FLORIDA LEAGUE HOLDS THIRD CONVENTION

Mile of Film Preserves Event—Carl Kettler Again Elected President—Tano Appointed Organizer to Canvass State

Tampa, Fla., Sept. 29.

THE third annual convention of the Florida branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America was recently called to order by Vice-President Kettler, of West Palm Beach, owing to the absence of President O. Griffith, of Tampa, at the Bijou Theatre, West Palm Beach, with fourteen members present.

Several matters of vital importance, not only to exhibitors but to the patrons of the motion picture theaters throughout Florida, were discussed, and several resolutions adopted. Letters of regret for non-attendance from some twenty members were read and placed on file.

Applications were read from eight parties desiring to become members of the league and by the regular proceedings they were elected to membership. The meeting was then adjourned to 2 p. m.

In the afternoon, after several matters of business had been taken care of, and after speeches by Vice-President Kettler, A. A. Tano, and Louis Kalb field, nominations were declared in order for offices of the league for the ensuing year, and the following were elected: President Carl Kettler, Jr., of West Palm Beach; Vice-President, L. H. Kalbfeld, Palatka; and Secretary and Treasurer A. H. Labellle, of Tampa, Fla.

The followed directors were also elected: Carl Kettler, Jr., Bijou Theatre; W. P. Beach; L. H. Kalbfeld, Grand, Palatka; A. H. Labellle, Grand Theater, Tampa; L. Halliman, Crystal Fort Pierce; A. A. Tano, Dixie, Kissimmee; S. J. Harvey, Star, Milton; and A. A. Torres, Airdome, Key West; and W. S. Moreland, Arcade, W. P. Beach was elected next vice-president of the Florida branch.

All the newly-elected officers were immediately installed in office, and after appropriate speeches the meeting was adjourned to 10 a.m. Tuesday, September 15.

At 10 a.m. Tuesday, September 15, the meeting was called to order, and after some discussion, A. A Tano was elected Florida organizer. Mr. Tano, being a very good speaker, and being familiar with the work, will canvass the entire State for the advancement of the league. It is expected that his efforts will gain many new members.

It is believed by exhibitors attending the convention that Mr. Tano's election constituted the creation of an office now in the motion picture industry, and they believe that the plan of increasing membership by personal solicitation will result in bringing practically every manager into the organization.

Film Men Cry "Hands Off" To Cleveland Mayor

Secretary of Victor Exchange Points Out to Official That Courts Have Released Thirty Out of Thirty-two Exhibitors—Operators' Strike Settled—Men in Downtown Theatres to Get $2.50 and Uptown Booth Employees a Two Dollar Advance

Cleveland, Sept. 30.

"The White Dove of Peace," long absent from the Cleveland motion picture theatre world, passed into the city's life the other day at a "hands off" settlement made by the operators and the city. The decision of the courts that the operator was justified in his action in dismissing the tenant of his theatre and in not renewing the lease on the theatre, and the decision that the operator was right in his action in dismissing the tenant of his theatre and in not renewing the lease on the theatre, is the result of a settlement made between the parties.

The settlement is a permanent one, and is a significant step in the advancement of the motion picture industry in the city. It is hoped that the operators and the city will continue to work together in the interest of the industry.

Other Disturbing Questions

Even with the operators' wage scale decided, Cleveland exhibitors are not perversely demanding a wage increase. The operators originally asked for a general sweeping increase of five dollars per week over the minimum wage of fifteen dollars per week. During the arbitration period, considerable ill feeling was occasioned by the alleged indifference of which the exhibitors viewed the demands of the operators, and the tedium with which the demands were discussed.

Pictures Passed National Board

"You would no doubt be surprised to know that no pictures are shown in Cleveland except those passed by the National Board of Censors, of which Frederick Howe is one, and you would perhaps no doubt disagree with Mr. Howe in his condemnation of legal censorship. For some months last winter you forced us to go down into our pockets and pay your friends for looking over the films shown in Cleveland, without legal authority and without resulting in any change in our policy. While we may have no fault to find with the work of your censors, we feel that if you had been a fair-minded man, that you would have given the public the truth about a subject that we paid by your threats to enlighten you upon.

"You are at the head of the city of Cleveland and in close touch with the police and juvenile courts, and if picture shows were as you seek to convince the public they are you surely could gather proof from the courts.

"You know you have no proof; you admit you never go to a picture show, yet you pass judgment upon the Westernhaver ground that what you say and do is right and all else is wrong.

Good Pictures or Bad Dance Halls?

"Do you think the boys and girls of this great city are worse off in picture shows than they would be in company with some of your colleagues in places frequented by them and, I might say, controlled by them? Would you have all the youth of this city leave the picture shows and attend municipal dance halls for the good of their morals and keeping them from temptation?

"After your experience with the police censoring film last winter, you start them out now passing on posters. Has their judgment been quickened since then that they are now able to make better showing of good judgment than they did with the film?

"Did you know that nearly all the posters used by the picture shows in Cleveland are made here and that four hundred men are employed making posters for picture shows alone?

"You seem to take a position similar to the Governor of Ohio, who in a recent speech likened the government to a family, and you may soon be the target for a law suit as you are the only man who has an interest in the business of all men's business and morals?

"Personal Liberty—What About It?"

"It is a well known fact that in your attempt to choose the representatives for the people you sought a number of ardent members of the Personal Liberty League. Now let me ask you if those representatives apply the principles of personal liberty to simply one class and not to the pictures, upon the principle that the picture men are not under the same level as the chosen ones?

"Did you not hear the rumbling of discontent at the talks, some of which were held in your half bushel. You are absolutely without any evidence or facts to substantiate your position except your own narrow and prejudiced conception.

"If you think the men engaged in this business are inferior in mind and morals, you would gladly arrange a meeting where that notion may be corrected.

"If you think that degenerates could carry on a business involving $30,000,000, just give them the once over.

"If you think the people who attend the picture shows are of the susceptible kind without minds, people who need guardians, just step into a few of the shows and give yourself a big surprise.
If you think the makers of posters are not looking after the welfare of our citizens just make a visit to the Morgan and Otis lithograph plants and see what kind of handiwork they are engaged in. Let me say that you have gone far enough in your relentless fight against the interests of a legitimate business, and patience has ceased to be a virtue and you will find the picture men standing shoulder to shoulder in a fight for their rights and the 50,000 persons who nightly attend their places will be the final judges of what is right.

"Yours, etc.,

(Signed) "E. G. Thompson."

No Law to Hold Him

Sam Bullock, proprietor of the Boulevard theatre, Lorain avenue and West Ninety-eighth street, escaped being sacrificed as the first victim in Mayor Baker's censorship crusade, only to fall into the hands of the operators' league, which promptly established pickets about the theatre and succeeded in turning away trade because Mr. Bullock employed a non-union operator.

Patrons and would-be patrons of the theatre were handed cards bearing a short plea for no patronage.

But to return to the escape from court. About three weeks ago Mr. Bullock was arrested, charged with violating a statute prohibiting the exhibition of unlicensed films. On Thursday he was discharged from police court.

The state claimed films exhibited by Bullock did not bear a "leader" announcing passage of the film by the Ohio Board of Censorship. The state also showed that the absence of such a leader constituted an offense.

Handily, the statute fails to provide a penalty and this was the salvation of Mr. Bullock. Judge Sanders could not fix a penalty where one had not been provided and had no alternative than to discharge Mr. Bullock. Exhibitors consider the lack of a penalty a clear indiation that the police have acted beyond their authority.

Attempt Boycott

The manager's troubles were not yet over. In the fight between the exhibitors and operators over a higher wage scale, Mr. Bullock had refused to pay the increased scale, even after arbitration had been concluded.

Therefore, the International Association of Theatrical Stagehands and Employees, with which the operators' league is associated, on the order of the Cleveland Federation, labor, stationed pickets about the theatre and for three weeks yellow cards bearing the statement: "Union men, friends and sympthizers—Don't patronize the Boulevard theatre, Lorain avenue and West Ninety-eighth street. It is unfair, unjust, stationed organized labor. Stay away," have been handed out. The danger of fire when an unlicensed operator is in the box is the argument used on the back of the card.

SECRETARY P. H. Whitman, of the Union, made the principal address, in which he showed that when the ordinance more effective was passed, there were but thirty-five theaters and fifty operators in Los Angeles.

"Now there are 847 licensed operators and more than 100 theatres," he explained.

It was further claimed that licenses were held by some exhibitors who employed small boys to operate machines, and that these exhibitors seldom enterred the booths. Instances of motion picture operation schools being conducted in down-town theaters during running hours, where apprentices were permitted to run the machines while the regular licensed operators could visit with the box office girl were cited.

The argument advanced by the exhibitors' representative, Judge A. P. Tugwell, member of the city council, and member of executive board of National League, was, that the ordinance would give the union operators a monopoly here, and that it would be impossible for additional men to learn to operate the machines, if they were not permitted in the booths during running hours at the theaters. He also contended that it would be far more expensive for the exhibitors, as it would necessitate better wages for licensed men, while in reality inexperienced boys could rewind films and thread machines satisfactorily.

Referring to the question of safety to the public, President Tugwell stated that non-union men were more careful that the union operators, and that there had been more fires in Los Angeles theaters employing union men, than in those employing non-union.

After spending more than an hour in hearing both sides of the question, the members of the city council, with the exception of one member, voted to sus-tain the report of the public welfare committee.

Texas Sunday Closing Law a Dead Letter

WHILE there is a state law against Sunday amusements in Texas, it is not enforced very strongly, especially in the large cities. Under this statute motion pictures have been held to constitute a violation of the law.

Operators' Law Killed In Los Angeles

Public Welfare Committee Upheld by Council—Ordinance Would Make It Imperative That Only a Licensed Man Be in the Booth

SPECIAL TO THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, Sept. 28

A n ordinance affecting the local ex-bhibitors recently came up for hearning at the meeting of the public welfare committee. This ordinance is fathered by the Los Angeles fire commissioner and City Attorney Stevens and provides that only licensed motion picture promuting machine operators shall be allowed to work in the projecting rooms.

Should this become a city law it would the exhibitors agree, cause additional expense because at the present time helpers do much of the work of rewinding films, cleaning machines, etc., and in suburban theatres open only in the evenings, where the work can now be safely done by an operator and helper, it would increase the expense from twenty-five to forty per cent.

Furthermore, it would stop additional people from entering the local union, thus reducing the number and ultimately making it possible to force exhibitors to pay higher wages.

At the present time an ordinance prescribes that all motion picture machine operators must first secure a license, and to do this it is necessary that they take and successfully pass an examination given by the city electrician. This examination costs the operators five dollars in case they are successful and nothing if they fail. The license is revocable at any time.

The pending ordinance has twice been killed. Prior to the hearing by the public welfare committee of the city council, exhibitors were notified of the ordinance, and about sixty were present to voice their protest. The committee, after hearing remarks by several exhibitors, voted that the ordinance be reported unfavorably.

When members of the operators' union learned of this, the officers secured permission to appear before the city council and explain the purpose of the ordinance.

Secretary P. H. Whitman, of the Union, made the principal address, in which he showed that when the ordinance more effective was passed, there were but thirty-five theaters and fifty operators in Los Angeles.

plained.

It was further claimed that licenses were held by some exhibitors who employed small boys to operate machines, and that these exhibitors seldom enterred the booths. Instances of motion picture operation schools being conducted in down-town theaters during

The argument advanced by the ex-contended that it would be far more expensive for the exhibitors, as it would

Referring to the question of safety

Conditions Everywhere Demand Organization

Too Much Jealousy Among Exhibitors in Albany, but Need of United Action Is Urgent—Ohio Exhibitor Complains of League Methods—Finnegan, of Dallas, Defines Advantages of Union—Arizona Exhibitors Indifferent—Managers in Kentucky Enthusiastic

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 30.

A present organization is not in the minds of the Albany motion picture managers. The managers who have been interviewed, cannot see organization in any form. They declare they can't see where they can benefit out of a city, State or national body. Some of those interviewed point to the organization Neff led, and give that as a basis of their argument.

Joseph Weidman, owner of two film houses, and one of the best versed men in Albany motiondom, is for organization, but one that would be run the same as a labor union; that is, such as the Typographical Union.

Such an organization would be a benefit to all, he declares.

"There is very little talk of organization in Albany," said Mr. Weidman, "and the reason is that there is too much jealousy among the city managers. Two or three of the local owners are in the Eastern New York Exhibitors' League, which is made up of vicinity show houses.

Found Price-Cutting Going On.

"Locally, we have tried to regulate matters by forming a local body to be affiliated with one of the upper bodies. This proved to be an absolute failure, as the managers were not fair to each other. The endeavor was to get all the houses to run shows of equal length for a set price of admission. In this way we believed the business at all the theatres would be better.

"The first thing we found out was that some of the larger houses were running six and eight reels for the small sum of five cents, which was utterly impossible for the smaller houses to do. It was then we learned that an organization in Albany would be a joke, and now everybody is out for himself.

"As a result some are not doing the 'business' they should. I believe in organization, and I honestly believe that there should be a local league in each city to be affiliated with a State league, the State league to be a part of the national body.

Screen Can Help the Politician.

"The effort of these leagues should be to have a representative elected to the legislatures of each State so as to fight for or against the bills that have a bearing on the motion picture business. Everyone interested in the game should realize that the motion picture institution is one of the greatest in the country and should have representatives in these State bodies.

"I will not stop here, as I believe there should be an effort to have representation in Congress, or at least try and elect men to that body who will have our interests at heart.

"This may sound like a joke to many, but there is not a body of men anywhere who can do more for a political candidate than the men of the film world. Look at the screens they control throughout the country, and figure how many men see what is shown on these screens. If such and such a candidate was given a slide each night in the theatre it would do more for him than a newspaper.

"I will not say any more now, but later I will have something to tell which should prove interesting to the exhibitors. In closing, I repeat that there should be organization."

Dissatisfied With Conditions in Ohio

Special to The Motion Picture News

Canton, Ohio, Sept. 29.

Speaking on the subject of organization among exhibitors, J. A. Bernouwer, manager of the Albamara Theater (Market and Avenue N.), of this city, cites what he claims is a condition that has grown in Ohio to a point where careful attention and an immediate remedy is necessary.

"Organization is the thing needed to place motion picture exhibition on a solid business footing," says Mr. Bernouwer, "but before a workable organization can be effected in this state the Ohio branch of the National Motion Picture Exhibitors' league will have to become much more active than it has been in the past."

Lack of Efficiency Is Alleged

"A few words from my own experience will suffice to show what I believe to be lack of effort on the part of the branch in the past. I joined the league over a year ago, and paid my fee.

"I have never received a copy of the constitution and by-laws and am not even certain such things are in existence. I recall having received two or three letters from the league. That is all. One of the letters, I remember, was a notice of a meeting.

"Now, I am no organizer. Because of this perhaps, I have no right to be talking. Some one of the league should make a business to keep in closer touch with those who are won to membership.

"Every thinking man in the exhibiting business, and most of those in the business are thinking men, knows that organization is a good thing. I should think there are plenty of ways to point out to them the necessity of joining the league at once in order to make it an organization of strength.

"For instance, we all know that different laws are to be found in almost every community in the state. Exhibitors would like to have a uniformity of rules throughout the state.

"The state legislature could be induced to pass a law bringing about such uniformity. If a league of all the exhibitors in the state asked such a favor of the legislature, would it not have effect?"

Exhibitors Want Uniform Laws

"In Massillon, two miles west of here, in the same county, theaters are not allowed to show pictures on Sunday while no attempt to stop curent film business is made here. How is that? Couldn't a well-organized state league provide a remedy for a condition like that? It ought to be easy to convince an exhibitor that the league could do that."

I suggest that the exhibitors who are holding back membership are told of the things that the league could and would do if their support were lent. The state legislature will meet next January. The motion picture exhibiting business is a big business in Ohio now.

"It is certain that laws affecting this business will be proposed in the next session. Can individual exhibitors attend the legislative sessions and watch those bills? Well, the league could. Anyone can figure that out. Let's have a little more 'pep' in the state league of Ohio."

Organization Will Do Away With Censorship

Dallas, September 28.

"The needs of organization of the men engaged in the business of entertaining the public through the medium of motion pictures is too apparent to any thinking man to need any argument in its favor," was the way T. P. Finnegan, manager of the Hippodrome at Dallas, answered the question of The Motion Picture News representative when asked whether he believed the exhibitors should have an organization.

Mr. Finnegan is vice-president of the Texas branch of the National Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, and it was natural to suppose he would favor an organization. That he would be so enthusiastic over organization, however, was not expected.

"Why shouldn't the exhibitors be organized?" asked Mr. Finnegan. "Every other line of business that amounts to anything at all is organized. The motion picture business has reached big proportions now and is still growing by leaps and bounds.

Exhibitors Must Show Interest

"I cannot suggest any plan to better the organization than is now in effect if the exhibitors would only take more interest in it," the organization. Here in Texas, for instance, there are over five hundred exhibitors with only one hundred twenty-five members of the state exhibitors' league.

"I believe that the present organization is doing and has already done much good. The plan of having a state president for each league is a good one in my opinion, and I think that each state should have representation in the national convention based on the number of members of each state league. Say, allow one delegate for each ten members or some other equitable figure.

"Beside being a protection to the exhibitors, the organization would also prove beneficial. Through organization the exhibitors could do much towards eliminating radical censorship and having laws passed that are not antagonistic to the business.

"Such an organization would also be of benefit to the men who furnish us with pictures and supplies because in my opinion the absolute integrity and honesty of each man applying for membership should be established beyond doubt before he is admitted to membership. In the past there have been 'shysters' in the business who have 'stung' many supply houses.

Supply Men Should Organize

"For this reason, the supply men should help in our organization. At the Southwestern Exposition of the Moving Picture Industry to be held here in Dallas, October 25, 26 and 27, many exhibitors from Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and Oklahoma are expected, and we anticipate a big increase in the state organizations of these four states."

Kentucky Enthusiastic Over Association

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 28.

THERE is no more ardent advocate in the country of the co-operative idea embodied in the National Motion Picture Industry League than Mr. Ditmar, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Kentucky.

When he was asked for his opinion of the national body and of the work that it had set out to do, there was no mistaking his enthusiastic interest with which he answered:

"Good? Why, of course, it's good. There is no business on earth that cannot be made better and accomplish its ends with less waste, with the proper sort of organization. Consequently, organization applies with equal force to motion pictures.

"The industry stands alone among the really big businesses of the country in one respect, and that is its quick growth. Because of this, there was no need felt for the close co-operation demanded in other businesses.

Conditions Demand Organization

"Now, as the motion picture business has begun to settle down, this condition of disorganization has come to be more and more keenly felt, and the demand for an organization that would serve as a clearing house for ideas and methods has sprung up. I believe the national league can best serve this demand.

"The present organization and basis of representation in the national body is, to my idea, satisfactory. The great need at this time is a greater interest among the large body of exhibitors.

"To secure an increased interest among the great body of exhibitors is, I believe, the biggest task facing both the national league and the various state branches. There is, and of course there will continue to be, differences of opinion as to the best method for securing this interest, but I believe the employment of organizers and personal work on the part of those already in the organizations will prove to be most effective.

Personal Solicitation Needed

"I am sure that to secure the best results, the personal touch is best. I am sure that one organizer can do more through his personality to impress a man, not a member of an organization, than can be done in any other way.

"I am, for one, satisfied with the present executive board of the national league, and if it will apply itself to the business of the organization it should continue to be satisfactory."

Arizona Realizes Necessity of Organizing

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 28.

SOME two years ago an attempt was made to organize the state. In fact, an organization was perfected. The presidency of the same was intrusted to the hands of a man who was heavily interested in a vaudeville venture, and who was the manager of a combination house.

 inexperienced, even in this branch of the business, and possessed of no previous experience in the amusement world, he permitted the organization to die away.

The state is without the first thought of an organization. That there is going to grow a paramount need of such a body, no one in the business in the state doubts for a moment. But the exhibitor awakes to Moses, to lead him out of the wilderness.

Alive to Needs of Fusion

To him who attempts the organization of the state will fall a task that will make Hercules' record look like a bean sandwich at a banker's banquet.

Many of the exhibitors here in Phoenix are alive to the fact that they must sooner or later perfect some sort of a protective league, to ward off what is a sure thing to cause them trouble. But to get to the feasible plan is another thing.

Only lately the city commission passed an ordinance constituting the city manager, the mayor and one commissioner, a censorship board for the city, with powers to look over and pass upon any and all performances whether theatrical or film.

The ordinance carries with it the proviso that the body shall have the right to "enter any theatre, motion picture house or place of amusement in the proper die of things." Some wag in the council chamber remarked the other day that the act became a law, "Pretty soft for the boys."

There you have it. That is the first shot in the battle which is going to be waged in the business.

Some man, in my opinion, would be a good. It is not even a unit. He must be developed, and it is going to take a hard bump or so, to plant the seed of self-protection in him.

Lack Experience

I say he, advisedly, for the state is so new that there is not as yet enough of the experienced type to be counted upon. He is going to grow wise, but just now he is in the chrysalis state.

He is not even a unit. He must be developed, and is going to take a hard bump or so, to plant the seed of self-protection in him.

But he needs the organization. He needs it badly, and if he can be made to see it now, before the damage is beyond repair, he is going to profit immensely.

ADLERjoins UNIVERSAL

Bert Adler, who for five years was in the service of the Thanhouser Company, is now engaged in "special work" of an undisclosed nature for the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

Mr. Adler started as publicity manager for Thanhouser, and recently was special representative of the late Charles J. Hite. For the present he will act as company reviewer of the brands constituting the Universal program.

The Exchange and the Manufacturer

By Albert C. Sproul

There was another phase of the proposition that Jensen developed co-ordinately with the campaign of the exhibitors—his relations with the producer.

The exchange is unquestionably an important link between the manufacturer and the exhibitor and is essential for the perfect plotting of the territory. The advent of the parcel post and the indifference of the managers of the various exchanges pointed to new methods of distribution that were bound to be developed. The wide-awake exhibitor was clamoring for fair play, and Jensen, with his ear to the ground, heard the premonitory warning.

He felt that he not only had to justify his existence as the manager of an exchange, but was forced to intrench himself firmly, if he wished to remain in the business. We have already pointed out the course he pursued with the exhibitors; how he had done a tremendous amount of pioneer work, in order to establish himself firmly.

It was just as essential to co-operate with the manufacturers and prove that he was well-nigh indispensable to them.

Most exchanges are on a dead level of mediocrity, run by rule-of-thumb methods, with destinies guided by onlookers. Business initiative, due regard for the interests of clients, the personal touch that means satisfaction, all are lacking.

In the general shifting and shifting that is bound to come when the industry, now in its infancy, is fully developed, the few exceptions will be lost in the multitude of non-competents, unless they take care to guard and advertise their value.

That was what Jensen purposed doing.

In the first place, he made the manufacturers respect him by absolutely refusing to exploit false features. No photo-play, no matter who produced it, would be "plugged" by him.

A feature, to receive his sanction, had to be worthy of the name.

The exhibitors "learned to put absolute confidence in him," and his words as to the value of a photoplay was more or less final.

Jensen was even more set against the "fly-by-night" producers, who crowd the market with spurious wares which they seek to unload on the credulous. Many a virulent article on the subject found its way into the columns of the weekly bulletin that went to all the exhibitors in his locality.

Jensen had had too hard work to gain the support of his clients and dignify the industry in the vicinity to destroy all by furthering such enterprizes.

In all his dealings with the manufacturers, Jensen bore in mind the fact that the success of the exhibitor meant the success of all other factors of the industry.

He made his suggestions with that in view, knowing that it was the purpose of every legitimate producer to help stimulate the public to attend the motion-picture theatres—not to unload a lot of trash at a big profit.

For that reason, Jensen was unsparing in his judgment of the posters and heralds that advertised the plays. Every piece of literature came in for its share of criticism. Jensen played the role of exhibitor par excellence and boosted only those methods which he deemed worthy.

In this manner, he performed a two-fold service.

He protected the exhibitor from lessening the appeal of his house, which the motion picture manager certainly appreciated.

He helped the manufacturer realize a higher ideal. Having the proper perspective in both cases, he was able to do this.

Jensen proved, moreover, a good barometer of business conditions. Unlike other managers of exchanges, he was constantly in close touch with the exhibitors and could sense the needs of the community.

He wrote with commendable regularity to the various manufacturers, giving his views of what the public wanted and particularly what it didn't want.

These opinions, backed by concrete examples and abundant statistics, had considerable influence with the producers, and affected the selection of plays to be released. It was a pity, so thought Jensen, that other exchange men did not have sufficient interest in the business to do the same.

The question of censorship was an important one. Jensen felt that the responsibility of keeping local agitators pacified and warning the manufacturers of changes in the trend of public opinion belonged, to a great extent, to the exchange.

Many exhibitors, fearful of the consequences of actively combating political rings and misguided watch-and-ward societies, would be tempted to remain outwardly passive, for fear of their theatres being closed.

In such cases, Jensen assumed the initiative and took up the defense of the exhibitors who were allied with him. He was always careful, however, to have the right on his side.

If, at any time, he felt that antagonistic public opinion had a good foundation, he would remain quiescent. This made his efforts in behalf of the exhibitors—when he felt justified in defending them—all the more effective.

His suggestions and appeals were given far more consideration than they would otherwise have received, for those opposed to the industry felt that he was trying to be fair to both sides.

Conditions in Jensen's territory were much the same as those in any self-respecting locality. The public insisted on programs that their children could properly witness. Not that they necessarily demanded the ethical values; they merely desired plays that offended neither creed nor good taste.

The majority of the controversies originated from photo-plays that were intended to teach a lesson. Although a number of them were serious in their purpose, quite a few, nevertheless, used the moral merely as a pretext for salaciousness.

After wallowing through two or three reels, built of disgusting scenes, a tag was tacked on at the end in the nature of a distinct anti-climax.

Jensen fought these plays shoulder to shoulder with the community. What he did take exception to, however, was the extremism of petty, narrow-minded patrons who were bound to put a wrong construction on a most innocent situation.

Then there were the grafters, who wished to fatten on the industry and who, by political menace, sought to deprive the exhibitors of their hard-earned profits.

Jensen was especially bitter toward these. The caustic personalities that he hurled at them publicly penetrated the most calloused hides.

Jensen undertook, moreover, to censor the films that he handled. He did not cut anything out, for, if a play was in any way offensive, he would have nothing to do with it. Nor did he criticise the stuff, especially from a moral point of view.

What he did was to seek those absurd mistakes that are

Regent to Revolutionize Pittsburgh Prices

Ten and Twenty Cents Will Be Prevailing Figure at New Clark & Rowland House—Reservation of Seats by Telephone Is Another Radical Innovation, and All Seats Will Be Sold with Reservation Coupons Attached to Tickets—Ventilating System of the House Is Admiraible

Pittsburgh, Sept. 30.

WITH a policy that is almost revolutionary in its character, and with prices that heretofore have never been charged elsewhere for admission to picture shows, the Regent Theater, Clark and Rowlands' new house now rapidly nearing completion in East Liberty, bids fair to become the pioneer in many respects.

The idea of adopting the reserved seat idea may have occurred to many of the film men, but none has ever had the nerve to try it out in this section of the country. And the price of ten and twenty cents is also a move which is bound to be watched with interest.

Several novel features are announced in the policy of the Regent. The prices for seats are to be ten and twenty cents, there being 516 of the former and 308 of the latter, which will be reserved with regular coupons. Three shows a day will be given, one in the afternoon and two in the evening, and the pictures will be changed Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

May Reserve Seats by Phone

Telephonic reservations for seats will also be featured. As the seats for the first show in the evening are vacated, the head usher will notify the box office and these seats will then be sold for the second performance. In this way any one buying a reserved seat will be assured of getting a seat immediately upon entering the theater.

The Regent has its entrance upon the north side of Penn avenue, three doors west of Highland avenue. The Penn avenue entrance is twenty-three feet wide, and is erected of cream-colored ornamental terra-cotta with vari-colored decorations and the front is also twenty-three feet high, with art brass and bronze grilles and gratings.

The lobby extends back seventy-five feet to the main building, which extends 109 feet on Kirkwood street and sixty-two feet on Whitfield street. The entrance lobby is decorated in Faience tile in Italian design.

The Regent Theatre is absolutely fireproof, being built entirely of steel and concrete, only the floor and seat arms being of wood. The 924 seats are all on the ground floor, and the 30 additional seats are on the "bleacher" form at the rear of the main auditorium.

These "bleacher" seats are to be reserved. The seats on the main floor of the house will rise gradually towards the rear, and as there are no posts or gallery, every seat will have an unobstructed view of the stage or screen.

It is thirty feet from the floor to the ceiling of the Regent.

The Ventilating System

Under all the seats are inlet tubes, 400 in all. The fresh air is drawn into the air chamber in the cellar and carried to the top of the auditorium and distributed. In summer the air will be cooled with a special refrigerating device before being pumped into the auditorium. There are also two large ventilators in the roof. The floor duct tubes act as outlets in the winter and inlets in the summer.

There will be no stage in the Regent. A new screen specially constructed for the theater occupies the prosenium arch. This screen is twenty feet high and twenty-three feet wide, and is located ninety feet from the projection machines, of which there will be three, located in the operator's gallery, which is entirely separated from the main body of the house. This gallery extends the entire width of the house, is large and roomy, and gives plenty of room for the two operators required by law.

The music will be furnished by both an orchestra and a large pipe organ, the latter being designed by the Moller Pipe Organ Company. It is to be one of the finest instruments ever turned out by that company, and is sure to furnish a brand of music that will be of a high character.

Can Empty Theatre in One Minute

The theater, facing, as it does, on three streets, can be emptied of its full capacity in one minute. There are two fire escapes, one leading from the top of the bleacher seats and the other from the operator's gallery. The lighting in the foyer and lobby will be of the semi-indirect type and there will be ten ceiling chandeliers as well as numerous brackets and stationary vacuum cleaning system is also being installed.

The comfort of the Regent patrons is also being looked after. There are large retiring rooms for the ladies and gentlemen leading from the foyer in the back of the auditorium. There will also be an ice-water fountain and the chairs in the theatre are of the upholstered opera type.

Messrs. J. B. Clark and Richard A. Rowland are the owners of the Regent. These gentlemen are interested in eleven other theatres in Greater Pittsburgh, besides controlling the Famous Players Film Service, Inc., of this city. The architect is Harry B. Sair and the general contractors are Golden and Crick.

The theater proper cost over $75,000 complete.

Dallas Exchange Signs for Sawyer Program

Southern Company Arranges to Handle the Service for Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas Under C. R. Scott

C. R. SCOTT, of the firm of Underwood & Scott, comprising the Dallas Film Company, of Dallas, Texas, has been in New York for the past four weeks, and after thoroughly investigating the local picture field and viewing all the programs offered, he decided upon the service of Sawyer, Inc. Contracts were signed recently by which they will handle the states of Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas as a Sawyer zone.

Mr. Scott is known through the Southwest as one of the pioneers in the film business of the region. For the past eight years he has handled pictures in the territory, at one time operating a chain of theatres.

Mr. Scott also abolished in favor of the film exchange proposition. In Texas alone there are seven hundred theatres in operation, according to Mr. Scott, and in his whole territory covered by the Sawyer zone franchise, there are nearly fourteen hundred buying exhibitors.

"Comedies," said Mr. Scott, "are what the people want, and, to my mind, comedy does not mean films all composed of rough and tumble slapstick business. "We want real comedies, with original ideas, and novel treatment. This seems to be the kind that Sawyer is getting. I saw a two-reel comedy the other day, "Thirty Minutes in Melodrama,'"

"Honestly, it is the funniest and most original thing I have seen in years. I also saw some of the reel comedies, too. His 'seven one-reel comedies a week' policy is just the thing that is wanted by the public, and such a service spells success to the houses using it.

"And that is why I wanted to handle Sawyer films in the Southwest," he concluded.

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "The Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. Address: Editor, "The Motion Picture News," 220 West Forty-second Street, New York City

VALUE OF GOOD DECORATION

Almost in any large city one can pick out a number of theatres that find a new owner every few months. Each one thinks he has found the means of putting it over, but as a general rule the only effort they make is to put in a new working force and sometimes apply a little paint.

The Edgewater Theatre, located on the north shore in one of Chicago's finest neighborhoods for the past few years, was one of this character. Recently, however, it was taken over by a live business man, who has made his money in merchandizing whatever he had to sell. To use his own words:

"An article before it is marketable must first be presentable, pleasing to the eye. I am putting more money into the remodeling of this theatre than it cost to first equip it. These mirrors I am placing in the panel of the doors run in money quickly. This mahogany finish on the doors is not a cheap, shoddy imitation. I have put in a new screen and also improved on the ventilation. I am making arrangements for an organ in connection with the piano. Now it is up to me to get the people to come, and that I intend to do by advertising and delivering the goods when the people come."

The management issued a four-page booklet, and scattered copies throughout the neighborhood.

OUT GO TRADING STAMPS

An enterprising mercantile concern in Cynthiana, Ky., has abandoned trading stamps as a lure for trade and is now giving away tickets to the motion picture theatre at Roh's Opera House to all who purchase a certain amount.

"The motion picture is about the most popular institution in town," says Mr. Northcutt, of the Northcutt Mercantile Company, "and we find that this is the most attractive proposition we have been able to give our customers. And it is proving profitable both to ourselves and the picture theatre."

POLISH PATRIOTIC FILMS

During the recent Polish Falcons' convention in Buffalo, N. Y., the Fillmore Theatre at the corner of Fillmore and Broadway presented a number of Polish patriotic subjects.

A HABIT-MAKING THEATRE

THE up-to-date methods of ventilation in vogue at the Habit Theatre, Danville, Ill., managed by L. G. Griffith, have earned for the little house the reputation of being the coolest place in Danville on a hot day.

The theatre seats only three hundred and fifty people, but the mere fact that the doors are open is proof that every seat inside is occupied. The Habit is Danville's newest motion picture theatre, and is owned and operated by the Vermillion Amusement Company, Inc.

Needless to say, the name of the theatre offers Manager Griffith an endless number of opportunities for attractive advertising slogans. It is equally needless to say that none of these opportunities are overlooked by this enterprising exhibitor.

AFTER HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE

THE management of the new Saxe Theatre, Milwaukee, the recently opened motion picture house which enjoys the reputation of being one of the most important edifices devoted to film drama in the Northwest, marking an epoch in the presentation of high class pictures in that section of the country, issued on its opening a handsome booklet in keeping with the character of the theatre itself.

The brochure, printed on a fine quality of calendered paper and bound attractively in blue mottle covers stamped with old gold letters, contains an instructive article for the part of the community which has failed to take note of the rapid advancement made in the production of motion pictures and their close rivalry with "legitimate" drama.

The theatre is fully described—its decorations, ventilating system and means for obtaining the comfort of its patrons. In addition to this there is a list of the features scheduled for appearance at the theatre throughout the week.

A booklet of this kind cannot fail to impress the cultured members of the city and excite an interest in motion pictures as a worthy successor to the speaking stage.

THE CALL OF THE HERALD

THE Maycroft, Washington, D. C., is displaying a neat poster in artistic design which heralds: "Come in. You are in time for the entire program."

This is displayed on an easel where it may be readily read by passers-by.
"WILDFLOWER" WILL BE READY OCTOBER 15

Marguerite Clark, who attained a personal triumph in "Baby Mine," Margaret Mayo's successful play, is the latest stage celebrity to be converted to the screen, through the medium of the Famous Players four-part production, "Wildflower," to be released October 15.

MARGUERITE CLARK

"Wildflower," by Mary Germaine, is a drama of the lights and shadows of the sun-kissed forest, and the depths and shallows of human life, a delightful tale of sweet innocence and eternal youth, admirably exemplified in the personality and mannerisms of the winsome little actress.

There are many tender passages in the production, many humorous touches, and some tinged with the little sadnesses that creep into any true story of life. But Wildflower sheds her fragrance throughout the four reels of the subject, a thing of beauty always and always a symbol of purity.

Marguerite Clark's first film characterization is a notable one, and entitles the enchanting little star to be considered an important acquisition to the screen. She is supported by an adequate and capable cast, including Harold Lockwood, James Cooley, E. L. Davenport, and Jack Pickford.

EXCHANGE MAN GOES TO MUTUAL

C. E. Jones, formerly with the General Film Company, Omaha, has taken charge of the machine and machine supply department of the Mutual exchange there. The exchange will open an extensive display and sales department for machines immediately.

Mr. Jones has been in that territory for three years and has a wide acquaintance. His success in his new position is easily forecasted from the admirable record he leaves behind him.

Four New Theatres Open in Harrisburg

Exhibitors Believe That the City Has Greatest Number for Its Size—Pennsylvania's Capital Now Has Sixteen Photoplay Houses

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 30.

The opening of four brand new theatres, all exclusively for the display of motion pictures, has been witnessed in this city in September, and exhibitors here believe that there is no city in the country, in proportion to population, that shows so large a percentage in the number of motion picture houses built and put into operation in the present year.

Harrisburg's population is estimated at 80,000 and it now has sixteen picture theatres of a class whose seating capacity will average about eight hundred.

The fall crop of new theatres will include another one to be opened in about two months on the site of the Star, operated at 410 Market street by Peter Magaro. The Star seated about six hundred, but the new house to take its place will seat one thousand and will be absolutely modern in its appointments.

All four of the new theatres that have been opened this month are brick structures built in the strictest conformity with the rigid requirements of the State Department of Labor & Industry that recently announced its list of "recommendations" for the construction of new picture houses, which "recommendations" are regarded by the trade as practically mandatory.

All four are situated outside the central business district, or in the five-cent zone, although it would not be surprising if at an early date these houses would unite with the downtown theatres in making a uniform admittance price of ten cents.

The largest of the new theatres is that of J. M. Lenney. It is the Grand, at Fourteenth and Derry streets, and makes the second theatre in this city controlled by this exhibitor. This is the theatre in which Mr. Lenney has introduced his theory that it is far safer and far more convenient to have the screen at the front of the building, above the main entrance, and the ease with which he has handled the crowds since opening his house seems to bear out his belief that this plan is a great improvement over that of having the screen at the rear. The house seats about 1,200 persons.

Bender Brothers have opened the William Penn, seating about nine hundred persons, at Thirteenth and Thompson streets. This is a finely equipped building designed to appeal especially to neighborhood patronage, rather than to transients. It is the first venture of the proprietors in the motion picture business and they are enthusiastic over its prospects for success.

The National, with a seating capacity of one thousand, has been opened at Sixth and Dauphin streets by Isaac Marcus, who has for several years been conducting successfully the Royal at 10 North Third street. This new house is a long way from the center of the city and in a section containing the homes of railroad men and their families. Harrisburg is a very strong railroad center and Mr. Marcus will cater especially to that class of motion picture patrons.

A new theatre opened at Third and Harris streets by C. E. Hanshaw, a newcomer in the business, has a seating capacity of one thousand. Like all of the other new ones, it is a brick and concrete structure, fireproof in every respect, and equipped with all the latest devices for safety and comfort.

TROLLEY WRECKED FOR "A PRINCE OF INDIA"

In a four-part drama made by War ton, Inc., and released by the Electric Film Company, a startling series of events lead up to the sensational climax of a bona fide trolley car leaving the rails on a high bridge and plunging a great distance into the yawning gorge below. The four reels are full of thrills, and this climax, coming near the end as it does, will certainly not let the picture pass without comment.

The illustration gives one a vivid sense of the "accident" which the company has staged for a feature.

REGENT OPENS IN BUFFALO

BEFORE a large and enthusiastic audience of local exhibitors, exchange men and friends of the owners, the beautiful new Regent theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., opened with a special performance on Saturday evening, September 26. The opening to the public was on Sunday afternoon.

The Regent is operated by the United Motion Picture Theatres, Ltd., of which Henry J. Brock is general manager. The house is under the management of Arthur C. Willats, well known in Buffalo amusement circles. The opening attraction was "The Battle of the Sexes," supplemented by "The War of the Worlds."

The Regent is the first theatre in Buffalo with a seating capacity of less than 1,500 to charge an admission price of fifteen cents for seats other than boxes. The prices will be 10-15-25, the latter for boxes, which are arranged at the back of the theatre.

The seating capacity of the Regent is 1,300, all on one floor. The entrance is on Main street, a few doors from Utica. The front is of white terra cotta, which presents a most beautiful appearance in the daytime, or at night when the brilliant lights are turned on. The lobby is decorated in old gold, imperial purple and Byzantium gold. The foyer is a vision of scintillating gorgeousness.

Rich carpets cover the floor, their rich colors blending perfectly with the rich wall and panel decorations. Although the foyer reaches across the full width of the playhouse, the soft tones from the indirect lighting system and side decorations tend to bring the great space into a cozy ensemble.

Elaborate Stage Setting

The stage is elaborately set. In the immediate foreground is a bright green garden which surrounds a playing fountain, fantastically illuminated. Set back is the screen, which is covered by curtains of purple velvet, during the music program. The indirect lighting system fixtures are the most beautiful in any theatre in Buffalo. The office of Mr. Willats is at the right of the operator's booth, in a sort of balcony at the rear of the theatre.

One of the real treats at the Regent theatre will be the music programs, for Mr. Henry M. Marcus, formerly director of Shea's theatre orchestra and one of Buffalo's most accomplished musicians, is director of the orchestra. The program on opening night was enthusiastically applauded. A large pipe organ has been installed to supplement the orchestra numbers.

"We recognize that we have a duty to perform to our patrons and to ourselves, to see that our programs are the kind required by intelligent and honest audiences. Consequently the greatest care will be given to the selection of films.

Catering to Children

"Photoplays which may hold the keen interest of the adult are often a little too deep for the ordinary child; we have therefore mapped out a plan for their special benefit: our Saturday matinees will be devoted to children, and will be entirely different from the regular program. "It will consist of such helpful subjects as 'Safety First,' 'Spotless Town,' besides dealing with 'Diseases by Fleas,' 'Nature Subjects' and 'Scenes and Travels.' Not one feature will be shown at Saturday matinees. Of course there will be comedies, without which a series of pictures would be a hardship on the child mind. "Performances will be given every evening from 7:30 to 10:30. Saturday children's matinee from 2 to 5. Sundays, continuous from 2 until 10:30. Box seats when ordered in advance will be ten cents extra. The program will be changed four times weekly, Monday, Thursday, Sunday and Saturday matinee."

The policy of running films for scrutiny by the management indicates a desire to exercise close supervision over the pictures.

A description of the Regent without special mention of the work of the decorators would be incomplete. The entire decorative scheme was worked out by Edward J. Murnane, of Chicago, New York and Syracuse. There is something about the Murnane decorations that is particularly appealing. The uniqueness of design, the richness of color schemes and artistic workmanship produce effects that are both artistic and enchanting.

NEW YORK MAN TAKES LEASE OF WATERBURY THEATRE

New Eaco Film Company Has Many Releases

The Concern, Headed by Edwin August and Edward Anderson, Plans to Put Out a Two-Reel Drama Every Other Week

EACO Films, the newly-formed producing company, headed by Edwin August and Edward Anderson, have now made a number of features, which will be released as soon as the firm has decided what medium to use.

When matters are well under way it is the plan of the company to release a two-reel drama every other week, and a single reel comedy and drama each week.

Mr. August, who will write and supervise the direction of all the pictures, will appear in person in the features, supported by Alice Lear, who will play opposite, and Ann Derson, an English actress who will appear in the heavy roles.

A studio is soon to be erected on the east coast, and it will be turned out featuring Edward Peil, Hal August, formerly a Universal lead, will appear in the comedies, which are to be of the parlor nature, not slapstick.

Mr. August will shortly journey to Bermuda to film several pictures. On his return he and the eastern company will be located at Jacksonville, Fla.

The interiors of Eaco's first picture, "Below the Dead Line," were made in the Pathé studios, which were temporarily loaned them; the exteriors were filmed in New York.

Bennie Zeidman, publicity man of the concern, formerly of "Lubinville," who is now busy creating "Eacoville," is unable to tell as yet what exchange the company will release through. Owing to the great popularity of Edwin August, many communications have been received by the exchange exhibitors, requesting them to release through their exchanges.

The question will shortly be decided.

Lubin Unaffected by War Situation

Company, Instead of Curtailing Expenses, Is Spending More Money Than Ever to Supply Demand for Films, Says President

"It is rather hard to give an intelligent forecast of the coming new months in the motion picture or any other amusement business," says Siegmund Lubin.

"This senseless war has topped all arts and industries upside down all over the world, but we are not indulging in pessimistic views, neither are we relaxing our efforts to continually achieve greater things.

"On the contrary, we are working the cameras full time and spending more money than ever in securing great scripts and talented players. This will readily be seen from the advertisements of our productions to be released in the near future.

"Money would have to be tight indeed if it interfered with the very enjoyable and cheap recreation that the picture house affords to distract the more serious thoughts of the present unfortunate condition of the whole civilized world.

"Here peace is giving us happiness and we can enjoy our labor without let or hindrance. Still in this cosmopolitan country there are many heart strings pulling at the thought of misery now prevailing among dear ones in the mother lands.

"However, the camera is dispensing more happiness than guns and will be an institution when they are silenced, and the ships of the nations are free to come and go over the waters again to foreign lands."

World Film Gets "Seats of the Mighty"

Screen Version of Famous Parker Novel, Picturized by Colonial Corporation at Considerable Expense, Transferred to Former Concern

LEWIS J. SELZNICK, vice-president and general manager of the World Film Corporation, has captured for the World Film Corporation the photoplay to which the Colonial Motion Picture Corporation has been devoting unlimited capital and the best trained talent possible under the general supervision of T. Hayes Hunter. The transfer brings to the World Film Corporation filmization of the famous Sir Gilbert Parker novel, "Seats of the Mighty," upon which the Colonial forces have been at work for six months.

Lionel Barrymore, brother of the famous Ethel Barrymore, and a member of that famous acting family, is featured in this picture, and he has been surrounded by a first-class cast of Broadway stars. In the company are such names as Millicent Evans, Lois Meredith, Thomas Jefferson, Glen White, Clinton Preston, Harold Hartsell, Grace Leigh and Marjorie Bonner. All of these stars have been seen and are being seen in Broadway productions.

The negotiations were carried on behalf of the World Film Corporation by Lewis J. Selznick, while James D. Law, president of the Colonial Motion Picture Corporation, and Duff C. Law, technical director, represented the Colonial Motion Picture Corporation interests.

General Manager Selznick announces that "Seats of the Mighty" is to be a special release and the date is to be announced shortly.

Bosworth Banquet a Complete Success—State Censor and Philadelphia Newspaper Men Gather Around
Carl H. Pierce to Do Honor to the Motion Picture—Other Festivities of Similar Character
Will Follow in Its Wake—Mastbaum Dinner on October 1 at Bellevue-Stratford

SPECIAL TO THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Philadelphia, October 1.

The banquet given by Bosworth in the name of Jack London on Wednesday, September 23, at the Hotel Adelphia, was an immense success in every respect. The dramatic critics of all the local newspapers and the local representatives of the trade journals were present.

J. Louis Breitinger, chief motion picture censor of Pennsylvania, was the guest of honor, being placed at the right of Carl H. Pierce, the special representative of Bosworth, who acted as host. Mr. Breitinger briefly outlined what he had done and what he hoped to do in the matter of censoring pictures in this State.

He explained that he had systematized the work of his office in order that there would be as little delay as possible to those submitting films for examination. He spoke very highly of the work of the American producers, stating that he had little or no cuts to make.

To date 3,500 reels have been examined, and of this number there have been but two rejections entirely and but 120 eliminations, all of a minor character.

Editor Criticises War Tax

W. Barran Lewis, city editor of the Philadelphia "Press," spoke of the advance made by the picture theater of today. He was also very outspoken regarding the proposed "war tax," and said:

"I do not see why the picture theater should have to pay as much tax as the legitimate theater. Why should a little theater with only 50 seat house have to pay the same amount as Keith's here on Chestnut street. The little house makes maybe $25 or $30 profit a week. The Keith house plays to a four figure audience every week. Where is the justice in it?"

Abe L. Einstein, press representative of the Stanley Company, spoke of the value of newspaper publicity for theaters and amusement enterprises. Harry Knapp, of the "Inquirer," said that the matter of a motion picture page has been under consideration for a long time, but that it probably would not be established until the manufacturers would support it.

Julian M. Solomon, Jr., of The Motion Picture News, then spoke briefly of what other newspapers had done towards and after establishing motion picture sections. The case of the Seattle "Times" and the Baltimore "News," the stories of which recently appeared in this paper, were quoted as shining examples of what could be done.

A. D. Ferris and F. V. Armato then spoke of what had been accomplished by their paper, "The Evening Telegraph." They both said that the film section had been a commercial success as well as a circulation booster. Mr. Armato had found that by catering to the exhibitor rather than to the manufacturer he had been able to produce financial returns for the paper.

Other Opinions Voiced

Eugene L. Perry, general manager of the Stanley Company, spoke of the progress which the pictures had made, and of the fact that while he had handled everything from vaudeville to "legit," that he was now in the picture business to stay. George Mann, of the Stanley Booking Company, said that he was glad that there was a censor, as it saved him much trouble in booking his features, as he could be assured that there would be nothing to offend the patrons of his firm's theaters.

Howard Bonte, of the "Public Ledger," Philadelphia's most conservative paper, said that George Ochs, his managing director, had recently attended one of the high-price picture houses in this city. It was Mr. Ochs' first time at a picture theater of any kind, and the film was a Paramount picture.

It created such a favorable impression that Mr. Bonte is expecting to receive notice to relegate the "legit" reviews to the advertising pages along with burlesque and to place film reviews on the present dramatic page.

H. Deick, of the "Record," said that his paper has at present under consideration a picture section. This paper has found that when they featured "The Adventures of Kathlyn" that the circulation of the Sunday edition was increased considerably. The effect was also felt on the daily circulation.

B. Diamond, of the "North American," thought that the day is not far distant when every newspaper will have a special section devoted to motion pictures.

State Censor Praises Paramount

Mr. Breitinger had a few final words to say in praise of the work of Mr. Armato, of the "Telegraph." In closing, he said that if he had all pictures to review similar to Paramount there would be no necessity for him to retain his office.

Carl H. Pierce, as host, also acted as toastmaster, and spoke of the character of men like Frank A. Garbutt and Howard Bosworth, who had come into the picture business with the idea of producing better pictures and who had tried, with much success, to uplift their tone and quality.

The menu cards were clever, and the following good things were listed for the guests:

"Barleycorn" Cocktails, Cape Cod "Burning Daylights" Celery Olives au "Sea Wolf" Chicken Casserole "Valley of the Moon" Potatoes "Paramount" Hearts of Romaine "London" Dressing "Bosworth" Neapolitan Parfait American Milk "Odyssey" "Smoke Belles" Cigarettes "Hypercito"

Maestbaum Plans Banquet

Stanley Maestbaum, one of the invited guests, was called away on business at the last moment, but was so impressed with the good work that it would undoubtedly produce that he invited all those who attended this one and in addition many film manufacturers to be his guests at another banquet.

Mr. Maestbaum's spread takes place at the Bellview-Stratford, in the Red Room, tonight. In addition to the newspaper and tradepaper guests, there will be representatives from Famous Players, General Film, Lubin, Universal and Mutual. Adolph Zukor is expected to be present.

It is intended to make this affair a regular monthly institution, so that the newspaper and film men may foregather and swap ideas for the benefit of all concerned.

Hepworth Films Go Through Blinkhorn

Will Handle Their Releases in America, According to Negotiations Concluded with Director Parfrey, of the London House

THE Hepworth Company, of London, it will be remembered, was the first English firm to have their own company in America to handle their film and look after their interest generally. During the matter he is said to have successfully negotiated a satisfactory arrangement with Mr. Blinkhorn, who has formed the Blinkhorn Photoplays Corporation with himself as president, whereby the latter corporation have agreed to take a large proportion of Hepworth. Florence Turner and Ivy Close releases for this year.

The Hepworth Company will still continue to sell on the option market and are releasing their regular output in spite of the European disturbance.

ALBERT BLINKHORN

Albert Blinkhorn's recent trip to London, when he had an interview with the directors of the Hepworth Company, he explained to them his views with reference to the rental business in America. At the same time he handed in his resignation as president of their American company, as he had in view the formation of another corporation which was to be devoted to renting only with a chain of offices in the United States.

Following this the Hepworth Company held a directors' meeting, when Mr. Blinkhorn made them a proposition for handling their product in America and they decided to send one of their representatives to New York for the purpose of making inquiries.

With this end in view Mr. C. Parfrey, one of the directors, came to this country some weeks ago and after going into the matter he is said to have successfully negotiated a satisfactory arrangement with Mr. Blinkhorn, who has formed the Blinkhorn Photoplays Corporation with himself as president, whereby the latter corporation have agreed to take a large proportion of Hepworth. Florence Turner and Ivy Close releases for this year. The Hepworth Company will still continue to sell on the option market and are releasing their regular output in spite of the European disturbance.

Woods Suggests Cut-Out Sign for Public

Los Angeles, Sept. 28.

A SUGGESTION for film manufacturers has been made by Frank E. Woods, scenario editor and general manager of the Majestic Motion Picture company studio at Hollywood, which if followed would place the blame for imperfect continuity of pictures severely censured upon the censor boards, thus shifting it from the manufacturers.

The suggestion is that manufacturers supply each of their exchanges with pieces of film bearing the following words, tersely explaining the situation:

SECTION OF FILM REMOVED

by Order of

which could be placed in the pictures where a cut-out of a portion of a scene or a sub-title is ordered, and thus give the public to understand that the picture has been altered. If it is impossible for them to follow the story they will place the blame, Mr. Woods believes, where it justly belongs.

Chicago Censors Make Wholesale Onslaught

Board Refuses to Pass Six Pictures in One Week and Cuts Seventy-three Others—List of Objections Grows Since Funkhouser Increased Membership—Electrical Workers’ Union Seek Recognition—Exhibitors Sell Novel, Basis of Kleine Feature, During Intermittences

Chicago, Sept. 30.

In one week Chicago’s board of censors killed six subjects and cut seventy-three pictures. The pictures killed range anywhere from one reel to five reel subjects, while those that were slashed had many scenes and titles taken out of each.

This was not an extraordinary busy week for Funkhouser’s board, but merely an ordinary six days’ work. Some weeks undoubtedly would average greater.

This board has four points to which it objects, namely: crime, degradation of women, heroes of criminals and ridiculing constituted authority.

These are the points they claim are censored, but the list of cut-outs show that “The Master of the World,” a film releases of America picture, was slashed through the scene of showing snakes; the same also was done to “Sarah the Pythones,” a Lubin, where they had to shorten three snake scenes to a flash and eliminate four other scenes. Pathe’s “The Thousand Dollar Pants” was cut and compelled to eliminate a scene showing a tramp with a torn seat in his trousers.

Fashion, in Objection to Films

Perhaps Funkhouser’s list of objections has grown larger since he increased his board. It appears as though each one has some pet objection. Some little time ago they had the religious bug; now they do not like snakes. Perhaps they’ll add another new member with another objection soon.

For the past few weeks the differences between the two local operators’ unions have been asserting themselves. The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the Motion Picture Operators’ Union, Local No. 2, are the names of the organizations in the field seeking recognition.

Local No. 2 has been in the field for some time and at present is affiliated with the Stage Hands Union, which in turn is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, however, claims to have a direct charter under which they are operating.

A few of the motion picture theatres have been annoyed, it is claimed, by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. The Biograph and Vitagraph theatres were recently the victims of odoriferous bombs which, they claim, were thrown by members of the electrical workers.

Other managers in the city claim they have been threatened by this organization if they did not install a member of their union.

The old union feels secure in its stand and is not giving the present trouble any recognition. The electrical workers are fighting for membership and recognition in New York City that may join them from the ranks of the other organization.

Electrical Union Seeks Recognition

It seems that this rival union was formed because of the many operators who were working in theatres on a card system issued by the old union, and at no time was any effort made to admit them as full fledged members. It is said now they are a dollar a week, whereas the yearly dues would have been much less.

This is the second time in the history of the operators’ union that there has been dissension. The last time the union was dissolved and organized again and now stands as Local No. 2.

With the last few weeks three new exchanges have been opened in Chicago. Each one is a branch of a parent organization the headquarters of which is in New York City. The Alco, Box Office Attractions and Blinkhorn Features are the three acquisitions to the exchange ranks. All three are in the Mallers building and all three are on the fifth floor.

Get Ready for Big Business

The Box Office Attractions is managed by Mr. Montgomery, formerly with the local General Film Company exchange. The Alco offices are in charge of Mr. Leist, who up until his present association was with the Famous Players office. The Blinkhorn pictures are under the direction of Mr. Buck, who hails from the East.

Feili Feist, general manager of the Celebrated Players Film Company, of Chicago, went East recently for the purpose of arranging with some releasing company for the handling of their output in the Central West.

Under Mr. Feist’s management the Celebrated company has prospered. He has infused his personality into the entire organization.

About the first of November, John W. Root expects to open his new one thousand seat house in Pasadena, Calif., which will be named the Strand. Mr. Root formerly owned a theatre in Burlington, Ia., and one in Altoona, Ia. He recently spent a few days in Chicago purchasing equipment from the Kleine Optical Company for his new house.

Enthusiastic Over Kleine Film

George Kleine’s big new six-part subject, “The Lion of Venice,” has come in for a unique compliment. The Chicago Board of Censors, which viewed the print for the purpose of issuing a permit, were so delighted with the film that its members insisted upon being notified of its first public exhibition in Chicago.

Accordingly, they brought relatives and friends to the Hamlin Theatre, Madison street and Hamlin avenue, when the Kleine subject was officially launched in Chicago. The censorship board runs film continuously from nine in the morning until five at night and are pretty well satisfied at the end of the day.

George Kleine announces that his various branches of his company are ready to book “The Naked Truth,” that splendid five-part modern drama which opened the doors of the New Candler Theatre last summer.

The film features Lydia Lorelli, the famous Continental actress who proved such a sensation in Italy recently in an Italian version of Fannie Ward’s “Madam President.” “The Naked Truth” has been provided with an exceptionally clever line of advertising matter.

Sell “Vendetta” in Intermittences

George Kleine’s “Vendetta,” which is now looking through the special feature department of the General Film Company, is being advertised heavily by exhibitors throughout America.

The novel, by Marie Corelli, has been translated into the German, French, Russian, Greek, Italian, Persian and Hindustani, Wideawake exhibitors have prevailed upon local book dealers to put in a supply of the novel and allow them to use the valuable window space for a three and six sheet. In some cases, exhibitors have laid in a stock of the paper-covered volumes which they sell in the intermission and in front of the theatre.

President S. S. Hutchinson, of the American Film Manufacturing Company, with his wife and two sons, Hobart and Winston, returned from the Olympic, Wednesday, September 23.

Mr. Hutchinson’s experiences abroad were of a somewhat thrilling nature and the sight of American soil caused a thrill of joy such as can be appreciated only by those who, after weeks of harassing trials and tribulations, again come into their own rightful heritage.

“Mr. Hutchinson left London for a business and pleasure trip to the Continent,” says the Kinematograph and Lantern Weekly of London. “He was in Belgium when the outbreak of war was announced, and only succeeded in reaching London again, after a journey through France which occupied in all six days and which gave him a re-
In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

Los Angeles, Sept. 28.

RELUCTANTLY members of the Jacques Jaccard Universal Producing Company last week began the filming of "The Terrance O'Rourke, Soldier of Fortune," series, from the stories by Louis Joseph Vance.

When arrangements were made with the author for the use of these stories it was announced the producing company would make a tour of the world in filming the fourteen series of pictures of two and three reels each, but because of the European war this trip has been abandoned. All of the series will be made in California.

The first number will be released under the title of "His Heart, His Hand, and His Sword," and will consist of three reels. This has to do with O'Rourke meeting Princess Grandlilien, and the planning of the rescue party to go to the Sahara desert to save the life of the princess' brother and prevent her husband from gaining control of the family's wealth.

The story has been rewritten from the book by Mr. Vance, and many additional incidents have been added which materially increase its value for motion pictures.

Story Based on Chemical Fire

The producing company, in addition to Director Jaccard and J. Warren Kerrigan, who plays the name role, is composed of Vera Sisson, George Perforst, M. B. Robbins, Ray Gallagher, Louis Kassa, Edgar Lowery, Harry Sant, Bud Chase and Pedro Leon.

Western comedy was made last week by Allen Curtis, in the one reeler, "I'll Be Davy-gomned." Two cowboys, William Franey and Sam Kaufman, with six months' salary burning holes in their pockets, go to a Western town to cut some capers, and both fall desperately in love with Widow Clemon (Gale Henry), who, with the aid of Attorney Hearse (Jack Leonard), succeed in getting the roll of long green.

Calder Johnstone, of the Universal scenario department, has written a story based on a big fire in a chemical house in New York several years ago, in which an air bubble in a window caused the sun to set fire to the chemicals.

However, in the scenario for "The Star Gazette," a big telescope used by one character on the streets where the public may look over the heavens for five cents per, causes a fire at the home of the heroine of the store where she was polishing the furniture with kerosene, preparing for her wedding with a newspaper reporter.

Insurance men find the oil-soaked rag and refuse insurance, but the newspaper pussy-foot discovers the real cause of the fire—the telescope—and brings happiness to the household. Murdock McQuarrie is cast for the star gazer, Agnes Vernon for the daughter, and M. K. Wilson for the reporter. Charles Giblyn will direct the picture.

Plays with Dislocated Ribs

Number eleven of "The Trey o'Hearts" series of the Universal proved the unlucky one for the hero, George Larkin, playing the role of Alan Law, and he is now doing his part while wearing a number of braces and plasters, needed because several ribs were broken in a second story window to a horse's back just as the animal reared into the air.

This prevented Mr. Larkin from working for two or three days, but he is now in the midst of a very sensational chase across the desert, for series number twelve. In this a trick horse takes the glories of the picture away from the human actors, by performing stunts to save the lives of the photolayers, during a sand storm on the desert.

When a posse of citizens close in on the leads, whom they think are responsible for a murder, a large quantity of dynamite is exploded, causing the formation of a barrier, and permitting the party to continue in an automobile. This number will undoubtedly be the most spectacular of the series yet produced.

In "Marvis of the Glen," from a scenario by Mary Murillo, now being produced by Robert Z. Leonard, Ella Hall is playing the name part in a story portraying a man of wealth becoming infatuated and marrying a little beauty of the wilds.

This causes a breach between him and his sister, and the husband is lured away in order that he forget his unsophisticated bride. But when he returns he finds her the helle of the city, and after numerous complications, the couple are re-united. Mr. Leonard is playing the male lead.

Sensational Lion Scene

The two months old lion cubs of the Universal zoo made their debut last week in films, in a picture directed by Henry McRea, for the Iol Bison release, under the title of "Taming the Wild."

Scenes for the picture are laid at a hunters' camp, where a party employed by a circus to capture wild beasts, arrive. The hunter, a white man, falls in love with a young woman of the party, and when she refuses his hand in marriage, and at a time he knows she is playing with a cub lion from his menagerie, turns the mother lion loose.

The picture will contain some very sensational scenes. Rex de Roselli is playing lead, Val Paul, heavy, William Clifford character lead; Lule Warrenton, female character, and Marie Wallace lead.

Intertwined upon kidnapping his sweetheart, the hero of Jack Blystone's latest one-reel comedy, "His Night Out," gets into the wrong rooms, and after carrying father, mother and a negro maid out, thinking it the "dear little one," he then decided to take the minister to the girl and there fight out the difficulties with the father of the girl. The cast is made up of Ernest Shields, Betty Shade, Phil Dunham and Eddie Boland.
By the aid of some excellent photographic work, a very interesting trick picture has been made by Charles Gil-lyn and company. In this, father pulls his chair to the fire to look through the family album, and as he turns each leaf a close-up view of the page first shows the photograph, and then, after a fade-out, the principal incident in the life of the person is enacted on the page in the place of the photograph.

The part of the father is played by Mur-dock MacQuarrie, mother, Beatrice Van; son, Millard K. Wilson, and daughter, Agnes Vernon. The scenario is by James Dayton, and the picture will be released under the title, "As We Journey Through Life."

Films the Angel’s Flight

One of the sure laugh makers of the Nestor releases will be "The Angel’s Flight," filmed last week by Al E. Curtis and company, composed of Ed-die Lyons, Victoria Ford and Lee Mor-ran. The picture will be filmed at Angel Flight, a name given to the stairs up Third street from Hill street to the top of Bunker Hill, about ninety feet above the level of the retail dis-trict of Los Angeles.

At each place there are pairs of cars operated on extremely narrow gauge tracks, and so arranged that one car goes up and the other down at the same time, thus greatly reducing the power necessary. The big feature of the picture will be the portrayal of the ups and downs of an irritated hus-band trying to catch his wife.

Angel Flight is one of the wonders of Los Angeles, and from the top of the hill—which is the highest spot in Los Angeles—a wonderful view of the city can be made.

"Star of the Sea" Shipped East

"Star of the Sea," a three-reel drama, featuring Pauline Bush, produced by Director Joseph de Grasse, at the Universal studio, during the past few weeks, is now finished, and was shown to the photoplayers before being shipped to the New York office of the company.

The scenario for this picture was written in February and production was delayed because so many unusual props and settings were necessary. This is a story of a young Paris sculptor who falls in love with the widowed daughter of a fisherman, who poses as his model in the making of the Madonna.

The six months old child used in scores of scenes comes near stealing the honors of the production. The principal of the cast beside Miss Bush are Laura Oakley, Howard Fenton, Lon Chaney and William Dowlan.

"The Chorus Girl’s Thanksgiving," featuring Anna Little, was produced last week by the Frank Lloyd Gold Seal Company, at the Universtav studio. It is a story of an unfortunate young man who betrays and robs his em-ployer in order to pay a doctor’s bill caused by the illness of his mother.

Finding himself trapped in a room occupied by a poor chorus girl, he forces a gun into her hand and thereby secures a thousand dollars’ reward for her by his capture. Herbert Rawlin-son takes the part of the criminal, and William Worthington plays the char-a-cter lead.

"Rose of the Rancho" Under Way

Work at the Lasky studios is progressing on several of the Belasco plays, first of which will be "The Rose of the Rancho," in which Bessie Bar-scale and Theodore Roberts will handle the principal roles.

Cecil B. De Mille and a company of twenty-one players, journeyed to Old Monterey, California, last week, where the Lasky executive staff had arranged for the temporary use of the ancient Spanish Custom House and a famous land mark, The Padre’s Garden, which is a typical and reminiscent remen-brance of the Latin Period of the Pacific Coast.

In addition to the two places mentioned, Mr. De Mille has obtained per-mission from the managers of the es-tate for the use, for the making of the pictures, of the entire enorme Castro Rancho grounds, comprising many acres of wonderful historic grounds and containing the fast-crumbling remains of one of the oldest missions in Calif-ornia.

The Lasky company also leased a five hundred acre tract of land from the United States government which gives them, also the right to the densely wooded tract of over two thousand acres and which contains several magnificent scenic spots. The tract is at the foot of the San Fernando mountains, twenty-one miles from the studio at Holly-wood. There are over a million dol-lars’ worth of historic properties on the tract which the Lasky concern are bonded to protect.

Political Setting for Majestic Release

"On the Wings of Love" is a polit-ical story being produced by William Christy Cabanne, for Majestic-Mutual release, and one of the big scenes for this is a race between a hydroplane and a motorboat on the Pacific Ocean, which ends with the hero gripping a rope and being carried away from the boat by the speeder craft. The scenario is by Russell E. Smith.

The bank clerk who is in need of money with which to pay the expenses of caring for an invalid daughter, is the first of the plot of the scenario for "The Availing Prayer," being produced under the direction of Donald Crisp, for the Reliance-Mutual release.

Just when the aged clerk is going to steal the money from the bank, he finds other burglars there, and is handsomely awarded by his employers for saving the bank from loss. R. A. Walsh and Spottiswoode Aitken are assigned leading parts in this picture.

A problem playhaving to do with the low salaries of employees of de-partment stores, is being produced by Jack O’Brien, as a Majestic-Mutual release. The scenario is by Anita Loos, of San Diego, and in the story the daughter of the store owner disguises herself as a poor girl in order to learn true conditions.

In the end she induces her father to raise the wage scale, saves him from being killed by a dissatisfied workman, and brings a pretty romance to a happy ending. Among the members of the cast for this picture are Blanché Sweet.

Manchester's $10,000,000 Film Vision Vanishes

His Grace Abandons World Pictures Idea—Dr. Carter's Company, Organized for Handling Educational and Religious Subjects, Unaffected by Failure—One Contract of the Duke Involved $702,000 Worth of Projection Machines—Also Ordered $18,000 Prints of Six Reel Features

The film trade has seen another large and brilliant scheme go by the board in the past week in the shape of a $10,000,000 concern which was expected to supply educational motion pictures to the world at large.

This organization, the Duke of Manchester's International Education League, has expired under the cloud. And, although men who have been in the scheme have said that the cessation of activities was only temporary, there is good reason to believe that there will be no revival—at least under dual auspices.

The duke, himself, has not been in New York except for a few hours in about two weeks, and there are strong probabilities that he will sail for Europe shortly, if he has not done so already.

The scheme which was headed by the duke was one of world-wide significance. It included the filming of an unlimited number of religious and educational subjects all over the globe and the ramifications were to have been numberless.

Plan Considered Visionary

The plan appears to have been extremely visionary on the part of Manchester, but he got others to take an interest in it, despite the fact that to a great many motion picture men, at least, it seemed highly impracticable.

One of those so interested was Dr. William Carter, who had so far organized a similar company as to have the incorporation papers ready for filing at Albany. Dr. Carter was approached by the duke and an arrangement was made whereby the two men could join their forces and give Dr. Carter's company a chance to do bigger things than he had at first anticipated.

According to Dr. Carter, he never went so far as to let the duke get any control of the Church and School Social Service Bureau—the name of the company which had been conceived by the doctor—and that may have been one of the reasons why Manchester found his way blocked.

As it stands now, Dr. Carter has withdrawn his company intact and will proceed to organize on the lesser basis on which he intended to operate before the English nobleman came to him with the larger proposal. Dr. Carter has rented new offices, which will be ready for him shortly.

Carelessness in Money Matters

Two other concerns, the Topical News Company and the Daylight Screen Company, are lost in the shuffle so far as the International League is concerned, so it is reported.

The Duke of Manchester, according to reports which have been appearing in the papers for the last few days, is involved in several things of a more or less disconcerting character, including the return of checks which he is alleged to have handed out while money to his credit in the bank was more conspicuous by its absence than by anything else.

His friends have said that all of these things will be taken care of and the duke cleared from any suspicion of evil intent. In addition to the checks, a number of creditors, both of the nobleman and of the International Education League, have been on the titled film man's trail for two or three weeks with a result that some suits are believed to have been entered.

A $10,000,000 Vision

Several contracts which were made in the name of the International Education League by the duke are outstanding, and those with whom they were made are not feeling any too good about them.

One contract for $702,000 worth of projecting machines is said to have been made with the Safety Projector Company, of Chicago. The Ambrosio company had made a contract with His Grace for about $18,000 for a certain number of prints of a six-reel feature called "Life at the Bottom of the Sea."

This film was already cut up and was in process of re-arrangement under the direction of Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of the New York Zoo. The picture was returned to the owners in small sections.

Two or three of the employees of the league are said to have had iron clad contracts with the duke and a firm of accountants had a contract to organize the big office force on a basis of scientific efficiency.

Prof. Ditmars is thought to have had another contract with the duke for a series of pictures which were being made under the scientist's direction.

Manchester's scheme was a big one. He was going to send companies all over the world to make pictures. He had visions of profits of good size on a capitalization of ten millions and his friends have said that there was no doubt in the minds of any one associated with him that he was sincere, but it did not take long to convince the practical men who went to his aid that he did not have his feet on the ground all of the time.

Office Furniture Not Paid For

The losses to others as a result of the duke's venture are said not to have been large. It is reported on good authority that about $20,000 will cover all of the amounts.

Archibald S. White and his brother, Rollin W. White, are believed to have been the heaviest losers, although the former has been quoted as saying that he lost no money.

Some of the magnificent furniture and carpets with which the duke furnished his offices at 18 East Forty-first street was paid for, but the bulk of it was removed from those offices by those who sold it.

Charles J. Hite, president of the Thanhouse company, was said to have been the big practical man associated with the duke, but it is known that he did not sign any papers or put any money into the concern, although he probably was about to do so when he met death in an automobile accident.

Mr. Hite's death has been given as one of the causes of the failure of the duke's scheme, and the war in Europe has been given as another, but reports coming from inside the league lead to the belief that Manchester's lack of experience in business, and especially in the film business, was the most direct and reasonable excuse for the crash.

Dr. Carter's Bureau to Continue

Dr. William Carter's Church and School Social Service Bureau, which was one of the unfortunate victims of the Duke of Manchester's abandoned International Education League, has taken new offices in the Hudson Building, at 801 Fifth avenue, and will be ready for business shortly.

Having drawn away from the duke's league, Dr. Carter now intends to go ahead with his original plans, which were broad as regards the United States but did not take in the entire world as did those of his titled associate.

With this in view, he has located his offices so as to be near the national religious and social welfare centers, which are to be found farther down town than the film headquarters of New York.

Will Be in Market for Films

When the new quarters are opened, a large number of these workers will be invited to come in and look over the enterprise and have the movement explained to them.

Dr. Carter has said that he will soon be in the market for a large number of films of the sort which he will use in his work. These will include subjects dealing with sociology, travel, education and religion and others of a whole some dramatic or humorous import. He expects to be ready for work on October 15 and will try to start his service about the first of November.
The Inside Story of the Columbus Convention

By Samuel Bulloch

Wherein a Cleveland exhibitor throws some light on Mr. Neff's methods of "personally conducting" an exhibitors' league meeting, particularly the executive sessions, and explains how a perfectly sound solution of the censorship difficulty in Ohio was "killed" by being committed to the tender mercies of a handpicked committee.

I

N order that my fellow league members in Ohio and the various states may not be misled, I am going to give them the plain unvarnished truth about the so-called "convention" at Columbus on September 15 and 16, even at the risk of expulsion for so doing.

On August 30, I read the official call and it read "If you are for or against censorship, be there. Let us hear what you have to offer as a solution to the problem."

Also, "Every member of the league will be given an opportunity to express his views."

Fourthly, "Remember, we elect all state officers and a legislature this fall who will make and enforce the laws for two years. We should know our friends, and legislation matters will come up at our meeting and, if you are not present it's your own fault and we will expect you to stand by the decision of the meeting."

"All Happened As Predicted"

At our meeting on Wednesday, September 2 (Cleveland Local No. 1), with 66 exhibitors present, I openly stated my suspicions, reiterated the same sentiment at a full meeting on September 9, was urged to go to Columbus on September 15, and everything happened as predicted—only worse—when I got to Columbus.

When I tell you that both our theatres have been, since September 3, "picked" by the Operators' Union due to my refusal to accede to their demand for a raise from $15.50 to $21.00 for a 30 hour evening show; that I was arrested on September 8 for running film without censor "leaders," you may well imagine the perplexed condition of my mind.

I certainly was not "on pleasure bent." I am in the business to stay, and anxious to get rid of some of the things that now encumber us and prevent any additional troubles that may be foisted upon us. I desire simply to look after my own business.

Tuesday, September 15, found me at league headquarters, Southern Hotel, Columbus, awaiting the opening of the meeting.

It opened with fifty-four exhibitors and film men present at the 2 o'clock session.

"Free Banquet Failed to Draw"

This answer to over 700 invitations sent by our state president showed plainly that there is a lack of confidence somewhere. Even free banquet tickets failed to draw.

The session opened with the usual speech by the president, that I am so familiar with, "tinted" with a few "non-harmonious" thrusts at yours truly as a reward for bringing half a hundred Cleveland "kickers" back into the league.

It grieved me to see such a display of spleen the first few minutes of the meeting after the "Don't stay at home" call.

It was commented upon freely by the film men who left the room when the executive meeting was announced.

In executive session, President Neff announced that "all the secreted out and not paid their per capita would be asked to withdraw or they would be recognized as a "delegate" and a right to the floor would be denied them. A list of names was read off and yours truly was missing.

I tremulously suggested that this could not be regarded as a "regular" convention inasmuch as no one present had been elected as a delegate.

He sharply informed me that he had the right, as state president, to call a "meeting" at any time, according to the constitution.

I timidly quoted (reading it) his official call, dated August 30, in which "Every member is urged to attend." I also proved by Messrs. Ed. Kohl and Hep-bach—his strong personal friends from Cleveland—that I had rejoined Cleveland Local the day I arrived from Dayton convention, paying three dollars dues which covered my per capita to November.

He contended that Treasurer Wilson had not received it and he announced that he would proceed, but announced that he "would insist that all must be "regular" on the treasurer's books tomorrow."

Note: It developed shortly after, as the free tickets for the banquet were given out to members in good standing only, that seven or eight of his own "old guard" were in arrears.

He then allowed me to be seated and I felt truly gratified for his hospitable treatment.

Sworn to Secrecy

The executive session was then informed that he would insist that every "delegate" be put upon his oath "not to divulge to a living soul what transpired at this convention, and Brother Miller, of Cincinnati, would administer the oath.

Again I shuddered and shrunkingly asked Mr. Neff, "How can I report back these proceedings to my Cleveland fellow leaguers if I am oath-bound?"

Max Stearns, of Columbus, reminded him of the two smiling newspaper scribes present and he put his official O. K. upon them as "men of honor," but Attorney Lem Miller, of Cincinnati, who drew the censor law, reminded Mr. Neff that he, Miller, held no commission for Columbus.

Again I breathed easy at my narrow escape. He then announced he would "pass it up until tomorrow." Several resolutions were submitted and discussed; the good ones I voted for, the bad ones against and the suspicious ones I let alone.

On the resolution regarding the limiting of poster displays to one sheet, I voted "aye," inasmuch as Mayor Baker of Cleveland is raiding the show fronts on account of its being overdone and I have a case pending at the present time due to the fact that a Cleveland policeman pulled one of my three sheets down on Labor Day.

The resolution got eight votes from the "uplifters" and "got it in the neck" from the "negatives," none of whom explained why.

This was Wednesday, after the committee's report and recommendation.

"Shall we sanction the endorsement of any particular trade paper," brought forth the suggestion that a certain paper was being favored by motion picture powers that be. We "allowed" that everyone should support the paper that served him best as an exhibitor—and it went through with a bang to refer the matter to a committee to report Wednesday. (Anyway, the Dayton National Convention settled this question.)

The question of "forming an association of manufacturers and exhibitors for mutual protection" was also referred to a committee to report Wednesday.

Take up New York Situation

The resolution endorsing the action of Wolff, of New York, in holding Sam Trigger to the amalgamation committee promises, per Dayton resolution, brought forth some real oratory from our worthy president regarding the awful sins of "bolters."

However, I resisted the hypnotic influence of his flashing eye without a quiver and reminded him that I had kept my word, given at Dayton, anyhow.
Then I voted "aye" to his great surprise, I am told. Some one suggested that conditions should be made better for the sufferer, exhibitor and film men who were suffering from lack of attention by the censor board to the delay in censoring reels and providing "official leaders" for same, thus holding up reels in a "I should worry" manner.

I perked up and smiled, remembering that the files of the trade papers would show where yours truly had predicted this very condition would arrive in due time.

Naturally also, I thought, "Here comes the discussion on censorship," and I also remembered the film host waiting outside, loaded with visible proof but "light" with depleted pocket books. We also reminded them that we were out on bail for the awful crime of showing a reel without a "leader," and suggested the boys be called in to enliven the proceedings, but Mr. Neff settled it by appointing a committee to report on Wednesday.

We had made several attempts in devious ways to bring on the censorship discussion, but the president was on the job, and I was single-handed and alone on the firing line, limited to five minutes, while he talked, warned, threatened and "cooled" us off as tight from the president's chair.

However, the previous discussion had received recognition and been referred to committee, so hoping for the best, I asked permission to read some resolutions to the body assembled, but Mr. Neff ruled me out of order. I reminded him that since he had permitted the previous question to be honored with a committee reference, he might at least "permit" me to read my resolutions also.

He finally condescended—after reading his "official call" to him—to allow me to proceed. I got exactly three lines of the "resolved" over the plate when he called me out of order. I feebly resisted his (private) parliamentary (?) moves until he finally promised to allow me to "bring it up tomorrow when a full discussion on censorship would take place, and not before."

Yielding gracefully, the horrible thought occurred, "Don't we get any censorship talk at the feed tonight?" and I thought of Joe Farnham and the Algonquin roof garden banquet and wondered where he was, as we adjourned at 6:30 to eat. Prompt at 8, we lined up for the feast—and by-the-way it was a good one.

After two "bits" of vaudeville the thin music started! I thought there were fourteen "speaking acts."

The "topliner" was a gentleman who sprung a "give-us-your-kind-applause" stunt by dramatically proposing that "We all arise and stand, as a mark of esteem to our noble president."

I was the first up. I can "stand" for anything.

Everyone discussed censorship, including Brother Vestal, who of course isn't interested except as a "patron." But how we missed Maude Murray Miller! Poor lady! It was un gallant not to invite her.

The censorship discussion went on, in spite of Mr. Neff's orders of the afternoon to "allow no discussion of the censorship question until Wednesday."

The "discussion" was limited, though—limited to "our friends," as one-sided as a man with a short leg. Governor Cox's private secretary, Mr. Burba, rendered a touching monolog on William Lloyd Wright that got several "hands" and a bow or two. It was a "peach."

The Size of the "Crowd"

The program became monotonous to some of the film men and some trouble maker sent my name over by Brother Maddox to the "big chief" with a request that he put me on for an amateur act.

Mr. Maddox knows his little book, though, and our late "retired" national president couldn't see me, so the "explosion" never took place. We assured him, though, as he left the dais that he had not changed any in four years. Too bad! He had the makings of a great man but he was spoiled by Maddox.

He assumed a look of injured innocence as he shot back, "You young up-and-coming again?" I then strolled in arm in arm with Brother Wilson, national secretary. Ohio censor, etc., etc., who blithely assured me that he could censor fifty reels a day and never wink. I believed him! He has doubted that record many a time recently.

(Notes: I forgot to state there were 68 banquetees, 40 exhibitors and the balance hungry film men and admirers. It must have impressed the Governor's secretary as an enormous crowd. The Governor is a victim of a "con" game, but the boys are waking all over Ohio and it won't be long.)

At the Wednesday session a raffling good speech by State Building Inspector Kearns put us all in good humor. It was a heart-to-heart, fair and square business talk, without affectation or bombast.

We really learned something of benefit as showmen. Cleveland welcomes Kearns any old time. Everything went on harmoniously until we introduced our little "Whereas" and "Resolved," as per promised permission by the president on Tuesday.

The Fate of the Resolution

Max Stearns said it was reflection upon President Neff. For once Max was right, but it was never intended as such. The state organization is in a lamentable shape and I wanted to give Neff a chance to "square" himself in Ohio.

I insisted we had no right to inject censorship talk at our birthday party, inasmuch as the National Convention at Dayton had voted to condemn all forms of legalized censorship and had endorsed the work of the New York National Board.

We also reminded him that everybody at the banquet had been heard on the side of Neff's pet measure without giving poor me a chance.

After considerable fireworks, with National President Pearce as a spectator, Mr. Neff discovered my resolutions were not seconded and he took the only course he could take, while the "old guard" stood pat after I read the resolutions through. So well drilled were they that no one could be induced to second the same for the purpose of getting enlightened on the censorship question.

My resolutions offered a solution. The only one offered, as per "Call." Herewith I append the same:

WHEREAS, A condition now exists among the motion picture exhibitors of Ohio that is not conducive to harmony among said exhibitors regarding the present State Censor Law and its effect upon them as exhibitors and free citizens, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That in order to test the sentiment of all Ohio exhibitors, including league members and nonleague exhibitors, regarding this all important question, we hereby ask that a mail referendum vote be ordered by National President Marion A. Pearce, in the State of Ohio; the said referendum to be conducted under the jurisdiction and supervision of President Pearce, assisted by a committee to be appointed by himself; the details of conducting said referendum to be arranged by President Pearce and said committee; the expense of said referendum to be borne by the Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors League; and be it FURTHER RESOLVED, That action be commenced at once by said committee in order that a full and complete vote of Ohio exhibitors may be registered as early as possible.

FURTHER RESOLVED, That all envelopes shall be opened and votes counted in the presence of National President, M. A. Pearce, not later than October 15, 1914, and that a majority of votes, either for or against the repeal of the Ohio State Censor Law, shall be recognized as the expressed will of all Ohio State exhibitors and all further action upon this subject shall thereafter be left to the good judgment of National President, Marion A. Pearce, for final disposition.

No endorsements were given to any one on the censorship question nor the censorship proposition in any form, but the above was "shelved" by the appointed committee—hand-picked—to look into conditions, give the law a chance and report at the Cleveland convention next February. I suppose I shall be fired by that time.
When the Sleeper Wakes

At the last local elections in a certain large eastern city, a well-known lawyer and judge was chosen public prosecutor.

The election had been a spirited one, and every office was hotly contested. What was more remarkable was the part the motion picture exhibitors of the community had played in the fight.

The day after it was over, the new District Attorney was receiving congratulations from his friends. During the reception he was asked, by a representative of the press, what he considered the prime factor in his success at the polls.

"The motion picture theatres," he returned, without an instant's hesitation.

ONE important fact about this incident is that it is true.

Another and an even more important feature of it is that it can be repeated in any town or city of the United States, whenever the exhibitors of that community wake to the enormous power stored in the motion picture screen.

And that power can be applied, not only to a district-attorneyship, but to every office on the ticket, local or state, from that of Governor to the tail end of the slate.

Indeed, no great imagination is necessary to conceive that several thousand motion picture screens, carrying messages to many millions of people a day, might have a marked influence upon the course of a Presidential election.

But when will the exhibitor wake?

When will he realize that he and his fellows, in their motion picture screens, the greatest medium for appealing to public opinion ever known? When will they realize that the screen is mightier than the stump speaker?

That the projection machine is mightier than the politician?

That, whereas many of them now tremble at the bosses for the safety of their business, the bosses should tremble at them for the safety of their power?

That when they are as fully aware of the power of the screen as the politician is, the politician will cease to molest them, as he has ceased to molest other industries with which he has found it unwise to meddle?

There are lines of business which have been compelled to buy immunity from the politician.

But the motion picture exhibitor need never do that. He can command, where others have to beg. He can dictate where others have to implore. For he holds in his hands the power that can make or unmake the politician.

And the politician knows it, but he also knows that the exhibitor is not yet aware of it, and he is trading on the exhibitor’s unconsciousness of his own strength.

As an individual, the exhibitor is an easy prey, as a member of an organization, he is invincible. The day the exhibitors organize and present a solid front to the politicians, their projection machines will serve as a battery of artillery to keep the enemy at a distance, and their screens will be the arena in which more than one political conflict will be decided.

But when will the sleeper wake?

The War Tax Off? Well, Not Exactly!

There has been a great deal of rejoicing during the last few days in certain quarters of the motion picture industry, over a report that the play theatres had been exempted from the Congressional war tax.

Unfortunately, the rejoicing is premature, for the report has been proved to be without foundation.

The tax on motion picture theatres has not been abandoned.

Congress has not granted immunity to the exhibitors, except in towns of less than 15,000 population, as originally provided.

The measure has passed the House of Representatives, and is now before the Senate. In all probability it will go through without change, so far as the motion picture industry is concerned.

Instead of indulging in unwarranted ecstasies over a false rumor, it would behoove those upon whom the tax will fall to consider the consequences of their foolish indifference to organization. And those who spread the report might ponder with advantage the wisdom of verifying rumors before circulating them.
"THE KEY TO YESTERDAY"
(Favorite Players—Four Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

Dual identities have constituted a favorite theme for story writers, and many stirring narratives have been founded on this idea, but when the situation is complicated by the complete loss of memory on the part of one of the persons concerned a most entertainingly intricate situation may be expected.

Such is the case in the book by Charles Neville Buck from which this film is taken. To present such a story on the screen is a difficult task because portions are likely to appear obscure, or else too much space is taken in explaining matters.

The Favorite Players have avoided both of these errors, and have produced a film which offers an excellent story.

The scenes are laid in France, the western part of the United States, South America and on shipboard. In the exteriors there is a happy combination of attractiveness and realism. The places selected are of such a nature as to furnish pleasing and, in many instances, beautiful backgrounds, besides representing what they are supposed to represent. The scenes on shipboard are also effective.

A careful attention to details has added to the strength of the picture. An example is the portrait which the artist is supposed to paint of his sweetheart. In many films where this idea is introduced one of two equally bad courses is usually adopted. Either the painting is always held so that the audience cannot see it, or else some miserably drawn sketch is used which makes the heroine seem ridiculous.

In "The Key to Yesterday" the problem was solved by the simple process of using a really good retouched photograph. This may be a small thing, but it typifies the general good sense which has been shown in the production of the film. The correct turn has been given to scenes regardless of a little extra trouble.

The photography is another strong point. Except for a sunset at the end of the third reel there is no effort to obtain special effects, but the camera work throughout is as it should be.

Carlyle Blackwell appears in the film at the head of his own company, this being his début in that capacity. His work in leading parts for other companies is well known, and he handles his dual role in this picture with customary vigor.

He is seen first at Marston, a revolutionist and all around bad man in a South American republic. Later he is the artist Marston, who after losing his memory is known as Saxon, thus making the part practically a triple one.

Edna Mayo is an attractive Duska Filsen, and plays the part with a becoming charm. In the latter part of the picture her work appears to better advantage than when she is first seen. Other well played parts are those of J. F. Dillon as Rodman, another revolutionist; John Sheean as George Steele, and John Prescott as Roberto, an ambassador. The other minor roles are well played.

The story tells of an artist who comes to America shortly after his marriage. A jealous model has stabbed him in the right hand, and thus made it impossible to work. While in the West he is robbed, and receives a blow on the head which makes him forget his past life. He shows his artistic ability, and a painter sends him to an art school.

He is successful and later becomes engaged to an American girl. Prior to this a revolutionist has made a sensational escape from a firing squad in a South American republic. He is an exact double of the artist. The official who sentenced him meets the artist and supposes him to be the same man.

Not knowing his own past, he thinks the man may be right. He tells his story to his fiancée and leaves for South America to find out whether it is true. He has a number of adventures, but finally learns he cannot be the man, as the scar is on his right hand, while the revolutionist has one on his left.

His fiancée follows him. A revolution breaks out and the artist is slightly wounded. A friend puts him on a ship for France. There he finally finds his home and learns his identity.

"THE ADVENTURES OF KITTY COBB"
(Warner's Features—Four Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

This picture is founded on the series of drawings made for a newspaper syndicate by James Montgomery Flagg. The opening scene shows Mr. Flagg at his drawing table executing a sketch of the heroine at his usual mile a minute clip. This concluded, the real story commences, and things move at a lively pace for the remainder of the four reels.

There is not a great variety of scenes in the film, but this is no fault and is in keeping with the requirements of the story. The action takes place in and about New York. Marian Swayne, who plays the title role, makes such a charming Kitty that one can forgive her for her tendency to overact in some of the more dramatic parts. Harvey Thomas, who plays opposite her, is troubled slightly by the same fault, but on the whole, handles his part in a satisfactory manner.

At least one remarkable coincidence occurs in the course of the story, but this is no very great departure from real life, because without such extraneous aid kidnapped girls are not often found until it is too late.

Kitty, before she loses her husband, marries a foreign count trying to spy on the actions of a young inventor who is working for the government. Later she seeks her fortune in New York, and eventually becomes the secretary of the inventor's mother. Here she meets the foreign count, who is engaged to her employer's daughter. Fearing exposure the villain has her kidnapped. After some thrilling fighting she is rescued by the inventor.
"HYPOCRITES"
(Bosworth—Four Parts)
REVIEWED BY JULIAN M. SOLOMON, JR.

MORALITY plays are not new by any means, but some are stronger than others. In the class of the strong plays is "The Hypocrites," a four-part drama, scheduled for release on October 19 through the Paramount Program. The name is well chosen, man is as much as Miss Weber does not hesitate to play hypocrisy in every form.

The play is sure to create great discussion, and handled by a less able writer or one with less puritanical ideas would receive adverse criticism.

The story is divided into two parts, a prologue, introducing the characters as monks and nuns and then brought up to the present time with modern settings and twentieth century people. The cast of the prologue is: Gabriel, an ascetic; Courtenay Foote; the Abbot, Herbert Standing; a nun, Myrtle Stedman; a magdalen, Dixie Carr; a queen, Adele Farrington; and Truth, Margaret Edwards.

The cast for the play of the present time is: Gabriel, a minister, Courtenay Foote; a pillar of the church, Herbert Standing; a choir singer, Myrtle Stedman; a magdalen, Dixie Carr; an aristocrat, Adele Farrington; and Truth, Margaret Edwards.

As the story runs, Gabriel, an ascetic monk of olden times, labors to perfect an image of Truth, consecrating himself with fasting, monk, and observing the rules of Truth and can see nothing.

The unrolling of the statue is made a fete day, and all gather to listen to the address of the Abbot, who himself stands beside, and there stands a figure of Truth, naked. Unable to see with the eyes of the spirit, the people with one accord rush upon Gabriel, and kill him.

Only two can look upon Truth unflinching, a little child, and the woman who loves Gabriel. A magdalen looks upon the statue and falls prostrate, weeping bitterly. The woman who loves him covers the dead Gabriel with her veil, which turns from white to black as she bends over him. Nearby the magdalen crouches.

Thus ends the prologue of the story, which, told in a reverent and deeply religious vein, makes an indelible impression, and prepares the spectator for the modern scenes which are the main theme.

The present-day story opens with a view of Gabriel as the minister of our everyday life, frail and ill, but fired with divine inspiration. In the congregation are the same people who, in the prologue, stoned the monk to death. Now they are bored or shocked, as the case may be, by his denunciation of hypocrisy. Only the woman who loved him, now a singer in his choir, and the magdalen, who kneels in prayer after the others have gone, understand. The spying monk is now a choir boy, surreptitiously reading a newspaper during the service.

Left alone after service, the minister finds the newspaper, with its reproduction of Fauger's famous painting, "The Truth," and vague memories stir. He sinks into a dream. His body, in the form of Gabriel, the ascetic, leaves his present-day body and, accompanied by Truth with her mirror, visits the various scenes of the story, showing him in this wondrous mirror of hers, the real actions of the characters.

The photography in this feature is really wonderful, showing what the expert camera man can do. Not content with double and triple exposure, George W. Hall has produced even sextuple exposure to make this picture more marvellous. In fact, the photography is of such merit that it has been brought favorably to the attention of the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia, Pa.

"THE MAN IN THE CELLAR"
(Films Lloyd—Five Reels)

THE second of the Webb series of detective stories, the first being called "The Black Triangle." The stories are complete in themselves Ernest Reichehere enact the part of detective Webb as in the first picture. It is produced in five reels by Joseph May.

The story is most mysterious in character and has sufficient interest to sustain the action throughout. The first three reels are entirely shrouded in mystery, the audience not being given an idea as to the outcome.

In speaking of "The Black Triangle," the antecedent to this picture, Detective George Dougherty is said to have thought it the best criminal detective story ever brought to this country. The second one certainly ranks very high in comparison with many of those the writer has seen.

A scene which cannot fail to grip the lover of tense situations is that in which the conspirator, fearful of instant discovery, makes his escape through the window. Every move of the actor intensifies the scene.

Following the hearing of strange noises Detective Webb is called in by the Baroness, and on entering next door finds a man entombed in a box in the cellar. A small dog which had been with him disappears in the excitement. On recovery the man tells of his trip from Egypt with the plans of a new gun for the government. This had been stolen and he had3 been knocked senseless.

Webb captures one of the conspirators and impersonating him goes to a secret meeting. He escapes from here with the key to the plans and goes at once to police headquarters. He
"A PRINCE OF INDIA"
(Eclectic—Four Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

Perhaps the best evidence of the good quality of this melodrama is the fact that the most spectacular scene in it does not stand out all by itself, although it is really a remarkable piece of work.

In other words, the production is well balanced and is so constructed as to avoid the common error of bringing out the high spots as spectacular but unattached incidents. Events move along in an orderly manner and at an even rate. The outdoor scenes have been selected with care, which results in effective back-grounds, even for the more unimportant happenings. The sensation of the film is in the fourth reel when a regular, honest-to-goodness trolley car plunges off from a bridge which must be a hundred feet in height. This impromptu diving act is supposed to take the villain to a timely death.

The car incident occurs when the prince and his friends have overtaken the thief who is attempting to make off with the famous ruby. The crook has commandeered a surface car but this plebeian vehicle is easily overtaken by a motor. The prince leaps from the machine to the rear platform of the trolley with all the polished ease of a confirmed commuter. Once on the car he engages in a furious fight with the thief. This occurs on the front platform while the car runs wild, and is an ingenious scene excellently photographed. The thief is finally overcome, and with the precious jewel in his possession the prince leaps off just in time.

The next moment the car dashes out onto a high bridge, jumps the track, crashes through an iron railing and plunges into a rocky gorge all in a style which is sure to bring an audible gasp from the spectators. It is a most creditable piece of work and has been utilized to its fullest extent.

The interiors are for the most part effective although the reception room of the hotel leaves something to be desired in the way of luxury. The lighting effects are well handled, the moonlight scenes being quite realistic. The cast includes a number of capable actors. The title role is played by Thurlow Bergen, a trifie coldly perhaps, but nevertheless well. "Smiling Billy" Mason makes a debonair young reporter, who must have some income besides a newspaper salary if one can judge from his clothes.

William Riley Hatch is a conventional and therefore convincing villain, while M. O. Pem gives dignified portrayal of the Rajah of Myore. Elsie Esmond appears an unwilling "villainess" in a cast almost without feminine members.

The story concerns the attempted theft of the "Kiss of Death," a priceless ruby belonging to a visiting rajah. The thieves are at first foiled by the accidental loss of the gem. It is found by a "cob" reporter, who plans to give it back in the morning but loses it while walking in his sleep.

The prince, who is the son of the owner, recovers it only to be robbed by one of the thieves. He in turn is robbed by his companion. With the help of the reporter the prince is soon on the right track and the ruby is recovered as mentioned above.

"THE TREY O' HEARTS"
(Gold Seal-Universal—Tenth Chapter)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

George Larkin has had many an opportunity in the preceding installments of "The Trey O' Hearts" to demonstrate his remarkable acrobatic ability, and he has come through his many daring feats with flying colors.

But due to his death-defying performances, Cro Madison has been somewhat neglected from this angle of the story. But here she blossoms forth and proves that she is just as good an acrobat as her male companion of this series.

Perhaps an added touch of excitement is given to the picture when one sees a woman dally jumping on freight trains when they are going at great speed, climbing over the roofs of the cars, and jumping from railroad trestles of great height.

It furnishes excitement enough to see a man performing these feats of agility and daring, but if there is room for any more thrills they certainly come when a woman is seen performing the stunts that no ordinary man would volunteer to do or could accomplish with any great alacrity.

All the action of this picture takes place on the railroad tracks, and numerous chases of engines, hand cars and freight trains create such a feeling of suspense that if much more of the same variety of action were furnished the spectator would be near a nervous breakdown.

The fact that the action transpires on the railroad tracks must have put the company to quite an expense, for as a great amount of track length was used, and no other trains appear except those that are directly needed to further the plot of the story.

Near the end of the last reel, Rose, Alan and Barcus are in a caboose, which has been cut loose from its freight train by Judith. It stops on a high trestle. In a rapid breakdown the caboose car is overturned, and some others of Trine's party. The engineer, so taken up with the gun that he is holding close to his ear, neglects to see the caboose standing still in its path. Just before the engine collides with it, the thighs alight and descend to the ground below by means of each other's assistance.

Then the engine telescopes the caboose and fragments it into pieces, hurling bits of it far and wide. Here the chapter ends.

Tom Walsh as Barcus, a side partner of Alan, is assuming much importance as the story progresses. He is every bit as daring as the more distinguished star, or he appears so at least on the film. Ray Hanford as Marrophet, the lieutenant of Trine's, is another important individual.

Indeed, the work of the whole cast is of sufficiently high standard to deserve mention.
"THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY"
(Thanhouser—Fifteenth Episode)
REVIEWED BY J. HURROUGS NOELL

It is well nigh impossible to maintain interest throughout a long succession of episodes, unless each one is thrilling in the extreme, and perhaps what is more important, unless each one is thoroughly intelligible in itself, standing complete as a unit but at the same time acting as a link in a chain.

The effort of the Thanhouser company in its great serial has been toward this end and it is probably no exaggeration to say that the firm has succeeded as well as possible under the circumstances. An almost exhaustless supply of human ingenuity has enabled the producer to carry on from episode to episode without the slightest diminution of interest in the adventures of the girl harassed by the band of conspirators.

And now that we have reached episode No. 15, the prediction may be hazarded that the interest will not only not diminish, but that it will steadily increase from now until the end, because the threads of the story have now become fairly defined, and it is just possible that some alert minds may begin to see signs of the solution.

The hanging together of the whole in one connected chain creates suspended interest from one week to another, and this is perfectly satisfactory to the multitude who never lay any chance of missing each release.

But there are many other persons who are not so fortunate; they see one episode this week, and then miss one or two before they see another. And perhaps they do not have the opportunity to read the story in the dailies.

To them it is very irritating if their understanding is thus hampered, and it becomes absolutely impossible for them to catch the drift. But this exasperating circumstance has been eliminated by making each episode tell a complete story in itself.

Always one event takes place in each installment, and there is never any carrying over of one occurrence into the next. Even the outcome is not withheld, but the consequences are made plain at once, and when the next installment comes it depicts another and a new adventure.

But of course the same people and the same purpose are carried over from week to another, and thus that binding and gripping suspense that draws crowds to the theaters without fail maintained.

The fifteenth episode is called "The Borrowed Hydroplane." It introduces a little open-air excitement. The conspirators have gotten hot on the trail of Florence and have captured her. They threatened her with that basest of all threats, to disfigure her for life unless she reveals the hiding place of the money.

They carry her off in a boat to execute their evil design. But Jimmy Norton gets on to what has happened, finds a hydroplane waiting for him to jump in, and promptly starts on his rescue trip.

He overtakes the boat, signals Florence to jump out, picks her up out of the water, and makes off before the conspirators have time to realize that they have been outwitted once again.

"THE NIGHTINGALE"
(All-Star A-List—Five Parts)
REVIEWED BY WILLIAM REESMAN ANDREWS

"The Nightingale" is the first motion picture play written by a well-known dramatist for a legitimate star. Augustus Thomas has brought all his skill to bear on the newer art of screen dramatization, and has provided Ethel Barrymore an excellent vehicle for her abilities. In this, her debut in film drama, Mr. Thomas shows the stage management expected from one of his finesse.

The play will enhance the reputations of producer and actress, and afford an opportunity for admirers of Miss Barrymore to see their favorite in a role permitting her to exercise all her charm and wonderful impersonation of a difficult character.

"The Nightingale" stands out for the variety of incidents which have allowed the director a chance to exercise all his ingenuity in divising picturesque settings. Their scope is so wide that the spectator sees, on one hand, events staged amid the squalor of the tenement district, and, on the other, the gorgeousness of Grand Opera scenes, and the luxuriant surroundings of wealth and refinement.

And with all these apparent extremes there is nothing incongruous in their relations to the main current of the photo drama. Every scene is made to dovetail and follows as a natural sequence to what has gone before. This is indeed a triumph of stagecraft.

In a hand of lesser cunning this would have degenerated into mere padding, the fault of many motion picture dramas aspiring to the dignity of a feature.

For all its length "The Nightingale" holds the attention of the audience, who are constantly impressed with the dramatic qualities of the play and the finished acting of the cast supporting Miss Barrymore.

The death of the old organ-grinder by the explosion of a Black Hand bomb is unusually thrilling. The plot deals with an Italian girl possessed of a wonderful voice. A wealthy young man hears her singing on the street, in company with her father, an organ grinder, and falls in love with the unknown. He searches for her and persuades the girl to go abroad to cultivate her heavenly-gifted vocal powers under the best master in Europe.

Through the misunderstanding as to her benefactor's motives the couple are separated. The singer makes a hit in grand opera, and the two are reconcile after her lover, brought to a realization of her pure character, makes known his true feelings and asks her to become his wife.

bound to creep into some of the best plays and destroy an otherwise perfect effect. A mistake of that sort is like a drop of ink in a glass of water. It serves to discolor everything.

He forwarded intermittent reports to the manufacturers, dilating on his discoveries. Although the constant stream of letters that he sent partook of the nature of nagging, they produced good results, for they were prods in the right direction.

If all the managers did likewise, there would be fewer careless directors in the business. The plays, moreover, would be more carefully scrutinized by a selected staff, before they were sent out. Jensen didn't care on whose toes he trampled in this case. Such men, he figured, were better outside of the business.

There was still another important thing which Jensen designated a function of the exchange—the promotion of new theatres.

He was constantly examining his field to discover a likely location for a motion-picture house. He succeeded in establishing four, thereby adding that number of clients to his exchange and extending the market of the manufacturers.

The first manager whom he was instrumental in setting up in business was one of his solicitors. Jensen was always on the watch for promising talent to assist him in his work. This solicitor had a creative mind, backed by a dogged perseverance and topped by a tremendous ambition.

He had not only made good as a solicitor and assisted materially in building up Jensen's clientele, but had studied exhibiting at first-hand and was qualified to speak authoritatively about the business. He had, at times, substituted for the expert of the combination.

Jensen discovered a likely-looking spot for a small theatre, catering to the best class of people, and immediately got into touch with a retired merchant in the community, who was willing to advance the requisite funds.

With a little time and judicious engineering, Jensen started his solicitor as an exhibitor and now has a loyal client firmly welded to his exchange.

The next venture resulted in a community house started and supported by those in the vicinity. In the first case, Jensen relied upon the personality of his solicitor to achieve success.

In the second instance, the theatre was definitely a neighborhood project. The majority of the shareholders were residents locally, the shares being sold by personal solicitation. Each shareholder agreed, in addition to the money paid for the shares, to buy at least two tickets to the theatre every week.

By this means, the nucleus of a steady patronage was insured from the very beginning. They gave the manager, who was allied with Jensen, free rein in running the theatre, promising not to interfere with him in any way.

The other two houses were established with the aid of a commercial bureau, through which Jensen interested several moneyed men in his schemes.

The mere fact that he personally stood behind the new ventures in most cases sufficed to settle the matter. It required little investigation to satisfy the most suspicious investor as to Jensen's business sagacity and reputation for square dealing. And none of those who risked their money at his suggestion had cause to regret the step, for Jensen resolved to do everything in his power to make the new theatres a success—which he did.

There was still another field that Jensen entered. The companies that had supported him in his initial campaign, when he first took hold of the exchange, insisted on him becoming their agent in his vicinity. Jensen realized the importance of having the most up-to-date accessories installed in the various theatres, so he finally consented.

A separate room was given over to the samples, all of which Jensen thoroughly tested before he agreed to handle them. This formed an additional incentive for the exhibitors to pay his quarters a personal visit.

As they were always interested where new methods and instruments were concerned, Jensen found them assuming more and more importance in his business.

The quarterly meetings of the local association were admirable opportunities for demonstrating the efficacy of the new devices. Cuts, furnished by the manufacturers of the new articles, appeared on the bulletin in the intervals with the results of Jensen's examination.

This served to push sales at dull times and keep the exhibitors awake to the fact that the house proper deserved fully as much attention as the program.

The above and many other things Jensen evolved to help along his proposition. That he was so signal success may be attributed to the fact that, whatever he undertook, generally had a rock-bottom of unselfishness in it.

His methods were business-like. He believed in claiming a legitimate profit. But he didn't seek to gobble everything; he was willing to let the other fellow live.

In spite of the vituperations of his rivals, he succeeded far better than any of them, because he paid strict attention to constructive and not destructive criticism. If anything was radically wrong, he did not burst out into a rage, but conscientiously sought the flaw. If he were to blame, he would be the first to acknowledge it.

"THE MAN OF THE HOUR"

(World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IN "The Man of the Hour," the producers have given to the public a picture that will by no means fail to gain its appreciation. It has all the qualities that go to make an excellent picture, and no one of them has been at all neglected.

Its plot although somewhat conventional is developed with great skill, both on the part of the principal of the cast and the director. And a picture played by an accomplished cast, no matter how old the thread of the story, is sure to be well received. In fact, its conventionality may easily be overlooked.

Old though the plot may be it is quite intricate, but at no time is one in the dark as to what the action may be next to. This for the most part is due to the fine interpretations rendered by the leading players, and then again the scenes have been cleverly arranged, flash backs and close ups appear in many places, where by another director a mistake might have been employed.

Playing in the title role is Robert Warwick, and he gives a fine characterization of the man who, although he has gained his high position as mayor of New York, mainly through the workings of a political ring, utterly forsakes it and turns all his power and attention to the woman he loved. His acting throughout is practically beyond criticism.

Supporting him is a cast no less competent. John Hines as young Percy Wainwright holds the principal comedy role of the picture and carries it off well. Chester Barnett as Joe Standing, Garrison's partner in the West, has a part which calls for both dramatic and again a little humorous acting.

Ned Burton as the political boss, finally conquered by Garrison, embodies the popular idea of such a person, fat, and always accompanied by a cigar, which he chews vigorously when the occasion requires.

Eric Mayne is the boss' aid, and the man who ruined Garrison's father, and Belle Adair, plays the daughter, the girl whom Garrison finally marries. Alec B. Francis has a small part as the young man who is the love interest, but carries it off well. The rest of the cast, although appearing in small parts, seem to have a good understanding of their roles.

It seems rather queer that an allegorical touch should be brought in at the end, showing the political boss standing above the graves of the poor, receiving, as maybe gathered from their outstretched hands, their curses, and the picture would seem better if this part were let out.
leading part as Cora Tracey, the proprietress of a gambling resort, and Anna Luther as her daughter, from whom she wishes to hide her way of life, the genuine intensity of the acting overcomes the difficulties that the story has laid down. The others in the cast are Harry C. Myers, Harry Wilgus and Beatrice Inman.

“The Way of His Father.” (Essanay. Tuesday, Sept. 15.)—The eternal rebellion of the young against following in the footsteps of those who have preceded, the striving to reach out into new fields is the theme of this drama that is adapted from one of the Munsey magazines.

The father, a physician, desires his son to carry on his practice in the little home town after he completes his course. The son gets a chance to step into a field that offers greater opportunities and decides to leave home. The father falls ill of a broken heart. The boy then sacrifices his own future to comply with his father’s wishes.

“The Twin Brothers Van Zandt.” (Lubin. Two reels. Wed., Sept. 16.)—The exact likeness of the twin brothers enables the scenario writer to work out a very unexpected ending in this two reel feature. A dancer has come to the home of John Van Zandt to blackmail him, and John, the brother, comes in to plead for his niece Rose, whom John has disinherited on account of her marriage to an artist.

John loses his temper and almost strangles the woman. The sight affects Peter’s heart and kills him. John then pretends he is Peter, and while his nephew takes possession of his property, he lives with his niece. But he gets a new will into the hands of his lawyer, and in the final scene the nephew is ousted as John discloses his true identity.

John Ince plays the dual part of the twin brothers. Mildred Gregory is the dancer and Villette Stringer for niece. If the transformation from one brother to the other was just a little clearer the picture would be more easily understood.

“One of the Discard.” (Kay-Bee. Mutual. Two reels. Fri., Oct. 2.)—A powerful and logical drama of the gold fields of the West where the search for the shining dust is the sole thought of man, and how to get it away from him the sole thought of women.

The play develops through a series of dramatic incidents that lead to a fine climax and keeps the spectator in doubt as to the conclusion until the very end.
A young miner deserts a woman of the dance-hall and goes home and gets married. Later he goes into the gold fields again, he is thrown in her power again and instead of revenging herself upon him, she sends him off to his wife and child.

"Her Awakening." (Majestic-Mutual. Two reels. Sun., Sept. 20.)—The construction is somewhat loose and crude, but the story has splendid dramatic possibilities. An heiress is shoved over an embankment by a physician cousin who wishes to get rid of her for the money. She is found alive, but her memory is gone. An operation is advised, and the surgeon happens to be the cousin. But before the operation he is arrested for the forgery he has committed, and so is gotten out of the way. The girl regains her memory but forgets the young man who has adored her. He has to begin his wooing anew.

Several of the most important incidents hang too much in the air, and are not connected closely enough to seem reasonable. The hospital scenes are presented with faithful reality.

Blanche Sweet, Ralph Lewis and Wallace Reid play the leading roles.

"The Adventure of the Smuggled Diamonds." (Edison. Mon., Oct. 19.)—Octavius the amateur detective pulls off a pretty piece of slush work in this, the tenth story of the series by Frederic Arnold Kummer. He meets a nice girl on the Celtic and she presents him with a cane.

About the same time he learns of a big smuggling case and sets about to do a little prying. He suspects a musician, accuses him, and gets into difficulties with the customs officers for his pains. But he finds the diamonds after all, inside the cane. The girl comes back to get them, but Octavius is too smart for her and hands her over to the police with a great deal of tenderness for her in the great satisfaction of having found the diamonds.

"Father's Beard." (Edison. Thursday, October 5.)—That the mere growing of a beard could cause all the trouble that befalls the drummer and father whom William Wadsworth impersonates in this picture would be unbelievable, unless you saw it all happening before your very eyes.

Then every detail of it seems absolutely natural, and the men folk will be extremely wary in satisfying their vanity with the soft, curling whiskers, no matter how great their envy of the other fellow.

At the same time the fun that grows out of a little innocent caprice is not to be overlooked, and it proves that it does not take a lot of horseplay to arouse even hilarious laughter.

markable opportunity of inspecting the methods upon which France is conducting her mobilization and supply.

"The effect of the jockey on the Continental trade? I am afraid there will be practically no trade there for a long time. As far as I could gather, production is almost at a standstill. This applies even to Italy, which is not at war. Moreover, there is practically no public for the steaks, even if they could succeed in keeping open.

"In England and America? I cannot speak with much authority about this country, but I have reports from the States that business is good. Such financial adjustments as were necessary have been made. Speaking as an outsider, it seems to me the British trade will go on successfully as long as normal methods are followed. As far as the American Company is concerned, we are out to consider and assist our customers in a business and financial way as much as possible.

"At the same time exhibitors and renters should realize that the manufacturer cannot bear all the financial strain. He has big regular liabilities to meet for stock, chemicals, salaries, etc.

"I am glad to say there is every sign that the best class traders in the other sections of the industry realize this and are supporting the manufacturers. It rests largely with the exhibitor to make the indefinite continuation of the trade possible.

"As long as he is doing normal business he ought to make normal payments and so keep the whole machinery of the trade working in an easy manner. Other methods cannot but hamper the renter and manufacturer and thereby affect his own future business.

Rowdyism at Chicago Theatre

The Biograph theatre at 2443 Lincoln avenue, and the Vitagraph theatre at 3143 Lincoln avenue, both under the same ownership, were victims of labor trouble on Sunday night, September 20, when several unsavory mob-like henchmen were thrown in both theatres. The patrons of both theatres were forced to leave until the odor had been cleared away.

Labor trouble is the reason given by the manager, whose policy it has been to employ operators affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Recently two representatives of the I. B. E. W. visited him and, he claims, threatened to ruin his business if he refused to hire their operators.

Harry Gamble, producer of the Beauty subjects, is putting on a one-reel comedy, "Winsome Winnie." A good many of the scenes were taken out at Oak Park, California.

Fred Gamble, character man, is certainly some bare-back rider and afforded lots of amusement for the people residing near the location in which they were taken. Fred says riding he believes he could look like the proverbial devil.

Sydney Ayres, one of directors, is producing two-reel subject written by Eason, an assistant director.

Many of the more is taken at the Santa Monica. The meet affair is necessary to the product.

Dauntless, daring, romantic is Bess of The BLAZING SEA

The story of a light-house keeper in league with dynamite smugglers. There are furious flames and terrific explosions—and the light-house with its tiny island is wiped from the face of the waters. Through the story runs the romance of the light-house keeper's sister and a secret service agent. Hair-breadth escapes—daring rescues—treachery—love. A picture that has rapid action in every scene.

"The Blazing Sea" is in three stirring parts. It is finely acted, and splendidly staged, and the photography is of unusual excellence. The flames and explosions are remarkably realistic. The whole story is out-of-the-ordinary in character and the effects secured in its production are decidedly impressive. A wonderful story splendidly produced by a star cast of celebrated motion picture artistes

This is something big! You know Kitty Cobb, of course. Everybody does. East, West, North and South her fame has spread. She is today the most popular character ever produced by an artist's brush.

James Montgomery Flagg, one of America's foremost illustrators, created Kitty Cobb in a series of great drawings for the New York Sunday World. Such a tremendous hit did she make that other big Sunday newspapers clamored for her. So Kitty—sweet, winsome, sunny and brave—was syndicated for the benefit of the whole country, and her startling adventures and charming romance thrilled and delighted an audience that mounted high into the millions.

Now we have Kitty brought to life—a refreshing, fascinating four-part film which pictures Flagg's famous heroine and her exploits with superb realism. It is truly a marvelous production. Miss Marian Swayne, the pretty, vivacious little lady who plays the role of Kitty, is exactly suited to it. She gets your sympathies. You laugh with her and cry with her. Your blood boils when she struggles with the kidnappers, and your heart rejoices when love triumphs.

The Alco Film Corporation is another feature house that is to be added to Pittsburgh’s long list. This house has rented headquarters at 212 Fourth avenue, and is getting things shaped up so as to open as soon as possible. A representative of the company was in Pittsburgh several days last week and secured a lease on the property in Fourth avenue in the heart of film row, and it is said the company will be ready to do business here in a few weeks.

Charles Ray, one of the leading men of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, has taken up scenario writing. His first attempt, made more with the idea of filling spare time than anything else, was eagerly seized upon, and Mr. Ray received a substantial check for his efforts. His extensive travels and his ready imagination help him materially in this work.

Harold Lockwood, who appeared as the American business man in the Famous Players picture, “Such a Little Queen,” has received many letters congratulating him on his fine portrayal of that character. Mr. Lockwood and Carlyle Blackwell supported Mary Pickford in this picture, and both are remarkably well fitted to their respective roles.

Miriam Nesbit, one of the leading ladies appearing in the Edison films, was recently accorded a royal reception on her arrival at Lake Hopatcong, N. J. A dance was given in her honor and her many admirers showered her with congratulations for the many fine characterizations she has displayed in the Edison pictures.

Vivian Rich, leading lady of the American Film Company, has taken to writing scenarios for the Beauty Company. Harry Pollard, director of the Beauty productions, has just finished her first work, entitled “Nieda.”

Hudson Maxim, the inventor of machine guns and high-power explosives, was an interested observer when T. Hayes Hunter, director of the Colonial Motion Picture Company, directed the battle scenes of “Seats of the Mighty,” at Edgewater, N. J., recently. Seated in his car out of the firing line, and likewise the camera line, Mr. Maxim watched the proceedings with great interest.

Vivian Martin, one of the most fascinating ingenues of the stage, has been signed by the Peerless Feature Producing Company, to star in the forthcoming release based on Owen Davis’ “The Wishing Ring.”

This play was the vehicle Marguerite Clark used in making her entrance into the field of the legitimate theater. “The Wishing Ring” is one of three plays written by Owen Davis that have been purchased by the Peerless Features Company for motion pictures.

The other two were “Lola,” in which Clara Kimball Young is to be starred, and “A Marked Woman,” in which Barbara Tennant is to play the title role. All these features are to be released through the World Film Corporation.

Bryant Washburn, heavy lead in the Essanay company, recently received a gift of a prize bull pup from a fair admirer. He says that the canine gives him more trouble than several families would.

Edwin August, of the Eaco Films, nearly lost his life while a scene from “Below the Deadline” was being filmed on the roof of the World Tower Building, New York City. Mr. August lost his footing while on the edge of the roof, and only great presence of mind on his own part saved him from falling to the street below.

The Princess Theatre, Sturgis, Ky., has installed a new electric player piano as an additional attraction for its patrons. A five-reel program is given and a full house is usually enjoyed at five and ten-cent admissions.

Sol Lesser, president and general manager of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, spent a few days recently with Manager Emmick at the Los Angeles exchange.

Announcements will be made in the future of a complete program to be served by this and the San Francisco exchange in addition to the feature programs that have been handled in the past.

Arthur Bard, manager of the booking department of the California Film Exchange, Inc., of 742 South Olive street, Los Angeles, is again at the exchange after a vacation of a week spent at the summer resort at Marietta Springs, Cal.

The Woodley Theater, Los Angeles, has entered into a contract with the World Film Corporation to show its features. The Woodley has been using the General Film service.

Robert A. Brackett has resigned as manager of Clune’s Broadway Theater, Los Angeles, to take charge of a feature picture put out by the Historical Picture Company of Chicago, showing Buffalo Bill and General Nelson A. Miles in the Indian Wars. Mr. Brackett has been identified with the exhibition of feature pictures for a number of years, serving as manager for the Lyman H. Howe travel pictures, the Archie L. Shepard attractions, and the O. T. Crawford Film Exchange, of St. Louis.

Harry C. Drum, general representative of the World Film Corporation, has closed contracts with smaller theatre houses in Colorado and Utah, to show the Shubert and Brady releases of the concern.
Ted L. Bargman, of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, was recently in Los Angeles, after a successful three weeks' trip with "The Spoilers." He is now on a trip north of Los Angeles with the same picture.

The accompanying illustration shows Dustin Farnum with his horse Monte, which the actor used at the Hollywood (Cal.) studio of the Universal Company, in the film version of "The Virginian," which is now at the beginning of what promises to be an unusually successful run throughout the country.

T. Harryn Oliver, formerly secretary and treasurer of the Lucken Film Company, of Philadelphia, is now manager of the Noted Plays Feature Company, located at 400 Ferry street, Pittsburgh. The local company will handle the productions of the Life Photo Film Corporation and other high-grade features.

In the two-reel production, "The Real Agatha," to be released shortly by the Essanay Company, Richard Travers, the leading man, was called upon to save two of the extra girls from drowning. They were precipitated from a canoe, for the camera, and Mr. Travers, played the hero, and rescued them, but he was the hero in reality also, as both the young women were on the point of sinking.

Charles K. Field, editor of the Sunset Magazine; Robert G. Fowler, an aviator; Riley Scott, a magazine writer, and Ray A. Duhem, a motion picture photographer, all of San Francisco, are held in that city, pending an investigation of the Federal Courts, of their action of taking and exhibiting pictures of the Panama Canal fortifications.

Aviator Fowler testified that he had received permission from Colonel Goethals to fly over the canal, with Duhem, who took the pictures. This was before the order was issued forbidding the taking of pictures of the fortifications. The other men had written articles on the subject.

Captain Wilbert Melville, manager of the Lubin Los Angeles studios, is now on a vacation at the Philadelphia studios. This is the first visit that the captain has made to the eastern studios in over a year. Three able directors are caring for his work in his absence.

Ruth Hartman, formerly of the Vitaphone and Kalem companies, has been engaged by the Favorite Players company to play opposite Carlyle Blackwell in "The Man Who Could Not Lose." The story of this picture was written by Richard Harding Davis and adapted for the screen by Robert A. Dillon.

WILL RELEASE THROUGH ALCO

The B. A. Rolfe Photo Play Company, a new firm, will produce for the Alco Film Corporation exclusively.

B. A. Rolfe will be remembered by vaudeville patrons for his "Colonial Sergeant," "The Bride Shop" "Lonesome Daisies," and many others.

Alco has also made a contract with Grombacher and Bailey to act as their exclusive agents for the states of Washington, Oregon, Montana and Idaho. The new alliance will be known as the Alco Film Service, which has opened offices in Seattle and Spokane, Wash., Portland, Ore., and Butte, Mont.

Sol Lesser, a prominent exchange man of the Pacific Coast, signed a contract with Walter Hoff Seely, president of the Alco, for the state rights of all the Alco releases for California, Nevada and Arizona.

Mr. Lesser will be the general manager of the exchanges in the above-mentioned states, with headquarters at 234 Eddy street, San Francisco.

PROF. GILLETT DEAD

Prof. William Kendall Gillett, professor of romance languages at New York University since 1890, an uncle of E. Kendall Gillett, secretary of the Exhibitors' Times, Inc., the company publishing The Motion Picture News, died September 28, at Mount Sinai Hospital, New York City, in his fifty-fifth year. Prof. Gillett was graduated from New York University in 1880 with the degree of A. B., and three years later was made an A. M.

During 1889 and 1890 he attended the University of Paris and studied languages in Paris, Geneva, Florence, Madrid and Seville. From 1885 until 1888 he was instructor in languages at Lehigh University, and in 1890 joined the Faculty of New York University. Prof. Gillett was secretary of the Faculty from 1891 until 1898, and was chairman of the committee on college organizations from 1902 until 1907.

Prof. Gillett was a member of the Modern Languages Association of America and the Delta Phi fraternity. He was also a member of the New York Athletic, the Wykagyl Country and the Century clubs.

COAST THEATRE FIRM FORMS EXCHANGE

The Clune Amusement Company, owners of three theaters in Los Angeles and one in Pasadena, Cal., are gradually growing into a feature film exchange. They have purchased the State rights of California, Arizona and Nevada, for a number of features, including "The Escape," and "Sealed Orders." W. H. Clune, president of the company, formerly conducted a film exchange in Los Angeles which was sold to the General Film Company.
ALLIANCE FILMS ANNOUNCES POLICY

Corporation Proposes to Eliminate State Rights Sales—Plan Is Practically a Co-operative One—Manufacturer's Profits Derived from a Percentage of the Bookings—A Rotating Committee Will Pass Upon Pictures—Only Best Productions Handled by the Company

THE announcement of the Alliance Films Corporation will cause much surprise in film circles. This company is offering a new program of multiple reel features to be released weekly. George West, of West Brothers Knitting Company, Syracuse, N. Y., is the president, and Andrew J. Cobe is the vice-president and general manager.

"The Alliance proposition is practically a co-operative one," said Mr. Cobe, and brings the manufacturer very close to the exhibitor. It eliminates entirely the sale of state rights, and makes each manufacturer back up his own product.

"Under the state right plan a manufacturer necessarily hesitates in spending large amounts upon production, for there is no assured market. Furthermore, the manufacturer's sole idea is to dispose of the territory.

"With the Alliance plan the manufacturer cannot make any money unless his film can earn it, for his profits are entirely derived from a percentage of the booking. None of the manufacturers are interested in the exchanges, and the Alliance cannot, therefore, be influenced to release a picture that is not of the highest grade.

"A rotating committee appointed by the exchanges passes upon the films, and the exchanges know in advance the quality of the films they will handle.

"The manufacturers affiliated with the Alliance Films Corporation have splendid organizations, and the photography, acting and direction will always be of the highest class. Only subjects of great drawing power are being selected for dramatization.

"We have not made an announcement of the exchanges handling the Alliance program for the reason that actual contracts have not yet been signed with a few of them, but with a week all arrangements will have been concluded. When the list is published it will be seen that the names will include the highest class renters of the country. No state rights will be made by the Alliance which is not an assured fact, backed by contracts duly signed and sealed.

"For the same reason we are not announcing the names of the other manufacturers who will be affiliated with us, and while negotiations have been concluded and we would be warranted in publishing such information, the actual contracts have not yet been signed." Mr. Cobe continued, with earnest emphasis.

"There are many high-class theatres which would gladly pay a fair price for big feature productions, but which have been unable to secure a dependable supply from week to week. These exhibitors know the great disappointment caused by booking a widely-advertised feature and to discover that on the screen it is but a mediocre subject.

"Before the Alliance advertises the subject it will have been run off and passed upon by the exchanges which will handle it, and with the class of exchange men handling the Alliance program there is no doubt that they know a good film when they see it.

"There is not an element of 'forced program' in our entire organization. Every manufacturer must continually strive for quality. A franchise in the Alliance does not mean that a producer who is fortunate enough to get in can turn out footage to carry out the terms of his contract, but he must produce real features. And our standard is high," concluded General Manager Cobe.

M. H. Blackwell, treasurer of the Favorite Players Film Company, Inc., was also highly pleased with the Alliance plan of operation, saying:

"Our policy is to produce films from well-known books. Our first release, 'The Key to Yesterday,' will explain clearly what we consider a good film. The Alliance plan gives us an interest in our films when they are being shown in the theatres, and you can rest assured that we are as anxious as anybody to make money and that we will leave no stone unturned to make such pictures as will make the exhibitor our friend."

William H. Wright, treasurer of the Excelsior Film Company, expressed his pleasure in being affiliated with the Alliance Films Corporation, and said:

"The Alliance and its methods of marketing the film are entirely appealing to us. We have confidence in our organization and the plans we have laid for the future, and we feel sure that we will meet with great success. We shall specialize in popular books, with film stars."

Here Mr. Wright went into details as to releases.

"Our first release in the Alliance Program is 'The Path Forbidden,' by John B. Hymer, featuring Octavia Handworth. We believe this film will cause a sensation, as startling effects are produced.

"Miss Handworth plays the dual role of the twin sisters and is seen crossing from one side of the stage to the other, meeting herself and handing various articles to herself. This work had to be timed to the thousandth part of a second, and I do not know if its having ever been successfully accomplished before.
Our next release is "When Fate Leans a Trumpet," another picturization of a well-known book. We have several other subjects completely finished and ready for release, which will be duly announced.

The state right proposition does not appeal to me for the reason that we have given that a great expense in making our films, and we feel sure that they are going to be highly successful. We are more than willing to take a chance with the exhibitor, and can confidently promise superior film productions. This alliance will give more and better jobbing proposition, and every man in it must earn the money he makes."

S. G. Lindeman, treasurer of the Select Photoplay Producing Company, Inc. commented on the Alliance announcement in the following manner:

"We are in hearty accord with the ideas of the Alliance Films Corporation, and are willing to put the test of our product up to the exhibitor. A man who sincerely desires to make good film cannot find a flaw in the arrangement.

List of Exchanges to Come

"The Alliance will put out our first picture, 'At the Old Cross Roads,' from which we expect great results. Arthur C. Aiston, the owner of the play, sent it out on the road for fourteen consecutive seasons and it always played to tremendous business, repeatedly breaking box office records.

"Many people have pronounced our film version of this play much more powerful than the legitimate drama, as all detail is clearly shown. However, we will be satisfied if it does as well as the original play, and we feel sure that every moving picture house that shows this subject will be more than satisfied."

"We shall continue making well-known plays, and as far as possible will present the original stars. In 'At the Old Cross Roads' Estha Williams has her original role of 'Papers.'"

"While the list of exchanges has not yet been made public, when the announcement is made it will be seen that P. P. Craft, the well-known film man, has secured franchises for three offices. Mr. Craft says that the Alliance plan is the fairest proposition he has ever encountered in the history of the film business, and is very enthusiastic."

"I have dreamed many times of such a condition," said Mr. Craft, "but I never expected to find manufacturers broad-minded enough to enter into such an arrangement. As far as the exchanges are concerned, I think that any man securing a franchise should thank his lucky stars, and should be moved to work with might and main to make successful the finest proposition ever launched."

GERBER HANDLES BOX OFFICE

Roy Gerber, who has charge of the films at the Box Office Attractions company, in Pittsburgh, is a young man of extensive experience. He received his training with the Klein company.
"AN AMERICAN HEIRESS" FULL OF POWER

This is another dramatic episode in Emmett Campbell Hall's interesting narrative of the adventures of Lord Cecil, in the series entitled "The Beloved Adventurer." Depleted fortune demands a heroic effort to save his estate from foreclosure of the mortgage, and Cecil promises his creditors that he will marry an heiress. With this intent he goes to America and is warmly welcomed by the family of a peanut butter king, with millions.

The beautiful daughter and only child is quickly offered and Cecil is satisfied that she will quite do, until he discovers that the girl is deeply in love with a poor but young American.

Cecil's heart goes out to the young couple, and seeing no other way to avoid the pressure put upon the girl, he resolves to abduct her. This he does and safely places her in the arms of her lover, thus making two lives happy, while he returns penniless, back to face the inevitable loss of his beloved Croftleigh. In this Arthur Johnson again excels.

FAMOUS PLAYERS CONTROLS CELEBRATED NOVELS AND DRAMAS

THE Famous Players' Film Company, which two years ago secured the fiction and dramatic masterpieces of Anthony Hope, Thomas Hardy, Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, C. H. S. McClellan, and Louis Joseph Vance, and has since continually added other illustrious literary names to its list, now controls the film rights of a formidable array of the foremost novelists and dramatists of the day.

This brilliant galaxy of literary celebrities now includes Henry Arthur Jones, Hall Caine, Margaret Mayo, H. A. Du Souchet, Mary Johnston, Channing Pollock, George Ade, Booth Tarkington, William J. Locke, Mark Lee Luther, C. Haddon Chambers, Sir Charles L. Young, Maurice Hewlett, A. C. Gunter, George Horace Lorimer, John Luther Long, Clyde Fitch, Bronson Howard, Angel Guimera, and Margaret Deland.

BUFFALO FILMS VERSUS "LEGITIMATE"

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 30.

Motion pictures were never more popular in Buffalo than they are at present.

The announcement of the coming big legitimate show is now creating the interest which it did last year and the year before. The prices of $1.50 and $2 do not appeal to many Buffalonians under present conditions and the photoplay theatres are reaping the benefit.

NORTH YAKIMA BANS WAR FILMS

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 28.

The city of North Yakima, year here, has placed the ban on all motion picture pictures lasting with any phase of the war in Europe.

As was the case when a similar order was issued by Mayor W. J. Hindley here, it is unlikely that the matter will be carried into the courts.

INTERESTING FILM REVIEWS
PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

“A First Class Cook.” (Biograph, Mon., Sept. 28.)—On the same reel with “The White Hand Society.” An extremely strong case of shoot and throw-things-around type of comedy, but rather funny in spots. The cook's methods of poisoning food are most commendable. The story is told by Richard C. Travers, Thomas Comford and Bryant Washburn play the leading roles.

“Barry O’Moore.” (Kalem, Reissue, Sat., Sept. 26.)—This picture, filmed in Ireland, presents an old story. The cast is headed by Gene Gauntier. The tale and troubles that Barry O’Moore experienced at the period when all Irish patriots were considered outlaws is a well told and acted story. He is always aided by his sweetheart and at length the two escape to America. The priest gives him up for the patriot is a strong point.

“The Gold Thief.” (Biograph, Sat., Sept. 26.)—Is rather improbable that a gold workman, who has gold taken out of his head, can have gold show in his beard, but such is the case here and he is finally discovered by a detective. The love story is a little weak. It is interesting to watch the detective working on the case.

“Hearts and Diamonds.” (Vitagraph. Two reels.)—Story is a comedy of errors. It's a safe bet that the heroine, Margaret Gibson and George Holt cast the important parts.

“The Case of the Vanished Bonds.” (Edison, Sat., Oct. 17.)—A clever detective play which is getting wonderful reviews. Unhappily the family is a large one, and they can never get rid of one another. It is a comedy of errors, but nothing that the newspaper is not to become itself and whether they meet distress they make a remittance from the air, and the moon comes out to smile upon them.

“For Love of Him.” (Selig, Tues., Sept. 29.)—Story of a woman in love and in her procession puts acid in her face cream to spoil the other woman's beauty. The plot is interrupted by accident, and the repentant actress gives up thoughts of vengeance. The cast are Adele Lane, William Stowell and Edith Johnson.

“Merely Mother.” (Biograph. Two reels. Monday, Sept. 28.)—The Biograph drama made in the Biograph manner. It is rich in sentiment and will make a distinct impression upon the great mass of motion picture devotees. The story with plenty of heart and sentiment is excellently cast. A man has been put through school by the unsellable efforts of his work and when she marries a wealthy man, she ignores her poor mother and then wants her back. The situation is so realistic that his wife is neglecting their future the sake of pleasure, but he beguiles, and when he sees how his wife is neglecting their future the sake of pleasure, he is driven to the point of desperation. The child proves irresistible to the older people and will prove irresistible to the audience, and love comes back to a loveless home.

The Way of His Father.” (Essanay, Tues. Oct. 6.)—A tale of the eternal rebellion of the young against following in the footsteps of his father. This is a novel idea and the reach out into new fields is the theme of this drama that is adapted from one of the Munsey magazines.

The fater, a physician, desires his son to carry on his practice in the little home town after he completes his course. The son gets a chance to enter a large field that offers greater opportunities and decides to leave home. The father becomes broken hearted. The boy then sacrifices his own future to comply with his father's wishes. Richard C. Travers, Thomas Comford and Bryant Washburn play the leading roles.

“The Gold Thief.” (Biograph, Sat., Sept. 26.)—Is rather improbable that a gold workman, who has gold taken out of his head, can have gold show in his beard, but such is the case here and he is finally discovered by a detective. The love story is a little weak. It is interesting to watch the detective working on the case.

about the race do not have to listen to any more of the foremost harangue talk against women. A good comedy well laid out.

"The Woman of It." (Selig. Oct. 17.)—An interesting little story, with Kathlyn Williams, Wheeler Oakman and Charles Clary. These trio of players are strung together so that the audience can see them in their settings. The brunt of the play is in the way the leading lady of the story refuses to return to civilization, preferring the wild life with the brute.

"The Wrecked Special." (Kleine. Two reels. Oct. 23.)—This prize bit of the day is a story of love and duty with preparation on the end. Another couple of a prison sentence, so that the doing of the other two. To save the life of his daughter, wrecks a train. He returns to his wife, who is serving a sentence for his deed. Their children love. He confesses and is found guilty.

"The Dream Girl." (Selig. Two reels. Oct. 26.)—Three things are featured in this production. It is a good story well played. Young artist has a dream of a pretty girl who becomes his ideal. He thinks he cannot find the real woman; she believes there will be a flash of the blood person such as the portrait. His search is in the many adventures and the girl of his dreams.

"The Mysterious Beauty." (Selig. Oct. 26.)—Good story, with a splendid situation. Harold Heath, a wealthy young clubman, dreams of a beautiful girl. He awakes to find that his wife is there waiting with a basketball in the club window. He follows, kidnapped, played off. His wife swears "never again" when the girl is arrested. An interesting cast from around and follow another pretty girl.

"The Tattered Duke." (Kalem. Fri., Oct. 23.)—The Duke of Tottenham Corner loses his名誉, who finds he is out as His Grace for three days. His awakening is that of a woman. Arrogant masquer. The cast includes Marshall Neilan, Lloyd V. Hamilton, Alice West and Ruth La Spina.

"The Fall of Muscle Bound Hicks." (Biograph. Thurs., Sept. 24.)—On the same reel with "The Plumber's Picnic." It has a very entertaining comedy on the slapstick class.

"The Plumber's Picnic." (Biograph. Thurs., Sept. 24.)—On the same reel, with "The Fall of Muscle Bound Hicks." It has a similar type cast. The fun is rather strained at spots.

"The Triumph of Right." (Selig. Two reels. Oct. 17.)—This is a story of a man who is arrested for a murder committed by a burglar because he is known to the burglar. The case is kicked in the end and the man is cleared in clearing him, and they are reunited. Leslie and William Cohill are the principals.

"A Close Call." (Vitagraph. Thurs., Sept. 24.)—A robber hides his loot in the cabin of an innocent pioneer. The owner of the place is arrested, while the guilty man keeps his wife silent by the way of his child. Later the woman puts a lariat around him and sends for the sheriff. In the east are Frank O'Neil, Lloyd Walker, Audrey Berry and Nicholas Dunave.

"Slippery Slim and the Green-Eyed Monster." (Essanay. Thurs., Sept. 24.)—Sophie sends wood to Mustang Pete that her father has retired early and he can call. Slim is jealous of his wife. He's the "old man" and trouble follows. Victor Pecho, Margaret Jolin and Ernest Van Pelt compose the cast.

"The Moving Picture Cowboy." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., Oct. 5.)—A western picture with a western type cast and comic situations. A motion picture actor develops for the Western and, with the aid of a friend, captures a man and ship. The way he actually did these stunts is laughable. Tom Mix plays the lead well.

"The Strategy of Broncho Billy's Sweetheart." (Selig. Two reels. Sept. 26.)—With Guirtie Clayton, as Billy's sweetheart, saves him from the sheriff's lynch mob. This makes a fine story for those who appreciate this variety of Western. As usual, the riding is the most prominent feature and G. M. Anderson has a chance to display his ability in this line.

"The Newsboy Tenor." (Selig. Sat., Sept. 26.)—This story here is not quite strong enough to cause the interest to be aroused. The loss of the widow's child and then his having the horse to his heart's delight. A good fire scene is recorded.

"Did He Save Her?" (Lubin. Split reel. Sat., Sept. 26.)—On the same reel with "Between One and Two." Rather poor comedy. Story is that a young woman wins the ranch but throws water on her aunt while she is asleep on the bed. It is rather uninteresting and pretends to have saved her from drowning.

"Between One and Two." (Lubin. Split reel. Sat., Sept. 26.)—On the same reel with "Did He Save Her?" Quite a bit of amuse ment is furnished by this comedy. The story is woven around the antics of a drunkard and his more sober friend.

"Wood B. Wadd and the Micrebes." (Edison. Mon., Sept. 26.)—The eleventh of the series in the "Micrebes" continues this same down and out a gentleman.

"A Question of Clothes." (Edison. Sat., Sept. 24.)—This is the familiar story of a man who is known to the detective by a trap while he is in the bathroom. It is on the same reel with "Buster Brown's Uncle."

"The Mystery of the Sealed Art Gallery." (Edison. Tues., Sept. 27.)—The twelfth of the "Micrebes" series. Ben Wilson, a detective, is sent to the gallery. A stolen necklace is recovered and the gentleman is accused of the theft. The owner, who pretends to be blind, makes the case. There is the usual cast for this series.

"A Horsehoe—For Luck." (Vitagraph. Fri., Sept. 25.)—A man picks up a horseshoe for luck and is immediately plunged into a series of disasters. When he puts the horseshoe into a boxing glove he knocks out a man and is arrested.

"Her Doggy." (Biograph. Fri., Sept. 25.)—Strictly speaking, a good story of the day does a number of things which are not expected, but which are appreciated by others.

"The Investment." (Lubin. Fri., Sept. 25.)—This is a story of two children who are grown-up children offer much opposition to the marriage of a man. The money is in an automobile concern, which proves to be a success and the old couple are able to marry.

"You Never Can Tell." (Selig. Fri., Sept. 25.)—This is on the same reel with "Who Got Stung?" Slim Smith, Lyllian Leighton and John Lancaster are in the cast. A grocer's clerk wants to become an actor. He is clumsy and doesn't like it.

"Who Got Stung?" (Selig. Fri., Sept. 25.)—A slapstick comedy on the same reel with "You Never Can Tell." A man plays a joke on his friend. The friend takes a lot of work for some women to report at the friend's office.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

lot of fun, supported by Louise Fazenda, Glad Henry and Sam Kauflin. The book has a date with her mother-in-law now and a matinal, man to win the game; they in a rage come after him, but either the winning or losing, they naturally can't help but cheer.

"Myer's Mistake." (Sterling. Mon., Oct. 5.)—Max Asher as the disappointed actor will be seen as the rich man who comes to die to win the sympathy of the girl, but an inferiority of bound to the other, while still another disappointed gentle man is Myer. He doesn't like the dainty idea and gets rid of the persistent spinster.

"Matty, the Universal Boy." (Imp. Thurs., Oct. 8.)—Matty Roubert, the juvenile lead of the company, is a man of the country in this picture and in a very entertaining manner captures an escaped lunatic.

"The Mayor's Manicure." (Powers. Fri., Oct. 9.)—The cub reporter fails to obtain an interview with the mayor and it rests with a woman to take the job, and she succeeds by posing as a manicure. This is a cleverly produced comedy-drama that will please.

"Out of the Frying Pan." (Nester. Fri., Oct. 9.)—But into a bed of roses, not into the mud. Edie, after finding an old maid, thinking she was his intended in the end, is done. The rid of the persistent spinster is side-splitting.

"The Man Who Came Back." (Eclair. Sun., Oct. 4.)—In which Joe Ryan again ex- hibits the great skill in the 4-reel as a tenderfoot in the cow country, but soon shows his experiences. He has quite a bit of fun with his experiences, and he finally triumphs over him and wins the ranch and his daughter, a part played by Mildred Bright.

"Four Days." (Frontier. Sun., Oct. 4.)—Within four days' time two young people have developed from childhood to the rascal-'rival to the race. This is a fair comedy series played by Fred Church, Dolly Larkin and Joe Franzo.

"The Pipes of Pan." (Rex. Two reels. Sun., Oct. 4.)—Rather an unusual story played by Pauline Busch, Joseph King, Leo Lennon and Carmen Phillips. The artist, after dream ing of his ideal, sees her and employs her to pose as his model. He falls in love with this woman, but after a struggle with himself returns to his wife.

"The Old Bell Ringer." (Nester. Wed. Oct. 7.)—Murdoch MacQuarrie in a character part as the very poor, but Mr. MacQuarrie's fine acting will carry the picture.

"The Senator's Lady." (Powers. Thurs., Oct. 8.)—When his country wife comes to visit, he is ashamed of her and thinks of deserting her, but then visions come to his mind when he, in his early struggles as a lawyer, was always aided and encouraged by his wife, and how she nursed him when he was sick, and then he asks his wife's forgiveness. Edna Malcolm, Bert Huddley and Beatrice Van interpret this pretty story.

"The Shack Next Door." (Universal Icke. Tues., Sept. 29.)—The way in which the lover wins the girl of his heart is by standing a family of Italians in the house next door and making the old man buy for them all the vegetables, which grows tiresome toward the end. Vivian Proulx and Mrs. B. appear in a good way.

"Liferitis." (Crystal. Tues., Oct. 6.)—The condescending story of the professor who in vents an elixir of life. He dreams and is chased by a scarcover, whom he brought to life and who awakes and appears. The professor which grows tiresome toward the end. Vivian Proulx, Mrs. B. appears in a good way.

"He Never Said a Word." (Nester. Fri., Oct. 9.)—The same idea has been pictured before, but it's a good one and worth seeing twice. The visitor to the village mistakes the superintendent's daughter for the woman he love and she fulfills her dreams that the other can talk. This picture is not a very well made film, but otherwise it will be a success.

"The Parrot Who Was Never Kissed." (Victor. Two reels. Fri., Oct. 9.)—An amusing picture which may appear suggestive in parts, a double exposure at times, but such moments and the bad effect away. Frank Lawrenece and Matt Morgan, the principals. The student of Plato, who has never been kissed, because he believes in only platonic love, finally accomplishes the charms of a young girl. There is some doubt about the two being the same, and nothing happens to lead a few scenes to boarder on the risque.

"Cruel, Cruel World." (Joker. Sat., Oct. 10)—This is a good burlesque on the old "Sinner Man" method, but murderous is its closing split-shattering manner by Louise Pareando, William Peter, and Sam Kelly. The snow creates an uproarious effect. The villain may get over his weakness, but instead he is vanquished by the hero.

"Disillusioned." (Victor Mon., Oct. 5.—A very pretty story is told in this reel interested by Jack Kerrigan and Matt Morgan. Attention and admiration for the man is thoroughly organized. The country girl, who has been wronged by a villainous man, is ostracized by all except an old lover, who still remains her friend.

"In the Hollow of an Oak." (Frontier, Sun., Oct. 18.—In which Joe Franz, as the villain, makes an attempt to rob a girl. Not much excitement in this unremarkable tale. Lots of riding. Dolly Larkin and Fred Chalmers.

"Hypnotic Power." (Sterling, Thurs., Oct. 8.—Ford Sterling himself in an excel- lent picture, as he is glorified in this show. Our people are apparently favored, Ford exerts his hypnotic powers over its own film results. But he is foiled in the end and the other man marries the girl.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"He Loved the Ladies." (Keystone, Mon., Sept. 30.—Two reels. $6,000. A very fatigue- ful story, with Charles Murray portraying the aged gambler, and Mrs. Johnson, as the widow. Since the film is a husband and well watched by his wife when he at home, but this time a pretense that he is going off to another city, and surreptitiously indulges in a little life, and his wife does likewise. Everybody knows what happens then. They meet in the end.

"Killing Horse." (Keystone, Thurs., Oct. 1.)—How an amorous advantage of the pestilent villain who finally comes to grief through the efforts of our heroine, a quiet little story which is better than we have accustomed to hear when rich people are alluded. Charles Murray is the villain.

"The Runaway Freight." (Reliance. Two reels. Sat., Sept. 26)—A real trailer into which the screen manufacturer has thrown two freight cars leave the rails and plunge into a river. Several realistic scandals occur between the reformed crook and his old associates. How he wins the station master's daughter makes a fine story. Eugene Pallette and Francesa Billington play the leads.

"The Final Test." (Princess. Sept. 25.)—A girl helps a philanthropic young doctor in his work, but becomes engaged to another man. On her wedding day she sees him strike down one of the poor patients of her husband's friend in a street and marries the better man. Boyd Marshall and Eric Parington are the principals.

"Lover's Luck." (Keystone, Sat., Sept. 25.—A story of the romance of a young boy in the village and his love for a girl who is caught in the kitchen's window. The latter to keep from compromising himself hides in the cow barn, which is a very good idea, and too, and make the constable marry them on the spot. The story is full of comicality.

"The Whiskey Runners." (Domino. Two reels. Thurs., Oct. 8.)—Pathetic and appealing drama. The whisky runners are a villain and thesheriff and the native town and the Indians against the law. The man is beaten and with a mortal wound goes home to die. But he sends his wife to the sheriff so that she can get the man for his arrest, and when the wife returns the man is dead.

"The Sheriff of Muscatine." (Kay Bro. Two reels. Fri., Oct. 9.)—A startling surprise is introduced at the end of this picture, that if it only could be more splendid. But it is too evidently a makeshift. A departure from the usual "slasher" at the same time, and he begs to be allowed to remain with his wife. He marries again and she turns out to be his girl and they rob everything and get away.

"The Trail of the Love Lorn." (Than- houser. Two reels. Tues., Sept. 29.)—This is a good entertainer, but contains nothing ex- ceptionally extraordinary. Two get-rich-quick schemes are finally foiled by the hero's sharp shrewdness, which consists of placing the picture of a girl in the picture, the photographing for a husband, then swindling the applicant.

"The Scarecrow." (Royal, Sat., Sept. 26.)—Not much of a picture, so this is in order to get away from his ugly wife, whom he married with the idea of a get-rich-quick scheme, which consists of placing the picture of a man in the picture, the photographing for a husband, then swindling the applicant. This is the lead played by Louis Simon.

"The Harvest of Regrets." (Thanhouser, Sun., Sept. 27.)—Plain but good. The young man who is engaged to a country girl is de- nounced by his former companions and is ad- vanced in life. When he saves the girl from an un- welcome advances in later life, himself in her eyes. Harry Benham is the lead.

"Cousin Billy." (Royal, Sat., Oct. 5.)—Billy is from the countryside and is not warmly welcomed by society. He is right, however, in the rich man's house are not exactly funny, but will also try off as a comedy. Louis Simon plays Billy.

"Fatty's Debut." (Keystone, Sat., Sept. 26.)— noticeable because Arbuckle is the funmaker in this laughable drama, with a flustered mother-in-law waiting to go to the theatre and when she arrives, he is typed. Fatty plunges into cold water severs him up a bit, and B. and F. they start. But he gets in the wrong door and breaks up the performance when he makes his initial appearance on the stage.

"A Modern Rip Van Winkle." (American. Two reels. Tues., Sept. 28.)—A life-term man is released for good behavior at the end of twenty-five years. He returns to the frontier town in which he committed his crime to find it a great modern city. The rush and roar bewilder him. Two crooks try to get him to join their gang, so that he goes to the prison and asks to be taken back. A home in the country is found for him.

"Our Mutual Girl." (Reliance, Tues., Sept. 28.)—Another of the installments written by Carolyn Wells. Margaret's plans for her story in the Light and Baby Life are developed. Her aunt being away, she is offered the house over which she has absolute control, and she proves able to take care of her grandmother, and moves there with her Aunt Abby from Maryland as a chaperone.

"The Last Shot." (Reliance, Wed., Sept. 23.)—Our old Arbuckle and young Larkin in dramatics, which shows the remarkable dramatic ability of a little child. The innocent man pursued by the sheriff, uses his last shot to save a little child from a rattle snake. Later his innocence is proved.

"Bill Manages a Price Fight." (Komic, Sun., Sept. 27.)—Bill sees how a price fight promoter in Europe. He makes a price fight of his own. By a trick the real pigmilitz is knocked out and Bill becomes his manager.

"The Legend of Black Rock." (Beauty, Wed., Sept. 29.)—A Spanish girl is the survivor of a massacre. In love with her rescuer, but he marries his boyhood sweetheart. She appears, but is searched through the rocks on stormy nights. The story is brought to its conclusion on the Plaza.

"The Destiny of Tucano."—This number of the weekly presents an excellent picture of these savage warriors fighting in their native land. Among other views are: Society women and a dancing woman with a white horse, and the famous Grenadiers. Guards leaving London for the Penobscot River. The signal man and artillery leaving for the seat of hostilities.

"Herren-Selig. News Pictorial No. 51." (Selig, Mon., Sept. 14.)—The Red Cross, the vessel fitted out to help the distress on the battle field of Old France. It is photographed sitting out from crops. The armistice. It shows where uniforms are seen on board, happy in the knowledge that they are out of the way. Of course no pictures can be made on the actual scene of war, because cameras are for- bidden. The sight of fellow soldiers in England is of interest.

"Animated Weekly. No. 133."—The pictures this week show a pleasing variety of subjects, including a number of war views. Among the latter are: Canadian troops start- ing for the war zone from the western part of the province in the morning and on the return of that day. The military bands collected in the main body of the troops produced a singing effect. The first printed edition of this week shows a number of war views in England that offered its services to their country.

Evelyn Selbie, the clever actress of the Estany western company, was in the company unles dressed in a corduroy suit, and she was quite untidy for social reasons. During the week she ended at a small bungalow, which she took great pride in keeping in good shape. Tru Thurnam, besides being the leading man for the western Estany company, was also taking a stage. True may be seen trying to round up his stray chickens.
Arizona Operators Object to Owner in Booth
Phoenix Local Declares That Robert Pratt, Said to Have Third Interest in the Lion, Must Join Union

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 28.

The first concerted action by the operators’ local is about to be directed toward the Lion Theatre here. The men at the crank profess to believe that Walter B. Leecraft, of the Lion, is violating their regulation covering men in the operating booth. The details are as follows:

The Lion is owned by three men, one of whom is Robert Pratt. The latter, during the dull season incidental to the hot months, has been working a shift in the lamp room. The operators’ local, recently a year old, contends that Pratt, whom the other men in the combination say is full one-third owner, cannot work without joining the union.

Pratt, who is a member of the musicians’ local, and who plays in the orchestra in the winter season, contends that he has a right to run the machine on the ownership basis, and this he has been doing for some time.

Along this line the union has called out its man who was working opposite Pratt, and the matter has been referred to the trade council. It has been said that the local is to demand that the same condition be respected in one or more of the other houses where a proprietor is working a shift at the projection machine.

What will become of the controversy is yet a matter of conjecture. Phoenix, while it has many trades unionists, is not what might be called a strictly union city. The state statute books contain a law permitting so-called “picketing,” but a recent attempt of the Cooks’ and Waiters’ Union to boycott an open shop restaurant met with much opposition on the part of the men of the cafe.

Opposition, however, came from another quarter before very long. The public and both papers took the side of the defendants. The boycott was called off by order of the police and the affair shows that the city is not too strong for this method of forcing a demand. The operators say that they will not deviate from their regulation, and Leecraft is as firm in his determination to stick by what he thinks is his right in the matter. J. C. Rickards.

Important Announcement

The Excelsior Feature Film Company, Inc., will release all its subjects through the Alliance Films Corporation, beginning with

The PathForbidden

Dramatized from the book by John B. Hymer, in five parts. An intense human interest production, wonderfully acted, with

Octavia Handworth

The peerless star of the silent drama in the leading role, supported by Gordon De Maine, William A. William, John B. Hymer, and a large cast.

Marvelous Scenes

are presented, in exquisite photography, which will cause audiences to sit spell-bound in wonder and amazement. Through trick work and double exposure, Miss Handworth, playing the dual role of the twin sisters, is actually seen shaking hands with herself, and handing to, and taking from herself various articles, both figures being photographed close to the camera. This work has been pronounced by experts the most intricate ever attempted, and is the first time in the history of motion pictures that the feat has been accomplished.

A combination of the World’s Greatest Feature Phot-plan which insures to the better Theatres to secure Big Features

The exhibitor is the sole arbiter of the manufacturer’s success, because his profit is derived solely from the popularity of the film. Each unit is independent of the other, obviating a forced program, and absolutely eliminating all element of chance in the quality of the releases.

Each manufacturer stands by himself, receiving a percentage of the bookings. The better picture he makes the more benefit he will derive. This is a tremendous incentive for rivalry in the race for quality.

The Alliance Films Corporation is not interested in the exchanges, nor the manufacturing companies. The manufacturing companies are not interested in the exchanges.

Wallace Reid, Billie West and Al Fillson.

Sheriff Saves Town from Flood
Sheriff Arthur Mackley brought out his star and polished it up last week, and he produced "The Plotter of the Deputy's Hands" for Reliance-Mutual release. In this the sheriff saved the inhabitants of a Western town from death by flood when he brought the inmates from prison and worked side by side with them. The scenario is from a story appearing in The Cavalier Magazine.

That a motion picture sheet effected the rescue of the wrecked Stefansson Arctic exploration ship party is told in letters received here by relatives of Fred L. Granville, cameraman, with the Sunset Motion Picture Company expedition, whose home is in this city.

Members of the Sunset party learned the explorers' ship had been wrecked, and went in search of it. When the eleven survivors were found on Wrangell Island, among the first things that happened to them was having their pictures made. The rescued party was later transferred to the revenue cutter Bear.

The Sunset Company has offices at San Francisco, and, according to letters received, the part has made more than 25,000 feet of negative in the north zone, all of which is now on the way to Los Angeles, where it will be developed and printed.

William Foster, new superintendent of photography at the West Coast Universal studio, is a real for sure self-made man. Because his parents could not afford to send him to school, he ran away from home when twelve years of age, became a bell hop and attended night school.

Then he joined a circus, where he saw his first motion picture machine. He learned to operate it, and then became an expert at installing machines.

Four years ago he had never made a picture of any kind, but now the officers of the largest motion picture company think he is the most competent man to have in charge of the western division of their motion picture organization.

At a recent meeting of the directors of the Photoplayers' Club, Wallace Reid, a member of the Majestic-Mutual and Reliance-Mutual studio stock companies, was selected to fill the vacancy in the office of secretary and treasurer, made by the resignation of Henry Otto. Mr. Otto has been at Santa Barbara for the past several months, and absence from here makes it impossible, he believes, to efficiently perform the duties of the office.

May Make Negatives for Lubin
Fred Mace, formerly president of the Photoplayers' Club, who organized the Mace Feature Film Company, and has since been to Paris, where he made the feature film of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, in "Threads of Destiny," is expected in Los Angeles soon. According to rumor, he is to make negatives here for the Lubin Company, which has taken charge of releasing the Thaw feature.

Director J. P. McGowan is now filming the fifth of the railroad series under the general title of "The Hazards of Helen," at the Glendale Kalem studio. This will be entitled, "When the Wires Failed." William C. Elie, who played leads for the New York Motion Picture Company, at the canyon studio, near Santa Monica, is playing opposite Helen Holmes in the leads.

No matter how thrilling a story one may read, interest is not sustained if poor type, poor paper and poor press work make hard work for the eyes. It’s the same with motion pictures. A clear picture is as necessary as a good scenario.

Because the basic product is right, the clearest pictures are on “Eastman” film. Look for the stencil mark in the margin.

"IRELAND, A NATION"
(Macnamara Feature—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WALTER MACNAMARA, the writer and director of "Ireland, A Nation," has produced a picture, the like of which has never been seen before. It faithfully depicts the struggles that Ireland experienced in regaining her parliament since the time she lost it in the latter part of the eighteenth century until only a few months ago when the Home Rule bill was passed.

Some of the time has been skimmed over lightly, but the age in which the noted Irish patriot, Robert Emmet, lived and fought for his country, is portrayed with great attention to detail.

From the way in which the picture was received at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, New York City, by an audience made up of patriotic sons of the Emerald Isle, the picture is bound to be a success. No more successful picture could be shown to the Irish, from a box office standpoint. But, Mr. Exhibitor, if you believe in the "Safety First" proposition, warn all Englishmen, Orangemen and the opposition to the Home Rule bill to stay out, or there will be quite a riot.

When an audience consisting of Irishmen cheer for every subtitle which favors their country, hiss at the others, applaud each time the heroes make their appearance and roundly hiss the opposition, it is a fair decision to make that the picture will score a great success, with that nationality.

An introductory reel preceded the picture proper at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, showing various scenes in Ireland, and from the reception that these scenes received it is evident that they were familiar to most of those present.

The picture then starts, showing the defeat of the Irish patriots in an effort to retain their parliament, by Castlereagh, who bought many of his votes. Then the activities of Robert Emmet commence, and cease not until he is hanged by the English.

His words uttered at the trial, "Let no man write mine epitaph until Ireland has taken her place among the nations of the world," are placed on his tomb, and then when the Home Rule bill has been passed we see the inscription being written and his wish at last granted.

Although the value of the picture lies in its historical teachings, it is a worthy scenic besides. It is photographed well throughout; some very pretty views have been caught. It was made in Ireland of course and the principals and extras are all Irish.

Barry O'Brien plays Robert Emmet, and is about the most important in the cast in the first part of the picture. Daniel O'Connell, who continued the work of Emmet, many years after his death, is played by Franklyn Hanna. The women in the cast are Annie Purcell and Lilian Leach.

ORGANIZATION FINDS FAVOR IN IDAHO
Boise, Idaho, Sept. 29.

BELIEVING that in organization there is strength and that much could be done toward the betterment of the business if the exhibitors in Idaho were organized and could affiliate with the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, is the position taken by the local exhibitors relative to the national organization, although few of them are familiar with its workings or what it has accomplished.

It is not believed that it would be possible to perfect a state organization in Idaho, as the cities and towns having motion pictures are so scattered and the expense is so great in getting from one town to another. Some of the proprietors express a hope that a Southern Idaho exhibitors' association can be organized and it is likely that a move in that direction may be made within a few months.

“GOD, MAN AND THE DEVIL”
(Warner’s-Mittenthal—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

Many pictures have been produced that deal with the reformation of the prodigal son of the family, but here just after his ways seem to have been mended for all time, the young man lapses into his evil habits again and before he has a chance to begin the process of reforming for the second time, death overtakes him.

With this finale, although not exactly pleasant, the production may be termed unhackneyed, at the least. The outcome, which is tragic, seems a good deal more probable than one in which a man’s reformation is brought about in a few days, saved from the downward path by the smile of some girl, or because his immediate environment prevents his carousing at will.

In other words, the man in this picture seems more human than the other one, which again makes the story more real. It is just a case of a man being too far gone in his evil ways to stop and go back. He is a man to be pitied, but the situation is human, and not unlikely to occur.

But there is another side to the picture, one that will not pass unnoticed. The scenes laid in the north woods are unmistakably in the north. Just where is not known, but several feet of snow are on the ground, the pine trees are laden with it; a number of sledge dogs are introduced, and a number of other smaller things all appear to stamp it as a real northern location.

Then again the scenes in the lumber camp, with the woodmen cutting down the lofty pines and sawing them up into logs will surely create added color. Most of the action transpires in these parts, where the son has been sent, and they form a striking contrast to the fewer scenes that appear taken in the rooms of city houses, offices and cabarets.

Although the picture is all very fine in these points, there are some things which might be perfected. The subtitle, “The Next Day,” appears several times in one reel, with very few others between. This may be corrected. A long introduction precedes the entrance of the smuggler and his daughter into the story. Full of thirllas, chases with a little shooting, which make it duly entertaining, but not exactly necessary.

After the son has wasted his father’s money in the cafes, and forged a check, he is sent to the north woods. Here he gets along tolerably well for a time, but meeting with the daughter of the smuggler, it is as if she bewitched him, and all his evil returns. His friend tells him to beg the pardon of the girl whom he insulted, and he, refusing to accede to the command, is pursued for his refusal and falls down a steep declivity to his death. This utter disregard of the usual exercise of “poetic justice” has a touch of the grim realism, and the inexorable logic of a Hardy novel, where a man’s sins find him out, and make him pay the penalty to the full.

George Williams is playing the character part, and Paul Hurst the heavy leads.
Unable to secure all the pictures of circus life for the film production of “The Rose in the Ring,” while the Barnum and Bailey circus was recently here, Director Cecil De Mille and Company of Lasky players followed the show to several nearby cities.
As the managers refused to permit pictures to be made of the interior of the tents, the Lasky company decided to put up a regular circus of its own, using the vacant lot near the studio for this purpose.

Bad Scare for Apfel
While at Rosamond, where the Tropic gold mines were used for several scenes, Director Oscar Apfel, producing “Ready Money,” backed into a shaft of the mine, following an explosion, in order to get out of the smoke.
He found he had walked ahead of all the gasses and fumes from the burned explosives, as it was drawn into the section he entered by a back draft. It became so dark he could not see. He stumbled about, and finally succeeded in crawling to the entrance, where he was found by other members of the company.
He was taken outside and soon recovered.

Director Eddie Dillon has completed number nine of the Bill series, entitled “Bill Joins the W. W. W.’s.” The real meaning of the initials significant of a well-established order was “We Want Work,” but Bill, before becoming a member, translated the meaning to be “We Won’t Work,” and he didn’t work.

While making this picture Tam Young, who plays the part of Bill, attempted to buy a package of cigarettes at a Venice cigar stand, but the proprietor informed him he could not sell to boys under twenty-one under penalty of fine and imprisonment. Mr. Dillon explained that Tam was old enough to have two or three sons in the soldiers’ home at Sawtelle, a suburb of Los Angeles.

One Big Studio for all Companies
Gilbert P. Hamilton, president and general manager, and H. F. Connolly, vice-president, of the Albuquerque Film Manufacturing Company, have arrived home from New York, where they attended the United Motion Picture Producers’ Organization meeting.
But two companies are now producing at the Balboa studio at Long Beach, owing to Director Bertram Bracken taking a vacation which began September 21.
The Albuquerque Company will make two thousand feet weekly, consisting of one comedy and one two-reel subject monthly. Later it expects to make multiple reel features as they are needed.

Have You $100 to Throw Away?

The War Tax Bill, through which it is proposed to place a tax of $100 per annum on every motion picture theatre in the United States in cities of 15,000 population and over, is now in the hands of the Finance Committee of the United States Senate. If amended, and passed by the Senate as amended, the bill will be referred back to the House for final passage.

It is not too late for you to act.
You means every exhibitor affected by this measure. And it is highly necessary for you to act, unless you have $100 to throw away.

It is too late to do away with the tax altogether. But, thanks to the activity of President Pearce and others, there is right now a good chance to have the tax graduated and reduced so that you need only bear a fraction of the proposed amount.

This issue of The Motion Picture News tells how the exhibitors all over the country feel about the tax and what they are doing.

Read it over.

* * *

President Pearce and Vice-President Brylaski of the M. P. E. L. of America—the organization that so greatly deserves, if it does not have your year-around support—have side-tracked their private interests and are working hard at Washington—in your behalf.

Local leaders are supporting their efforts by sending telegrams and letters to senators and congressmen.

But you will note that this help goes forth from but a small number of the larger cities, through leaders who are but a handful as compared with the exhibitor body in this country.

Mr. Brylaski says: "It will be necessary for every exhibitor to do his share."

And he adds: "If the exhibitors all over the country will communicate directly with the senators from their states—I feel assured we will be able to secure a very material reduction in the proposed tax."

The Motion Picture News earnestly endorses this appeal and makes the suggestion that these communications be made direct to the Congressman or Senator from your district.

For your convenience and that you may write at once, we suggest the following form letter:

Hon. ———, House of Representatives (or Senate),
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:—As an exhibitor of motion pictures, I am forced to protest vigorously against the proposed war tax of $100 on motion picture theatres (in towns of 15,000 population and over) and beg to submit the following facts for the consideration of your committee.

It is unjust to burden with an equal tax the motion picture theatre which charges but five or ten cents admission and the regular theatre with admission prices of fifty cents to two dollars.

It is unjust to tax equally and indiscriminately the theatre which seats under three hundred and the one with a seating capacity of over one thousand.

Furthermore, I contend that the motion picture theatre is largely a poor man's place of recreation and education, and that as such it is more a necessity than a luxury; and that the exhibitor feels the burden of these war times more than the retail businesses you do not propose to tax. These businesses, moreover, could raise their prices if taxed, whereas the exhibitor can not.

The result of this sweeping tax will inevitably be the closing out of many small picture theatres throughout the country.

I believe that in all justice this tax should be graduated, according to the seating capacities of the motion picture theatres affected and that the limit tax should be based upon the gross business of the picture theatre as compared with the regular theatre.

Respectfully yours,

* * *

Write this or a similar letter today and send it by registered mail.

A second suggestion is made—this in view of the weight borne by popular opinion upon the representatives at Washington.

Make the following slide and run it for a week in your theatre:

(Copyright, 1914, by Exhibitors' Times, Inc.)
Congress proposes to place a war tax of $100 upon all the picture theatres in this city. This may affect you.

Follow this with another slide:

The house will be lighted for three minutes for you to read over the slip handed you at the door. Sign this and hand it back to the usher.

** ** **

THEN have the following letter printed and distributed to your patrons as they enter:

Chairman Finance Committee, U. S. Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:—I am informed that Congress proposes to lay a war tax of $100 per annum on the picture theatres of this city.

Sincerely yours,

[Signature]

* * * * *

After these slips have been signed, collect them in a bundle and send them by registered mail to the Chairman of the Finance Committee, United States Senate, Washington, D. C., or your Congressman. This is merely a suggestion which you may, or may not regard favorably, but at least you can write the letter.

* * * * *

REMEMBER that the outcome—the question of whether you will pay $100 or possibly $10—depends upon this simple matter. Do it, and do it now! An organization such as the Motion Picture Ex-

LEAGUE WINS FIRST POINT IN FIGHT TO MODIFY WAR TAX MEASURE

The latest news from Washington is that the $100 tax on motion picture theatres, irrespective of size or seating capacity, will be abandoned, and in its place a graduated tax substituted.

The following extract from a letter from Fulton Brylawski, Vice-president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, speaks for itself:

"It gives me great pleasure to be able to inform you that on Saturday last the Senate Finance Committee accepted the scale proposed by me in lieu of the flat tax proposed in the House Bill, which scale is as follows:

- Theatres seating less than 300, shall pay $25.
- Theatres seating more than 300 and less than 600, shall pay $50.
- Theatres seating more than 600 and less than $1,000, shall pay $75.
- Theatres seating over 1,000, shall pay $100.

I BELIEVE THAT THIS NEW SCALE WILL SAVE THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS OF THIS COUNTRY NEARLY ONE MILLION DOLLARS.

"Very truly yours, (Signed) Fulton Brylawski."

This does not mean it is "all over." The Senate and the House have still to ratify this amendment, and send in your protests to Congress just the same. Keep on fighting until you are sure the victory is won. Don't relax your efforts until the bill is passed and signed in the form you wish.

ACT NOW! SEND IN YOUR PROTESTS TODAY! DO IT AT ONCE!

As a regular patron of motion pictures, I desire to protest against this action in the belief that it will result in the closing of many theatres and in the raising of prices in others. The motion picture theatre has become necessary to me and the members of my family as a place of recreation and education. It was my understanding that this tax was to be levied upon luxuries. There are plenty of such exhibitors' League of America would be if it had your membership could without a doubt have solved this problem for you. As it stands, the officers are doing everything in their power, but they cannot be successful without your help.

ACT AT ONCE!

William A. Johnston.

BUFFALO FEATURE FILM RE-INCORPORATES

Special to The Motion Picture News

Buffalo, Oct. 7.

The Buffalo Feature Film Corporation was re-incorporated last week and the capital increased to $100,000.

The following officers were elected: President and general manager, George H. Verbeck, who has for over twenty years taken an active interest in all kinds of theatrical business; secretary and treasurer, Wilbur B. Grandison, a prominent local attorney; and F. M. Zimmerman, road man and booker, who has been with the company since its initial organization, some time ago.

Other directors are Joseph J. Raymond, general manager of the Gordon theatre in Rochester; and Clinton T. Horton, who has been nominated for Congress from this district. There is also a leading film man in New York City, who is a silent member of the board of directors.

SURRENDER NEWARK LICENSES

Newark, N. J., Oct. 7.

Two withdrawals from the motion picture business were announced at a meeting of the East Orange City Council. The North Jersey Amusement Company, which had the license for the Lyceum at 306 and 308 Main street, for the past year, sent a letter saying the company would not apply for a renewal of its license, and the First Ward Amusement Company withdrew an application which it had pending before the council.

A deposit of $100 was ordered returned to the latter concern.

In the case of the Lyceum, however, the Masonic Realty Company, owner of the building, applied for and was granted a license for that location.
Motion Picture Theatre Tax Crisis Reveals Value of a Strong National Organization

President Marion S. Pearce has been the busiest man in Washington since the first hint that a cinema. Motion Picture Theatres was to be included in the bill, now under discussion in the Capitol. Day and night he has been working, interviewing everybody whose opinions are of value to the League, protesting in the strongest terms against the provisions of the bill, and laboring incessantly that the bill, when finally passed, might be of such a nature as would prove least objectionable to exhibitors everywhere.

"In the first place, the League was assured," said Mr. Pearce the other day, "that the bill, which was in course of preparation by the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, would include no tax whatever on motion picture theaters. Hence it was a complete surprise to learn, when the bill was reported out of the committee, that each motion picture theatre in the country was to be burdened with a tax of $100, regardless of size, capacity or anything else.

No Hearing Before the House

"To make the matter harder to get at, a special provision had even then been agreed upon, that this bill could not be amended on the floor of the House, and, furthermore, no hearing, either public or private, would be permitted.

"Confronted with this condition, the obvious thing to do was to pick the bill up at the first available point, i.e., in the United States Senate, and bring all possible pressure to bear on the Finance Committee to which the measure had been referred." Without the very limit of powerful effort that was brought to bear, even in an interview, would have proven entirely out of the question with most of the men, and to this end, President Pearce has been untiring in his efforts, working day and night, and losing no opportunity to say a word here, and plant a fact there, to bring about the desired result.

Committee Will Agree to Amendment

After interviewing the chairman and members of the Committee of Finance, they immediately saw the justice of the protest to the original bill, and the equitable features of the amendment, and hesitatingly said so. While it is sure that the tax cannot be removed from motion picture theatres entirely (which was the first effort made), at the same time it is equally certain that it will not pass in its present form, but will include, when reported out of the Committee, embodying as a component part, a graduated scale which is fair and just to exhibitors both large and small.

President Pearce wants to impress on every exhibitor in the United States the fact that both members of the House of Representatives and United States Senators have come to realize and appreciate, when they apparently did not heretofore, what a tremendous power and influence for good lies in the hands of the country.

They have had it proven to them conclusively, through the telegrams and letters sent them, that the League is a mighty factor for good; and they have so expressed themselves to President Pearce repeatedly during the past few days.

"And it only takes just such an occasion as this," Mr. Pearce went on, "to bring home to every individual exhibitor that HE IS A MEMBER OF AN ORGANIZATION big enough and strong enough to seek JUSTICE AND EQUITABLE CONSIDERATION—and better than that—to GET IT BECAUSE HE DESERVES IT! With such strength as this has brought out from the League, and such splendid results secured through it, it ought to convince every exhibitor that the good effects of cooperation are too big to be measured—the benefits too great to be calculated, if each man will stand by the League with all his might and give it the best efforts he has in him.

1Thanks Exhibitors for Their Support

President Pearce worked especially to thank every member of the League for the splendid way they responded to the request for telegrams and letters to the Senators and members of Congress on this War Tax measure.

The good effect of these made it easier to accomplish what has been done, and President Pearce wants every exhibitor in the country to realize that not for an hour will he leave Washington, nor lose sight of the issue at hand.

He has sidetracked everything else, and is watching the progress of the bill and will continue to do so right up to the moment it becomes a law, with the best interests of the League solely in mind.

Washington Exhibitors Ask Reasonable Tax; Brylawski Appeals to Senate Committee

Special to The Motion Picture News

Washington, D. C., October 7

According to the looks of matters in motion picture circles here, there is to be a fight in Congress relative to the proposed tax to be placed on motion picture theatres, but this fight will be based on a reasonable tax and not with the idea of shrinking from assisting in the national revenue. Fulton Brylawski, as vice-president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, wrote a letter to every member of the United States Senate, which is here given:

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the District of Columbia

Office of the Secretary, Jenifer Bldg., Washington, D. C.

"Dear Sir: The bill, H. R. 18891, 'To increase the Internal Revenue and for Other Purposes,' provides, among other things, in the sixth section thereof:

"'Proprietors of theatres, museums and concert halls in cities having more than fifteen thousand population as shown by the last preceding United States census, shall pay $100. Every edifice used for the purpose of dramatic or operatic or other representations, plays or performances, for admission to which entrance money is received, not including halls rented or used occasionally for concerts or theatrical representations, shall be regarded as a theatre.

"As the National Vice-president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, which includes in its membership thousands of motion picture theatres in all sections of the United States, and as the Secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the District of Columbia, I respectfully beg to submit the following to your consideration:

"The wording of the measure in its present form does not differentiate between theatres, excepting that theatres in towns of less than fifteen thousand inhabitants are not liable to this special tax. In a town of less than fifteen thousand inhabitants there are in many instances only several theatres, each of which may do a thriving business.

"In this city, for example, there are about ninety moving picture theatres, seating anywhere from one hundred and fifty to a thousand or more persons, and in addition thereto there are ten large theatres playing dramatic, operatic, vaudeville and burlesque attractions, so that there is, in this city, one theatre to every thirty-five hundred inhabitants.

Smaller Theatres Face Extinction

"The larger theatres with their greater seating capacity and the higher prices charged could, without feeling it a burden, easily pay the one hundred dollar tax intended to be levied by this proposed legislation, but the small theatre—the little moving picture house with only a few hundred seats and where the admission charge is only five or ten cents—would not only feel such a tax burdensome in the extreme, but in a great number of instances would be compelled to go out of business.

"Judged by the popular idea of the enormous profits in the motion picture business, this statement may seem an exaggeration. During the past year there were many moving picture theatres in this city that were compelled to go out of business because of their inability to cope with the larger theatres.

"During the month of November every theatre in this city, large or small, must pay to the District of Columbia one hundred and five dollars for a license to operate during the coming year. Many of them will be hard pressed to realize that this license will cost them an additional hundred dollars towards the Internal Revenue. I can state with great possibility and certainty that a large number will be forced out of existence simply on this account.

"It is not the purpose of this communication to endeavor to shirk the responsibility of defraying a part of this country's revenue, but simply to suggest a far more equitable manner of levying such a tax. As an example a sliding scale, like the following, would answer this purpose:

Theatres seating less than 300 might be taxed: $25
Theatres seating more than 300 but not exceeding 500: $50
Theatres seating more than 500 and not exceeding 1,000: $75
Theatres seating more than 1,000: $100

"I feel sure that if you will give the proper consideration to this letter you will, as a fair-minded man, see the force and equitableness of the argument herein advanced.

"Respectfully,

(Signed) "FULTON BRYLAWSKI"

Interviewing Mr. Brylawski on the progress of this matter, he made the following interesting statements:

Senators Recognize Unfairness of Tax

"To date I have received more than fifty answers to the ninety-nine letters written to the members of the United States Senate, many of whom have stated that they recognize the unfairness of the proposed legislation and will do all in their power to have the law modified, to meet the views of the motion picture exhibitors.

"Amendments have been prepared covering this section and they will be introduced at the proper time by prominent Democratic senators. President Pearce of the National League has been in Washington daily interviewing various senators and has assured the active assistance of Maryland senators.

"Messrs. Varner, Sams and Lambert, representing the Piedmont Amusement Company of North Carolina, with headquarters at Winston-Salem, called at my office recently. They came for the purpose of advancing arguments through Senator Simmons of North Carolina, chairman of the Committee on Finance, which has the consideration of the proposed bill.

"They, with President Pearce and myself, drew up a set of specific arguments against the proposed measure insofar as it affects the motion picture business. These will be presented in person.

"President Pearce has written and wired to the various state presidents and to the national vice-presidents of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, asking these members to wire their senators their views on the pending legislation.

Exhibitors Must Do Their Share

"I believe this matter to be extremely urgent," went on Mr. Brylawski, "and if the exhibitors all over the country will communicate immediately with their senators from their states protesting against the unfairness of compelling the motion picture houses to stand the same tax as the large theatres and circuses, I feel assured we will be able to secure a very material reduction in the proposed tax.

"However, in order to effect this, it will be necessary for every exhibitor to do his share. I am giving this matter very close attention and I hope to be able to present arguments against the bill, from the standpoint of the motion picture man, before the committee in person.

"It must be understood that Mr. Brylawski is not only an officer of the national and local motion picture leagues, but he is a lawyer of recognized ability in Washington. He has amicably settled many questions arising among the exhibitors and is well known in Congress and in court circles.

Des Moines Exhibitors Kick, But Refuse to Act Against War Tax

Des Moines, Ia., Oct 6.

DES MOINES exhibitors will make no effort to head off the war tax which Congress proposes to impose on theatres. The exhibitors and theatrical heads will look to their national organizations for relief from what they regard as an obnoxious law.

Elbert & Getchell, the theatrical managers of Des Moines, own the Unique, one of the leading film houses. They also lease the four leading theatres, the Empress, the Majestic, the Princess and the Berchel. They use films in all of them.

B. F. Elbert said regarding the proposed tax:

"It is a matter that we shall leave for solution to the National Association of Theatrical Producing Managers. I do not believe that we could accomplish much here. As a theoretical proposition it will be an increased burden on houses that are barely able to get along.

Do Not Believe Government Needs Money

"We would not object to our share of the tax if we believed the government needed the money and was practicing economy itself. The Government, however, has made no effort to be economical. They are going to spend $100,000,000 for rivers and harbors just the same, if Congress can get away with the bill. In other directions the Government is spending as extravagantly and unreasonably.

"They made a partial failure of the income tax bill as a revenue collector. Now they are going to dig the revenue out of us fellows, the bankers and other business enterprises that they can get easily. They can get at us without working very hard. It requires no effort to put an extra tax on beer, or to tax the other industries of the country. The Government keeps on spending money just the same.

"The war has decreased the revenues, but you don't see any bills up in Congress for the purpose of reducing expenses. That is what makes me sore and that is what I kick against. It will be a hardship not only on the picture houses, but on the theatres also. In Des Moines the business is overdone the same as it is in many other places. There are only a few of the picture houses in the city that are actually making money and the theatres are making still less. We are making as much money as any of them, but the tax is going to impose a hardship. We tried during the summer to charge ten cents and put up a better class of stuff in the picture line, but the combine was in effect one day and one of the houses broke it by going back to five cents."

Leave It to the State Organization

Abram H. Blank, of the Garden theatre, one of the finest picture houses in the state and the only regular ten cent house in the city, said:

"Nothing is being done by the exhibitors in Des Moines. I do not believe anything will be done. The association is not very strong here and does not hang together very well. We will leave it to the state and national organizations.

"The war tax is not fair. It will hurt the smaller houses. Moving picture theatres are as much a necessity for the working people as the sugar they put in their coffee. I do not object to a tax, but the figures proposed by the Government are too high. They are exorbitant. If a war tax has to be fastened on something by the Government we will have to pay it, but we do not want to pay more than our just proportion.

Theatrical men generally declare that the extravagance and profligacy of the Government at this time amounts almost to robbery. There is regarded to be no consistency between the imposition of an indiscriminate war tax and the expenditures of the Government.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 7.

President A. N. Wolff, of the New York State branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, has been a busy man ever since it became known that Congress contemplated taxing all theatres in towns of over 15,000 inhabitants $100 a year, as a part of the war tax to meet the deficiency in government revenues.

Immediately upon receiving word to that effect from President Pearce, of Baltimore, he wired the protest of the Rochester exhibitors to Congressmen H. G. Danforth and Thomas B. Dunn at Washington.

This protest voiced the feeling of the forty odd exhibitors in Rochester, who would be compelled to pay the tax.

At the same time President Wolff drafted a circular letter to be sent to each of the exhibitors in New York State, requesting them to wire their representatives in Congress, protesting against the proposed tax.

Form of Tax Objectionable

Not only the tax itself, but the form of it, is objectionable to the local exhibitors. They do not believe, in the first place, that the poor man's pleasure should be taxed, and, in the second place, they do not believe that the tax has been levied in a proper manner.

"As I understand it," said Mr. Wolff, "this tax was supposed to be placed on luxuries. No one will say that a moving picture entertainment, at five or ten cents, is a luxury. It is about the only pleasure that the poor man and his family may enjoy. Taxing that is taxing the poor man's sole means of recreation, one which has become marvelously popular in a very few years."

"There is no telling when such a tax would be removed, if once imposed."

The tax is not properly spread, in the next place. It should be based on the seating capacity of a theatre, or upon the net income, or gross receipts. Theatres of small seating capacity, with the opportunity to make but small profits, should not be taxed as much as the larger theatres.

No Distinction Made

The proposed law, as I understand it, makes no difference between picture theatres and other kinds. Theatres which charge as high as $2 a seat are taxed no more than those which charge but five cents a seat. This is obviously most unfair.

"Every exhibitor should interest himself in this matter to the extent of making his views known to his representative in Congress."

A Fairly Proportioned Tax Rate Is All That Maryland Exhibitors Demand

Baltimore, Oct. 7.

The motion picture men of Maryland take this stand that the war tax proposed by the United States Government of $100 for each theatre is out of all proportion. The feeling among the exhibitors in Baltimore, particularly, is that they should not be assessed at the same rate as legitimate theatres. The latter can accommodate at each performance four or five times as many patrons, at the same time receiving so much higher admissions.

A meeting of the Maryland league of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America was held recently, at which the war tax was discussed.

Alexander Anderson, C. F. Habighurst, President Marion S. Pearce, J. Howard Bennett, Joseph Brodle and Guy L. Wonders took a prominent part in the discussion. The feeling brought out was that the motion picture men of Maryland wanted to pay their share of the war tax and were perfectly willing to pay a fair proportion.

$10 a Theatre a Fair Sum

It was a feeling of the meeting that $10 for every motion picture house, particularly the smaller motion picture houses, would be an adequate sum.

The secretary was instructed to communicate with the Maryland representatives in both houses of Congress, and make plain the feeling of the motion picture exhibitors on this subject.

Another meeting will be held just as soon as a communication has been received from the Maryland delegation in Congress.

Another matter which was brought up at the meeting was the question of country store and other freak specialties conducted in some of the Baltimore picture houses. All of the film men in this city attended the meeting at a special invitation from the president.

The film men were asked to co-operate with the exhibitors in eliminating this objectionable feature. They pledged themselves to do so and even suggested that they may go so far as to refuse to rent films to exhibitors who persisted in conducting catch-jenny features in connection with motion picture shows.

The members of the league feel very optimistic now of the elimination of the country store and other features from the exhibitors' resources.

Postpone Action on Higher Prices

Following a suggestion made several months ago to increase the general price of admission to motion picture houses from five to ten cents was brought up. While there are several ten-cent houses in Baltimore, the great majority have five-cent admissions.

While a large number of the exhibitors were in favor of increasing the admission, no definite action was taken, as it was felt that the increase in price should be general throughout the entire city, and, until perfect unity is established on the subject, the increased admission price should be left in the hands of the individual exhibitors and not made a rule of the league.
Illinois Exhibitors Wire Protests to Senators and Congressmen

Springfield, Ill., October 6.

OFFICIALS of Illinois State Branch No. 2, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, have taken quick action in protest to the war tax measure now before Congress, which provides for a tax of $100 on every motion picture theatre in cities over 15,000 population.

G. M. Luttrell, of Jacksonville, president of the state branch, has already wired the Illinois senators to the following effect:

"Officially representing practically every motion picture theatre in Illinois, we strongly protest against the original motion picture war tax bill as passed. But approved amended scale of $10 up to one thousand seating capacity, and $50 over one thousand seating capacity."

Wires Sent to Members of Congress

Besides this, President Luttrell has written practically every exhibitor in the state urging him to protest to the state's senators.

W. W. Watts, treasurer of the state branch and owner of the Vandytte theatre here, said in an interview:

"I have wired a protest to Senator L. Y. Sherman and will write Congressman Graham regarding the proposed tax. Every exhibitor in Springfield will file a protest. I am sure I believe the national officers will soon have a committee in Washington to make a protest."

"This is one of the times when the weed of a good, strong organization is felt. In this matter, motion picture exhibitors will have to act quickly, and I believe it will go a long way toward bringing to every exhibitor the realization that he must do his part in aiding in the formation of a strong national organization."

Two plans for a campaign against the proposed war tax of $100 on motion picture theatres were offered by A. F. Kunz, proprietor of the Grand theatre.

"The exhibitors have no real organization with which to fight the proposed tax," Mr. Kunz said, "but there is a way of getting action quickly, and I believe nearly every exhibitor would join in. I'd suggest that this Motion Picture News start a fund with which to hire an attorney to present the motion picture exhibitors' side to Congress. If every exhibitor would send in, say, $2 a great fund would be quickly available and action could be gotten right away."

Use Slides in Theatres as Protest

"Another thing is to start a campaign against the proposed tax by using slides in every picture theatre protesting. That would give the bill quick publicity, and I'm sure would bring results."

"It seems unfair to tax the picture theatre, which already pays a big license to operate, and allow other lines of business to escape the tax."

"Just why the motion picture theatres should be taxed $100 under the proposed war tax bill and other lines of business not taxed, is more than I can understand," Benjamin Rovin, manager of the Amuse-U theatre, said. "We already are paying a license to operate and now there comes this additional tax. The exhibitors certainly will fight the proposed law."

Needs Strong Organization to Act

"My understanding is that motion picture houses are not classed as theatres, but as amusement places, and that being in that class, will be taxed only $10 under the proposed war tax bill," Harry Loper, manager of the Lyric theatre, said. "One thing is certain: if motion picture theatres are taxed $100 under the war tax measure there will be no more five-cent tickets sold at this theatre."

"If individuals we exhibitors are unable to do anything, and it will take a strong organization to act in this matter to any effect!"

War Tax a Strong Argument for National Organization

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 7.

"The chief injustice in the proposal to impose a war tax of $100 upon theatres," said C. Floyd Hopkins, manager of the Colonial, Third and Market streets, and of two other big Harrisburg theatres which, unlike the Colonial, are not essentially motion picture houses, "is that it hits the kind of business that is the first to suffer when times become bad. Everybody knows that when general business depression occurs the first direction in which people begin to economize is in that of cutting down on forms of amusement."

"Thus we see Congress proposing to place the heaviest burden of hard times on the business that suffers most from the depression."

Tax Best Argument for Organization

Peter Magaro, who will manage a new theatre that is being built on the site of the old Star, 410 Market street, and manager of a large theatre in Carlisle, Pa., regards the war tax on theatres as entirely unfair, but doesn't see how anything can be done now to prevent its being imposed. "If the motion picture men had only been better organized," said Mr. Magaro, "and been able to employ a man in Washington to keep them acquainted with what was going on in the matter of preparation of legislation affecting the business, the individual exhibitors and local organizations might have been able to exert an influence over their home congressmen in time to prevent the injustice now being done. The war tax is a good argument for better organization in the future."

"Means Ruin for Small Theatres"—Klinger

"As soon as I heard of the war tax plan I wrote to the congressman from this district and urged him to oppose the unjust measure," said C. D. Klinger, manager of the Palace, 333 Market street. "I pointed out to him that it simply means ruin for a number of the small theatre owners."

"If there is to be a tax at all on theatres, it should be proportioned according to the amount of business done or the number of seats in a house. It is manifestly ridiculous to tax small houses with 300 or 400 seats, many of which give performances only twice a week, the same fixed amount that is imposed on houses that seat 1,500 or 2,000 persons and have performances afternoon and evening every day of the week."

Chattanooga Exhibitor Denounces Proposed War Tax on Theatres

Special to The Motion Picture News
Chattanooga, Tenn., Oct. 6.

MANAGER MUGNIER of the Picto motion picture theatre, 729 Market street, Chattanooga, Tenn., is bitter in his denunciation of the proposed war tax on motion picture theatres. He considers the war tax proposition little short of robbery in the first degree. His opinion follows:

"I am strictly opposed to the proposed war tax on motion picture theatres. I consider it an imposition to the greatest extent. It is simply robbery in the first degree. The motion picture business is already suffering because of the European war and why impose a tax on exhibitors when they have nothing whatever to do with the war?"

"The levying of a tax on a man with a staple line of goods enables him to raise his price to meet the tax. The people can do without their amusement. We've got all the expense we can meet. Why pile more upon us?"

TIME IS RIPE FOR MOTION PICTURE NEWS BOARD OF TRADE, SAYS MILWAUKEE EXHIBITOR

"The proposed war tax is most unfair," says J. H. Silliman, owner and manager of the Liberty Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. "If they must tax theatres let them tax them according to their seating capacity or their profits. Under the present plan the theatres with but a few hundred seats and getting but a nickle will have to pay the same tax as the big $2,00-a-seat legitimate theatre. I am afraid that the tax will wipe out many of the little fellows, especially here in Milwaukee where we have a local license to pay. Now is the time for the formation of the board of trade, composed of representatives of the exchange men, producers and exhibitors such as was proposed at the time of the New York convention by the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, to fight this bill."

Texas Exhibitors Will Fight the Tax

EXHIBITORS in Dallas and all over Texas are up in arms over the proposition of taxing film theatres $100 per year as a war tax. Already telegrams have been sent to representatives in congress and senate from various points in Texas and as much pressure is being brought to bear on these representatives as possible to get them to oppose the measure.

The general views of each man seen by a representative of The Motion Picture News was that they were willing to stand their part of any tax thought necessary, but they did not believe that such a heavy tax should be imposed on their business, which they consider a legitimate business and a business which now stands as much taxation as any.

"Exhibitors Targets for Every Kind of Tax"

"It's a tax on education," was the way G. K. Jorgensen, owner of the Crystal Theatre at Dallas and owner and operator of four Crystal theatres at Galveston, expressed himself. Mr. Jorgensen is one of the pioneers in the business in Texas and has seen it grow from its small beginning to its present big dimensions.

"Naturally we consider the tax unjust," said Mr. Jorgensen, "and I for one am doing and am going to do all I can to defeat the measure. We are willing to pay our part to help take care of the operating expenses of the government, but no more."

"We exhibitors are already the targets for every kind of tax. In Galveston, for instance, each theatre is taxed a certain sum to pay a special officer for duty at his house. Of course, it is not needed and it is a species of graft, but is required by city ordinance."

"The war has affected our business as well as all other lines of business and one expenses have increased wonderfully in the last few years. We are also giving people more for the same money."

"I consider the motion picture business as a necessity instead of a luxury, as it is the amusement for the people in the poorer walks of life. It is also a great educational treat for many people and when they put an exorbitant war tax on the picture houses, they are simply taxing education."

Base Tax on Business Done

P. G. Cameron, proprietor of the Roseland at Dallas, offered a rather new idea. He believes that the tax on theatres should be based on the amount of business done, if they have to be taxed, but is against the tax at all on the grounds that it is discriminatory and is classed legislation.

"It is class legislation pure and simple, that a motion picture house should be taxed for war relief measures," said Mr. Cameron. "We should not be required to pay the tax. There is no way for us to get our money back as the set price of admission cannot be changed."

"Why the bill should have been drawn to not apply to picture houses in cities of less than 15,000 is beyond me. The houses in the smaller cities make more money than do those in the larger cities. They have less rent, do not pay as much for films and their operating expenses cannot compare with the shows in the larger places.

"If the tax has to be imposed it appears to me that it should be along the same lines as went into effect following the war in Spain. Let the government furnish us with specially designed tickets and then each house would pay according to the amount of business they did. I can see no justification for the tax at all, though as a loyal citizen I am willing to pay my legitimate share of expenses of government operation."

Finnegan for Lower Tax, If Any

"You can put me down as being opposed to the tax as proposed," said T. P. Finnegan of The Hippodrome. "I think it is an unjust proposition and cannot see why such a heavy tax should be imposed on those engaged in the moving picture business and so many other lines of business go untaxed."

"I hold that the tax is necessary for film houses, it be based on seating capacity. Say let a tax of $10 per year be levied on house of 1,000 seating capacity and $50 per year or some other equitable amount for houses having a larger seating capacity.

"The film business is being as hard hit by the war as any other line of business and I do not believe we should simply submit to this unfair tax."

Omaha Exhibitors Urge Loyalty to National Organization

Special to The Motion Picture News

M. ARONSON, manager of the Cameraphone Theatre at 1403 Douglas street, Omaha, bemoans the fact that his theatre will probably be called upon to pay a levy of $100 to the government. He wants to know what can be done to prevent it. Mr. Aronson's theatre is doing an excellent business; it is run on a high plane and he has an enviable standing among the exhibitors.

"I have read about it," he said. "The levy will be made and we must pay it. First they levy on the saloons: then its the moving picture theatres. Why? My idea is the motion picture theatre is still looked upon more or less as an evil in the community. People living in glass houses say the moving picture theatres are immoral. Then, too, the moving picture shows are educational, and often clean and strong, but they are still classed among the unnece-sories of life."

"If the grocers were taxed, they would probably have to pay. But if Rockefeller was taxed, he would not pay. An exhibitor is not as powerful as Mr. Rockefeller. Maybe a legislative committee from the National League would prevent the levy being made, but it probably would not.

"I can not understand why an exhibitor, who is perhaps losing money, perhaps playing even or perhaps making a little, should be called upon to pay for losses caused by a war in some other part of the world."

"Get Organized—Then Fight"—Roper

But there are plenty of exhibitors in Omaha who believe the unjust and unreasonable levy, as they call it, could be prevented. Their answers make an excellent response to Mr. Aronson's statement.

"Get organized, then put up the same fight other businesses would," said William Roper, manager of the Roper Theatre, Broadway and Scott streets, Council Bluffs, la. "Send letters,
Idaho Exhibitors Declare Tax Is Unjust
Special to The Motion Picture News
Boise, Idaho, Oct. 5.

Every one of the proprietors of the five motion picture theatres in Boise are strongly opposed to the proposed action by Congress of levying a war tax against the poor man's theatre.

They feel that the tax is unjust, is discriminating against certain classes of business and further that if the way and means committee which recommended such a tax had made more than a surface investigation of the business, the tax against the motion picture houses would not have been levied.

Under present conditions all state that the tax cannot be met unless an advance in price is made, which they feel will affect the business materially and cut many a poor man and his family out of an evening's educational amusement together and likely send him downtown alone to some place of amusement less elevating. Following is what they have to say on the subject:

"If a war tax is levied upon our business compelling exhibitors in cities of over 15,000 to pay $100 each it will work such a hardship that the admission price will have to be raised.

"The public must know the cause of the raise in price and should be advised who is responsible for it, therefore every exhibitor in every moving picture show throughout the country should run an explanation upon the screen prior to the performance that the public might know the true reasons and the party responsible for such action.

"If the poor man is cut out of his pleasure and educational advantage which is afforded him by a ten-cent show, it is a cinch that he will vote in the interests of his amusement and education.

"When it is taken into consideration the number of people who witness the moving pictures throughout the country, the realization may come that some mighty effective political sermons can be preached from the screen that the people will heed."

He does not believe that the Ways and Means Committee which recommended the levy knows anything about the cost of operating a motion picture show, but that they have merely read about great profits made in the business, saw the glitter of the lights and the crowds and believed the business could stand the tax and recommended the levy, without taking into consideration how many dimes it takes to pay rent, hire an orchestra, ticket sellers, film service, advertising and many other expenses in connection with the business.

W. F. Bossner, proprietor of the Boz Theatre at 1008 Main street, declares that a war tax of $100 against a theatre in a city of even 20,000 cannot be met unless the admission price is raised and feels that it is an unjust burden placed upon a small business.

COAST EXCHANGES EXPOSE SYSTEM OF FRAUDS

Plan Under Way for Forming an Organization to Protect Managers of Renting Establishments from Unscrupulous Exhibitors—Black List for Bad Payees and Those Who Operate Poor Machines That Ruin Films—Will Also Settle Poster Charge Question

A MOVEMENT is on foot in San Francisco to form an organization of film men, to include those conducting exchanges and handling feature attractions, and within a short time it is anticipated that an association of some kind will be under way.

This move is being taken on account of the heavy losses that have been sustained of late by a number of exchanges which have been made the victims by unscrupulous exhibitors.

The matter has been under consideration for some time, but was brought to a head a short time ago by the exposure of the operations of an unusually bold pair of exhibitors, who had victimized not only the exchange men but a number of theatre owners, as well.

Within a space of less than two months more than a half a dozen local exchanges have been defrauded out of sums ranging from ten dollars to more than one hundred dollars, but it was only recently that it was discovered that an organized campaign of deception was under way.

This pair of operators would secure leading feature attractions and show them for the night on a commission basis, often defrauding the theatre owner, as well as the exchange man.

How Two Swindlers Worked

At times they would represent that they had just taken over a prominent house and would secure the films before the exchange had an opportunity to verify the report of the change in management.

The matter culminated when an effort was made to defraud the local office of George Kleine Attractions, and one of the perpetrators of the scheme was arrested. An offer was made to settle the matter out of court, and this was accepted, owing to extenuating circumstances, but a warrant is still out for the arrest of the other party, who is declared to be the ringleader of the two.

Profiting by this experience, several film men agreed that an organization of some kind was necessary, and a call for a meeting was made through the following circular letter issued through the office of George Kleine Attractions:

"It has long been the writer's contention that the film exchanges of San Francisco could be operated more advantageously to the betterment of all, if co-operation was secured, and there is no reason why such co-operation cannot be secured.

Advantages of Exchange Association

"Every line of business has a protective association to shield and guard against theft, and our business, the most exposed of all, has absolutely no protection. If we formed a co-operative association, or club, the protection and saving to each and every one would be surprisingly large in the course of three months.

"We could maintain a black list for bad payees, a black list for those who operate cheap machines and ruin our films, and we could by agreement, one and all, procure the proper charge for posters, and many other important items which we are now overlooking simply because we are not co-operative.

"It will not be necessary to maintain an office force to conduct the policy of co-operation, as we can conduct this business through an agency such as, for instance, the International Mercantile and Bond Company. This is for the good of all, and the quicker we form this association to protect ourselves, the quicker we reap the results, and a greater harmony will exist than ever before dreamed of."

A preliminary meeting was then held during the lunch hour at a prominent down-town cafe, and the proposition discussed in an informal manner. The sentiment was decidedly in favor of action along the line indicated, and the proposition will be taken up shortly in earnest.

Handsome Quarters for Box Office

The Box Office Attractions Company is fitting up handsome quarters at 107 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, and will be ready for business within a short time.

The offices and film rooms are of large size, and the appointments are equal to almost anything in this line to be found here, indicating the confidence the concern has in this field and in the productions it will handle. No announcement has been made here of the manager who will be in charge, but it is understood that a local man has been selected.

Mayor Vetoes Concessions

This action on the part of the mayor is appreciated by motion picture exhibitors generally, as it means that there will be but few of the catch-penny, fly-by-night attractions here in 1915 that usually follow great expositions.

An ordinance has been passed by the City Council of St. John, Ore., establishing a censorship committee to pass on all motion pictures, vaudeville performances and other public functions. It is the duty of the mayor, under the ordinance, to appoint a committee of twelve citizens to carry out the provisions of the measure.

Myron E. Hicks, proprietor of the Star Theatre, Ashland, Ore., passed away suddenly of heart failure in that city on September 18. He was well known in Coast amusement circles. A wife and child survive him.

New Horsley "Home Release" a Single

Friends Suggest in Fifty-six Letters and Seventeen Telegrams an Appropriate Name for Producer's Most Important Feature

All department heads and employees of the Centaur factories and studio at Bayonne have been ordered to report one hour earlier and to remain at their work one hour later each day until further notice.

Contrary to the general supposition regarding the cause of this seemingly severe order, the war in Europe is in no way responsible.

Mr. Stork is all to blame. David Horsley's family has increased, and the cost of living is at present so abnormally high that an increased income will be necessary to meet the demands of the new Horsley.

Yes, it's a boy—and not only that, but it arrived on the same day and almost at the same hour as the contracts which settled the arrangements for the Centaur comedies to be released through the General Film Company were signed.

The new Horsley home release, though a single, is at present the big feature among the Horsley products, and, needless to say, will not be seen on any program for some time to come.

Mr. Horsley has invited his friends—and their name is legion—to suggest an appropriate name for the baby, and up to the time this story is going to press, seventeen telegrams and fifty-six letters from all parts of the country have been received.

Mrs. Horsley, who has to be consulted in this matter, is not greatly taken with any of the names so far suggested, so Mr. Horsley threatens, in the event of the fifty-seventh variety letter failing to furnish forth an acceptable "moniker," to call the youngster John and let it go at that.
Film Magnates at Mastbaum Dinner

Representative Gathering at Bellevue-Stratford, Philadelphia—Noted Producers Are Guests—Banquet Held in Honor of Carl H. Pierce—Speeches Between Courses Instead of at the End—Flashlight Taken at Beginning Ready by the Third Course

MEN prominent in the motion picture industry as producers, manufacturers, distributors and representatives of the daily papers and of the trade journals were the guests of Stanley Mastbaum at a banquet at the Bellevue-Stratford, Philadelphia, Thursday evening, October 1, which was tendered to Bosworth's Special Representative in the East, Carl H. Pierce.

The table, in the shape of a huge M, was set in the Red Room of the Bellevue and the affair was in the nature of a sequel to a similar banquet given at the Adelphi recently by Mr. Pierce to the newspaper men and others in the trade.

Among the prominent guests present were: "Pop" Lubin; Adolph Zukor, president of The Famous Players Film Company; Daniel Frohman, managing director of the same concern; Jesse L. Lasky, president, and Samuel Goldfish, treasurer and general manager of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company; Raymond Pawley, treasurer of the Paramount Pictures Corporation; Carl H. Pierce, special representative of Bosworth, Inc.; J. Louis Breitinger, Chief Censor of Pennsylvania; Jules Mastbaum and Stanley Mastbaum, of The Stanley Company; William E. Smith, Famous Players Exchange, Philadelphia; the dramatic critics of the daily newspapers—Howard Bonte, "Ledger"; A. D. Ferris, "Evening Telegraph"; Harry Knapp, "Inquirer"; A. B. Diamond, "North American"; Herman Dieck, "Record"; F. V. Armato, "Evening Telegraph," and theatre paper representatives, Julian M. Solomon, Jr., THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS; Steve Talbot, "Billboard," and the members of the three big distributing companies, J. H. Butner, Mutual; J. C. Hennessy, General Film; Vernon R. Carrick and William Sachsenmaier, Universal, and many prominent exchange and picture theatre managers.

Speaking Between Courses

Stanley Mastbaum opened the evening's festivities with a few remarks, after which he followed the ancient custom of passing around a loving-cup from which each guest partook as he was introduced to those assembled.

This made for good fellowship from the start and they could not but strangers to each other after such a cordial introduction. It was like a great, big family gathering. Everybody talked to everybody else without restraint or without the usual aloofness found at formal banquets.

This was probably helped along by the fact that nobody was allowed to come in "open face" clothes. Mr. Howard Bonte broke this rule because, as he said, "I was tired of wearing the same clothes all the time and I changed to get a little pleasure."

After the introduction, a flashlight was taken and before the third course had been brought on the guests were looking at proofs of the picture. Between the various courses the innovation of having the various speakers talk was introduced, so that the usual monotony of hearing several men speak one after the other at the end of the banquet was done away with and the intervals between courses pleasantly filled in.

Early Motion Pictures

Jules Mastbaum told of the first store show which he had opened in Philadelphia in partnership with "Professor" Lubin (whom all know as "Pop" Lubin) and Harry Davis.

This little place seated eighty-nine people, and was nothing but a corner store with a white painted front and some undertakers' chairs. The first reels shown ran from fifteen to fifty feet, and the people hardly had time to be seated before they were ushered out again.

Since that time he has been more or

BUFFALO UP IN ARMS OVER INCREASED PRICES

Exhibitors Protest Against Action of Local Branch of General Film in Making a Flat Rate of Ten Dollars Per Reel Irrespective of Length, Run or Age—Managers See in War Tax Need of Strong Organization

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 7.

O n October 27 the local branch of the General Film Company raised its feature film service to a flat rate of ten dollars per reel, irrespective of length, age or run. First-run will cost the same as sixth or seventh.

Almost simultaneously with this announcement: a meeting of the most prominent exhibitors in Buffalo was called to consider the proposition. They had the price, they could take it or leave it. In the words of one of the managers present, "they left it."

This raising of film service at a time when expense at the operating end of the theatre is at its greatest height, seems to be a most unpopular move, if the consensus of opinion among local exhibitors can be taken into consideration.

Under the new rule, a theatre which shows in the evening only is charged the same as an all day and night theatre. If the feature is five reels in length "evening performance" houses must pay $50 for the production. As one manager said, "We simply cannot afford it. In fact, we will just drop it all together. There is plenty of open booking firms where we can get features at reasonable prices."

Exhibitors Must Stand Together

Speaking of the situation, the same manager said, "This is just another instance when the exhibitors should have co-operation. Not co-operation for this one proposition alone, which when settled is broken up and each manager again falls back into the same old method of 'putting one over' on another exhibitor.

"The only thing for Buffalo film men is organization and sticktoitiveness. If every exhibitor in town will take a firm stand on this increase in service and refuse to show the features, there would be some good done.

"But until such a time as there is a general co-operation, that will be permanent, exchange and the government will continue to impose upon us,"

"If we had had a strong national organization, when the Democratic Ways and Means Committee proposed that $100 levy on all theatres in towns of 15,000 population, that same committee might have reconsidered their proposal."

Said another manager who was present at the meeting; "We will have to look elsewhere, that's all, we cannot afford such exorbitant prices."

"Legitimate" Lowers Price

Two of the local legitimate houses have lowered their prices during the past week. The Lyric has made their matinee prices ten cents for over five hundred seats and the front rows twenty-five cents. In the evening the prices are fifteen, twenty-five, thirty-five and fifty. The Majestic has lowered its top price for evening performances from seventy-five cents to fifty cents, and made a flat rate of twenty-five cents for all matinees.

It is the consensus of opinion that the motion picture has been the cause of this decrease. The Lyric has a stock company, while the Majestic shows the second-class productions, such as "Mutt and Jeff." "East Lynne."

The new Palace Theatre, on Shelton Square, will open in the picture until January 1. This theatre will cost $100,000, and will be controlled by the Mitchell H. Marx Realty Company, and managed by Harold Edel, in conjunction with the Strand, Buffalo.

The Regent is the first theatre in town to have girl ushers, and the idea is a popular one. The girls are much more polite than boys, and more reliable. This is just one of the "different" things at the Regent.

The crowds are thinning out at Shea’s Hippodrome. It is doubtful whether at twenty-five cents the present policy will succeed.

Capacity at the Regent

Manager Arthur C. Willats, of the new Regent Theatre, at the corner of Main and Utica streets, reports that during his opening week he has done capacity business. The Regent is one of Buffalo’s most beautiful houses. Mr. Henry Marcus and his orchestra are pleasing the audience with his excellent music programs. George Kleine’s "Spartacus" was booked for the Regent last week at no increase in prices.

The new uniforms on the ushers at the Strand Theatre are attracting much attention, for they are by far the most attractive in Buffalo. They are patterned after the West Point cadet uniform, which are brown in color, with black trimmings and rows of brass buttons.

Manager F. S. MacFadden, of the Allendale Theatre, has issued a local bulletin, which he distributes weekly in his territory. The little paper presents a very attractive appearance. He announces his policy in the first issue and invites local notices of interest which he will be glad to print.

New Organization Launched in Cincinnati

Name Will Be Selected Later On—Prominent Exhibitors Behind the Move—Bernardi Sells Out Interest

CINCINNATI, Oct. 6.

A new organization of "live-wire" exhibitors is being formed in this city for the purpose of co-operation, interchange of ideas and mutual progress and benefits.

As yet it is in a temporary form, although it is bound to become an important factor in the growth of the motion picture industry in Cincinnati, according to the men who are responsible for its being.

So far, they have established headquarters in the Savoy Hotel and held several meetings. The new organization is as yet without a name. Charles Weigel, manager of the Alhambra Theatre, is the temporary president. The object of the few exhibitors who have thus banded together is to compose their membership of high-class, and thoroughly representative motion picture men.

They must stand for everything that is progressive in the business. The membership to date comprises the following theatres and managers: Alhambra, Weigel and Harris; Orpheum, Hetzheimer; Nordland Plaza, Brown; Park and Northside theatres, Kruse; Park Theatre, Hyde Park, Stratton; Arcade and Burnett theatres, Avondale, Foster: Lyric, Covington, Ky., Marcus, E. P. Bernardi, manager of the Colonial Theatre, has sold out his interests to his partners, the Trask brothers, and is preparing to leave the city, to locate in San Francisco or soon after December 1.

Mr. Bernardi established the first motion picture house in Cincinnati eight years ago, and has been successfully engaged in the exhibitor’s end of the business here since.

Clay E. Brehm, who has been in charge of the local office of the World’s Special Films Corporation for three months, having succeeded G. J. Trask declares Cincinnati is fast becoming a live feature town.

Brehm less than a year ago placed the first feature in Cincinnati when he induced Manager Weigel of the Alhambra to show "Social Life in New York" and "Mysteries of Paris," in which Brehm himself appeared as a member of the acting cast. He is now enthusiastic over increased business. Exhibitors, he says, are taking well to the company’s new colored photo posters and large frames which are furnished with them to display five or six photos of the Schubert and Brady features in their lobbies.

"SHORE ACRES" FOURTH ALCO RELEASE

The fourth release of the Alco will be "Shore Acres," produced by the All-Star Feature Corporation. The scenario was written by Louis Reeves Harrison. There is a much larger scope for the screen version of Mr. James A. Herne's classic, through the ability of the All-Star being able to take the scenes in the exact locale of the story, Block Island off the New England Coast.

"Zudora" Is Next Thanhouser Serial

Marguerite Snow Will Be Heroine of Fascinating Oriental Tale to Succeed "$1,000,000 Mystery"—Goodman the Author, MacGrath the Novelist

"Zudora," another absorbingly interesting serial, is to be produced by the Thanhouser Film Corporation as successor to "The Million Dollar Mystery." Daniel Carson Goodman is the author of the new serial, which will be released in two-reel episodes, each of which will be a story complete in itself.

Harold MacGrath, who novelized "Kathlyn" and "The Million Dollar Mystery," will write the newspaper version of "Zudora." All the newspapers throughout the country now running the "Mystery" story have taken unto themselves the new serial. Dr. Goodman, through "The Escape," "The Battle of the Sexes" and a large number of other Broadway successes, has a definite value to the exhibitor booking Zudora.

Mr. MacGrath's name is so well known that it is an attempt to beautify the beautiful, to enlarge upon the merit all know is his possession. In Zudora will be more scenes than in all the plays of the Bard of Avon, a distinction in itself. The title of the first Episode gives an idea of the mystic theme on which Zudora is predicated. "The Mystic Message of the Spotted Collar" is the title of the first release. A cast of three principals will run through the twenty episodes, supported by one thousand people, a construction never before attempted in photoplay production or, for that matter, on the speaking stage.

Marguerite Snow, whose Countess Olga in "The Million Dollar Mystery," has cemented her in the hearts of a nation's motion picture fans, will play Zudora. She is wonderfully fitted for the role, which will give admirers the opportunity to see this young woman at her best, the role demanding the complete gamut of emotions and a more definite historic ability than is the usual requirement.

James Cruze, the reporter-hero in "The Million Dollar Mystery," will play Hassam Ali, a weird oriental character, around whose mysticism revolves much of the story. Harry Benham, whose

Cosmos Will Release Two Features a Month

Company Secures All of Beulah Poynter Productions—"Made in America" Name of New Brand Adopted by Producer

"Made in America," a label we are so anxious to see conspicuously displayed on the bulk of the merchandise of the world, will make its appearance on a new brand of feature film on October 13, when the Cosmos Feature Film Corporation releases the first of its bi-weekly American-made productions.

As renters of multiple reel subjects the company has been for a long time closely associated with the men in actual touch with the public and the announcement that they will produce an American feature regularly every two weeks, is significant as a summary of the market's trend.

Another point in the announced plans of the company is the selection of subjects. The first release will be an elaborate photoplay version of Beulah Poynter's dramatization of the extremely successful American play, "Lena Rivers," in which Miss Poynter is featured in the title role, the part she played in the stage production. This bill will be followed by "The Little Girl That He Forgot," "The Hoosier Schoolmaster," "A Thief in the Night," and other successful dramatic works of Beulah Poynter's, all of which have been secured by the Cosmos company; also many successful plays and novels, which contain a strong human interest appeal.

When possible, it is their intention to secure the services of the author or dramatist to assist in the film production and feature the same star that created the character on the stage.

It was in keeping with this plan that in contracting for Miss Poynter's plays, it was stipulated that she give her personal services and advice in the making of the photoplays, a condition Miss Poynter, enthusiastic in the art of photoplays, eagerly agreed to.

With the advent of the Cosmos' bi-weekly productions, the film industry will have added to it a regular brand of features, which, backed by the insight into the needs of the market held by this company, should do credit to the label, "Made in America."

work as a Thanhouser leading man is well known, will play John Storm, the young lover of Zudora. This newest of great serials will be presented by the Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation.

BUYS FEATURES FOR MIDDLE WEST

Alfred Hamburger, president of the Celebrated Players Film Company, accompanied by Felix F. Feist, its general manager, spent a week in New York recently buying feature pictures for the weekly release program recently launched by the Celebrated Players Film Company of Chicago, through its Middle West territory.

A string of newspapers throughout this section will carry a serial story of each of these releases operating in conjunction with the local theatres playing the Celebrated Program of weekly features.
WHAT ORGANIZATION MEANS TO EXHIBITORS

Theatre Managers Tell "The Motion Picture News" What They Consider the Essential Features and Duties of An Exhibitors' Body—Los Angeles Men Endorse League—Exhibitor Must Be Shown, Says Omaha Man—"Make Every League Man an Organizer."

Los Angeles, Oct. 5.

Motion picture exhibitors of this city—to judge from the expressions of a dozen or more—believe the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America will prove of great benefit to the business and serve to bring about certain standards and improvements All heartily endorse the action taken at the Dayton convention.

"We are all a little bit too selfish in respect to giving our time and attention to such an organization," W. H. Clune, of the Clune Amusement Company, told The Motion Picture News, "but I believe it should be national.

"A national, state and local organization of this character, all working together in harmony could work wonders."

When I entered the motion picture field here there was but one organization, the Theatrical Managers' Association, which was and is now affiliated with a national organization. I became a member of this and still attend meetings regularly.

"Any cooperation the members of this body have been successful in bringing about improvements in conditions, preventing injurious competition among ourselves, and so forth.

Co-operation in Emergencies.

"As all local theatres, with the exception of the Morocoo Burbank, show pictures—some regularly and others only when no other attraction is booked—the believe all managers could be induced to become members of a local branch of the exhibitors' league."

"In this state there is more or less jealousy between people of the north and south part, and there has been very little co-operation except when conditions were urgent."

"But let the conditions warrant prompt attention and the co-operation is a certainty, as was demonstrated recently when an ordinance was introduced in the city council to require the exclusion of all except licensed operators from the machine booths, and 60 per cent. of the exhibitors were present at the hearing to fight the measure. I will be glad to do my part for a national state, and local organization, free from politics and petty matters.

In the opinion of E. H. Emmick, manager of the Los Angeles Golden Gate Film Exchange, two meetings of the National League annually, one in the East and one in the West, would do much to create interest in the organization.

Conventions in East and West.

"We in California feel that we are a great distance from the conventions, and it is too expensive for many film men and exhibitors to attend the annual meetings," Mr. Emmick said.

"With two conventions, which could be made general condition conferences, fully twice as many could attend. Such a meeting would be of great aid to manufacturers and exhibitors generally, and the exhibitors particularly.

"Exchange men are the first ones sought when exhibitors have troubles, and it is no more than fair that film men be accorded membership—at least honorary memberships. In Los Angeles the exchange men have done more to regulate and aid the exhibitors than has the exhibitors' organization.

"Personally, and I believe everyone connected with the Golden Gate Exchange, from Sol Lesser down to the office help, agree with me, that the exhibitors' league has hit upon a surely successful educational campaign in securing The Motion Picture News to carry interviews from men in all parts of the country relative to needs for a bigger and better national and state organization."

To Fight Adverse Legislation.

"The necessity of organization in order to fight adverse local legislation in the state and the nation, should be sufficient basis of appeal to all exhibitors to unite with the nearest local organization of the exhibitors' league," Judge A. P. Tugwell, president of the Los Angeles exhibitors' organization, and a member of the executive committee of the national league, said when questioned.

With regard to representation in the national and, when possible, state and national organization, Mr. Tugwell believes the constitution adopted at Dayton fully and impartially regulates the matter.

"A plan the San Francisco exhibitors attempted to put into effect last winter, in order to increase the membership of the league there, might be used in modified form to increase the membership of the Exhibitors' League of America." The opinion of David Bershan, of the California Film Exchange, with offices at San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Phoenix, Arizona.

Mr. Bershan then explained that officers of the exhibitors' organization first secured the co-operation of all film exchange managers to the extent that the league was offered control of the rental of films.

"It was planned that only members of the league would then be eligible to rent films, thus forcing all to join."

"Every exhibitor should be a member of the league," said Mr. Bershan, and I believe the theatre men will find it to their advantage to have the co-operation, support and assistance of the exchange men in matters of many different character.

"The league should not be an organization holding meetings for the purpose of permitting exhibitors to air their jealousies and petty opinions pertaining to the business."

The League Must Show the Exhibitor Its Worth
Special to The Motion Picture News
Omaha, Neb., Oct. 5.

"The possibilities of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, would make a highly interesting story," declared Frank Harris, the former president of the state league, and manager of the Empress, the largest theatre that is showing a picture program in the State of Nebraska.

"Its functions and duties are manifold. In fact, it is all right now, only."

"And that is just the trouble with all new organizations. So many things connected with organizations and policies have to be met with. There is always a great deal of discouragement that is bound to come in the organization of any great movement."

The Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, in its national, state and local organizations, has an unlimited field of action. The organization of this institution and the bringing of it to its greatest efficiency can only be accomplished by profiting by the experience of some institutions that have gone before and proven successful.

"Before a complete success can be registered, some one thing must be done. This one thing can be anything that is of general importance. As soon as the league enters into a controversy or takes upon itself some of the troubles that are confronting the exhibitors in the country and succeed in definitely settling and winning for the exhibitors, some one big point, its greatest battle will be over."

"Then every little exhibitor in the country will be able to realize the advantage offered by being a member of this organization, and success will come a great deal easier than it is coming."

Advocates Paid Organizers

"It is my opinion that the best example to follow is that which was established by the labor unions of this country, and that paid organizers are essential. Men whose duty it is to gain new members and spread the bond of good fellowship and the necessary confidence of the exhibitors at large.

"The policy for the national league, in my opinion, is to endeavor to deal with, and help the manufacturers in obtaining an understanding with the exhibitors. Also to co-operate with any exhibitor or group of exhibitors or state league that is having trouble with antagonistic legislation.

"The state league should deal with antagonistic legislation and any troubles that may come between the exhibitors and the exchanges from which he gets his pictures and supplies.

"The local has an abundance of work and opportunities for co-operation in dealing with their individual members and obtaining more members. They also should endeavor to establish and maintain the highest possible standard of the picture business. As far as the national is concerned our members individually will contribute their good will and assistance in any movement which is toward the betterment of the league as a whole.

Big City Locals Must Lead

"The greatest good, however, can and must be accomplished in the states where there are more than 270 motion picture shows, as in Nebraska, and undoubtedly impetus to our organizations must come from the locals of the big city organizations, such as Chicago and New York.

"In Omaha there are only twenty-four exhibitors and these are of all classes possible. There is very little common ground on which to work.

"The day in which the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America will take a prominent position in the picture industry is very close at hand, is my opinion. The exhibitors shortly will come to see that it is to their greatest interest to unite and contribute their good will and difficulties collectively. The day when any petty police officer or bigoted police official will take it upon himself to impose his position on the small exhibitors, has passed. We undoubtedly could exert a powerful political influence if we chose to do so.

"Collectively our screen will reach more than any single newspaper in circulation in the world today.

"Make Every League Man an Organizer!"

Minneapolis, Oct. 6.

ELIMINATE the insincere exhibitor, make every member of the state organizations an organizer and then get all the live exhibitors that remain, into the fold.

This is in brief the way a wide awake exhibitor sees the way out for the state and national associations. The man is Charles E. Van Duze, proprietor of four houses in Minneapolis.

Mr. Van Duze is a man who has built up his business by hard study and hard work. He is the type of man who could best get along without the help of a state or national organization, yet he is the very man that has faith in them and believes they will become powers in their work.

"The state organization has been a vital help in my business and in the business of other members," said Mr. Van Duze. "The national organization must exist as a vital force to keep the motion picture business away from the control of politicians. Therefore, both must be improved until they approach the idea.

Exhibitors Blind to Interests

"Mental blindness in the exhibitor is one reason we have had such a fight for success. The motion picture field has too many fly-by-nights who want to get quick money and too many business cut-throats. The man who spends all his time trying to get the other fellow’s patrons and no time in making new patrons for films in general, has no place in this business. These we must eliminate. Then go after the wheat.

"The national league can be made the liveliest and most efficient business organization in the country if:

"Each member of a state organization will make himself an organizer and bring in one new member.

"Individual members will tell all the others every time they are benefited by the national or state order.

"Exhibitors will give the organizations more opportunities to show what they can do.

"If politics are eliminated from all branches of the exhibitors organizations.

"The business itself needs renovating and the personal side of the business must be emphasized," Mr. Van Duze believes. He believes that the basis of representation is not so much a factor as the interest that the individual exhibitor will take in the organization.

"Above all," said Mr. Van Duze, "show the organization respect when you speak of it either to other members or to outsiders. If a man is a member of an organization and knocks it, his friends will rightly think something is wrong with him.

"If you can’t find anything to boost in your organization, resign and do your knocking as an acknowledged foe. There is much for the organizations to do, much that they can do and will do if they have the chance. It is a business machine and if it is not used it becomes inefficient."

Individual Effort Important to Get Members

Louisville, Oct. 7.

"THE efficiency of the state organization will always depend on the activities of the officers thereof. Let me meet the officers of any state league and when I have had time to make an estimate of them and of their ability, I will be able to give you a pretty good idea of the kind of work they represent, is doing."

This is the keynote of the reply made by L. J. Ditmar, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Kentucky, when he was asked for his opinion, as to how the efficiency of state organizations of motion picture exhibitors might be best increased.

Competent State Heads

"Put competent men at the head of the state organizations, as the first move toward increasing association efficiency and the rest will to some extent take care of itself," he said.

"I do not mean to say, however, that all that has to be done to secure the success of a state organization is to merely secure competent and enthusiastic officers. The effort to line up every man in the state who is concerned in the exhibition of motion pictures should be continuous and unremitting.

"It sounds tried to say that in union there is strength, but it is true nevertheless. Any motion picture man who has ever been called on, for instance, to appear before a legislature where a bill was being considered knows how he was helped in his efforts if he happened to have a united body behind him.

"Even though he may want merely to point out the injustice of some bill which is likely to become law, the fact that he represents more than himself, or more than a small group gives added weight to his protests and gets greater consideration for what he may have to say.

Setting Program Length

"Then, there is the subject of length of program, and various other things of the sort, that may be settled only through agreement. I do not stand for a policy which forces a certain program standard on everyone; but I believe that a union movement in this direction can be secured without coercion. There is, in my opinion, no way to secure this end, other than through some central organization.

"State leagues are best financed by the assessment of dues. Representatives in the state legislative body are hardly necessary if the officers are of the proper caliber. Too many persons concerned in the work of the legislative body make for mere unwieldiness, and results are consequently slow.

"I believe that the financing of the national organization can be best done through a per capita tax collected through the state organizations. To such a fund would be added, of course, the profits from the annual exhibit in New York City."
RAISING THE ANTE BY TIMELY ADVERTISING

A RISE in the admission price from ten to twenty-five and fifty cents, with a packed house for every performance for three days, made a new record in the picture business in Boise, Idaho, and one which was accomplished by the Isis Theatre, under the management of David Farquhar.

Business and professional men and society women, who had never been in a motion picture theatre before saw the production, complimented the management and declared in the future they proposed to become regular patrons, as they had no idea that they were so real.

Mr. Farquhar advertised the production liberally through the press, by posters in vacant store windows and fancy cards in the hotel lobbies and banks.

In each case he mentioned the advanced price, citing the length of the reel, its cost of production and that the management proposed bringing the best pictures to Boise regardless of cost, if the people wanted such productions.

During the three days the picture was shown there was not a vacant seat in the house at any performance and so many were disappointed in not seeing the picture that it was re-engaged for three days the following week.

The film was secured through the Notable Film Company of Salt Lake City, of which Lou Marcus is manager and which is putting out the Paramount pictures. Beginning October 1, the Isis will run two big feature productions weekly of the Paramount pictures.

THREE-TIME WEEKLY CHANGE FINDS FAVOR

PROCTOR'S Leland is one of the first theatres in Albany, N. Y., to attempt a change of program three times weekly, instead of daily, and as a result is packing them in.

"The Fortune Hunter" drew such houses that it is believed the film will be called on for a return engagement. "Kit, the Arkansaw Traveler" was another winner, and Jack London's "The Valley of the Moon" turned them away.

Evidence which the three changes a week policy will remain at the Leland, and rumors say that there will be a twenty-five cent admission, in the near future, at the oldest show house in the city.

WINDOW DISPLAY OF PHOTOS DRAWS CROWDS

IT was proven recently that photographs of motion picture players placed in a window will attract more attention than anything previously tried. The experiment was made by the Sun Drug Company, with a number of stores at Los Angeles and at other coast cities, and by actual count more people stopped to see the display than were attracted by any other previous showing of any kind.

This has given local exhibitors a tip that it will be profitable for them to cooperate with drug and other store managers for showing of photographs in windows in exchange, possibly for screen advertising for their house in conjunction with the store showing the photographs.

The advantage of a window over a lobby, it is found, is that a more attractive showing can be made, and at the same time it is protected from theft or being injured by sun or rain. In addition, it gives the theatre additional display space, a thing that many exhibitors need but often cannot find.

SCREENING YOUR AUDIENCE

MAKING flash-light pictures of the audience, reducing them to stereopticon views which were projected on the screen, and then offering cash prizes for the first two people to recognize themselves, is a business-getting stunt invented and used by Manager F. O. Adler, of the Auditorium at Riverside, Cal.

"Did it bring business? Well, I guess it did!" the Riverside manager added after telling of the plan. "The flash-light views were made when the house was packed and I made pictures from several different angles so that the same faces would not show in more than one.

"Three dollars was the first prize and two dollars the second, and the night the pictures were made I told everyone in the audience what I was going to use them for. I believe 59 per cent. came back the three nights the stereopticon slides were shown. That's no exaggeration.

"The business was so good I am going to do it all over again, and that before many weeks have passed."

VIVIAN RICH PRESENTED WITH COLLIE

Two little admirers of Vivian Rich, the leading lady of Flying A studios, Effie and Georgia Johnson, presented her with a thoroughbred collie the other day.

Miss Rich, who is very fond of dogs, appreciates the gift. She has named her dog Guess. The collie is a beautiful specimen of his breed and has been greatly admired. Miss Rich takes keen delight in being asked the name of her new pet.

Without a smile she will say Guess, and of course the inquirer calls to mind every conceivable name. Not being successful the usual inquiry is "Well, what do you call him?" Miss Rich will then smile and say "Guess." The inquirer turns away with "I'm on."

ALCO PROVIDES MUSIC WITH FEATURES

The Alco Film Corporation have signed a contract with Professor Winkler, a well-known composer, whereby he will write special music for each film that is released through this exchange. The composer will have an opportunity to review the release several times, and will then write music descriptive of the story.

The first orchestration, that of "The Nightingale," in which Miss Ethel Barmore is starring, has been delivered to the Alco company.

Sawyer Release Full of Laughs

"Thirty Minutes in Melodrama," Second Production of Santa Barbara Company, Has Old Time Villain and "Villainess" Doing Funny Stunts

"THIRTY Minutes in Melodrama," the second production of the Santa Barbara Motion Picture Company, shortly to be released through Sawyer, Inc., is a novel two reel comedy.

The plot deals with an old-fashioned traveling melodrama troupe, which strike the town of Hickville. It is a scream from start to finish—a rip-roaring burlesque on the old time troopers that should be heartily welcomed in every picture house.

Particularly amusing are the company jealousies, displayed in scenes in the country hotel, and in the theatre dressing rooms. Next we see the audience watching the stage presentation "in three acts and eighteen scenes."

Every device used in old-fashioned melodrama is humorously exploited—

KANSAS CITY CENSORS HARKEN TO REASON

Appeal Members Reverse Unfavorable Decision of Censor Who HadRefused to Pass "Damaged Goods"

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 6.

The censor of the local bureau refused to pass the American Film Company's production of "Damaged Goods," the sociological play written by the Frenchman Brieux, when it was before him. Richard Bennett had performed the play at the Shubert Theater last spring, and practically no complaint was registered against it then.

The local censor board expects little trouble here as a result of the showing of war pictures. Fred F. McClure, the censor, announced a few days ago that he would not go to the extreme measures that had been taken in some of the Eastern cities in regard to these pictures.

"Any picture that might stir up real emotion and hatred would, of course, be condemned," he said. "But I do not anticipate such films."

Only one war film so far has been up for review. It showed the preparations of the Belgian and English troops to take the field, and was passed without comment.

One five-reel film, "Alone in New York," a white slave drama, was refused by the censor recently. Several other films of a similar nature had been refused previously.

The censor has passed the World Film Corporation's five-reel subject, "Mother," played by Emma Dunn, with the most laudatory comments, saying that similar pictures would always find a ready field in Kansas City.

Songs of the Last Decade for Pictures

NOTHING can get on one's nerves so much as the piano-player in the picture house who insists on playing (7) in the same key, the same tempo, and often the same selection through an entire reel. An exhibitor could get that kind of music from any automatic piano with the added advantage of slowing it up or vice versa, and even change the selection by substituting another roll.

Why an exhibitor should pay a salary to a pianist for that kind of "playing for the pictures" is a question many a suffering patron is trying to puzzle out. Certainly the box-office receipts are not swelled to any appreciable extent by any such music.

I spoke to a certain manager on the subject one evening, when he and I were standing to one side of the lobby, as the patrons were coming out. Two ladies and a gentleman in a party of six came over to where we were standing, and, addressing the manager, the gentleman acted as spokesman:

"Say, Dave," said he, "where did you get the 'jewel'? How many does that make? This last one would give a body the 'willies'."

The first part of the conversation was all Greek to me, and, as I was not the party addressed, did not pay much attention to it. But when Dave turned to me and said, "Here is a man, Mr. K—, who might be able to tell you, and I'll leave it to him," I was still in the dark. The situation was saved, however, by Mr. K— saying, "Why is it that Dave cannot get some one to play the piano who will at least try to fit his music to the pictures?"

"Blending with the Pictures"

It seems that this theatre up to a month previous had a piano player who seemed to have a selection for no matter what was shown on the screen and changed his tempo and varied his minor and major keys so obstructively that his music seemed "to blend with the picture," to use the manager's own words.

Salary was no object, and this last was the sixth attempt to get another player like him. The expression, "blend with the picture," interested me at once, and I got the manager to one side, and, believe me, he was in some fix. The audiences in his theatre were so used to having pictures "played up to," that he was up against it to get another player that would please them.

I have often contended that the old songs that "style of picture to sing" should be used wherever they would fit the picture, in preference to an instrumental selection. There was a man who used "She May Have Seen Better Days," "I'll Leave My Happy Home for You," "Hello, Old Abe, Give Me Heaven," "In the Gloaming," "Darling Nelly Grey," "Climbing Up the Golden Stairs," "Go In and Out the Window," "Bird in a Gilded Cage," "Moth and the Flame," and so forth.

Had His Music by Heart

His repertoire seemed boundless, and he knew by heart practically every song that had made a hit in the last twenty years, to say nothing of the Old Home Songs. He never used a light at the piano except when accompanying the singer, and while the pictures were on played entirely in the dark. It is too bad that there are so few pianists who render that style of picture playing. Too many depend on the so-called incidental music for the pictures" as published by Blank and Company.

In the article on this page of the September 26 issue of The Motion Picture News, by E. A. Allyn, he states that "Some day the music publishers will wake up to the fact that there are numerous picture theaters in the United States and that many employ pianists who are looking for music to fit the pictures. I am glad that some one has come forward and advocated what has been lacking ever since music was insisted on for an accompaniment for the pictures.

It could mention over one hundred songs and melodies that, though old, would be immediately recognized by the average audience and would be appreciated, if rendered to any special scene of a picture where they would fit in.

Some Old Favorites

For instance: "Hello, My Baby," making appointment for elopement by telephone; "I'll Leave My Happy Home for You," or "Go In and Out the Window," if dropping through a window; for trouble in the house, "She Was Happy Till She Met You," or "You'll Be Sorry Just Too Late." How many think of using the old songs, "Comrades," or "Sweet Marie," or "Daisy, Daisy?"

If you want to please an audience, give them what will appeal to the most of them. By playing a late hit you appeal to a few, or by request you may play the latest musical comedy hit, but for the pictures use a good old song wherever possible. Use "On The Banks of the Wabash," "Old New Hampshire Home," "After the Ball," "Little Brown Jug," "Pop! Goes the Weasel," "Just as the Sun Went Down," "Just Break the News to Mother," and others.

Bring in the old songs as well as the new and you'll have your audiences with you. Now, don't misunderstand me, and think that you should cut out the up-to-date popular songs and dances, entirely; but do not limit your stock-in-trade to only the tunes that the younger element is whirling. Always remember that the average audience is composed mostly of grown folks and even a few old ones, who would greatly appreciate hearing a melody that was associated with their youth.

If you have music use the best of the kind that your particular patronage demands. This is the music motto of P. F. Schwie, manager of the Lyric Theatre, 720 Hennepin avenue, Minneapolis.

Leonard Abrahams, of the Life Photo Film Corporation, has just returned from a trip through the Middle West, where he has closed out eleven states on the last two releases of the Life Photo Film Corporation's "Northern Lights" and "Captain Swift.

Mr. Abrahams at the same time exhibited the pictures to the various censor boards in the territory covered by them, and found no difficulty in having them passed without cutting, except in Chicago, where the censor eliminated from "Northern Lights" three scenes, from "Captain Swift" two scenes, and changed one title in "Captain Swift."

This is considered quite an achievement in view of the known severity of the Chicago censor board.

New York League President Answers Charge

A. N. Wolff Declares There Is No Truth in the Accusation That He Neglected His Duty in Not Calling Fusion Meeting

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 7.

PRESIDENT A. N. WOLFF, of the New York state branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America was highly incensed and indignant over the report printed in the New York papers of the statement issued from the headquarters of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Greater New York, at the Hotel Marlborough-Blenheim, New York City.

The report charged him with neglect of duty in failing to call a meeting of the state branch to promote the amalgamation of the regular body with the men who bolted the organization some time ago.

The statement says that strenuous efforts have been made to bring about an amalgamation of all exhibitors in accordance with the spirit of the resolution passed at the last national convention at Dayton, and that the reason no definite results have been accomplished is to be found in the attitude of Mr. Wolff.

The statement goes on to say that the officers and many members of the New York state league, and the executive committee of the New York state association, have requested Mr. Wolff to call a meeting of the association to carry out the work of amalgamation, and to hold an election of officers of the combined organizations.

Mr. Wolff has turned a deaf ear to these requests, and, the statement says, the work of organization in this state is at a standstill until such a meeting can be held. It is said that steps are being taken by the members to call a special meeting, under the bylaws.

The correspondent of The Motion Picture News called on Mr. Wolff here to reply to this statement. Mr. Wolff made his attitude clear in a few words. He pointed out that the resolution at Dayton agreed to receive the bolers from the M. P. E. L. of A., as soon as they made application, individually, for reinstatement, accompanying their applications with their dues for three months in advance.

"It was agreed that no initiation fee should be charged, but that the privilege of returning to the fold without initiation fee should expire on November 1. This has never been questioned. "The New York state branch stands ready to receive the former members on the terms mentioned in the Dayton resolution," said Mr. Wolff. "It is all very simple. All the former members have to do is to apply for reinstatement, accompanying their applications with their dues, and they will be received. "That is what the league agreed to do, and the officers stand ready to do it. I do not see how we can be asked to do more. The Ohio state organization at its recent meeting endorsed the stand I have taken in the matter, and I am very grateful for the support accorded me," concluded President Wolff.

Manufacturers Will Hold Exposition Meeting

Motion Picture Trades Association Sends Out Call for Conference on October 20 to Perfect Plans for Next Exposition Under Their Auspices—Officers for Ensuing Year and Permanent Committees Will Be Elected—General Interest in Plan Is Already Manifest

The plans of the Motion Picture Trades Association for an exposition to be held under the auspices of that body are being rapidly pushed. As stated during the latter part of August, a large meeting, to which all manufacturers are invited, will be held on the 20th of October, for the purpose of considering the plan. A letter has been sent to manufacturers of films and accessories, calling attention to this gathering, which will take place at the Hotel Wellington, New York City.

The present officers are: F. J. Rembush, president; Carl Anderson, vice-president; W. A. Johnston, treasurer; A. H. Byrd, secretary.

Officers and directors for the ensuing year will be elected at the meeting of October 20, necessary committees appointed, and a permanent organization effected. General interest is being manifested in the association and their plans for a manufacturers' exposition. A large and representative attendance at the October meeting is expected.

Ask Trade's Co-operation

Dear Sir: This letter is of considerable importance. Will you kindly read it through carefully, and let us have your reply at once?

You have undoubtedly heard of the movement among the manufacturers to control and conduct the next national exposition of this industry.

This movement has now taken a concrete start, and awaits your active co-operation.

For your information, the history of the movement is briefly as follows:

It started definitely at Dayton, Ohio, at the time of the exposition there in July last. General dissatisfaction was expressed by the manufacturers present over the lack of attendance, space charges, general expense, etc. This feeling was greatly aided by the previous and utter failures of the Toronto and Wilkes-Barre expositions. Moreover, even in the case of the two largely attended New York exhibitions of 1913 and 1914, it was felt that the manufacturers had been charged an unnecessarily high rental for floor space.

The Beginnings at Dayton

In other industries, notably the automobile and electrical trades, the manufacturers hold their national shows with all around success, and with the important result that previous floor rentals were more than cut in two.

With these ideas in mind, those manufacturers who were exhibiting at Dayton, or their representatives, met spontaneously in several meetings, during which a preliminary organization was formed, temporary officers elected and an assessment of $10.00 levied upon each member for preliminary expense.

The committee on organization consulted with Job E. Hedges, of New York City, who had organized with success the Automobile Accessory Dealers' Association, and upon Mr. Hedges' advice, application was made for a charter under the Membership Corporation Laws of the State of New York. These laws are designed especially for mutual benefit associations, and are distinct from the ordinary corporation laws of a commercial or industrial character.

The name, "Motion Picture Trades' Association" was decided upon, a charter was secured, and a constitution and by-laws were adopted. The association is therefore now a corporate body, ready to do business. Nothing further than this has been done or determined upon.

The comparatively few men active in the movement thus far would have appreciated your help from the beginning, but some one had to start the matter, and they feel that what has been done so far will meet with your approval. All minutes and papers are open for your inspection.

Meeting Called for October 20

You are urgently asked to attend the first annual meeting, which will be held on October 20, 8 p.m., at the Hotel Wellington, Seventh avenue and Fifty-fifth street, New York City, where the management has gratuitously offered a large room for our use.

At this meeting, regular officers will be elected, committees appointed, and a general organization effected. Membership is limited to one member for each firm. You or your representative will have equal voice with all other firms in the organization and management of this association.

The general idea is to divide pro rata the profits of the show among those manufacturers who exhibit, thus reducing the floor rentals. However, this and other important matters will be discussed and decided upon at the meeting.

Kindly write at once to the address above, of your ability to be present at the October 20 meeting. Your suggestions are invited.

Respectfully yours,

MOTION PICTURE TRADES' ASSOCIATION, INC.

Famous Players Ready With New Dramas

Company's Second Quarterly Release Through Paramount Will Have Striking Array of Distinguished Legitimate Stars

IMPORTANT as was the first three months' program of the Famous Players Film Company released through Paramount Pictures, the second section of that program contributed by the Famous Players even surpasses the former galaxy of celebrated stars and plays in degree of national prestige and popularity.

The program for December, January and February reveals for the first time the fact that the Famous Players Film Company had induced Florence Reed, one of the most prominent of the younger stars of the day, to appear before its camera in her first film characterization, "The Dancing Girl," the famous emotional drama by Henry Arthur Jones. Florence Reed has just attained a great personal triumph in "The Yellow Ticket," "The Crucible," by Mark Lee Luther, starring Marguerite Clark in her second film characterization for the Famous Players, and the much discussed production of Wilson Barrett's sublime drama, "The Sign of the Cross," which is at present creating a furor in England.

This array of well known plays includes a wide variety of subjects which have a general appeal.

Mary Pickford is represented on the program by a subject entitled "The Step Sister," which, it is intended, will cause a genuine surprise, and by the charming romantic play "Mistress Nell." "The Million," Henry W. Savage's great comedy triumph, is also scheduled for forthcoming release, presenting Edward Abelles in the principal role.

The program further includes: "The Conspiracy," a triumph of the last theatrical season, with John Emerson, its author, in his original role; "The Crucible," by Mark Lee Luther, starring Marguerite Clark in her second film characterization for the Famous Players, and the much discussed production of Wilson Barrett's sublime drama, "The Sign of the Cross," which is at present creating a furor in England.

This array of well known plays includes a wide variety of subjects which have a general appeal.
MARGUERITE CLARK RE-EN-GEARED FOR "THE CRUCIBLE"

Marguerite Clark, whose initial appearance in motion pictures will be made in the next release of the Famous Players Film Company, "Wildflower," has been re-engaged by that company to appear in a screen version of Mark Lee Luther's powerful story, "The Crucible," which is to be a subsequent Famous Players' release.

The charm and sincerity which Miss Clark infused into the bewitching role of "Wildflower" indicated her unusual value as a screen artiste, and resulted in her re-engagement by the Famous Players for several other characterizations.

Best Season Yet Is Outlook in Northwest

Less Vaudeville and Fewer "Legitimate" Attractions to Compete with Motion Pictures in Principal Cities from Butte to Portland

Spokane, Oct. 5.

MOTION picture theatres in the Northwest, particularly those showing feature films, may expect the best season in years, according to the belief of Spokane exhibitors.

The principal reason for this opinion is that the number of "legitimate" road attractions through this section this year will probably be smaller than ever before, leaving the vaudeville houses as the only opposition for the film theatres.

Even the vaudeville shows will be less "legitimate," because the Orpheum circuit has withdrawn its attractions from all cities in the American and Canadian Northwest except Seattle.

War conditions have made Northwestern Canada far from a fruitful field for the big road shows. Formerly, many of these have made the swing around through Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver, Spokane, Seattle, Portland and other Northwest cities, and have found the pickings good. Now, Spokane, Seattle and Portland are the only ones which can be depended on for crowds. East of here, in Montana, things are worse than in Canada. Labor troubles and closing of the smelters have hurt theatrical business for Butte, Great Falls and other cities.

People are coming to depend on getting their plays in picture form. The Empress, newly opened with Brady, Shubert and Klav and Erlanger productions, is doing well, and the Paramount pictures at the Clem, which are to be transferred to the new Clemmer on its opening, have pulled capacity. The other picture theatres are reflecting the good business which is now under way.

THEODORE ROBERTS IN "THE ROSE IN THE RING"

On the first quarter of the Paramount program, the Jesse L. The second quarter of the Paramount program begins December 1, and the first release of the Jesse Lasky Company in this quartet will be the "Ghost-breaker," with H. B. Warner and Rita Stanz, and following this will come "The Man From Home," with Charles Richman, produced in association with the Lieber Company.

A Lack of Harmony
Editor, Motion Picture News,
New York City.

Dear Sir: Strenuous efforts are being made in this state to bring about an amalgamation of all exhibitors in accordance with the spirit of the letter of the resolution passed at the last national convention at Dayton.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Greater New York has held several informal meetings with representatives of the Cinema Club, which forms a part of the membership of the league. The reason that no definite results have been accomplished so far is to be found in the attitude of A. N. Wolff, president of the New York state branch of the M. P. E. L. of A.

Mr. Wolff has been requested by officers and numerous members of the New York state league and also the executive committee of the New York state association to call a meeting to carry out the work of amalgamation and hold an election of officers for the combined organizations. To this request Mr. Wolff has turned a deaf ear, and as far as is known has assigned no reasons for his refusal to act.

This is what is called, the work of organization in this state is practically haulted and there is no strong united body of exhibitors such as would benefit the exhibitors throughout the state.

Schemes are now being taken to propose to the members of the state league to exercise their right under the by-laws permitting them to call a special meeting in case the president refuses to do so upon reasonable requests.

Agitation looking toward the accomplishment of this end has been started in this city and it is believed that the national president is in favor of such a move, as it would undoubtedly contribute towards the clearing of a situation which all exhibitors feel is beginning to weaken the league.

During his recent stay in New York this fact was greatly emphasized by the national officers who went on record as saying that the rest of the country looked to New York as an example of peace, harmony and amalgamation.

Yours very truly,
Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Greater New York, Marlborough-Blenheim Hotel, Broadway and Thirty-sixth street, New York City.

Film Accidents as “News Stories”
October 7, 1914
Editor, Motion Picture News,
New York City.

Dear Sir:—Why is it that the companies manufacturing films which are attended by unusually hazardous feats, endangering life and limbs and sometimes the lives of the performers, never advertise the fact?

What I am getting at is this: When the Annette Kellermann pictures were shown in this state, the newspapers would have been glad to make news of the fact that Miss Kellermann and her partner were almost killed on one occasion.

Of course, some of the Eastern papers carried the story, but out here “in the provinces” where there are unnumerable thousands of people who daily and nightly go to the pictures there was not a word printed of the danger.

Again, there is the picture “Through the Clouds.” Over a year ago, in a London magazine, I saw a long article which set forth the dangers that beset the young woman in particular when she went into the clouds after her father had been captured by the bandits. Did the newspapers of this section have a line about it? They did not. Did any of the motion picture houses which showed the picture in this section tell about it? They did not.

Don’t you know that people would pack these places if they could see where actual danger was being undergone? Just try it once and see.

Very truly yours,
A First Run Patron.

Essonay Not Caught by War

While some film companies have been caught short by the big war, up to the present time the Essanay company has done a brisk business in Europe. Thus far the shipping department of the company has not missed a single foreign shipment, and the average number of Essanay sales abroad compare favorably with the business done before the declaration of hostilities. Harry A. Spoor, manager of Essanay's European office, in a recent letter from the London office, says:

“Your promptness in shipping prints in connection with the present war is remarkable. We have not been held up on a single film, and are doing just as big a business as ever.

Opera for the Screen
Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 7
Editor, The Motion Picture News,
New York City.

Dear Sir: Apparently the film producer is passing up no chances that might lead to the dramatization of acceptable stage stories. That is evidenced by the recent rapid growth of the five and six-reel features of all descriptions.

And to the average observer, it would seem that every field offering interesting drama is being worked by the producer.

But, I want to suggest a new one, the staging of the stories of the grand operas. At a first glance, it would seem that the lack of action in an opera would militate against its use for the films. But upon reading the stories themselves, one will see readily that opera is not actionless—one will see that it is crowded with dramatic incidents, situations and actions that could easily be produced for the camera.

Take a few of them, for instance, “Faust,” “Carmen,” “Rigoletto,” the Wagnerian productions. None of them would make, perhaps, more than two reels, but my point is that they would be intensely gripping and would draw well.

Much has been said about putting the motion picture on a higher cultural plane and that is being achieved with startling rapidity.

And what, I’ll ask, would do this more than the filming of the famous operas of the world?

A Film Fan.

Two More Oz Pictures Completed

“The Magic Cloak of Oz” and “His Majesty the Scarecrow of Oz” Founded on Incidents in the Baum Stories

Los Angeles, Oct. 5.

During the last week the producing company at the Oz studio took up the filming of a comedy drama, “The Last Egyptian,” from the novel by L. Frank Baum, which was filmed under the personal direction of Mr. Baum and Charles Hayden, and is the fourth release of this company.

The producing company has now completed, in addition to “The Patchwork Girl of Oz” released through the Paramount Picture Corporation, two other pictures from the Baum fairy tales, “The Magic Cloak of Oz” from the fairy story, “Queen Xizi of IX,” and “His Majesty, the Scarecrow of Oz,” being a collection of incidents from several of the Baum stories.

In these productions Violet MacMillan, who played the part of Dorothy in the original stage production of “The Wizard of Oz,” and Ojo in the Patchwork film version, is featured. Fred Woodward, the animal impersonator, is seen as the “mewel,” alligator and cow in “The Magic Cloak,” and as the lion, “sawhorse,” mule, kangaroo, crow and cow in “The Scarecrow.”

The name role in “The Scarecrow of Oz” is played by Frank Moore, who was featured in the stage production of Mr. Baum’s “Tick Tock Man of Oz.”

The members of the producing company which filmed “The Patchwork Girl of Oz,” and officers and all stockholders and their families, attended the Alhambra theatre after the completion of the picture. A section was reserved for them at the initial performance. For the week, L. F. Gottschalk, who wrote the music to accompany the picture, was in charge of the ten-piece orchestra.

Each evening, after having spent two weeks rehearsing the musicians. Mr. Gottschalk is composer of the music for “The Wizard of Oz” and “The Tick Tock Man of Oz,” both of which have been very successful.

It is said that these releases are better than the first.

TWO NEW COMPANIES JOIN ALCO PROGRAM

B. A. Rolfe Photo Productions and Tiffany Motion Picture Corporation Take Place of Excelsior Feature and the Favorite Players

The Alco Film Corporation, the announcement of which, several weeks ago created a distinct impression in the motion picture field, now announces that through a series of eliminations and additions, its program is complete, and work has begun on five distinct productions, one each, of the various allied producing concerns whose products constitute the Alco program.

Since the previous announcement, the Alco states that the products of the Excelsior Feature Film Company and the Favorite Players Film Company have been eliminated from the program, and the creations of the B. A. Rolfe Photo Productions, and the Tiffany Motion Picture Corporation have taken their place.

Mr. Rolfe, considered by many as the most artistic and best quality producer of the high-class variety stage, will in the future devote his entire time to the photo plays.

The Tiffany Motion Picture Corporation composed of prominent and recognized men of the industry, announce that their first production will be the eminent dramatic actress, Leslie Carter, in her best-remembered stage triumph, “The Heart of Maryland.” They will send Miss Carter and her company of supporting players to Shenandoah, Virginia, where the principal scenes of the production will be staged, and which vicinity is the original locale of this famous Belasco piece.

Walter Hoff Seely, executive head of the Alco concern, says that the response to the Alco policy is more satisfactory than even the most sanguine member of the corporation had hoped. From all the United States and the Latin American countries, has resulted in a compact mass of contracts that portend a most satisfactory launching of the Alco system when the first release occurs.

Mr. Rolfe announces that he has secured sufficient plays and novels to carry his company over a course of eighteen months.

The California Motion Picture Corporation has forwarded the print of “Salomy Jane” to the New York head-quarters, and a private showing of it was given in the ball room of the Ritz Carlton Hotel, to many of the executive and directorate staff of the Alco Corporation.

All in all the Alco Film Corporation comes into the market with the absolute certainty of an excellent start. Its standard of productions and the asserted fact that they contemplate “a live and let live” policy with the exhibitor puts them on an easy-to-reach basis.

UTICA MANAGERS FORM BRANCH ASSOCIATION

Utica, N. Y., Oct. 7.

The “legitimate” and motion picture houses at Utica, N. Y., have organized the United Managers’ Protective Association, of which there is a national body.
In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

Los Angeles, Oct. 5.

D O T FARLEY wrote a scenario for a comedy drama, "Matilda's Battle With Cupid," which was produced last week at the Albuquerque studio under the direction of Director G. P. Hamilton. This picture consists of one reel, in which Matilda, a maiden aunt, attempts to protect her two attractive nieces from the men. The scenes are all taken in and out of Matilda being the owner and forewoman of a big ranch. One of the big spectacular scenes is the stampede of more than two hundred head of cattle.

Archer McLellan, comedy producer for the Albuquerque, has finished filming a one reeler, "Two Much Pants," in which the large and small, the fat and lean, all become mixed, when a dog steals trousers from a clothes line, in a neighborhood quarrel, which ends lovely. The comedy company consisted of Anna King, Eva Thatcher, Buck Conners, George Cummings, William Brown, and Raymond Zell.

Louis Fitz Roy, who has been connected with the Richard Willis Publicity Bureau, is now a member of the Albuquerque staff, and in addition to playing parts of importance has charge of the employment of extra people. Fitz is a "showman" of years of experience, and has been connected with several local picture companies in addition to many years of trooping.

The most recent organization to begin operations in Los Angeles is the Rolin Film Company, composed of H. E. Roach, president and general manager; Dwight Whitting, vice-president, and D. A. Linticum, secretary and treasurer, incorporated under the laws of California, with a capital of $10,000, all of which has been paid in.

The company has contracts with Sawyer, Inc., of New York, for release of comedies, and recently filmed a one-reeler, "A Barber for a Day," which is a laughmaking burlesque on a correspondence school woman barber.

Will Be Agents for Sawyer

The directing was in charge of H. E. Roach, formerly with the Universal and Paramount. In addition to making comedies the company will act as Western agents for Sawyer in the purchase of films manufactured by companies not having a regular release.

Among the members of the producing company are Harold Lloyd, Gene Marsh, Martha Mattox and James T. Kelly. The company has rented offices at the Los Angeles Film Corporation studio, 406 Court street.

The first picture of the Masterpiece Film Corporation, "The Hoosier Schoolmaster," featuring Max Fiegnan and Lolita Roberters, was recently completed and given screen examination at the studio. The picture consists of five reels and will be released October 19.

Veterans of the Southern California soldiers' home at Sawtell, near the Santa Monica canyon studio of the New York Motion Picture Company were the first to see the seven reel feature of this company, featuring W. S. Hart, the picture being projected at the Home.

So that all soldiers who took part in the big scenes could see what kind of actors they really were.

The story for this picture is by Richard V. Spencer and the scenario by Thomas H. Ince, and more than half of the scenes are laid in the Grand Canyon of Arizona. Just what title the picture will be released under has not been announced.

For the producing company the picture was known as "The Bargain," but this has now been changed to "Two Gun Man." All of the scenes were produced under the personal supervision of Mr. Ince, who, with a company of twenty-five players, camp helps, carpenters, and stage hands spent six weeks in the Grand Canyon early this summer.

The company experienced many hardships in reaching the desired locations, all of which are north from El Tovar Hotel, seldom frequented by visitors.

W. S. Hart will be remembered as star of "Trail of The Lonesome Pine." George Osborn is absent from his duties at the N. Y. Santa Monica studio, because of a recent fire which destroyed several of the buildings on his raised ranch near Pantages.

George Beban, celebrity of the spoken drama and vaudeville, famous for his character impersonation of an Italian in his sketch "The Sign of the Rose," was an arrival at Inceville recently, the name now given to the New York Motion Picture Company studios near Santa Monica, where he is playing the name part in a multiple reel feature produced under the personal direction of Thomas H. Ince, which has been named "The Italian." The scenario for this picture was written by Mr. Ince and C. Gordon Sullivan.

George Beban at High Salary

Among photoplayers it is stated that Mr. Beban is receiving the greatest salary ever paid an actor or actress to appear before a motion picture camera—at least on the west coast—and that the weekly stipend is three or four times four figures. The engagement was made with Mr. Beban, by Mr. Ince, after the actor had refused offers of a number of photoplayer producers.

"The Master of the House," was recently produced by Richard Stanton, who played the lead at the Inceville studio near Santa Monica. The scenario was by Messrs. Ince and Sullivan, and is considered one of the best short subjects undertaken by this company.

This picture is of a semi-western character, in which a mining magnate is humiliated by the pseudo-rich of New York, is wrung by the girl he wed's, and suffers indignities until he returns to his western home where he becomes master of the house.

Exceptionally Fine Settings

The settings are exceptional and Mr. Stanton selected a cast of the most prominent players of the studio.

Mr. Hamilton is of the belief that the organization will result in the various producing companies uniting for the erection of one big studio for the use of all, and as the atmospheric conditions about Los Angeles are the best, and scenes here accommodate producers with almost anything desired, it is very probable the studio, if built, will be located here.

Hypnotism formed the basis for a comedy plot used by Ford Sterling for a picture produced last week, entitled, "The Hypnotist." The gifted lover (Ford Sterling) of the beautiful woman (Emma Chifton) is taught the science and uses it on his rival.
While the rival is unconscious, the new hypnotist throws him in the ocean and secures the girl. Bubbles coming to the surface are seen by the professor of hypnotism who brings the unconscious man to the surface and then in the words of Sterling, "there is von awful chase."

Henry Otto Goes to the American

Henry Otto, who has been producing for the Santa Barbara Motion Picture Company, releasing through Sawyer, for the past few weeks, is now with the American Company and will produce comedies and dramas of one and two reels.

The leads for this new company will be Winifred Greenwood and Ed. Coxen, supported by George Fields, heavy John Stepping, characters, Charlotte Burton, ingenue, William Burton, assistant director, and Tom Middleton, cameraman.

Mr. Otto is one of the most popular photolayers in California, and until recently was secretary of the Photo-layers Club of this city. He was formerly with Selig, Universal, and produced his best pictures while with the Balboa Company where he made "The Will o' the Wisp" and several other very notable pictures.

One of the notable coming releases for Sawyer, made in California, is that of "Cain and Abel," with Page Peters and Jack Wilson in the name roles and Matty Martin playing the part of the woman.

The picture is of two reels, with sixty-two different exterior locations in the wild country along the ocean north of Santa Barbara. The costume for Cain consisted of black bear skin and for Abel a leopard skin. The woman wore a primitive costume of ferns, ivy and the proverbial fig leaves.

This is an allegorical picture showing the passions of men, the woman personifying love, and the sub-titles consisting of Love, Jealousy, Envy, Hate, etc. The scenario is by Henry Otto who directed the production.

Charles Clary, cast for the part of Father Kelly, in the Selig production of the Rowland and Clifford play, "The Rosary," was tutored by two local priests in matters pertaining to Catholicism, and proper manerisms of priests. The film version is a very broad character sketch showing the life of the Father from boyhood—when he renounced his sweetheart for the church—to old age.

Fearing an accident would befall Louis Scherer, in charge of securing locations for the fifteen producing companies of the Universal studios, because of his speedy driving, Manager Isadore Bern-stein recently had him exchange the high power car he was using for one with a speed of fifteen or twenty miles per hour.

But Scherer had the "new" car overhauled and it now throws sand at most of the larger ones of the company's garage. As a result, Scherer has had two turnovers during the past week, but he climbed out from under the machine in each instance with but a few minor bruises.

James Dayton, head of the Universal scenario department, is again at his desk after an absence of two weeks caused by a nervous breakdown. For the past several months Mr. Dayton worked day and night in order to keep up with the producing companies. This proved too strenuous for the writer and his two weeks' illness resulted. Mr. Dayton writes, on the average, four scenarios a week.

No Fatal Results in Auto Accident

"The Fatal Marriage" is the third release of the L. K. O. brand, filmed under the direction of Henry Paulski, and containing some exceptional auto racing performed by Lew Carter, a professional driver of ten years' experience. Twice the big racing car turned over with Carter when he attempted to make right angle turns while going at forty or fifty miles an hour, but in neither instance was he seriously injured.

Announcement of great interest to users of General program is soon to be made by the Selig Poloroscope Company, relative to wild animal pictures. For the past several weeks the six companies at the Selig Jungle Zoo have been filming single reel subjects, which will be released as part of the regular program, at regular rates.

All Selig wild animal pictures of the past have consisted of more than one reel and have been rented at feature prices. Six wild animal pictures have now been filmed, which include "An Incident of the Jungle," and "The Rajah's Vacation," produced by Manager Thomas Persons of the Zoo.

"Neida" is the title of a one-reel picture produced recently by Harry Pollard, of Flying A studio, at Santa Barbara. Margarita Fischer, plays the lead and as a result of barefoot running and jumping in the wilds of San Marcus Pass, where the exteriors were made, the actress is sunburned, scratched and is suffering from stone bruises—the same kind that troubled Skinny.

Joe Harris plays the character part in this picture, which portrays the life of a child of the rocky wastes.

Production of series number eleven of "The Trey O' Hearts" was begun last Saturday by the U Gold Seal Company, directed by Wilfred Lucas. Up to this time the players have tried every conceivable stunt for a thrill and as they near number thirteen they are prone to become superstitious and wonder what the author, Joseph Louis Vance, and scenario editor, Bess Meredith, have in store for them.

George Larkin is just now beginning to feel himself again after two weeks' daily treatment by an osteopath, made necessary by bruises received when he hit the ocean after a leap from the mast of an old ship in San Pedro harbor, a distance of more than seventy-five feet.
he returns the poodle he becomes the star boarder and the janitor loses his job.

Faust Second Child Drama

The Faust Photoplay Company, with studio at Alhambra, Cal., is now having costumes and props made and collected for a second child picture, to be directed by Charles J. Wilson, producer of "Jess of the Mountain Country," released through the World Film Corporation.

In the coming picture, which will consist of several reels, Edna Mae Wilson, the seven-year-old daughter of the director, who played the name role in the first picture, will be featured. Little Miss Wilson is the youngest star of the legitimate stage in America, having played the name role in Francis Wilson's "The Bachelor's Baby" before she was three years old.

Later she played the part of Delsy in Lawrence Eyre's "The Things That Count," and Dorothy in the K. & E. production of "The Sign of the Rose."

Frank Montgomery, who has served as director for 101 Bison, Universal, and until recently with the Kalem company at Glendale, has secured a release through Sawyer, Inc., and has begun producing at the NorBig commercial studio on Allesandro street.

Mr. Montgomery's contract calls for three thousand feet weekly, and these will consist of two reels of Indian drama in which Princess Mona Darkfeather (Mrs. Montgomery) will be featured, and one reel of comedy produced by J. Davis.

The Indian pictures will be released as The Darkfeather Features and the others as Monty Comedies. These two companies and that of Carly Blackwell's Favorite Players at the NorBig studio make it a very busy place.

Across the street Mac Sennett, Charlie Chaplin, Mack Swain, Reub Miller, Roscoe Arbuckle and Mable Normand direct Keystone Comedies. One block in the other direction is the Selig Edendale studio, where Colin Campbell and E. J. LaSaint and players are busy all the time. This is truly Los Angeles' busiest filming district.

"One Traveler Returns" is the title of a one-reel picture being made at the Selig studio under the direction of E. J. LaSaint. It is a story of a jealous woman and her attempts to seek revenge on the man who married another. Stella Razeto plays the lead.

Bessie Eyton in "Unrest"

Thomas Santschi last week directed the filming of a two reel psychological picture from scenario by W. E. Wing, entitled "Unrest," which features Bessie Eyton. It is a story of the life of a son of the rich who tries to secure pleasure. A sensational auto race and a marvelous rescue from the sea constitute part of the punch of this picture.

Tom Mix, manager and director of the Selig company at Glendale, making western drama, has been advised to curb his attempts for realistic scenes, and in the future not to endanger the lives of his people or himself. Recently, Mix, with a steel plate inside his shirt, had one of the men shoot a hole in a star he was wearing while playing the part of a western sheriff.

In another instance he had bullets shot past his head in order that pictures could be secured of the missiles raising his hair. His latest stunt resulted in painful injury. He rolled down a very steep incline and a dozen or more deep gashes were cut in his legs by the sharp rocks.

The dock and water scenes for the

Since originating the part of sheriff Mr. Mackley has played in almost two hundred subjects, averaging one thousand feet each, and appearing in about half of the scenes. With sixteen pictures to each foot, his face appears in a total of 1,600,000 motion pictures.

"Now, as to popularity," Mr. Mackley said with a sly smile, "each picture lives about two hundred days, and is shown on the average of four times daily, or eight hundred times.

Some Tall Figuring

"That being the case my million and six hundred thousand pictures have been projected eight hundred times, and there are probably sixty prints of each, making a grand total of 76 trillion, eight hundred million pictures projected on the screen. My star surely is as well known as Roosevelt's teeth and glasses, by this time.

Another newspaper story of two reels, "The Floating Call" is being filmed under the direction of Fred A. Kelsey, at the R-M studio, in which Irene Hunt is being featured as "Helen of the Horseshoe" playing the part of a sob sister.

Miss Hunt recently played such a role in "For the Last Edition." Other members of the cast for this picture are Ralph Lewis, George Siegmann, Vesta Perry, W. E. Lawrence and Robert Burns and the scenario is by Russell E. Smith.

Following the custom of English speaking drama, producers and officers of the Reliance and Majestic companies are developing types of their players. Eugene Pallette, has been assigned to the part of cigar maker, P. A. Turner, that of father, Sam De Grasse as detective, and so on through the entire stock company of the studio.

Mr. Pallette is now being featured in "A Woman Scorned," a two reel film, jealously under the direction of Jack Adolphi. In this the hearty co-operation of newspaper reporters and police officials result in the capture of criminals in what was first supposed a baffling mystery. Sam De Grasse, Mary Alden and Francesca Bulington have prominent parts in this picture.

Good Farce Comedy

"Casey's Vendetta," a farce comedy by W. E. Keefe, is holding the attention of Eddie Dillon and company of Komic brand makers this week. Dillon appears in the role of an officer and employs a gang of black handers to get rid of his wife. The outcome is disastrous to the officer. Other players are Fay Tincher, Tod Browning and Max Davidson.

A decidedly novel situation is brought about in the one reel comedy produced last week by All Curtis and Jokers at the U studio in the filming of "He Married Her Anyhow".

SCENE FROM "GLAF ERICKSON-BLADE"

(Rev—Two Reels)

prologue of "The Rosary," written by Lanier Bartlett of the Selig Edendale studio, were made last week at San Francisco by Charles Clary and Wheeler Oakman, and the Irish village for this section of the picture was erected at Portuguese Bend, about twenty miles up the coast from Los Angeles.

Here excellent sea views were secured which materially aided in giving the picture a true Irish atmosphere.

Director "Sheriff" Arthur Mackley last week began work on the twenty-sixth picture for a Reliance release, in which he appears in the role of the western sheriff. The title of this is "Sheriff for an Hour," in which the western officer and deputies arrest a young crook who had been deceiving his mother by making her believe he was earning an honest living.

HEAVY ADVERTISING FOR "ZUDORA" IN CINCINNATI

Cincinnati exhibitors are looking forward with interest to the release of the new Thanhouser feature "Zudora," just announced. The success with which the "Million Dollar Mystery" met in Cincinnati has caused the exhibitors to expect great things of the new feature. "Zudora" is a detective story feature of forty reels, arranged to run in serial form for twenty weeks. C. C. Hite has announced that it will be put on the market behind a greater volume of advertising than "The Million Dollar Mystery" received. The cast will include the same stars as appeared in the "Mystery," with the addition of Harry Berlam.

"FARTHEST SOUTH" FOR GOLD FIBRE SCREEN

A Radium Gold fibre screen from Atco, Inc., left on the Floyd Brasiliero Steamship Wednesday, October 7, for Montevideo, Uruguay, where it will be transshipped on board a Pacific Navigation steamship for Punta Arenas, Patagonia, for installation in the Biografia Laville, the only motion picture house there.

Punta Arenas is the farthest city south in the world, being almost within the Antarctic circle.

FIRST ROLFE RELEASE

Life Photo Release, "The Ordeal," Ready

THE Life Photo Film Corporation has completed its five-part feature release, "The Ordeal."

The company will exhibit the production to the full censor board, and at the request, it is said, of the President and the Secretary of State, Jesse J. Goldburg, the secretary of the Life Photo Film Corporation, went to Washington, D. C., with a copy of "The Ordeal," to exhibit the film to the representative of the Department of State. Edward M. Roskam, the president of the company, who cut and assembled the picture personally, states that the picture presents a powerful argument in support of universal peace.

A synopsis of the story was read by representatives of two peace societies, and the picture is likely to receive public endorsement from them.

A tableau finishes the five-part feature, in which the ruling powers of the humorist, George Ade, which immortalizes one of the greatest comedy-drama successes ever contributed to the American stage.

When, a few months ago, it was announced by the Famous Players Film Company that they had formed an affiliation with the noted producer, whereby they would produce in motion pictures all his famous dramatic successes, the motion picture industry and public became vitally interested, and eagerly anticipated the first of these filmed theatrical triumphs, which, now, for the first time, is disclosed.

The film adaptation, due to the limitations of the oral stage, permits of even a more vivid and more elaborate interpretation of the plot than was possible in the stage version. The film production is presented with many members of the original cast, including the star and Willis P. Sweatnam, in his inimitable impersonation of SasafraS Livingston.

The play is a blending of quaint characteristics and wholesome romance. The story deals with a rural political campaign, with a tender love story running through the structural web.

The action occurs in the fictitious town of Antioch, but the principles of the drama apply equally to New York or Chicago, for one touch of politics, like that of nature, makes the whole world kin.

The production, which is in five parts, will be released on the Paramount program October 26.

THE Motion Picture News hopes every one of these exhibitors will realize—as sooner or later they must—that, if they had done their duty toward themselves, this tax could not now be threatening their very existence, as exhibitors.

And should the leaders of the organization, which these “free lances” have scoffed at and pooh-poohed, succeed in lightening the burden of this tax for them, this paper also hopes that every one of these exhibitors will acknowledge their error and pay their debt by supporting the organization in the future.

It will be the least they can do, as men and as exhibitors.

IT has always been the boast of these “free lances” that they could get along without organization. They didn’t want to cooperate with anybody, and they didn’t want anybody to cooperate with them.

They will now have the privilege of paying $100 a year, or whatever the Government seeks fit to charge them, for their independence.

That is only justice.

Independence, such as they cling to, is the costliest luxury in the world. If they did not know it until now, again they have only themselves to blame.

They should pay and pay well for it.

The only regrettable feature of the situation is that hundreds of exhibitors, wise enough to see that the good of all is their own good, and broad-minded enough to be concerned for the welfare of their fellow-exhibitors, should have to pay for the ignorance and stupidity of a few.

* * *

THERE is one lesson to be learned from the present crisis, which cannot be driven home too quickly or too deeply.

Let there be an end, from henceforth, of the old, silly, exasperating cry: “What can a national exhibitors’ organization do for us?”

None but a national organization can do anything at the present juncture.

If this tax is modified in any way to make it easier for the exhibitors to bear, the credit for it will belong to the national organization.

If this tax is lightened so that small exhibitors throughout the country will be saved from bankruptcy, those exhibitors will owe their commercial existence and their future prosperity to the present national organization.

* * *

AND, if the tax now before Congress is readjusted through the efforts of the national organization, and there still remain exhibitors who will continue to refuse to support that organization, their extinction will be a boon to the business.

The motion picture industry will be well rid of them.

The “News” Will Go To Washington

THE display of exhibitor sentiment on the war tax question, to be found elsewhere in this issue, is unique in the history of the film industry.

It belongs in the hands of the Federal legislators who are preparing to tax motion pictures. And it will be there. Marked copies of this issue are being sent by the “Motion Picture News” to the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and other leading Congressmen.
Sawyer Will Release Japanese Pictures
Company Contracts for Output of Nippon Firm Featuring Plays with Famous Actors of the Land of the Rising Sun

Sawyer, Inc., has just made several affiliations interesting to the trade. Chief among these is the contract by color Company. He was the manager of the Kinemacolor Theatre on Fortieth street, New York, and directed the pubwhich they will market the productions of the Japanese-American Film Company, an organization owned and controlled by Japanese business men, who have assembled an aggregation of Japan's most famous actors, to produce photo-plays of unusual merit.

Their first presentation is "The Oath of the Sword," a three-reeler. It is based on the custom of hari-kari, and shows an entirely new treatment of the subject for dramatic purposes.

The Phoenix Film Company also makes its initial bow to the public. Through Sawyer, the new San Rafael, Cal., concern has released its five-reeler, "The Fight for Right; or, The Napoleon of Labor." It is a startling and unique treatment of the labor situation, combining a strong love interest with many exciting scenes concerning a great labor strike, which is finally won by peaceable methods.

The first production under the Liberty brand to be marketed by Sawyer will be a four-reel drama of the conventional East and the wild West, called "Hearts United." This company is also making single real comedies which will be included in the Sawyer program of seven one-reel comedies each week, which is to start in the near future.

Much interest is being taken in "The Loves and Adventures in the Life of Shakespeare," by exhibitors all over the country. Another film which has scored an instantaneous hit is "Doc," from the story by Eleanor Gates in the "Saturday Evening Post."

The co-operative publicity bureau of the Sawyer offices is now being organized by Edwin Bower Hesser, for two years publicity director of the Kinema-

WOODWARD SIGNS FOR THREE YEARS WITH OZ

Costly housed in one of the many beautiful California bungalows, Fred Woodward, the king of all animal impersonators, has at last begun to enjoy life.

For years Mr. Woodward has been eagerly sought after whenever an animal has been needed in the cast of any of the big New York productions.

His experience covers animals of every description from alligators to cab horses. He has been with Weber & Fields, Ziegfeld's Folies, and many others, his last work on the legitimate stage being a mule in "The Tik-Tok Man of Oz."

But after trying pictures, Fred Woodward bows and declares he will never return to the stage. He seems to mean it, for he has just signed a three-year contract with the Oz Film Company.

His wonderful work in animal skins has fooled many people, for Woodward prides himself on being absolutely true

WAR NEGATIVE ARRIVES

A refugee brought to the Universal office the first scenes taken in and around Berlin, showing some good close-ups of Commander-in-Chief Von Kessel and Foreign Secretary Von Jagow; typical scenes of the grenadier guards in front of the Berlin Imperial Palace, and scenes of cannon drawn by Cossack horses captured from the Belgians, French and Russians. They are vivid scenes, and the staff cameraman of the company, who, it is said, marched to the front with the troops, procured these scenes at great risk. The picture will be shown in coming issues of the "Animated Weekly."

RETURN ENGAGEMENTS FOR "THE VIRGINIAN"

Through a typographical error there appeared last week a statement to the effect that Dustin Farnum was at the Universal studio while rehearsing in "The Virginian." It is needless to remind exhibitors that this play was put on by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, and the "return of the Universal was a "slip of the linotype." The film is destined to have a long run and probably in numerous instances will play return engagements.
“MARTA OF THE LOWLANDS”
(Famous Players—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ME BERTHA KALICH is the latest star that the Famous Players have recruited from the legitimate stage to the screen. In “Marta of the Lowlands” she makes her debut into the field of motion pictures, in a production that well deserves her fame and her remarkable histrionic ability.

It has been a long time since a picture such as this has made its appearance. Perhaps in less skillful hands it might have been offensive, as the story is very delicate and has to be dealt with in a corresponding manner, but it comes far from being offensive as it is told in this picture.

The production is constructed in the most skilful manner. A series of powerful situations, each one almost a climax in itself, leads up to an even stronger denouement. Little rapid action puts its image, but the picture is one of few that do not need action to carry them through. It is safe to say that if the situations that prevail throughout the picture were absent, little would be left of the entire five reels.

It has fallen to Mme. Kalich to carry the bulk of the acting. Her part is a most sympathetic one, and she interprets it in her well known style, which is extremely emotional. Wellington A. Phyter is cast as Manelich, the young and innocent shepherd. He acts his part well, only at times appearing a bit too childish in his actions. Hal Clarendon gives a good impersonation of the Master, and not much pity is extended to him when he breathes his last. Lilian Kalich appears as Mari, a young girl, and plays a small part well.

Scenically and photographically the picture comes up to the usual Famous Players standard. The sets are good, but seem a trifle more artificial than most of those appearing under this brand.

Marta is a beggar child, who is practically forced to live with Sebastien, a land owner, who is “master” of his people. Sebastien exercises great cruelty over Marta, and at length makes her his victim, in body, but not in mind.

Being sorely pressed for money, he wishes to marry and sees no other way than that Marta must marry too. She weds a young shepherd, who, finding out that he has been misinformed regarding the character of the woman, kills Sebastien, and returns to the Highlands to live a happy life with Marta. The scenes are bled in Spain.

“M’SIEUR BLUEBEARD”
(101 Bios—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS, the third picture of Universal’s Francois Villon series, vies with its two predecessors in regard to the elements that have been combined to create the impressive and exciting tales of these monthly stories.

The sly and scheming character of Villon is perhaps the most noteworthy characteristic of this picture, one which will be well apparent to all. How he executes a task set for him by his master, Louis XI., is highly clever and amusing, besides exciting.

M’sieur Bluebeard is a powerful personage, holding sway in domains which Louis looks upon with greedy eyes. He commissions Villon to visit this man and report the weakness of his domains.

Instead, Villon goes to Bluebeard, poses as a magician, gains the freedom of the city and goes about stirring the slaves to revolt. This they do, and Villon returns to the king to report his enemy’s death.

THE PATH FORBIDDEN
(Excelsior-Alliance—Five Reels.)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ASIDE from the fact that this picture presents a most absorbing story in the best way possible, it boasts of what can fairly be termed the best double exposures ever witnessed by the writer.

This excellent work is largely due to the efforts of Harry Handworth, the director. It is well apparent that he spent no little time in working to perfect this angle in the picture, and he has come out with unusual success.

HOLMES TO THE RESCUE OF LUCY

The most remarkable thing about the double exposure is, that besides not being able to distinguish the dividing line, a letter and later a bundle of clothes passes from one figure to another across the point at which the film is joined.

Taken in the environs of Lake Placid, the sceneries are very beautiful and are backed by good photography. The story, which fits its surroundings well, is entertaining at all times.

Octavia Handworth carries the dual role of two sisters. She also plays their mother, in the beginning of the picture. Gordon De Maine as Holmes is the hero of the story.

William A. Williams plays the father of the two girls in a very fine manner. The rest of the cast is made up of Hamilton Crane, Francis Pierlot, Tom Tempest and John B. Hymer.

At the outset of the story we see the wife of Brill, leading a life which leads to separation from her husband. Twenty years later, her two daughters have grown to womanhood. One, who has been brought up in her care, travels her life; the other, who lives with her father, possesses her father’s traits, is lovable, kind and willing.

Fate brings the two girls together, and the meeting eventually leads to the reformation of the first.

"THE RAGGED EARL"
(Popular Plays and Players—Also—Five Reels.)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

This is a production that may take its place among that class of pictures of which there are very few and to which we hope more will be added in the very near future; that class is composed of comedy-dramas, played and produced by people that are well accomplished in all the necessary arts, that tend to make such a picture perfect.

Even the patrons of the excruciating slapstick comedy and again those that prefer melodrama, or any person who appreciates pictures of one variety more than another, will not fail to be highly amused by "The Ragged Earl."

TRYING TO ACT LIKE A MAN

The picture is in reality just a vehicle for Andrew Mack, the old time Broadway favorite, and his associate players of this picture, to create all the laughter they possible can which,
be it known, is not a little.

As far as development of the story goes, the whole thing could be condensed to a reel, but then it would be shorn of all its humor, which as those who stand entirely on technical-ties, would term so much padding; but if padding serves to put one in a pleasant humor, it is not noticed, and it would be sadly wanted if neglected.

When the picture was played on Broadway, several years ago, it was a great success, and it was the same star, Andrew Mack, who sent the audiences into spasms of hearty laughter.
Much of this, of course, depended upon the words, and the way that they were spoken. It would seem impossible to visualize such a play, and it must have presented great difficulties.

But it may be said to the credit of all those concerned in the making of the picture that they have overcome all these obstacles in a justifiable manner.

In regard to the photography, scenes, settings and the like, the picture may take its place among the best. One would never think that certain nooks in the environs of Philadelphia could be transformed into a second Ireland, but the locale never seems familiar, and it won't, except for those who live in the immediate neighborhood in which the picture was filmed.

The sets have been arranged with apparent care, and some remarkable deep scenes appear, which formerly were only the boast of foreign-made pictures. Throughout the entire five reels nothing but the highest order of photography is prevalent.

The story is extremely simple, at times a little lacking in continuity, but as a whole very clearly put. The ward of a penniless Irish noble is engaged to marry a decrepit and grouchy old man, much against her will. She is in love with the "ragged earl," a hall and hearty old Irishman. At length that gentleman impersonates the other and the marriage takes place and then comes the shock to Sir Henry Harcastle, when he finds that his ward has been married to no other than the ragged earl.

William Conklin plays Sir Henry; Orni Hawley assumes the role of Kathleen Fitzmorris, his ward; Eleanor Dunn im-personates Una, her little sister, and the part of the old rogue, Lord Wildbrook, is carried off by Edward J. Pict. The director is Lloyd B. Carlson.

"THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY"
(Thanhouser—Sixteenth Episode.)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

As the end of this serial draws nearer and nearer with each week's episode, as thirty-two reels have passed and there are only fourteen more to follow, one is forced to speculate on the final outcome, which perhaps is not so hard to imagine as it is to solve the difficult questions that the story has asked from the start.

Does anyone know exactly where the million dollars is at the present time? If it has been caught sight of at all in the previous episodes, it immediately is put in some out-of-the-way place and the chances are forgotten before it is next unearthed. Then again the coveted box may not contain the million dollars at all.

The success of the serial has been mainly dependent upon this question. When each new installment appears, the populace flocks to the theatre to see if there is not the least bit of light cast on the subject, and the producers, concealing the answers of all questions up to the present episode, have acted wisely in so doing. For this reason the great interest that "The Million Dollar Mystery" commanded at the outset has been sustained in the following chapters.

THE COUNTES SENDS FOR THE DOCTOR

The award, too, is another magnetic attraction. No one will turn up his nose at ten thousand dollars, and for this reason the onlooker will try all the more to solve the three questions, "Where is Hargreaves?" "Where is the million?"
and "Who will marry Florence?"

In this episode a number of startling experiences befall Florence, Susan and Jim. After Susan has suffered a re-lapse, she repairs to the seashore with Florence.

There a doctor, who is no other than Braine, attends her, informing her that she is well but that Florence has contracted smallpox. She, however, escapes from the conspirators with Jim, but runs into treacherous quicksands, and Jim, who is always ready to aid Florence from whatever plight she is in, mounts a telegraph pole and pulls her out with a rope.

The quicksand incident is most thrilling and is perhaps as hair-raising as the lovers of sensationalism could wish for.

THE WIRELESS VOICE
(Reliance-Mutual—Two Reels.)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

DIRECTOR FRED A. KELSEY has produced an admirable picture in "The Wireless Voice." It contains a love story, just prominent enough to hold together the chain of events which revolve about the inventor of the wireless telephone and his marvelous instrument. The inventor of this contrivance, J. P. McCarty, also makes his appearance on the film, playing a not unimportant part in the cast.

Although the main trend of events is neglected at times to illustrate the mechanisms of the wireless telephone, it is a very interesting sight to see, and will be warmly welcomed even though they are not absolutely necessary.

In the cast, besides Mr. McCarty, are Irene Hunt and Jack Conway, who assumes the role of the inventor's partner, who is able, because of the invention, to defeat the rascally plans of two unscrupulous men to steal it. Excellent photography marks the entire offering, and coupled with the realistic scenes and entertaining story stamp the picture as one that will surely be a success.

MISS CINDERELLA
(Edison—One Reel)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

A VERY pleasing film, which presents a sort of twentieth century version of the story of Cinderella. The essential facts of the story are just as they were in the old fairy tale, but instead the prince is a very eligible young bachelor, while the haughty noble ladies are represented by some ambitious but not too attractive spinster.

Cinderella goes wading in the brook. The young bachelor goes fishing in the same place. In casting over a bush he hooks one of Cinderella's slippers. He searches for the owner, but by the time he finds her and plans to marry her the sisters have locked her up. She escapes and is married. There is an attractive atmosphere running through the entire picture which makes it seem quite different from the general run of short comedies and dramas.

THE INVENTION PROVES A SUCCESS

ON THE ISLE OF SARNE
(Edison—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY J. BURROUGHS NOELL

B. MARriott WATSON'S story, "The Picaroon," is used as the basis of this pleasing comedy-drama, in which charming Mariam Nesbit and Marc MacDermott play the leading roles.

It is rare that an ordinary two reel picture of the regular program maintains such a high level of excellence as we have here.

From every angle of observation, this is a good picture; the story is bright and unusual; the acting is clean and finished; the photography is high-class; and the settings entirely adequate.

Dorothea, the part portrayed by Miss Nesbit, is being forced by her uncle, the count, and countess to receive the attentions of a German nobleman, Count Sigismund. Finally Dorothecia rebels right out. She is offered the alternative of going to the Isle of Sarne or receiving the count. She chooses the former, but on the isle she does not get freedom from the unwelcome suitor, because he is expected to arrive for a visit any moment.

A yachtsman, Peter Seabrooke, loses all of his yacht's supply of food, and lands on the island almost famished. He finds the villa, and is mistaken for Count Sigismund. He tells Dorothea the truth, but plays the part at her request. Soon the count himself is seen approaching in his yacht. Dorothea and Peter go to meet and to escort him in, but lead him off into the woods instead, and tie him.

When he gets loose, he comes to the villa raging, and is cooled off by a good soaking with the hose, the servants performing this service for their mistress.

The up-shot of it all is that the uncle comes to the island, but Count Sigismund is no longer the willing suitor, and Dorothea has no better opinion of him than before. She has fallen in love with Peter, and they go off to England together on Peter's yacht to be married.

SUNDAY FEATURES TAKEN OFF AT TECK

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 7

THE Teck theatre has discontinued the showing of features on Sunday for one reason—poor audiences. The Teck never made much of a success of Sunday motion picture attractions, for which twenty-five and fifty cents was charged.

Only two were shown this year, and now they have been discontinued for the season. The Teck can make money with the legitimate attractions, but when it comes to films, they cannot draw the crowds.

"THE WARNING"
(Edictic—Three Reels.)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. FANGBURN

ANY doubts as to the quality of this film should at once be dispelled when it is stated that it presents the age-old idea that "the wages of sin are death," in a way which is forceful, interesting and convincing.

It sometimes seems as if a certain class of directors when hard up for a scenario always turn to a story which is intended to point this moral. The result is that so many thoroughly poor pictures of the sort have been made that the majority of them appear to be burlesques.

In "The Warning" there is a welcome change. The picture has real quality. There is no attempt to be unduly spectacular. Neither is there a large cast. In fact, it is a two-man cast, the other members being a sort of background.

M. O. Penn plays the part of the clergyman. His acting throughout the picture is characterized by extreme depth of feeling, and a great naturalness, even in the most dramatic moment. Creighton Hale, as his son, handles a totally different part equally well. Both players exhibit a most commendable restraint in the matter of gesture.

The reason the story is so effective is that the downward course of the boy—which, by the way, does not actually take place, but is a dream which he has after a drunken debauch—is presented in a logical and perfectly possible way.

A series of small offenses gradually leads him to the commission of three murders. All of his crimes are unpunished, and his greatest sin at the start is his failure to control himself.

A minister's son gets into rather fast company, and finally comes home intoxicated. His father reprimands him severely just as he is going to sleep. The rest is a dream.

Starting with the theft of a small sum from his mother's purse, he ends his career of unintentional crime with three murders. When he escapes from jail his father binds him and casts him into the lake where he had drowned a girl, his first victim. When he wakens, the effect of the dream is so strong that the boy vows to mend his ways.

Scriptural quotations used as inserts add to the strength of the general effect.

"THE PERILS OF PAULINE"
(Edictic—Fifteenth Episode—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. FANGBURN

Pauline continues her adventurous career in this episode in a style which leaves little to be desired as far as thrills are concerned. Pearl White and those who support her do some clever acting, and there is some equally clever manipulation of scenes in putting the film together.

The course of the story requires that a thrilling cross-country automobile race be shown, culminating in an accident to the car driven by the villain. Motion picture actors are willing to attempt nearly everything, but one of the stunts at which they draw the line is wrecking a high-power automobile. Of course, dummy figures can be used, but in this film the spectator is offered the real thing.

A series of scenes taken at a famous road race in France supply the wrecks. These portions are mingled so cleverly with parts showing racing machines on American roads that only an experienced and close observer could detect them.

Cars are shown passing around dangerous curves, and as a preliminary, two wrecks are shown. One of them was a fatal accident. The final smashup is the most startling of all, and it is made to appear a mishap to the car in which the villain is riding. This particular villain, who was only a hired tool of the real one, is thus disposed of, and all is well for a time.

The photography of the racing scenes is excellent, as is that of the first reel. One good point, which adds a touch of realism, is the light effect in the first reel during the duel scene.

CAUGHT IN HIS OWN TRAP

The duel is supposed to be fought at sunrise. Many duels at the same hour have been seen on the screen, but usually the shadows show the sun to be at a position which it reaches only at a much later time. By the simple process of taking these scenes when the sun was low, and casting long shadows, the right atmosphere is created.

The duel occurs as the result of an insult to Pauline by Ferrari, who has been hired to kill her fiancé. The crook uses a poisoned sword, but the versatile hero knocks it from his hand. He then takes it up and hands his opponent the weapon he had been using. Naturally, this ends the fight, as the coward does not dare to face the poisoned blade.

Pauline rides with her lover in the automobile, race, and the same villain attempts to wreck his car. Instead, he is wrecked himself. Needless to say, the hero wins the race.
SPECIAL FILM REVIEWS

“Shorty and Sherlock Holmes.” (Broncho-Mutual. Two reels. Wed., Oct. 21.)—This is another of the Shorty series featuring Shorty Hamilton. As usual, it is a mixture of comedy and drama. From reading Sherlock Holmes stories, Shorty gets the fever and imagines himself a detective.

The boys think to play a little joke on him, but in following up their ‘clue,’ he comes across two real whom he captures. The spirit of his companions soon changes from mockery to admiration.

“The Spark Eternal.” (Kay-Bee-Mutual. Two reels. Fri., Oct. 23.)—There is a fine story to this picture, one that is well produced and acted in a manner to hold the attention. With the reformation of the girl of the slums comes her efforts to reform her sweetheart who is a member of a gang. Her success comes when she shows him the happy family of the doctor for whom she works.

“The Power of the Angelus.” (Domino-Mutual. Two reels. Thurs., Oct. 22.)—The locale of this picture is Mexico. The scenes and photography are beyond criticism. Before the Mexican awakes to the fact that his visitor is an adventurer his daughter marries him, forsaking her old lover.

He in despair joins a monastic order and many years later meets the woman when she comes to tell him that her husband is to steal a priceless chalice that night. At the appointed hour the bandits attack the priests who are conveying the chalice to the monastery.

Then the angelus rings out; all except the leader kneel in prayer and he is killed by his companions. The woman is advised by her old lover to join a female order, which she does.

“The Dance.” (Kalem. Two reels. Monday, Oct. 5.)—By featuring the famous danceuse, Mlle. Verna Mersereau, in this two-part picture, the Kalem company has given it the greatest possible reality.

The story is built around a dancer who is loved by a rich man, petted and jereled by him until she grows tired of him and finds someone that pleases his fancy more. The girl's good fortune turns her head for the time being and she forgets her old mother.

When her short-lived happiness is over, she is drawn to her for comfort, but learns that she is too late. The inevitable happens, and the girl ends all in the murky river.

“Greater Love Hath No Man.” (Edison. Tuesday, October 6.)—Beginning with the theme of “Madame Butterfly,” the love of an American officer for a Japanese maiden, Mary Inlay Taylor's latest story in pictures breaks away from the old lines and has an entirely different ending.

Here the lieutenant changes his mind and decides to marry the Japanese woman. But he is brought to this resolve by the heroic self-sacrifice which the girl makes for his sake, even taking upon her shoulders a crime with which the officer has charged. The real less exciting events they capture him. A realistic explosion of an automobile is shown.

“The Master Force.” (Kleingeins. Two reels. Tues., Sept. 22.)—The young doctor was forced to leave his love to accept a position in a Brazil mining camp. Here he falls in love with the mine owner's daughter. But the sight of his first love causes him to return to her. Beautiful scenes mark this entire production.

MIGNON ANDERSON LOSES FATHER

Frank Anderson, father of Mignon Anderson, leading woman with Thanhouser, died at his home in New York City recently. The deceased was well known as a tenor for a period of twenty-five years, serving in opera, on the dramatic stage and in vaudeville.

His last professional engagement was with the famous Yankee Comedy Four eighty years ago. Since then the deceased was engaged in the insurance business in New York.

Mr. Anderson was known professionally as Frank Armstrong and never lost his interest in the amusement business, being secretary of Brooklyn Lodge, No. 30, T. M. A., at the time of his death. He was also a member of Charter Oak Lodge, F. & A. M., which accorded him a Masonic burial.

Mr. Anderson was born in Baltimore and leaves a widow, known in dramatic circles before her marriage as Hallie Houston, and three daughters, Mrs. C. H. Christoffers, Mrs. J. J. Callahan and Mignon Anderson. Almost the entire Thanhouser stock company and the membership of his lodges were present at Mr. Anderson's funeral services and a room was filled with the floral offerings received.

BROADWAY SETTLES WITH PATENTS COMPANY

After several weeks of conferences, the Broadway Picture Producing Company has come to an amicable settlement with the Motion Picture Patents Company out of court, which covers their entire output since the organization of the company.

Owing to the great demand and popularity of their two greatest productions, “The Trail of the Lonesome Pine” and Thomas E. Shea in “The Man o' Warsman,” it was a hard matter to bring about a settlement, as the accrued and future profits of the two great productions ran up into large figures, but the entire matter was settled to the satisfaction of both parties.

He believes it is unfair to add a special tax upon the theatre people, especially when business has been as slow as it has been for the past year and a half.

He cites that when times are hard that the first business affected is the theatre business as the public begins shutting down on the amusements first, while unlike other business, the cost of operation goes on just the same. Mr. Bossner feels that a halt should be called, if possible, upon the tax, which he regards as unjust.

Patrons Will Not Stand Increased Prices

T. A. Harrison, manager of the Majestic Theatre at 115 South Tenth street, is opposed to the war tax against motion picture houses as he feels with the $100 city license and the many other expenses of the business the managers are standing all that they possibly can and if additional burdens are imposed it will hurt the business to an alarming extent and will cause a raise in the admission price which will prevent many people from enjoying an evening of harmless amusement and one which is often instructive.

At best the western motion picture show proprietors are not making more than a good living out of the business, he says, and with an additional burden added, they will be required to make the people pay the tax to keep open.

"Fight the Tax to the Limit"

That the special proposed war tax should be fought to the limit through the national organization and through state organizations wherever possible, is the opinion of R. T. Kaiser, proprietor of the Kaiser Theatre at 819 Main street. The proprietors of motion picture theatres in Boise are not making any money at present and with a city license of $100 and a war tax of $100 per annum together with the expenses of operating a theatre, he does not see what will be left for the proprietors.

"The proposition of levying a special tax against exhibitors of motion pictures will simply mean a raise in the admission price is nothing more or less than placing a tax on the poor man’s amusement, the poor man’s recreation, the joys of his children and to a large extent his education.” This is the statement made by J. A. Ludington, proprietor of the Rex Theatre at 921 Main street. He states that it will mean a raise in price of admissions of the theatres able to pay the tax and will close many down as business has been none too good the past year and with the expenses of the motion picture theatres on the increase, the attendance on the decrease, the business cannot afford to be burdened with further expense.

He'll Let Tax Collector Run the Theatre

“If the special war tax on motion picture theatres goes through as recommended by the Ways and Means Committee and some government agent comes around to collect $100 from me I will simply hand over the keys to my show house and tell him to stay on the job and run the house and take the $100 out of the proceeds after paying expenses and there will be one government tax collector who will learn something about the business and how long it takes to get $100 profit out of the business.” This statement was made by Fred N. Tracy, of the Cozy-Tracy Theatre in the Merino building on Main street.

Big Cincinnati Exhibitors Show Selfish Indifference

Cincinnati, Oct. 6

CINCINNATI exhibitors representing the larger interests in the field seem inclined not to be worried over the proposed war tax of $100 to be imposed by the Democratic Congress. Those of them who were interviewed by a representative of The Motion Picture News took the view that if the tax is levied, it will have to be paid and the exhibitor had best put up his share and be thankful that it is not more. The amount, $100, it was pointed out, is only a “drop in the bucket” to the big exhibitor.

One Cincinnati man, who for certain reasons would not be quoted on the subject, declared to a number of fellow exhibitors that he believed the tax would be a good thing for the high class exhibitor. His view was a selfish one.

Would Like to See Small Houses Forced Out

“The owners of the larger houses will not feel the tax,” he said, “while the small exhibitor may find it a heavy load. For my part I wouldn’t care if the tax were $500, for then some of these ‘poor’ exhibitors who are showing five and six reels for five cents and keeping the audiences away from the better houses, would be forced out of business.

“It is this class of exhibitors who have been responsible for making patrons of theatres expect big quantities in pictures and cause them to lose sight of the quality.”

E. P. Bernardi, manager of the Colonial Theatre on West Fifth street, said: “Of course I do not mind the tax and will pay it without a murmur if it is levied. I do not think it is a fair method of taxation, however.

“If a tax had been placed on every ticket sold the revenue would have been much greater and the hardship, imposed on the small exhibitor by the present plan, would be eliminated. If the tickets had been taxed, say one or two cents each, it would also have given the exhibitors an excuse for raising prices and we could have made the public pay the tax.”

“What’s the Use of Objecting?”—Hennegan

Joseph Hennegan, manager of the Lubin, said: “I do not mind the tax. Motion picture theatres are subject to those things and I guess we will have to pay. What’s the use of objecting? We cannot put up our price for we haven’t the line of goods that the grocer or butcher or baker has.”

Charles Weigel, manager of the Alhambra, took a different view. He said: “The motion picture theatre is not a luxury. It is a necessity. The Government evidently has not realized this in contemplating the tax of $100 for war purposes.

“Exhibitors should no more be taxed than should newspapers, for they are just as important in the lives of the people in any community. I am opposed to paying a tax of this sort, however little I may feel it, because I do not think it is fair, either to the exhibitors or to the people who patronize our theatres.”

EXCHANGE MAN WANTS ALL WAR FILMS PROPERLY LABELED

Minneapolis, Oct. 6

In the interests of accuracy and for the future credence of patrons, film manufacturers and exhibitors should unite in the proper labeling and designation of all war films, is the opinion of M. Sansby, manager of the Minneapolis office of the Ramo company.

“When the pictures of the war really come to us we don’t want the patrons saying, ‘Oh, that film was made in New Jersey or New York,’” said Mr. Sansby. “We know the trouble newspapers have with scoopers, even when they do their utmost to get authentic news, and we want to keep scooping and doubt away from our news films, if possible.”

The Ramo company is doing an excellent fall business.

FAVORS FIRE DRILLS IN SYRACUSE THEATREs

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Syracuse, Oct. 7

There has been some sentiment aroused in behalf of fire drills in Syracuse motion picture houses, with the result that the matter received serious consideration at the hands of the Commissioner of Public Safety.

The Commissioner has announced that he believes such an idea very impractical and stated that no further consideration would be given the question.

“I am in favor,” said the commissioner, “of having every theatre employee given definite duties to perform in the event of fire or panic, and I believe fire drills would be a proper thing among employees only.”
THE MOVING SPIRITS OF THE DYREDA CORPORATION

J. PARKER READ, JR.
J. SEARLE DAWLEY
FRANK L. DYER

"In the Name of the Prince of Peace" will be in four or five reels. Like "One of Millions," it was written by Mr. Dawley, who is responsible for the direction of both productions. The picture is being filmed on two large stages. One is a glass enclosure measuring 100 x 60 feet. The other, outdoors, is 130 x 100 feet.

In one scene, the producer is using an interior the company considers as having a greater depth than any other in the country, 130 feet.

The second picture has a background of the European war, but care has been taken not to wound the feelings of sympathizers of the warring nations. Action obtained by the introduction of battle scenes is not neglected, and they are being staged in such a manner that they create atmosphere. A battery of the N. G. N. Y., comprising a detail of fifty men, took part in some of the battle scenes.

The way in which the members of the various departments of the studio are responding to the demands put upon them has called forth the commendations of Mr. Dawley.

At the head of the camera department is Irving Willat. Robert Nicholls is in charge of the stage carpentry.
MABEL NORMAND TAKES A VACATION

Mabel Normand, known all over filmdom as "Keystone Mabel," has "dropped everything," as it were, at the New York Motion Picture Company's plant on the West coast, and is in the East on a vacation. New York is the pretty comedienne's first "port of call." Miss Normand cannot rest long—it isn't her temperament—but while she is in the East, she will make the most of her "playtime."

"PAULINE" IN SONG

"The Perils of Pauline," the successful Eclectic serial, is celebrated in a song called "Poor Pauline," which is achieving remarkable popularity. The St. Louis "Republic" of September 22 states that Louis Allen while rendering this song from the stage, fell into the orchestra in his attempts to imitate Pauline in her various stunts.

STATE INSTITUTIONS TAKE MOTIOGRAPH

The John Biegger Company, of Sioux Falls, S. D., have just installed the latest model motographs, the product of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, in the South Dakota Industrial School, at Plankinton; the South Dakota Penitentiary, at Sioux Falls; and the State Asylum, at Yankton.

HORSLEY OFFERS $250 FOR BRAND NAME

President of Centaur Company Will Pay Cash Prize for Title to Take Place of Ace Brand—Contest Will Close at Noon, October 24

THE announcement made last week that David Horsley's products are to be released through the General Film Company has aroused great interest and caused widespread comment in film circles.

Letters and telegrams have been pouring into Mr. Horsley's office by the hundreds. Almost every one of these communications carried suggestions of a brand name for the new releases, while several expressed an objection to the tentatively adopted name of Ace.

As a result Mr. Horsley has decided to withdraw the brand name of Ace and to choose the new title by open competition.

Accordingly, Mr. Horsley has offered a cash prize of $250 to the person who shall suggest the most appropriate name, and has thrown the competition open to anyone who is in any way connected with the motion picture industry.

This includes exchange men, exhibitors, scenario writers, directors, actors, the trade press, accessory manufacturers and all employees of manufacturers or film concerns, whether in the studio, factory or office.

The selection of the name from the list submitted will be left to a committee of disinterested judges. Three of the best known film men in America have been invited to act in this capacity, and have already signified their willingness to accept.

Announcement of their names will be made in the next issue of The Motion Picture News.

After making it plain that motion picture departments have paid and are paying dividends to their papers, Mr. Pierce said:

"Without systematic, liberal, progressive, steady advertising, no playhouse, no exchange, and no manufacturer can expect to do business today. The tendency is to advertise spasmodically, sparingly, unintelligently, and I assume that it is the duty of the press to educate the advertiser along these lines."

Banquet Marks Era in Industry.

The souvenirs at the banquet were small bisque figures placed at each plate, and the menus were handsomely decorated, and the back contained a list of the invited guests, each man being given his particular nickname. This banquet is but the beginning of a new era in the motion picture industry, because it is shown that the newspapers, trade papers, the exchange men, exhibitors and producers are all working to reach a common end.

A SECRET meeting of representative exchange men from all parts of the United States and Canada in Indianapolis on October 1 and 2 resulted in the launching of a strong combination which will distribute and rent what will be called the Standard Program. The forming of a million-dollar corporation under the laws of the State of New York was determined upon and general plans for the execution of the organization's project will be actively begun at once.

Twenty-one reels a week comprise the company's first output, which will be increased to meet demands.

Rumors of such a consolidation have long been in the wind, but such was the secrecy with which the plan was matured that not until several exchange-men came East and arrived in New York following the Indianapolis meeting, that particulars were learned.

The following cities were represented at the meeting: New York, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Buffalo, St. Louis, New Orleans, Dallas, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles. Letters were read from most of the exchange-men in the cities not represented, all of which expressed themselves emphatically favorable to the plan. Joseph Hopp, of Chicago, presided as chairman of the meeting. E. T. Peter, of Dallas, acted as secretary.

Markowitz, of California, Sam Werner, of St. Louis, and Mr. Peter were appointed a committee to draft an agreement which was signed by everyone present.

Twenty-five Exchanges Banded
To band together twenty-five exchange men operating in the United States and Canada is the purpose of the company, and this is practically consummated. Each member had to agree to buy twenty-one reels of film each week and pay for this film in proportion to the quality of the individual production.

The basic idea generally expressed was that they did not want manufacturers to ship them film on a percentage basis, under those conditions they were forced to take what was sent, regardless of quality.

Also, they are equally determined upon not buying film at set price of so much a foot, as under these conditions the quality of the program would not improve because of the lack of incentive on the part of manufacturers to raise their standards.

The members absolutely believe that there are sufficient number of high-class manufacturers in the United States today to make the Standard Program a new standard of merit. It was stated at the meeting, in substantiation of this, that already good film had been offered to them sufficient to release thirty-four reels weekly instead of twenty-one reels, which, however, will be the initial number.

Begin Releases December
December 1 is the approximate date of the first release. Its exact nature is not announced. As now planned, however, the program weekly will consist of two three-reel subjects, three two-reel subjects, and nine single reels. Seven of the latter will be comedies.

Territory will be divided by State lines, but to facilitate the shipping arrangements of each office with the purpose of giving the most efficient servces to the exhibitors.

The board of directors will be selected from exchange men. E. T. Peter, president of the Texas Film Corporation, will probably be in charge of headquarters in New York. Large offices to handle a large business will quickly be opened.

FILM MANUFACTURERS JOIN THEATRICAL ASSOCIATION
A number of motion picture manufacturers have been elected to membership on the board of directors of the United Managers' Protective Association.

The men who will serve on the board are as follows:

J. Stuart Blackton, vice-president of the Vitagraph Company; P. J. Kennedy, president of the Biograph Company; Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players Film Company; P. A. Powers, president of Warner's Features; Harry R. Raver, president of the All Star Fea-

As twenty-five is present membership of new "standard program," details of which were consummated in Indianapolis October 1 and 2, resulting in the launching of a strong combination which will distribute and rent what will be called the Standard Program. Lasky Feature Play Company; William N. Selig, of the Selig Polyscope Company; Siegmund Lubin, George Kleine, Carl Laemmle, of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and Samuel Long, of Kalem.

The United Managers' Protective Association was recently formed for the purpose of combating adverse legislation affecting the rights of the theatrical profession, and will not only watch bills at Washington, D. C., but keep informed of the activities of state legislatures through local branches, which will be organized with as much despatch as possible.

All matters of general interest affecting amusement enterprises will receive the close attention of the association. In addition to watching proposed legislation bearing on amusements, the organization will put forth efforts to prevent and adjust labor troubles, and in every manner endeavor to remedy existing evils and promote the future of the business.

The members of the motion picture board are also members of the general board of directors, the motion picture committee being named from the board of directors of the United Managers' Protective Association.

The motion picture manufacturers realized that on account of the numerous problems confronting the industry some action of wide scope was necessary, and they feel that results can be accomplished more quickly at present by allying themselves with the United Managers Protective

Through their efforts the way will be blazed for the exhibitors association to take up matters for the benefit of its members with greater chances of solving the problems now affecting the motion picture industry, it is said.

First Horsley-General Release November 9
Three Comedies a Week Will Be Issued and Probably a Drama in Addition
During the Winter—Horsley Enthusiastic

DAVID HORSLY has chosen November 9 as the date of the first release of his comedies on the General Film program. The Horsley films will be released three days each week, and probably during the winter a drama will be added to the list.

Mr. Horsley is enthusiastic over the prospect of having his films included in the "G. P." program, and expresses the belief that he will set a high water mark in the number of copies sold.

"I have long been prepared for just this opportunity," said Mr. Horsley when seen at the Centaur studio. "Years ago, when the Biograph was the talk of the film world, I chopped off a little strip of one of their films and promised myself that I would never stop until I had brought my products up to that high photographic standard. I believe I have achieved that great desire, and that the films which I shall offer through the General Film Company will measure up with the finest to be seen on any screen.

"In spite of that, I feel that I am still a mere beginner and a student in an infinite art. I am working and thinking as hard today as I ever did, and know that I will go on improving and perfecting as long as I am in the game.
Before the winter is out I will slip out something which I now have up my sleeve, and which will mark a distinct advance in motion picture presentation."

"KITTY COBB" PAPER IN SEVEN COLORS
Warner's Features, Inc., which is releasing "The Adventures of Kitty Cobb," the big four-part production of James Montgomery Flagg's famous drawings, is offering a line of Kitty Cobb paper ranging from one-sheets to 24-sheets, with two and three different subjects in each size.

It is said that in the neighborhood of $20,000 was expended in producing these lithographs. The drawings were all made by Mr. Flagg himself especially for the paper, and the Lithographing was done in seven colors on a good quality of stock.

Every exhibitor who has booked "Kitty Cobb" has expressed surprise and gratification at both the quantity and quality of the paper.

"ENGLAND EXPECTS——"

(Cosmofotofilm—Two Reels.)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD M. PANGBURN

NOW is the time when all good film producers and true seem to think they must rally to the support of the so-called "timely film." It is therefore very refreshing to see a picture which fits in this class so well as "England Expect—"

The market at the present is flooded with hastily thrown together pictures fondly supposed to have some connection with the war, but whose only real effect is to discredit the film industry. This offering is of entirely different nature. It has a most direct connection with the war, and it is as interesting as it is well done.

Its genuineness is not its only remarkable characteristic. It possesses an attribute which is most rare in any form of dramatic production; namely, it drives home the point which it is intended to make, in a forcible and interesting manner. The idea of the picture is to arouse a healthy patriotic feeling —on the part of the spectator. This is just what it does.

The effect is obtained by a very simple story, some extremely good child acting and a clever interpolation of scenes showing British soldiers on their way to the front. The picture cannot even be classed as unneutral, because it encourages patriotism so successfully as to make the spectator think only of his own country.

The story begins with England’s declaration of war. A veteran of the Crimea is talking to his son, a veteran of the Boer War, they are congratulating each other on the fact that the old man’s two grandsons can go even though they are too old.

The younger son is an officer in the army and everyone takes it as a matter of course that his brother will enlist. He shrinks from the idea even when his wife urges him to go in spite of the pain it will cause her. He is about to sneak away to America, when he has a sudden change of heart caused by overhearing some of the things his children are saying to their mother. He enlists, and the whole family is proud of him.

THE BROKEN PROMISE
(Edict—Four Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THIS picture was made in Sweden and on the island of Heligoland, which is now figuring as Germany's outpost in the North Sea. It concerns people in a little fishing village, and naturally contains many marine scenes. These are almost without exception of the highest order of excellence. Several scenes have the harbor of the village for a background, and the groups of fishing boats at anchor, with the rugged hills rising beyond, make very effective backgrounds. One of these is particularly fine, as it shows a thin bank of fog stretched along the face of the mountain. As the action of the scene progresses the fog can be seen slowly rising.

A whole series of striking effects is seen during the pursuit of a smuggler's launch by one containing men from the coast guards. The chase is supposed to occur at night.

After the boats have gone some distance the smugglers' rounds a point, and, followed by that of the officers, goes toward the horizon along the path of the moon's reflection in the water. A beautiful silhouette effect is the result.

The acting shows some tendency toward those gesticulatory excesses which are often seen in pictures made on the Continent, but is good in spite of this. The characters themselves are strikingly good. The heroine is a humble orphan in a small village, and she looks the part, with no attempt to appear a grand lady in disguise. The other persons in the story are equally realistic. The story tells of Inge and the gross unfaithfulness of her lover. She is a maid in a wealthy fisherman's family, and accepts the advances of Jan, the son of the house, upon his promise of marriage.

Jan becomes a smuggler, and is saved from what seems like certain arrest by the bravery of Inge. However, he prepares to marry another girl, even when he knows that the faithful, but over-credulous, Inge is about to become a mother.

Driven to desperation, the girl tells the officers of Jan's dishonesty and where he conceals his goods. Then she repents and sends a warning. Jan rushes away in the midst of the marriage ceremony. Inge tries to take him away, but their sail boat is pursued by the coast guard. Jan is shot down, the boat capsizes and the unhappy lovers drown together.

COMPLAINS COTTON MARKET AFFECTS FILMS

DALLAS, Oct. 6

LOCAL film men are now complaining that the European war is affecting their business to some extent. They say that owing to the poor cotton market they are not playing to as large houses as before the war started.

As there is no market for cotton at this time, the people are not spending as much money for amusements.

AT THE OLD CROSS ROADS
(Select Photoplay—Alliance—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

THE fact that this story, though taking five reels in the telling, never lacks interest and holds the attention right through to its climax, is enough to make it a feature among features. So many recent pictures have so much "padding" to carry them over three reels, that it is a relief to see one where there is action and "go" in every foot.

Each scene is blended with the next with such smoothness and despatch that though the climax or denouement is kept hidden until the last few hundred feet, the interest never lags.

The exteriors are well chosen, especially the love scene on the bridge, where Tom Martin proposes to Annabel. Estha Williams deserves special mention for her rendering of Parepa Mendoza. Her facial expression and gestures, though they may seem exaggerated, are really in keeping with the difficult part she has to play.

The struggle between Dayton Thornton and James Martin, impersonated by Arthur Morrison and Frank L. Dear, respectively, is very realistic, especially when they fall down the front steps, locked in each other's arms. Rae Forde in her characterization of Annabel Thornton does a realistic fall from her horse, when she is found by James Martin, and carried in his arms to the house. The court scenes are not lacking in detail, and the characters even to the twelve men making up the jury act their parts true to life.

The picture relates a tragedy due to the result of race prejudice. After it is all over and the last tragedy has been enacted comes the startling surprise that the woman who was thought to be a negro is of Spanish blood.

THE GIRL AND THE STOWAWAY
(Kalem—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

MOST of the scenes in this picture are on shipboard, and the result is a considerable variation from the usual. The photographic work is excellent, and a number of uncommon effects have been obtained. Alice Joyce is featured, although the lead is really played by Tom Moore. Others in the cast are William Bestman, Anna Bumieister, James Ross, Mary Ross and Marguerite Courtor.

Miss Joyce and Mr. Moore play their parts with customary effectiveness, even when it comes to jumping from a large steamer into the turbid waters of the Hudson near a dock.

The plot is the familiar one of a young man and woman refusing an arranged marriage without ever having seen each other, and subsequently falling in love.

A young English nobleman quarrels with his father over matrimonial plans, and starts for America as a stowaway on the same ship with the girl in question. They meet and fall in love under romantic circumstances.
LUBIN SERIES MAKES BIG HIT

The success of "The Beloved Adventurer" series has so far surpassed all expectations. Every exhibitor who presents first run Lubin pictures are sending in appreciations of the picture, and reports enormous sales of the book, which tells the tale of the adventures of Lord Cecil. Twenty-five cents for a cloth-bound copy has placed it within the reach of everybody.

Only two of the series have so far been exhibited, but was sufficient to create a longing for the whole fifteen pictures, which are now completed and ready for release every Monday. The book is handsomely gotten up and profusely illustrated, and if the demand continues will probably be out of print within the next thirty days.

"THE TREY O' HEARTS"

(Gold Seal—Universal—Eleventh Chapter.)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

This episode, entitled "The Painted Hills," introduces a touch of Western melodrama, and in this respect might be compared with an instalment of its famed predecessor, "Lucille Love."

As before noted in the review of that chapter concerning the adventures of Lucille, the fact that the interest is sustained by the wonderful riding and all the accompanying thrillers that are usually seen in a Western, does not belittle or detract from the merits of the picture in the least.

Cleo Madison as Judith Trine, who boasts both of her father's devilish temper and her sister's beauty, proves that she is no mean fighter in this episode.

Indeed, her art in that line has been in no way concealed up to date, but here she engages single-handed in a tussle with a regular bad man, on the top of a high hill. The masculine combatant receives the little end of the encounter, and performs a dare-devil fall down the hill.

![The Escape from Marrophat]

The fact that he executes this feat of daring just as if he did such things every day in his life, and moreover very naturally, makes it all the more hair-raising. And as he rolls over and over down the hill, where it was his wicked intention to send a boulder down upon the heads of Law and Rose, it will be asking too much to imagine that Hopi, for that is the bandit's name, was not severely bruised when he reached his destination.

Miss Madison herself performs a fine feat of daring, which perhaps will not create such a sensation, as it appears easy. She is tied to a horse's back by the revengeful Hopi. The horse gallops away with her, and she is only rescued by Allen.

The general aspect of the story has changed since its outset, as now Judith, although apparently striving to kill Law, has had several opportunities, and has failed to grasp them. Her father, however, thinks that she is still loyal to him and his dastardly plans, which have so far never been realized to their full extent.

The eleventh chapter is destined to maintain the popularity of the series.
"FALSE PRIDE HAS A FALL"
(Albuquerque—Warners—Four Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

The usual excellent photographic and scenic effects which mark the work of the Albuquerque company are seen in this picture. The scenes supposed to depict an expensive and exclusive girls' finishing school are not convincing, so far as exclusiveness and expensiveness go.

On the other hand, a number of incidents of a kind usually imperfectly presented in such a picture are shown with much effect. An instance is the one in which the heroine falls from an excursion steamer.

The story opens on a Western farm at the close of the local school year. The teacher advises the parents of one of her pupils to send her to a girls' school. As they have been prosperous, they do so.

When she arrives at the school the girl is a startling example of an uncouth and unsophisticated country lass. She soon changes completely, and thinks of home chiefly as a source of funds. She becomes engaged and does not even postpone her marriage when her father is hurt and unable to come to the wedding.

Later the old folks come for a visit. Their daughter fears that they will disgrace her by their country ways, and as she has a dance planned for the evening she gives them much champagne for supper. They become very sleepy and retire. Later they wake up and join the dance in a very impromptu manner. The party is broken up, and the daughter is very indignant. When she sees the old people starting home she realizes her unkindness. A final scene shows the family reunited at the farm.

"IN THE POWER OF THE DUKE"
(Warner's Features—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

STARTLING thrills, including nearly all of the sort dear to the lover of melodrama, go to make this film a lively one. There is a large amount of beautiful scenery, while the views taken about the old castle are most unusual. The photographic work is of the high order which is usually found in pictures of French or Italian make.

One striking feature is the number of scenes which are taken from positions which offer an extended view of the country in the background. The acting is a trifle gesticulatory, but very good, all things considered.

The story is of a highly melodramatic nature, but rather entertaining. A man released from prison after a term of fifteen years, goes to see his daughter, who had been placed while an infant with a friend. He is told that she has left home.

In revenge he betrays his friend's supposed daughter to a duke, who wishes to ruin her. Then he learns that she is really his daughter. He rescues her after a series of the most startling adventures. He is fatally injured in doing so, but dies happily to see his daughter safe with her honest lover.

ALCO'S SECOND RELEASE

The second release of the Alco Film Corporation is Andrew Mack, in "The Ragged Earl," on Monday, October 12. The play is one of the best of Mr. Mack's many stage successes and will prove equally popular on the screen. The story of the Emerald Isle was produced by the Popular Plays and Players' Company, which spared no expense in the production, and who adhered to the atmosphere in the most minute detail of the picture. The two hundred and eighty-nine scenes are typical of the Irish country, and to one who has visited Ireland the different views are recognizable. This is Mr. Mack's first appearance in motion pictures, and judging by the demand for him as a picture star, it will be the beginning of a series of pictures from many of the successes of this favorite playwright of Irish types on the legitimate stage.

The artistry of this production is beyond conception and is in keeping with the standard of photo plays to be released through the Alco Film Corporation.

Syracuse, Oct. 7.

"Neptune's Daughter" and "Cabiria" were heralded with such great acclaim in Syracuse that the local papers decided to review the productions. One critic wrote at length on one of the features and admitted that he was among the many who applauded the picture in several of its scenes.

He remarked that "it is on a rare occasion nowadays that a road show receives a real, genuine 'hand' of applause, and when motion pictures can tell a story with realism sufficient to call forth the applause, I hear only well. I am going to review more of them."

MACON, GA. THEATRE REOPENS

Macon, Oct. 6.

The Palace Theatre, Macon's popular amusement house, reopened September 21. It cost $35,000, and is the finest motion picture house in the south, and a theatre that Macon people can point to with pride.

The entire plan of the old Palace has been changed and enlarged. It is better ventilated, has more music, has up-to-date lighting system, and comfortable seats.

"RELEASE" FOUR PLAYERS BY FILM MATRIMONY

Edgar Lewis, feature film director, tells an amusing incident of reterchment in a New York studio. The studio had been producing a serial film featuring one of their actresses.

When the war scare hit the motion picture industry the directors of the film held a consultation and upon orders from the man higher up decided to release four players.

Several alternatives were suggested by which the actors and actresses might be permitted to retire gracefully from the serial. Finally it was decided to have a double wedding and in the next issue of the film, after much palavering, rolling of eyes and heart-to-heart business of pairing, two young men and two much older character actresses were united in the wholly mercenary bonds of film matrimony to disappear forever from the scene.

High Praise for Thomas H. Ince
Appreciative New York Motion Picture Company Fan Writes from Mississippi of the Delights of Kay-Bee and Broncho Films

A LETTER from a pleased patron cannot help make a producer feel that his efforts to entertain the public have been successful. It is gratifying for him to know that all the skill he brings to bear on his work is appreciated by those who sit before the screen and watch the results of his labors.

Thoroughly sincere, the New York Motion Picture Corporation was recently the recipient of such a communication from an admirer of his pictures, living in Meridian, Miss.

So impressed was the writer that he addressed Mr. Ince as "king of all directors and producers," certainly a tribute to the stage management of the New York Motion Picture director.

A letter of this character carries with it a peculiar feeling of gratification inasmuch as the sentiments expressed indicate the right attitude toward photo plays. This patron, whose feelings are typical of thousands of other picture fans, considers motion pictures a vital and necessary form of entertainment.

The attitude is indicative of the tendency to consider film drama an important, if not the most important form of amusement today, demanding anybody's serious attention.

His words, everything—the acting, the settings, the plot, in short, all that must receive a producer's minute scrutiny to get the best result—is keenly observed by motion picture patrons.

The letter follows:

To: Mr. T. H. Ince, Esq.

DEAR SIR:—Kindly permit me to express my sincere thanks and heartfelt gratitude to you for your peerless work in behalf of the amusement-loving public. My chief regret is that I cannot find words to express myself to you.

Nor could I, if I were a master of languages. Really, you are a benefactor. Your photo dramas are faultless and incomparable; absolutely without a flaw. How on earth can you pick such versatile artists, like Shorty Hamilton, the Aridville terror, or the gentleman that played the above role; and Thad Channing, the wonderful fellow in "Jim Regan's Last Raid"?

What a delight to the eye it is to see Clara Williams and your entire aggregation of world-beaters. I can, too, understand it all upon second thought.

You are a genius. It's indeed a treat to see a Broncho and Keystone. Never did I, and I never will, see such excellent acting as that of Shorty and his associates; never was I so thrilled as I was when I saw the productions from your brains; viz., "Her Father's Story," "Shorty Gets into Trouble," and "Shorty Turns Judge."

I am sorry that the exhibitor here gets but one two-reel Broncho feature once a week, instead of almost every day. I've been in Meridian nearly three months, and have seen only one Kay Bee. Now, that's another good company.

It is not my intention to annoy a busy man such as yourself. But I would consider it a favor to learn the address of the versatile Shorty, the artist that portrayed the role of Thad Channing, the saloon proprietor, the bandit known as "The Desert Rat"; and Clara Williams, who had the lead in "Jim Regan's Last Raid"; and the female star in "The Tong-Faced."

How can it be arranged to have a larger number of Bronchos shown here, as I have heard scores of other photo drama patrons speak in the highest terms of the Ince Bronchos.

Sincerely,

ALBERT HARTMAN.

Sixth Street and Twenty-fifth Avenue, Meridian, Miss.

HEARD IN THE LOBBIES

The Buffalo Sunday Times announces that it will start a contest whereby local school children can get Pathescopes for their schools. Coming as it does after the Buffalo Sunday News announcement, there are those who wonder thereby.

"Neptune's Daughter," which was shown at the Brandis Theatre, in Omaha, recently, has been booked for a return engagement. It made a decided hit there.

Rufly Payne, who wore jewels of great value in the Essanay production "Under Royal Patronage," made her own wedding gown, which she wore in the picture. She spent about a week on the garment, and it is said it looked like the imported variety.

Margaret Joslen, the truly comical comedienne in Essanay's Snakeville comedies, has adapted the latest style in hair dressing to her person. In "Snakeville's Most Popular Lady" she appears in "split curls," and they are plenty large enough to be noticed.

Ben Turpin, of the Essanay Comedy Company, has a smile which he is teaching to count. The mule's four feet, however, are being trained for this purpose. The comedian has a mysterious reverence for 1-2 animals' posterior propellers.

Maurice Costello, the popular Vitagraph star, was recently in Buffalo and took part in the Labor Day parade. He was visiting at the home of his parents. In "Snakeville's Most Popular Lady" he appears in "split curls," and they are plenty large enough to be noticed.

Shaler and Irwin, proprietors of the Aegean theatre in Barnesville, O., are getting the Universal service from Pittsburgh instead of Cleveland. There is a plan to work out by this system whereby the service will be improved for several of our theatres.

John Papoulis, of the Olympic theatre at Steubenville, O., was in Pittsburgh several days ago looking up features for his theatre. He now uses the Paramount pictures in addition to the Universal schedule.

ARTISTIC POSTERS FOR WORLD FILM

The World Film Corporation has determined to get up printing that will have a different note than that usually found in lithography paper. It has secured the exclusive services of W. N.
Wilson, the famous magazine illustrator and poster expert. Mr. Selznick is determined that the printing used by the World Film Corporation in advertising its releases shall be the finest available, and without sparing expense upon this new department of which Mr. Wilson is to be the head.

Mr. Wilson has studied in England,
Paris and Berlin, and was for many years a poster expert for the largest lithographing establishment in England. He himself is a specialist in the German poster style, and has a wonderful sense of grouping and of contrast. Several of Mr. Wilson’s animal paintings have been exhibited in the salons of the Continental capitals.

This is a distinct step forward in the development of the poster in this connection with the advertisement of motion pictures, but it is in keeping with the progressive policy of the World
Film Corporation.

BUSHMAN AND THE JEAL-OUS(?) HUSBAND

Francis X. Bushman, who is starring in Essanay’s four act production, “The Slim Princess,” received a letter recently from a man in Mississippi who wishes to fight a duel with the hero.

It is said that the man said his wife is infatuated with the film star and spends her time looking at his photograph and visiting theaters where Mr.
Bushman appears on the screen. The husband is aware of the fact that his wife has never seen Mr. Bushman personally, but thinks it his duty to challenge him to a duel.

LITTLE MISS TODD HAS A BIRTHDAY PARTY

An elaborate birthday party was given the other afternoon by Mr. and Mrs.
Harry Todd of the Western Essanay company at Niles, Cal., in honor of their little daughter, Margaret, on her eleventh birthday.

Covers were laid for eleven. Over the festive board hung a huge Kewpie with yellow streamers fluttering down to eleven small Kewpies, one at each plate.
Many valuable presents were received by Margaret, among them a gold pin, the gift of G. M. Anderson.

PORTRAITS OF GARWOOD IN JEWELER’S WINDOW

William Garwood, of the Flying A studios, has been signaly honored by a jeweler in Santa Barbara, Cal., who has made a display of the actor’s portraits in the window. The collection gives an idea of the many parts he has played, for here we see William as he is, both flattered and otherwise, as an old man, a boy, a clergyman, a crook, jovious, in despair, in dramatic and comedy roles.

BOOTLE'S BABY

By JOHN STRANGE WINTER

Thoroughly at a loss to account for the feeling, all of Gilchrist's companions felt a certain restraint whenever he came around. Broody and melancholy, he diffused an air of gloom that was very depressing. Gilchrist's life had become embittered by an unhappy marriage and despite the fact that his wife and child were in want, he had thrown them both off with contempt.

Grace Gilchrist made one last appeal, and then realizing that she would have to make her way in the world, decided to impress Gilchrist with his responsibility by leaving the baby girl for him to care for. She crept into his quarters and left the sleeping child on his bed, pinning a note on her sleeve saying that he would have to provide for her until she could secure a position.

How the baby became the care of a comrade "Bootie" and how he eventually proposed to Grace is the most interesting part of the plot.

A CHANGE of HEART

Two-reel Wharton-made American Drama. In which a man with the right start in life goes wrong, and how a chance reminder starts him struggling up again. The story of an elaborate confidence game which succeeds only to fail through the awakening of a man's better nature. Natural emotional scenes which appeal to all who have ever been tempted or duped. A taking, gripping drama with a highly artistic climax. Featuring Thurlow Bergen. 1-3-6 sheet posters.

Colonel Heeza Liar (Naturalist)
The Colonel, that funniest of film characters, by the inimitable cartoonist, J. R. Bray, is still experiencing tropical adventures of a most extraordinary nature; throughout he's a perfect fountain of laughter. This time he is combined with

KATSURA RIVER (Picturesque Japan)
Fascinating scenic views in natural colors.

The Poor Little Rich Boy

1 reel American Mayo-made comedy. A big entertainment for little people and big people, too. The story of a boy whose training didn't fit him for the baseball diamond. That doesn't stop his dreaming, however, and after all an imaginary home run is almost as much fun as the real thing.

The World Without Men

Three-part comedy-drama. Three bachelor girls, sworn man-haters, find it hard to let that fascinating sex alone. They find it even harder, however, to acknowledge to each other their true attitudes. Anyone who doesn't laugh at this film must have an ache somewhere.

The Perils of Pauline

There is no need to go into details about Pauline. Everyone who has ever seen a motion picture knows her by now and is wild about her. We would like to say, however, that she is keeping ahead of her records in former releases, which is like making a home run on top of a three-bagger. Pauline's profits are only excelled by Pauline's daring

THE MIDNIGHT RIDE OF PAUL REVERE
Retold After the Famous Poem by Henry W. Longfellow

Of all the characters of our Revolutionary period, none is more endeared to young and old than that of Paul Revere, whose exploit has been immortalized by Longfellow so effectively that the lines of the poem and the incidents portrayed are graven more deeply, perhaps, upon the average American mind than any other character or exploit of our American history.

The action throughout this film is finely sustained and many of the scenes, including Revere’s house, that of Hancock, the wall at Lexington, where the first shots were fired, were all taken on the exact historical spots where the original action took place.

This is a film that will stir the hearts and minds of young and old, and should be met with a tremendous welcome throughout the entire country.

"The Ragged Earl"

Popular Plays and Players Company Picturize Andrew Mack in His Famous Comedy-Drama.

Reviewed by the Rev. E. Boudinot Stockton, S.T.B.

For clean, pure comedy-drama, of the highest educational character we have seen nothing to compare with "The Ragged Earl" as made by Lubin for the Popular Plays and Players Company. It represents a type of photodrama that for the past five years we have been trying to convince manufacturers, directors and photoplaywrights is not only the kind that the American people want, but is also the kind that will increase the bank account of all concerned. It is a typical example of educational comedy or of "pure food" as compared with the "adulterated candy" entertainment that is so common nowadays. Give us more of it.

As to the acting, Andrew Mack, who plays his old role of Gerald Mack; Earl of Kildare, the ragged earl, has achieved as great, if not greater, success before the eye of the camera as he did formerly in the eyes of thousands of legitimate thestergroers, and he is most ably supported by the cast with which Lubin has supplied him. William Conklin as Sir Henry Hardcastle is excellent; Edward J. Peil as Lord Wildbrook, the old roue who wishes to marry Kathleen, is inimitable and Ormi Hawley and Eleanor Dunn as the two stepchildren of Sir Henry are simply superb. So also is the actress whose name should have been listed in the cast who played the part of Lady Hardcastle.

Another thing deserving comment is the settings and locations. The interiors are not only in keeping with the character of the story, but they also coincide with the exteriors, a point that is apparently almost always, to judge from what we see, overlooked or paid little attention to by nearly every director. Fairmount Park, the Wishchickon Drive, and the Lancaster Turnpike offer some of the most beautiful exteriors that can be found anywhere in the world and, judging from the locations, we recognized in the picture these and similar localities have been utilized for all they are worth by a director who had a discerning mind.

"THE NIGHTINGALE"

Drama in Five Reels. Written by Augustus Thomas. Produced by the All-Star Feature Corporation.

The delicate art of building a play around a player has been practiced with varying success by a sufficient number of dramatists, though not in recent years at least, by Augustus Thomas. As a playwright, he has given every indication of believing that the play comes first and that the players are there to give it expression; but as a photo-playwright, he is willing to reverse the order. Evidently the determined purpose of the All-Star Company was to find a story in which Ethel Barrymore had every opportunity, and Mr. Thomas set himself the task of devising such a story in preference to adapting a play that was essentially of and for the stage. Altogether, a wise move, for "Mid-Channel," or any one of the subtle dramas acted by Miss Barrymore, probably would have made a sorry showing on the screen. As it is, audiences will find a stage star meeting motion picture actresses on their own ground, so to speak, and giving a beautiful performance in a quite typical photoplay story.

It is a good one, in that it affords Miss Barrymore a wide scope and permits a variety of moods seldom attainable in a strict adaptation of a play kept consistently in one key and progressing along the lines of a definite theme. Few actresses have had equal opportunities to do themselves justice when facing the camera for the first time; so it is only fair to say that Mr. Thomas achieved something well worth doing when he wrote "The Nightingale." Taking a good picture is a natural quality very much in Miss Barrymore's favor, but her playing of Isola Frenati is much more than a series of pretty posturings. She shows an exceptional aptitude for making her meaning clear and giving the ring of truth to a character. Isola is an Italian girl, and whether in good fortune or ill, clothed in calico or silk, Miss Barrymore preserves the same little oddities of manner that are as thoroughly a part of the character's individuality as is physical appearance.

The Thanhouser Three-a-Week

Tuesday, October 20th. “Old Jackson’s Girl.”
This is a two-reel Western drama that throbs with emotion—excitement. It depicts an episode from the life of Jim Jackson—a suspected horse thief—whose daughter is in love with a young ranchman. The thrills which are exhibited before the young couple is finally united, make this an exceptionally interesting photoplay. Note this excellent cast: Dave Thompson, Mayre Hall, Morris Foster, Justus D. Barnes, Clare Kroeil, E. Sherwood and Jack Sullivan.

Sunday, October 25th. “Mr. Cinderella.”
A beautiful playlet based on the fairy tale idea. How little Jimmie—the poor, pitied boy—is given an opportunity by his fairy godfather to visit the county fair and meet the Queen of the Popcorn Trust and enjoy himself immensely, is an interesting film story. The cast includes Nolan Gane, Fan Bourke, E. Turner, J. Myers, Dave Thompson and Mildred Heller.

Advertising as a Sales Agent

IN an experienced writer who is preparing for a leading publication a series of six articles on motion pictures has already evolved an apt simile for the industry.

He calls it a "Klondyke."

This immediately suggests the average magazine writer's superficial viewpoint—and the absurd impressions he conveys—that most picture manufacturers and many exhibitors are millionnaires, and that motion picture riches are easy, quick and abundant.

These articles, by the way, have done, and will continue to do, the industry more harm than almost any one agency.

BUT this particular writer is investigative and analytical. He says the business was a "Klondyke" several years ago.

It was then possible to stick a spade in the ground and strike rich pay dirt.

Today the industry is like every big gold field after its discovery era. It is being worked systematically. Greater successes than ever are to be had, but now only through carefully organized effort.

** * *

THE motion picture industry of today is like the Klondyke of today.

The producing end is becoming more and more systematized.

Labor efficiency, quality production, purchasing foresight, cost accounting—these are taking the place of haphazard and wasteful methods. The exhibiting business is getting down to rock-bottom basis of any retail business, wherein enterprise and economy are the deciding factors in competition.

** * *

MOST important of all because it has been most neglected, the selling end of the film business is becoming organized and standardized.

The old business maxim, that it is easier to produce than to sell, has been borne home with full force.

Distribution is the deciding factor today.

Big concerns are organizing on a selling basis first, believing that production is a later if not a lesser problem.

** * *

AND along with this higher development of sales methods and forces, another phenomenon is under way, just the same thing that happens inevitably in the evolution of every other young industry, namely, every day the desk of the advertising manager is being shoved nearer and nearer to the desk of the sales manager.

** * *

IN other words, it is more and more clearly recognized that the advertising and marketing of films go hand in hand and should be inseparable—that either is inefficient without the other.

** * *

ADVERTISING is selling—either directly or indirectly—the more directly the better. It has got to be direct, unless it is only a preliminary part of a big nationwide campaign that is backed with a huge appropriation.

Advertising has progressed in this field. It is one of the plainest signs of the big advance made in the industry within a year.

Good advertising men have come into the field and they are working along selling lines. It is the accepted order of the day.

One has only to study the advertising pages of the last issue of the Motion Picture News and then compare them with the copy of a year ago to note the great improvement.

** * *

PERHAPS the chief advance made is in "reason-why" or argumentative text and then—most importantly—the fact that it indicates clearly where and how the goods can be obtained.

In other words, these are selling advertisements, every one of them, yoked up closely with a method of distribution.

** * *

ADVERTISING was never meant to tickle the vanity of the advertiser, nor to make his competitor jealous.

Again, it will never be successful if it is baffled by defective distribution.

** * *

THAT is to say, the reader will certainly not respond if he can't get, easily, the goods advertised.

The moral of which, for the advertiser, is: Is it easy for the reader to get what you are asking him to?

Oklahoma League Agitates Higher Prices
Will Start Educational Campaign to Bring Public to a Realization of the Impossibility of Maintaining Five Cent Admissions

Special to Motion Picture News
Muskogee, Okla., Oct. 12.

THE Oklahoma State Branch, No. 23, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, met in special session at the Lee-Hucks Hotel, Oklahoma City, September 29-30. As the meeting was held during the State Fair, the hotels were crowded to the utmost with visitors.

Many exhibitors came in to attend the meeting, and were unable to obtain rooms at the hotels. About thirty-five members were present, including all of the officers: Albert Jackson, Pawhuska, Okla., president; B. H. Powell, Oklahoma City, vice-president; O. McLeod, Oklahoma City, second vice-president; L. W. Brophy, Muskogee, Okla., secretary, and Ralph Talbot, Tulsa, Okla., treasurer.

It was strongly urged that localities be formed in all of the larger towns of the state at once. A publicity campaign was started to educate the public to understand the situation. It is impossible to furnish the high-class film that the public has come to expect for an admission price of five cents in Oklahoma.

A committee of five was appointed to confer with the representatives of the Mutual, Universal and the General Film companies. The film companies' representatives showed themselves to be unanimously in favor of this movement, and agreed to co-operate as far as possible with the members of the league.

The exhibitors of one town, Shawnee, Okla., where there are four five-cent shows, practically agreed before leaving the hall that they would raise the price to ten cents at once. Other features of the convention were the attendance at the State Fair in a body, on Tuesday afternoon, a serving of refreshments, and a smoker Tuesday night at 11 p.m., which was followed up with a cabaret entertainment by sixteen people. The next meeting will take place in February, 1915.

Spokane Operators' Law Thought Too Strict
Exhibitors and Booth Employees Ask Authorities for New Ordinance—Certificate Can Be Revoked for Any of Twenty-two Reasons

Special to Motion Picture News

PROPRIETORS of some local motion picture theatres and a representation of the operators have asked the city council to pass a new ordinance providing for the regulation of operators and for the use of motor-driven machines.

After providing stringent rules governing the building equipment and general arrangement of the operating booths, the ordinance provides that no operator may be employed in any of the houses without a proper certificate from the commissioner of public safety. The operator must register with the commissioner, giving his name, age, residence, experience and where he proposes to work, with an affidavit that the statements are true.

This shall entitle the operator to a certificate for one year. All operators are required to be over twenty-one years of age and each must have had three months' experience.

The following are a few of the twenty-two reasons for the revocation of an operator's certificate:

Failure to display his certificate, smoking in the operating room, intoxication on duty or having liquor in the booth, allowing a booth door to stand open, negligence, carelessness or a dirty booth, failure to report all film fires to the department of public safety.

Kentucky Exchange Urges Organization
Will Hold Up Prices and Keep Bad Accounts at a Minimum, Declares Sheldon of Louisville, in Calling for Concerted Action

Special to Motion Picture News

F. M. SHELDON, manager of the S. & P. Film & Supply Co., is urging the organization of an association of exchange men.

"Such an organization," says Mr. Sheldon, "would have a tendency to hold up prices, in addition to which the exchange men would be greatly benefited by a consequent ability to hold bad accounts to the minimum in number."

Mr. Sheldon suggests that the film companies have a book in which all exhibitors are closely and accurately rated. It is stated that a large number of exhibitors are exceedingly slow in settling accounts. If the exchange men could be organized, they would be in position to command a cash in advance of C. O. D. system of payment for service.

"Film exchanges are forced to pay cash for their films," says Mr. Sheldon, "and there is no reason why the exhibitors should not do business the same." Mr. Sheldon is one of the most consistent boosters for the business in this territory, and is a great believer in the use of liberal advertising space. "The trade journal," he says, "has an advantage over the circular, which is largely used, from the fact that the periodical will reach a great many more exhibitors, at less expense."
"Motion Picture News" Campaign Against War Tax Creates a Sensation at Washington

Even Patrons of the Photoplay Theatres Aroused to Sympathy by Powerful Presentation of Exhibitor's Position—League Heads Urge "News" to Keep Up the Good Work—"News" Is Doing Much to Bring About Organization Within the Industry," Declares Exchange Manager—Brylawski Endorses the Campaign

Special to Motion Picture News

The fact that Motion Picture News saw fit to devote eight pages of its issue dated October 17 to the proposed war tax on the motion picture theatres has caused little less than a sensation in the Capital City. It brought the fact so forcibly before the public that even the patrons of the film drama realized the threat of the tax.

The startling question on the title page, "Have you $100 to throw away?" caught the eye at once and aroused curiosity, as money always does. Of course, the last word before going to press showed that a modification had been made in the bill by the amendment of a proportional tax, according to the seating capacity of the theatre, but this seemed to arouse additional interest.

The prominence of the part Washington is taking in the fight, and especially the work of Fulton Brylawski, proved an additional source of stimulation.

Fulton Brylawski, one of the authors of the amendment to the proposed tax as affecting the motion picture theatre, was especially appreciative of the space and prominence given to the matter. "It is splendid," he said. "And my message to the News is to keep up the good work. The bill is again before Congress for consideration and I shall be at the capitol myself to watch its progress closely."

Wm. P. Herbst, president of the local Exhibitors League, had this to say: "This edition of the News is fine, and shows what can be done. The motion picture men are chiefly making the fight, but the entire theatrical profession will profit by the results."

Sidney B. Lust, manager of Warner's Features, had this to say: "The News deserves much credit for this week's issue."

Nat. Gassier, manager of The Leader, remarked: "The publicity given the war tax situation in the News is what the matter needs. It has given the right man the credit, too, and that man is Fulton Brylawski. The motion picture men have done more in this fight than all the initial share of the opposition put together, and the News is letting the people know what is being done."

G. H. Christoffer, special representative of the World Film Corporation, commented: "The big thing the News is accomplishing in giving so much space to the war tax is showing the advantage of organization and what organization can do. That's what the whole motion picture industry needs, and the News is doing much to bring about that end."

The war tax measure is now before Congress in its amended form.

The bill is not as yet a law and it may be changed before appearing in its final form. While the motion picture exhibitor is but a phase of the theatre business, it is the Motion Picture Exhibitors League that is chiefly responsible for the present amendment. All the vast theatrical enterprises will also profit by this proportional scale of tax, or any other modification of the bill. By united effort, much greater things can be accomplished. This is what the motion picture business needs—organization.

The present tax situation is but one of the many instances that will call for strong organization. Now that the motion picture business has become involved in the federal congress, it is likely to become more conspicuous.

Speaking to Fulton Brylawski on the subject, he had this to say: "The amended bill is before Congress and should be acted upon shortly. We cannot afford to be too sanguine of the outcome. My message to Motion Picture News and every exhibitor is to keep up the good work so splendidly begun."

Managers Association Prepares New Tax Rate

The amendment to the war tax suggested by Fulton Brylawski, secretary of Washington, D. C., Exhibitors' League, has not met with the views of the United Managers Protective Association of New York, inasmuch as the figures, according to Ligon Johnson, secretary of the organization, are too high for the average motion picture theatre.

Mr. Johnson has prepared a scale graded with the purpose of relieving the smallest houses of a burden they are unable to bear, and placing the bulk of the tax on those which can better afford to pay the tax. Copies of the schedule have been sent to all members of Congress and various labor organizations affiliated with the theatrical business. The schedule follows:

It is respectfully suggested that the tax should be based on the theatres' patronage, that is to say a maximum of $100 be placed on Class A theatres in cities of 500,000 population and over, and graded into five divisions, these to be: (1) Theatres in cities of 500,000 population and over; (2) cities under 500,000 and over 250,000; (3) cities under 250,000 and over 100,000; (4) cities under 100,000 and over 15,000; (5) cities under 15,000.

We would further suggest that the theatres be divided into three classes: Class A playing theatrical attractions properly; Class B mixed (so-called small time vaudeville and pictures), and Class C, motion pictures exclusively. This grades the entrance charges to theatres.

To be fair each of these classes should be divided into sections as to seating capacity, that is (1) 300 and under; (2) over 300 and up to 600; (3) over 600 and up to 1,000; (4) over 1,000. This is particularly true of motion picture houses. We believe the following would contribute considerably more than the theatres' present share of any war tax.

In theatres of the first class, in cities of the first division (over 500,000), we suggest a tax of $100; in cities of the second division (over 250,000 but under 500,000), $50; in cities of the third division (over 100,000 but under 150,000), $25; in cities of the fourth division (under 100,000 and over 15,000), $15; in cities of the fifth division (under 15,000), $10.

For theatres of the second class (vaudeville and pictures), in cities of the first division, $50; in cities of the second division, $35; in cities of the third division, $20; in cities of the fourth division, $10; in cities of the fifth division, $7.50.

For motion picture houses in cities of the first division: Theatres seating 1,000 or over, $25; under 1,000 but over 600, $20; under 600, $15. In cities of the second division, seating over 1,000, $20; between 600 and 1,000, $15; under 600, $12.50. In cities of the third division, seating over 1,000, $15; between 600 and 1,000, $12.50; under 600, $10. In cities of the fourth division, seating over 1,000, $10; between 600 and 1,000, $7.50; under 600, $5.

FAMOUS PLAYERS SIGNS CRANE FOR "DAVID HARUM"

In inducing William H. Crane to appear before the camera, the Famous Players Company has achieved a notable result. For many years Mr. Crane re-stressed fabulous offers from a number of important film concerns to prevent one of his great characterizations in motion pictures, and he is one of the last of the more important stars of the contemporary stage to record his art on the screen.

The Famous Players have been equally felicitious in securing the film rights of "David Harum." More than any other of Mr. Crane’s great dramatic successes, not even excluding his sensational triumphs, "Father and the Boys," and "The Senator Keeps House," this play has won the sympathies and admiration of the American public and will probably be recorded as this master artist’s greatest characterization.

The production will be a forthcoming release on the Famous Players program under Paramount distribution.

Film Drama Leads Vaudeville in New Haven

Pol’s Now Runs a Feature as the Headliner of Each Bill—Prices Reduced—Advertises Largely in Dailies

Special to Motion Picture News

The "silent drama" has again delivered a telling blow to the "legit" in this city, in forcing New Haven’s two remaining vaudeville houses—both part of the vast Poli chain of theatres—to take up motion pictures, one almost exclusively, and the other in large measure.

The two houses that have adopted new policies are Poli’s Theatre and Poli’s Bijou Theatre. The first was formerly conducted as a first-class vaudeville house, running two performances a day with pictures almost a negligible factor of each bill. Prices ranged from ten to twenty cents, matinees, and to fifty cents, evenings.

In this house, prices have been reduced so that the highest is twenty-five cents; there are three performances each day—one matinee and two nights; there are no reserved seats, but in their stead a "first-come, first-served" policy; and a feature motion picture is made the headliner of each bill.

As evidence of the high character of the film part of the performance, it may be mentioned that "Cabin" was recently the weekly attraction. The public evidently appreciates good films.

The same policy that now holds sway at Poli’s Theatre was formerly that of the Bijou. Paramount pictures are featured at the Bijou now. The Bijou has exclusive rights to the Paramount first runs, and by the terms of its contract may, and does, show all of the latest releases three months before they can be obtained by any other exhibitor in New Haven. Inasmuch as the Paramount program is considered without peer here, this fact is significant. The pictures form the principal part of the Bijou entertainment.

The manner in which the Poli attractions at both theatres are advertised is in a large measure responsible for the success they are meeting with. Considerable space is taken daily in all of the newspapers, and the amount is increased twice a week at the opening of each new bill, Mondays and Thursdays the pictures are viewed by critics, and written up in the following day’s papers.

Plan to Group All Newark Exchanges

Strand Theatre Manager Urges Distributors in New Jersey City to Take Offices in One Building—Two Accept the Offer

Special to Motion Picture News

All the exchanges in Newark may be under one roof within a few weeks, if plans formulated by Emil Gerstle, manager of the Strand Theatre, Market, West Halsey street, mature. There are many offices in the Strand Theatre building, and some of them are vacant at the present time. There are about half dozen exchanges in Newark, and they are pretty well scattered through the business section of the city.

Mr. Gerstle is trying to get the exchanges to move into the empty offices in his building. Two have already done so. They are the Metropolitan Motion Picture Company and the State Feature Company. Some of the other exchanges have practically agreed to go into the Strand building.

For the convenience of the exchanges, Mr. Gerstle has had erected in the rear of the theatre, a little building specially designed by himself for the storage of films. The little structure, which is about 12 feet wide and 20 feet long, is constructed entirely of metal and it is absolutely fireproof. It is built practically the same as a portable garage. There are five metal doors in the front of the building, each provided with a strong lock, and these doors lead into five compartments in which films may be stored.

The idea has been heartily endorsed by Albert Gasser, chief of the Bureau of Combustibles. Each of the exchanges in the Strand building is given the use of one of the compartments where they may keep their films. The plan is excellent and a similar one might be inaugurated elsewhere to advantage.

CALIFORNIA CONVENTION HUMS WITH BUSINESS

Exhibitors from All Over the State Attend Gathering at San Francisco—Lack of Finances Emphasized by President—Members Demand Regulation of Shipping Rates and Exchange Service—League Will Undertake Membership Campaign and Bind Country Exhibitors Closer to Main Body

Special to Motion Picture News
San Francisco, October 12.

The third annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of California was held in San Francisco on October 6, 7, 8 and 9, and while the attendance was lighter than was expected, in view of the many important questions scheduled for discussion, it was quite representative, exhibiting attending from as far south as San Diego, as well as from the extreme northern section of the state. The convention was originally planned to be held at Sacramento, but at a late date it was decided to change it to San Francisco, in the belief that a larger attendance could be secured.

The meeting was held in the assembly hall of the Phelan Building where the offices of the league are located. The active business session did not commence until afternoon. Morning sessions were taken up with the registration of exhibitors and the planning of committees. At the afternoon session the visitors were formally welcomed to the city by a personal representative of the Mayor and State President Charles Goddard made a short address, which was followed by the naming of the following committees:

Advise Membership Campaign

President Goddard then read his annual address, in which he outlined some of the important work that he hoped would be taken up by the convention. He expressed regret that the membership of the organization was no longer and recommended that the matter of securing new members be earnestly taken up. He advised that a special committee be appointed for organization work and that efforts be made to interest country exhibitors in the work of the league.

He traced the tendency, especially in the large cities, toward the consolidation of small moving picture houses into large concerns, operating theatres rivaling those of the legitimate stage, and declared that in these changes something must be done to protect the small exhibitors who are left. He stated that the small house was still the backbone of the business and that there were many questions that must be decided that affected these almost exclusively.

The President called attention to the fact that the California State Legislature would meet in regular session early in January and urged that a very careful watch be kept on all legislation affecting the moving picture industry.

Urges Agreement on Posters

In dwelling upon the poster question, he expressed the opinion that inasmuch as the posters now being put out advertise the film manufacturers and not the exhibitors, it would be no more than fair if they be furnished free with films. He further suggested that some action be taken toward reaching an agreement with film exchanges to this end.

In glowing language he outlined the wonders of San Francisco, the Exposition City, and trusted that the National convention could be brought here in 1915. He believed that this would be one of the greatest aids to building up a strong State organization and recommended that a committee be named to assist in bringing the convention to California.

In this connection he might be added that the delegates present were enthusiastically in favor of this proposition.

In discussing the finances of the league, President Goddard stated that he found this a humiliating subject. The failure of the state to pay their dues promptly had many times left the treasury practically empty and at times the lack of funds had been embarrassing. He called attention to the fact that the league had been compelled to break its contract with Attorney Leo Kaufmann for this reason and paid a glowing tribute to that gentleman for the very effective work that he had done for the organization, largely without recompense. He stated that there was owing Mr. Kaufmann the sum of $145 and further added that if action was not taken at this meeting to settle the account, he would draw his personal check in this sum.

Beach Proposes Monthly Bulletins

The president closed his address with a statement of appreciation of the action of the Los Angeles exhibitors in again affiliating with the organization and with another appeal for an increased membership.

Secretary W. A. Cory and Vice-President H. S. Beach then took the floor in succession. The latter submitted a proposition calculated to keep exhibitors, especially those in the county districts, in closer touch with the work of the league. He declared that much of the apathy on the part of out of town exhibitors toward the organization was due to the fact that they had no means of learning what was being done, unless, by chance, they happened to come to San Francisco. He proposed that a small bulletin be issued each month, or at such times as would be thought advisable, this to contain a condensed report of what the league was doing, and what it planned to do. This bulletin would be sent to all members of the league, and to others who were eligible to membership. He expressed the opinion that it could be made self-supporting, as many of the exchanges would doubtless be glad of the opportunity to reach customers in this direct manner.

The president named J. Ray Williams, H. S. Beach and W. B. Martin to attend to the proposition. In motion the president also appointed a committee on organization and another on finance, the first consisting of Leo Kaufmann, H. C. Schmidt and L. E. Lund, and the latter of L. Marks, M. E. Cory and W. H. Hills.

Want the Shipping Rates Uniform

W. A. Cory then read several communications from country exhibitors asking that action be taken on the matter of uniform express charges, and of shipping film by parcel post. In the discussion that followed a number of questions were brought up that pertained exclusively to those operating houses in the country districts and it was decided that these questions could be best cared for by a committee of country exhibitors.

Regarding, President Goddard appointed a committee of five from widely separated sections of the State to frame resolutions pertaining to shipping, and kindred subjects, this consisting of W. H. Rapp, chairman, Nick Turner, O. Byers, A. M. Bowles and S. Greenwood.

Mr. Cory then read another communication from a country exhibitor suggesting that action be taken toward inducing light and power concerns to make a change in their system of charging for service. It was suggested that moving picture houses should be granted a rate, as for manufacturing, instead of being called upon to pay the same rates as owners of dwellings.

A communication was then read from the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association asking that moving picture owners throughout the State run slides in their houses protesting against the passage of the proposed eight-hour law, and asking further that the league go on record in opposition to this measure. This proposition aroused a lively controversy, several members making it plain that they were in favor of the eight-hour law, and giving their reasons for this stand.

It was moved and seconded that the communication be filed.

Secretary Cory read a letter from Chas. Rothschild, dated last June, tendering his resignation as an officer in the league, on account of his retirement from the moving picture field. It was moved and seconded, and unanimously adopted, that

Warner Managers Meet in Convention

Exchange Representatives Assemble in Buffalo to Discuss Successful Launching of New Feature and Comedy Program

The successful launching of the new feature and comedy program by Warner's Features, Inc., was the chief topic discussed at a convention of Warner's exchange managers in Buffalo on October 10.

P. A. Powers, president, and O. S. Goan, treasurer and sales manager of the company, conducted the meeting.

The meeting was attended by several exhibitors, and the managers present declared that the new service had stirred up exhibitors throughout their respective territories.

Harry Charnas, of Cleveland, made a report which was typical of that received from each manager. "As a result of the preliminary announcements," said Mr. Charnas, "the Cleveland exchange has been overwhelmed with inquiries and applications for advance bookings. The interest in our new program displayed by exhibitors is really phenomenal."

It has also been rather embarrassing, for the reason that many of these exhibitors have been in a hurry to get started with our program, and wanted us to rush it. I am not overrating the situation when I say that even before its appearance our new program proved an instantaneous success."

At the afternoon session President Powers delivered a short address in which he outlined the development of the Warner's program to its completion. In concluding he said:

"I realize perfectly well that you gentlemen on the firing line have up to now been in a peculiar position. You have been constantly asked by exhibitors why you didn't get the new service started. But remember that you can't prepare and release in a few weeks a program of the quality which we have prepared. If we had rushed matters without regard to quality, the program would have been ready much sooner; but it would then have been an ordinary program—here today, and gone tomorrow. As it is, the first installment of our feature and comedy service now going out to exhibitors represents the highest type of motion picture.

"One of the great events in connection with our new service was the handing together of a dozen or more of the most experienced and successful motion picture makers in the world for the single purpose of providing the Warner's program. This organization is the United Motion Picture Producers, Inc.

"It is a concrete, firmly established organization formed on a sound and permanent basis. Never before in the history of the industry has such an organization for such a purpose been formed. It shows that our own company enjoys the unqualified confidence of the great producers, just as your advance bookings show the confidence exhibitors feel in Warner's Features, Inc.

"We, in conjunction with the United Company, have worked along definite lines in getting the program started—and now that it has started, every exhibitor who has booked it will find that it has been worth waiting for."

Edison Plans Four Strong Series

All by Well-Known Authors—"Below the Dead Line," First Release, Deals with Exploits of Noted Fiction Creation

The Edison Company will launch four new series of photoplays from stories written by well-known authors. There will be no chain of connected episodces. Each story will be of independent and complete interest.

"Below the Dead Line" is a series of strong detective stories by Scott Campbell, and deals with the exploits of a celebrated private detective, Felix Boyd, employed by large financial concerns in New York City. Robert Connell will appear as this character throughout the series. The first, "The Case of the Vanished Belief," was released October 17.

"Young Lord Strantberry," by Robert Barr, a series which appeared in the "Saturday Evening Post," embraces four two-reel subjects in which the young aristocrat will afford an excellent vehicle for Marc MacDermott. The girl with whom the lord is in love will be played by Miriam Nesbit. The initial installment, "The Kings Move in the City," will be released November 27.

"Olive's Opportunities" is the title of a series especially written for the Edison Company by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, the well-known author whose stories are full of virility and action. Mabel Trunnelle will be known as "Olive," the young girl brought up in a gypsy camp, whose parentage is a mystery. Irresistible and full of the joy of living, she will go through many exciting situations. "A Gypsy Madcap" is the first story to be released, on December 1.

"The Girl Who Earns Her Own Living" is a series by Clara Swan, who has written exclusively for the Edison Company for about two years. In this series each story will show the struggle of a young girl to maintain a decent existence, and the girl in each story will be a different character. Each one, however, will be played by Gertrude McCoy.

The first release of these dramatic and human interest stories will be "The Stenographer," on December 5.
“PAY FOR POSTERS!” SAY COAST EXCHANGES

San Francisco Body Meets for Organization Purposes, Appoints Constitution and By-Laws Committee, and Draws Up Tentative Scale of Prices on Paper from One-Sheets to Twenty-four Sheets—Exhibitors Protest Against Advertising Locale of Film Productions

Special to Motion Picture News

San Francisco, October 12.

T HE movement recently inaugurated at San Francisco for the formation of a protective organization among film men has met with general approval, and at a meeting held a few days ago in the Pantages Theatre building the preliminary steps were taken to organize what will probably be known as the San Francisco Film Exchange Men's Board of Trade.

The purposes of the organization, as outlined at this gathering, are to protect local film men from the operations of dead-beats, and to keep a strict check of exhibitors who insist on operating machines which ruin films, and employ operators who show a disregard for the proper handling of the property of exchanges.

The meeting recently held was remarkable for the attendance, practically every exchange in business in San Francisco being represented by one or more, and the extent of the industry here may be judged from the fact that there are more than twenty firms soliciting business.

At Work on a Constitution

It was decided to place the drafting of a constitution and by-laws in the hands of a committee of five, and the following were selected to attend to this work: Tom North, manager of the San Francisco branch of George Klein Attractions; Morris L. Markowitz, head of the California Film Exchange; Sol Lesser, president of the Golden State Film Exchange and the All Star Feature Distributors; J. Crane, manager of the San Francisco and Los Angeles branches of the Pacific Mutual Film Corporation, and O. V. Traggard, head of the Union Film Supply Company and the Supreme Features Corporation.

The services of a corporation lawyer have been secured, and as soon as the constitution and by-laws have been completed they will be presented to the organization for its approval and a permanent body will then be formed.

In addition to protecting its members against bad debts and unskilled operators the organization will probably attempt to correct some of the evils that now attend the distribution of posters. It is planned to have everyone pay for posters and the following list of prices for mounted stock was tentatively agreed upon as being reasonable: 1 sheet, 5 cents; 3-sheet, 25 cents; 6-sheet, 40 cents; 8-sheet, 50 cents; 9-sheet, 75 cents; 12-sheet, 75 cents; 16-sheet, $1.00; and 24-sheet, $1.50.

It is not the intention of the organization to make any attempt to raise prices of either films or paper, but merely to protect its members against those who prey upon exchanges, as well as upon exhibitors. The latter have suffered heavily of late through the tricks of imposters and will welcome the efforts of film men to minimize the operations of these.

Seek Law Against War Films

The success that has been met with by several exhibitors and exchange men in San Francisco in securing injunctions against the Police Department to prevent interference with the exhibition of moving pictures showing war scenes has caused the Chief of Police to change his tactics and is attempting to secure the passage of an ordinance by the Board of Supervisors making it unlawful to display so-called war pictures in local moving picture theatres until after the close of the present war in Europe.

The Police Committee of the Board of Supervisors, consisting of Oscar Hocks, Fred L. Hilmer and Edward L. Nolan, has agreed to the passage of this measure, as has also the Judiciary Committee, consisting of Charles A. Nelson, Ralph McLean and Alexander T. Vogelsang.

Motion picture interests heard of the proposed legislation at a late hour and legal representatives, including Attorney A. S. Newburgh, were present.

Mr. Newburgh voiced opposition to such an ordinance, but the legislation was unanimously approved by the committee.

Theattorneys will attend the next meeting of the Board of Supervisors in numbers, as it is understood that other matters affecting their interests will be incorporated in the ordinance that is being drafted.

Against “Labeling Localities” in Film

The proposition that is being agitated in several large producing centres of having the name of the locality in which the picture is made appear upon the screen does not meet with general approval on the part of San Francisco exhibitors, in spite of the fact that this place is in the heart of an important producing district. In speaking of this matter one prominent theatre owner said:

“The face of it all seems like a good thing, but I have arrived at the conclusion that the labeling of films in this manner will do more harm than good. Contrary to the general impression, I have found that my patrons are not at all anxious to find out where a film has been made.

“If it is a Canadian scene, they go away from the theatre with a better feeling than if they found that it was a picture made in the hills back of San Francisco. Or if it is a picture illustrating an action that took place in the Civil War a much more profound impression is created if the audience is led to believe that it has been made in the region where the action actually took place. I think that scenic subjects are the only ones that should be labeled with the locality in which they are made, unless it be photo plays enacted on the original ground.”

M. E. Cory, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of San Francisco, and vice-president of the National organization, is another who believes that the labeling of the locality is a mistake in idea. He states that the illusion that is created is one of the chief charms of moving pictures, and that to destroy this would be to cause the public to lose interest in them. He expresses the opinion that if the plan were to be followed out generally a loss might result to exhibitors.

With Exhibitors and Exchanges

B. E. Rosewald, who formerly conducted the Sherman Theatre in the Mission district of San Francisco, has taken over the management of the Imperial Theatre at Eureka. This latter city is located in the great redwood belt of California, and is the largest city in the United States not connected by rail with the outside world. By the end of October, however, a railroad from San Francisco will be in running shape, and business is expected to be greatly stimulated as a result.

The Gold Medal Attractions Company opened for business at 107 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, Cal., on October 1, under the management of Wm. Citron, formerly with the General Film Company. The Photoplay Theatre at Burlingame, Cal., is to be enlarged at an early date, and a number of improvements will be made to the present equipment.

The Movea Film Service is one of the latest concerns to enter the producing field at San Francisco. This concern was incorporated here with a capital of $150,000 by John C. Terry and H. M. Shields, newspaper men; C. D. Longhurst, Timothy Healy and T. E. J. Gardner, the latter a photo-engraver.

An invention of importance in the manufacture of comic cartoon films is controlled by this concern, and it is claimed that pictures of this kind can be turned out in one-tenth the time now required. In addition to a domestic business this firm plans to enter the export field, principally in South Central America.

The Empire Theatre, Fresno, Cal., which was to have been opened for the fall and winter season about the first of October, was damaged by fire last week.
The new White Theatre at Fresno, Calif., is nearing completion, and will be opened early in November, according to the present plans.

G. F. Gillette has purchased the Webster Theatre at Alameda, Calif., and will expend several thousand dollars in remodeling work and in new equipment.

J. Roy Sibley has purchased the Fairyland Theatre on Devisadero street, San Francisco, Calif., built and conducted by Cory Bros. --- M. L. Langhorst.

Regent, $100,000 Syracuse House, City's Pride

Decorations Throughout Make Theatre a Temple of Beauty—Will Show Pictures Appealing to Critical Public in Western New York City

Special to Motion Picture News

SYRACUSE theatregoers have reason for self-congratulation on the magnificent $100,000 photoplay house, the Regent, which has been added to the city's places of amusement.

The Regent is claimed to be one of the most beautiful houses in America. On Genesee street through a lobby beautifully decorated in clausaline blue and old ivory, one enters the foyer and the eye beholds a vision of splendor. There is a hint in the lobby of this restful color scheme, which makes the playhouse itself a triumph of interior decoration. Rich carpets of velvet in blue cover the floor, blending into the old ivory decoration of the walls with their beautiful panels of blue silk tapestry.

The foyer leads across the entire width of the auditorium. Soft tones, indirect lighting and side decorations tend to make the immense space a cozy place. The orchestra seats run down to the stage at an easy angle and the first impression caught in the palace of old ivory and blue is one of spaciousness. The seats are roomy enough for the largest person and so placed that there will be no complaints of knee kinks.

Built into a $10,000 pipe organ, which is augmented by the Regent's well balanced orchestra. The organ fills the space over the private boxes on each side of the house, the bronze gold of the organ pipes adding dignity to the details of the entire interior of the auditorium.

The mezzanine floor is built so as to eliminate the obstructive columns on the first floor. The seating capacity of the Regent is about 1,500, of which 1,200 seats are on the main floor, the balance consisting exclusively of box seats on the mezzanine floor.

The Regent is of steel, concrete and brick construction and is declared to be absolutely fireproof. The exits are numerous and the aisles wide. A spacious and beautifully furnished reception room is placed on the left of the foyer for the comfort of women and a large smoking room for the men is placed on the right.

We also use a weekly program in which we list our films for the week, together with the principals in the cast. It is a worthy commentary that our competitor follows in our tracks in almost every new departure we undertake.”

“WE seldom get out a dodger. These, we have found, are usually stowed beneath bridges or in culverts. If not, they are thrown into a yard and the wind blows them out of the way.”

“Our weekly programs, by the way, are distributed at the door of the theatre. I forgot to mention that besides the list of films for the week we print items of interest pertaining to the films listed or advertised as coming, and make little house-talks.”

“The mediums are for purposes of specific advertising. It is the kind of advertising you just naturally have to do.”

“Another medium of specific advertising is the screen. It is very effective if properly used. We use slides furnished by the exchanges sparingly, as we can make a more effective slide ourselves. I have had sign and card writing and draughting experience, besides some ability at design and cartoons, and I make the slides.”

“The method is simple. To an ounce of Bissell’s show card color add an ounce of ordinary lump prepared chalk, thin with water, and with a soft brush apply smoothly to clean slide glasses. When dry, trace design and lettering lightly with a soft pencil and etch with an orange stick, such as is used for manicuring.”

“If you will get thin colored gelatin to cover the wording you wish to stress, and cover the slide with another glass, using binding tape, you will have a very desirable slide. We keep a half dozen or more glasses coated at all times and can ‘knock out’ a slide in a very few moments.”

“This is a feature exclusive with us in our town. Should call come for a physician in the audience, or some person whose presence is urgently required at home, was can shoot a slide on the screen within fifteen seconds.”

“However, these things are not unusual and though they are not unexpected in a first class picture show, they help to keep you in the ‘live class.’”

“But no matter what personal touch you may have the power to put into your daily advertising, it is the broader advertising which is going to lift you into the limelight. Do some things that will make the people talk.”

“Young indulgence in printer’s ink, no matter how forceful and convincing your language, will not suffice to win you spurs as a live wire. We have pulled some stunts that compelled attention.”

“And though there was nothing remarkable about any of them, they had the virtue of being unique in this town. First in order came a lavish decoration of the building when the Louisiana State University opened for its regular session last fall. We had opened in the summer when the students were on vacation. So, as we were new, we determined to trim in the college and national colors, and thus identify ourselves amongst these eight hundred possible patrons.”

“We also had a magnificent drop painted with the big tiger head emblem of the L. S. U. A. A. set in the center as though breaking through the colors of the University. It made an even bigger hit than was anticipated, and made this theatre part of the college life and activities.”

“Then along came the World’s Series. Investigation revealed that no one had ever subscribed for the full direct returns in this city. So we had a talk with the Western Union and came away with a contract for full returns with private loop right to our stage.”

what we intended to do. And, lo! the tongues began to wag. Most of the vagging, however, were 'knocks.'

"Some folks thought we had nerve to suppose that anybody would pay a quarter to hear baseball returns. These same ones kept to the first day, of course, the second and would have paid a half dollar the third. The thing was incepted as an advertising proposition and we got the kind of advertising you cannot buy, and, besides, it yielded a profit.

"We are stout on the returns of all L. S. U. football played away from here. On another occasion we hired a circus dare-devil to do perilous trapeze work on a trapeze suspended thirty-five feet above our roof.

"Advertising, yes, we believe in every kind of advertising, every legitimate kind. We use lots of signs, all of our own make. But we positively balk at chalk signs on sidewalks. Ours is the kind to look up to, not the sort to be trodden on.

"We advertise consistently and truthfully. It does not pay to promise more than you can deliver. We insist on polite demeanor on the part of our employees. We are succeeding because we have been leaders, because we have a properly equipped house, use splendid films, read and absorb most of what's worth while in the trade publications, and devote all of our time exclusively to our own business.

"Our enthusiasm is at as high a pitch today as it was the day we launched the good, old ship Theatre Louisiana."

"TREY O' HEARTS" FILMED AMID DANGER

It is an interesting fact, and one that is not generally known, that, in view of the unusual dangers that attend the production of the "Trey O'Hearts" series, the company is not allowed to leave the studio grounds at Hollywood, Cal., for the purpose of staging scenes in the serial unless they are accompanied by one of the company physicians from the hospital at Universal City.

With him goes an emergency kit complete enough for him to set up a temporary field hospital should the occasion arise.

ALBANY VAUDEVILLE HOUSE OPENS AS FILM THEATRE

Special to The Motion Picture News

The Colonial Theatre, Albany, N. Y., seating 1,800 and originally built for vaudeville, has opened as a motion picture house.

Some of the best film dramas that can be secured will be shown, and it is expected that the promoters will be rewarded by crowded houses.

The first programs have been rewarded with good audiences, and the outlook is favorable.

Washington Official Upholds Exhibitors

Commissioner Siddons Sees in Managers' Previous Stand on Moral Film Questions a Readiness to Show Unbiased War Pictures

Special to The Motion Picture News

THE observation of the national neutrality in motion pictures, as requested by President Wilson, was the subject of a discussion recently by Commissioner F. L. Siddons, of the District of Columbia. He said in part:

"We have always found that the operators of motion picture theatres have been ready and eager to cooperate with us in keeping their productions all that they should be from the point of view of morals, and I believe that they will be just as ready to avoid offending in the matter of the spirit of our neutrality.

"It would, of course, be most unfortunate if Washington, the seat of the strongest of the neutral governments, should allow the exhibition of strikingly partisan films which could not but stir up widespread unpleasantness and resentment.

"Regarding the position that the civil authorities would have in this matter, the Washington Post made the following comment:

"The powers of the commissioners to censor films, or in respect to the licenses of theatres under any circumstances are not clear, and become increasingly doubtful when a question of constructive violation of neutrality is involved.

"It is probable that the whole matter will be carefully examined by the corporation counsel, and it is thought that some way can be found to prevent the display of pictures (in most cases 'made in America') that show chapter after chapter of reverses to the 'enemy's' arms, the enemy being varied according to whether the films have a French, English-Russian or a German-Austrian focus."

From the viewpoint of the exhibitor the agitation of the civil authorities seems to be without due cause. The fact that the films to which reference has been made have previously passed the rigid censorship of New York is proof positive that they should preclude objection.

"We believe that, as before, the cinema will continue to thrive, and that the American public will continue to enjoy entertainment in a medium which is free from improper influences. And, finally, we believe that the motion picture will continue to grow in favor and that it will be recognized as a legitimate form of entertainment."

"We believe that the motion picture will continue to grow in favor and that it will be recognized as a legitimate form of entertainment."

Producer Deplores Newspaper Attitude

Edgar Lewis Says Dailies Use War "Stills" More Apt to Excite Race Feeling Than the Average Military Photo Drama

EDGAR LEWIS, producing director of two multi-reel war photoplays being exhibited in New York, while approving the attitude of the German-American Chamber of Commerce with respect to the production and exhibition of "faked" scenes of atrocities on the screen, insists upon the right of film manufacturers and the National Board of Censorship to determine what may be distasteful to motion picture audiences.

"While I deplore the exhibition of pictures showing 'atrocities' or horrifying scenes," said Mr. Lewis, "there is no reason why the picture theatre; and as long as pictures do not lead to expressions of partisanship on the part of the audience there is no reason why a public official should interfere.

"Daily I have seen in the public press 'still' photographs of war scenes with captions and graphic descriptions beneath which showed that the paper was not unbiased; in store windows throughout the city I have seen views of the German army 'bearing down on the old Allies' lines,' and of Scottish Highlanders and French cavalry 'decimating the ranks of the Imperial German Guard and the Uhlans.' All of which pictures, it is needless to say, were taken from stories to four years ago at manoeuvres.

"If the newspapers are permitted to print pictures showing war or alleged war scenes, and I do not deny their right to go as far as they think best, why not also allow the showing of moving pictures of the war be barred when pains are taken to offend none of the belligerent nations?"
PRACTICAL ORGANIZATION FOR CITY EXHIBITORS

P. Rosenson, an Exhibitor of Wide Experience in His Own Field and a Thoughtful Observer of General Business Conditions, Advocates Plan for Greater New York Managers to Combat Adverse Legislation Which Might Be Solution of a Difficult Problem

The following letter from P. Rosenson, manager of the Greenpoint Star Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., a man who has a wide knowledge not only of the motion picture industry but of business conditions generally, will be of interest to exhibitors throughout the country.

Mr. Rosenson, who does not believe in an organization policy which shall result in an association entering into politics for obtaining the results necessary to solve matters affecting the rights of exhibitors, has outlined a plan which demands the serious consideration of every owner of a motion picture theatre. The details follow:

I am opposed to the organization affiliating with any political faction. As a civic body we ought to be stronger than a political faction. As a body of exhibitors we ought to be stronger than any other civic body.

I am opposed to anyone who says, "I know senators by their first names. I want some funds of the organization so that I may go to the state capitol and tell them I want favorable legislation."

Such a course has always proven ineffective. If the plan I have laid down, which will be explained later, is followed, such a course will be unnecessary.

I am opposed to the organization requesting members to show partisan political slides. In my plan I will make it clear that our activity in politics will be to defeat those who oppose us in legislative matters, but not to affiliate with any political faction. In other words, we should demand legislation on pain of defeat of those who are against us.

Plan of Reorganization

I am opposed to the organization's favoring benefits at the request of officials who have discretionary powers to injure our business. It favors of petty bribery, and it would tend to weaken the organization.

With a view to remedying these conditions and mainly for the purpose of procuring favorable legislation and combating adverse legislation, I have laid down a plan of re-organization, embodied in a constitution and by-laws which I have drafted and which were approved at a meeting of exhibitors by no less than 230 members attending, and which is now in effect.

We would now have been on the high road of a strong Greater New York organization if we were not interrupted by an attempt to amalgamate the two Greater New York factions. (I happen to be the chairman of the Amalgamation Committee of the I. M. P. A. faction.)

Here is the plan of reorganization. In other words, this is the constitution and by-laws which are in effect, but will not be enforced until after the election of officers.

Greater New York is divided into senatorial districts. Each district will elect a chairman who will be known as the executive member of the district and will be the representative to the executive board.

The ruling body will be an executive board consisting of officers elected at a general meeting of all the members of the association, and of the representatives from each senatorial district. There will be a general president and a vice-president from each borough, who will be president of the members of his respective borough.

How It Works Out

Regular meetings of the general association (of all the members) will be held quarterly. Meetings of the executive board monthly. Meetings of districts monthly.

Benefits for members are provided for, such as free service of counsel, etc. All details necessary to conduct an unselfish organization are fully provided for.

It will be observed that each senatorial district consists of three aldermen, three assemblymen, one state senator and one congressman. If legislation is required it is the duty of each executive member (senatorial district chairman) to go to his alderman, assemblyman or congressman, whichever the case may be, and tell them or him that he (the executive member) is charged with procuring favorable action from the legislators of his district.

Should any legislator vote against exhibitors' measures, an investigation will be made to find out if the executive member has neglected his duty, and if found delinquent he will be replaced by another executive member. If, however, the legislator has defied the exhibitors, it will be the duty of the executive member to endeavor to defeat his election. It is understood that the executive member has the backing of the entire organization.

It is reasonable to believe that under these arrangements not only will legislation be procured on its merits, but it will tend to strengthen the organization for social and other beneficial purposes. The incentive lying in the numerous offices it will distribute. (Twenty-five chairmen, four vice-presidents, and many other offices and committees.)

Dayton May Agitate for City Lighting Plant

Exhibitors Make Accusation of Rate Discrimination by Local Light and Power Company—Company Promises an Answer

Special to Motion Picture News

INCENSED at the alleged discrimination against various motion picture houses of the city, the local branch of the Exhibitors League has announced its intention of joining in the agitation for a municipal electric lighting plant unless the Dayton Light & Power Company grants a uniform and reasonable rate for electric power to all theatres.

According to members of the league, rates to the motion picture houses vary from two cents a kilowatt hour to nine cents per hour. A downtown theatre gets this lowest rate, while exhibitors in outlying sections are compelled to pay the higher rate.

The Dayton film men say they might use their screens in a combined movement to foster the idea of a municipally owned plant, unless action is taken to relieve the situation, and arrangements are being made to call a meeting of the league members to consider the matter.

At a meeting during the past week of the exhibitors' organization, a committee composed of Wm. Hemsteger, of the Royal; Julius Leopold, of the Mecca; Sherman Coarse, of the Soldiers' Home Theatre, and Bert Fiala, of the Alhambra, was appointed to interview officials of the local electric lighting company in regard to a uniform rate for electric power to motion picture houses of the city.

The lighting company received the delegation in good spirit and promised to give an answer this week.

Results are already apparent today. Agents have been sent out by the lighting plant for the purpose of securing data on the amount of current used by the respective theatres, number of lights, etc. A coming vote at the hands of the people on the question of a $500,000 bond issue for a municipal lighting plant has a bearing on the situation.

JERSEY BLUE LAWS WORK HARDSHIP

Sunday Closing Results in Newark Motion Picture Patronage Going to New York City, Where Theatres Are Permitted to Remain Open on That Day — Exhibitors Realize Need of Strong Organization to Amend Statute in Their Favor NEED of a strong state-wide organization of motion picture exhibitors has never been more keenly felt in this city than it is today.

Newark, it seems, may be a battle ground on which will be fought out a question of vital importance to the film men throughout the State — whether or not Sunday performances shall be permitted under the law. They are not today, although Sunday amusements which are far more objectionable in character are permitted to go on without interruption.

Impelled by increasing competition and a noticeable falling off in business consequent to general commercial and industrial depression brought on by the European war, a little group of men directly interested in local amusement enterprises is determined to force the question to an issue.

This will mean carrying the fight into the state legislature, for to legalize Sunday picture shows the Assembly and Senate will have to amend the old Blue Laws which are still in force in New Jersey.

Campaign Against Blue Laws

The campaign started about a month ago. It was started by Sigfried Leschziner, a prominent real estate operator. Mr. Leschziner is a member of the Chelsea Securities and Investment Company, which controls the Paramount theatre, Broad and Hill streets, probably the highest class motion picture house in the city. The concern also controls the Orpheum theatre, devoted to stock productions.

Associated with Mr. Leschziner in the Sunday opening movement were several other men prominent in the local motion picture business, among them Emil Gerste, manager of the Strand theatre, the most beautiful motion picture house in the city.

A meeting of the managers was held in Mr. Leschziner's office. Many of them responded to the call and heartily indorsed Sunday opening. Other meetings followed and a committee was finally appointed to take the matter up with the authorities.

State Organization Needed for Fight

A conference was held with Chief of Police Michael Long. The chief admitted that he did not see any harm in Sunday picture shows, but he said there was a law against them and he was doing his duty to enforce the law. He advised the committee to take its troubles to the state legislature and try to have the law revoked. There the matter stands for the present, but it will not rest long if the hackers of the movement have their way.

But the Newark exhibitors stand alone in their fight. They can not fall back for support on a powerful state organization. To wage a propaganda for Sunday theatre opening will cost a lot of money, for it will probably be hotly opposed.

Where the money is coming from is a question, for to try to raise the necessary financial support from individual exhibitors would be like hunting for hen's teeth.

Sentiment among the managers has been carefully sounded by the representatives of Motion Picture News. Without exception, all who were interviewed declared themselves strongly in favor of Sunday opening. Some went so far as to say that they absolutely had to have the extra day to make both ends meet.

"We don't think there is anything objectionable in people going to the theatres on Sunday," said Mr. Leschziner.

"In cities of churches like Brooklyn and New York City, the theatres are allowed to have Sunday performances, and they are not harmful.

Want to Keep Money in Newark

"This town is closed tight on Sundays, and as a result between $50,000 and $100,000 goes out of Newark into New York each week. The theatre people are injured directly, and all of the tradesmen and property holders in the city are hurt indirectly. If our theatres are open on Sunday we will give the people something to stay home for, and we will keep Newark money in Newark."

"Many of our motion picture houses pay heavy rent and enormous taxes, and the rent and taxes run on Sundays just as well as week days, and the theatre men have to pocket their losses."

"We don't want to run 'humpy dumpty' shows, but clean decent performances, which certainly do no harm, but on the other hand, give people harmless amusement and keep them away from more objectionable pursuits."

"But the law does not permit us to give these entertainments, and we don't want to violate the law. The next thing to do is to amend the statutes. I would like to have this question submitted to a referendum of every theatre-goer in the state."

"I think we ought to have some help from the film corporations. It means a lot to us, but the benefit to them can not be overlooked."

"I have spent some of my money and more of my time pushing this thing along. We have got it now to the point where it has got to be made a state-wide, public movement, and how we are going to carry it through, I don't know."

Members at Meeting Held in Plankington House Decide to Stand Shoulder to Shoulder and Make Strong Fight Against Adverse Legislation—Twelve Hundred Dollars Subscribed to Finance Ball—

Photo Play Put On at "Legitimate" House Draws Capacity

_Special to Motion Picture News_

NOT only is the Motion Picture Association of Milwaukee not going to disband, but it is going to enter into the fight against adverse legislation and for better co-operation among the exhibitors with greater vigor than ever. This was decided at a meeting held at the Club Room of the Plankington House.

It was a record breaking meeting in all respects, over fifty per cent of the members being present; great enthusiasm was displayed by the exhibitors.

It was decided to hold another ball this year, owing to the successful result of last year’s ball, an affair that was termed “the model ball of the season” by Manager Grieb of the Auditorium.

Twelve hundred dollars was subscribed by the members to finance the ball and twice the amount would have been available if it had been desired. The lists were closed two minutes after the call for funds was made. The list of those donating and the amounts are as follows: James Cochran, $500; Henry Trinz, $300; Tom Saxe, $200; C. H. Phillips, $50; B. K. Fischer, $50; George Fischer, $50; J. H. Silliman, $50; Col. Frueiss, $50, and Otto Andries, $50.

Money for Preliminary Expenses

This money is desired merely for the preliminary expenses of the ball and will be returned to the donors after the ball. The purpose of this ball is not only to advertise the motion picture industry as a whole to the people of Milwaukee, but to raise funds to conduct the fight against adverse legislation at Madison this winter.

A governing committee on the ball was appointed which will have full charge of all arrangements and the conducting of the ball. The committee is composed of George Fischer, Henry Trinz and J. H. Silliman. Henry Trinz was also appointed treasurer of the fund.

A letter was read from James Sherwood, president of the Wisconsin Photoplay Association, calling upon all members for their support in the movement and asking them to work for two hundred members—the mark the officers have set for the coming year.

Everything points to a wonderful rejuvenation of the interest in both the state and city organization, many members who have heretofore been considered unapproachable having signified their intentions of joining either one or both of the organizations.

Motion pictures have again put a crimp into the box offices of the "legitimate" and vaudeville houses and demonstrated their superiority as a business getter, even when shown at a house that was long considered impossible for anything but German stock and concerts.

Film Drama Mentioned Editorially

"Neptune’s Daughter" is the photoplay that has put over the impossible this time. It was booked for the Pabst theatre recently with the hopes that it would at least pay the rent of the theatre while it remains idle, waiting for the opening of the German stock. It was realized, however, that the picture was going to do more than just pay the rent and all week long it played to capacity houses.

And not only did it play to capacity houses all week, but the Davidson Theatre, Milwaukee’s only legitimate two dollar house, bowed to film drama and booked the picture for a solid week, leaving Milwaukee without any big attraction. But this was not all. The Free Press devoted an editorial to the production, something that has never or seldom been done for a theatrical attraction, let alone a photoplay.

Naturally, the theatre men were a little upset over the affair, as the Pabst was the only house that played to capacity during the week, and they are waiting in fear and trembling for the next blow from the formerly despaired motion picture.

The placing of "Neptune’s Daughter" at the Davidson and the booking of "Cabiria" at the Pabst left but two burlesque houses, two vaudeville and a stock house outside the ranks of motion pictures, a rather peculiar situation in a city of 400,000 people.

The wonderful success of "Neptune’s Daughter" but demonstrates the opening there exists in Milwaukee for a twenty-five cent feature house, playing but four times a day for week stands. It would not be surprising to have some outsider come into the city and establish a feature house of this kind, as the big local exhibitors seem unwilling to open this sort of a house, though they all admit that there is room for one.

Minnesota Association to Have Exposition

_Organization Is Assured of 300 Exhibits by Manufacturers of Films and Equipment at Its Convention—Program for General Public_

_Special to Motion Picture News_

A MOTION picture exhibition, aimed to bring the theatre-going public together on better terms, and to show the progress of the business, will be conducted by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Minnesota on October 27, 28 and 29, in the West Hotel, Minneapolis.

The exhibition which the association hopes will rival those conducted in connection with the national conventions, will be in conjunction with the first semi-annual convention of the association. Already the association is assured of three hundred exhibits, and the program has been made to appeal to the general public as well as the exhibitors.

There were some scoffers when Harry Green, president of the association, and W. A. Steffes, secretary, proposed such an exhibition. Some believed that it was too big an undertaking for a new state body.

According to these men who have had the direct management of it, however, every member has given unreserved support, all have gone into the game, and the result is that the exhibition will be one of the big events of the fall for the Northwest.

All the exhibitors of the Northwest have been invited to join in the big time, and many manufacturers of films and equipment have taken space.

The lobby of the hotel has been turned over to the exhibition, and the second floor as well will be used for the exhibits. One feature will be a continuous exhibition of films to the exhibitors. Educators, city officials and professional men will attend, and have an opportunity, if they don’t already know, to learn the story of business men that are furnishing the entertainment for 80 per cent. of the Minneapolis population.

When the members are not entertaining, teaching or learning for themselves, they will boost for the state organization. Any exhibitor who attends this convention and gets away without lining up for film progress will have to be mighty smooth or mighty mean.

Governor A. O. Eberhart, Mayor Wallace G. Nye and other officials will cooperate in making the convention and exhibition a success.

Only One Two Dollar House Open—September, Formerly Its Best Month, Finds Theatre Dark Part of Time

Motion Picture News Milwaukee, Oct. 13. The one dollar and fifty and two-dollar attractions have almost become a nonentity in the local amusement field. Ever since the advent of the motion picture as a factor in the theatrical business the high price attractions have been losing their grip on the theatre-going public until now there is but one house in the city playing high price attractions. This is the Davidson, which is having anything but an easy time of it.

This year for the first time in the history of the house it was dark during September.

This is an unusual situation in view of the fact that the fall is usually considered the best time for theatre attractions, and capacity houses have been the rule all over the city in the cheaper priced theatres and the motion picture shows.

Cleveland Judge Endorses Motion Pictures

No Cases of Juvenile Delinquency Traceable to Films, Declares Addams Before Exhibitors’ Meeting—Neff Reports Protest on War Tax

Special to Motion Picture News Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 14. Two important matters were brought to the attention of the Cleveland theatre owners on October 8, when the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League No. 1 convened in its regular meeting.

M. A. Neff, president of the Exhibitor’s League of Ohio attended the meeting and called the assembly’s attention to the protest he has registered with Secretary of State Bryan, Senator Atlee Pomerene and other state representatives against the proposed war tax on picture theatres.

The exhibitors recommended that the state executive committee decide upon January 16 and 17 as the dates for the convention to be held here, so that concerted action can be decided upon in advance of bills to be presented in the legislature.

The second matter of importance was the vindication given the theatres of the charge of contributing to the delinquency of children. Judge Addams of the Juvenile Court and T. L. Lewis, chief probation officer of that court, spoke in vindication of the motion picture theatre.

Sifting down the cases which had come before them, the two men declared that few of them were traceable to the picture show, and these few only indirectly.

"The picture show has the power to do either evil or good," Judge Addams said. "The screen is now, and as time advances will come more and more in use as an educational device."

"The motion picture exhibitor can and does perform his share in social advancement. The quality of films exhibited is high, and in the main there can be no criticism."

Mr. Lewis found his only complaint in the lurid poster, which he declared the exhibitors are gradually eliminating.

HOW ADVERTISING MADE A THEATRE

WHAT may be done by a little judicious advertising and the presentation of high-class films, to boost business, is shown by the history of the Winter Garden Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

For some time as Fitzgough Hall, the theatre, tried to struggle along, but the promoters could not make a go of it and went into bankruptcy. Then the property was taken over by the General Theatre Company, of Buffalo, of which J. A. Schuchart is president, and for the past month has been doing a lively business.

The name was changed from Fitzgough Hall to the Winter Garden. The theatre was redecorated and other minor changes made. J. A. Kelly was appointed manager and opened the house with a three weeks’ run of "Neptune’s Daughter," featuring Annette Kellerman. Since then the theatre has been producing features, changing twice weekly, at ten cents admission. In some cases the features are ones that had been seen here before, in another section of the city, but most of the pictures shown are first run in Rochester.

Recently Edgar L. Weil, one of the best-known men in the motion picture business, came down to take charge of the house.

Mr. Weil has had six years' experience in motion pictures, and before that conducted penny arcades. He was the first to conduct a really big picture house in New York, the Unique, on Fourteenth street. He put in three years running the Strand, in Toronto. Mr. Weil has just recovered from an illness of six months, this being his first assignment since he was taken sick.

THE progressive management of the Lehigh Orpheum Theatre, South Bethlehem, Pa., has added a feature to its program which has attracted considerable attention. Besides the usual list of coming bills and press clippings for "between-the-acts" reading the booklet contains a large insert illustrated with half tone half-tone illustrations of the play. This instantly catches the attention of the patrons. The prizes, or souvenirs, given away consist of household articles. Every woman purchasing a ticket is given another ticket which entitles her to some article.

Before trying out this scheme, Mr. Grove says Saturday night was the worst night of the week. Now, it is one of the best. "The giving of souvenirs," he says, "is what made Saturday nights for me, and although it has increased my expenses, it has increased the receipts so much as to make it worth while. I think it is a good proposition for any exhibitor to try if he has a "hard" night to contend with.

PRICES for women cannot fail to draw big, no matter what a manager uses so long as it is something free.

MANAGER FRANK HARRIS, of the Empress Theatre, Sixteenth and Douglas streets, Omaha, finds public-spiritedness to be one of the steps to success. The accompanying photograph shows the Empress as it was decorated during Ak-Sar-Ben (Nebraska spelled backward) week in Omaha. This is the big fete season of the State, and tens of thousands of visitors come to Omaha. To appreciate the actual sight, one must know that the flags shown in the picture are either red, green and yellow (the carnival colors), or the red, white and blue of the country’s flag. Around the entrance the myriad of lights were also in the carnival colors, and the scheme was carried out in the interior decorations.

Manager Harris was one of half a dozen business men in his block who banded together and paid a big brass band to play along the block several times daily during the week. Did it help? Of course, it did.

"I had this picture taken to show the decorations, not the crowds," said Mr. Harris, "Had I wanted to, I could have shown the sidewalk filled with people and the crowd extending into the street."

During the week extra shows were put on in the morning. All the local theatres did that, and were filled. Manager H. W. Cowdroy, of Elite No. 2, 1318 Farnam street, said his theatre was filled with some of the largest crowds he ever had. All the exhibitors made special efforts to put on pictures that would be the most entertaining to the visitors.

It is safe to say when the visitors left Omaha they did so with a distinct impression of the progressiveness of the Omaha motion picture exhibitors, among the leaders of whom is Manager Frank Harris, of the Empress.

BOUNCE ATTENDANCE WITH PRIZES

SYLVESTER GROVE, manager of the Preston Theatre, and one of the live wire exhibitors in Louisville, Ky., has hit upon a plan which has greatly added to the revenue of his house.

Some time ago Mr. Grove noticed that the attendance on Saturday nights was extremely light, despite the fact that he thought it should be one of the best.

He came to the conclusion that people in his section were probably going to downtown theatres on Saturday, and set about to find a way to bring them to his house.

He began a system of giving prizes to every woman who attended the show on Saturday night. The attendance increased quickly.
“BE A WOOZY”—SOME LIVE ADVERTISING

MANAGER FRANK HAWKINS, of Los Angeles, to advertise "The Patchwork Girl of Oz," secured the original beast known as the Woozy from the Oz company, placed it on a big truck gaily decorated with banners, and put on a fairy land parade, which created amusement wherever it was seen. The beast received considerable publicity. One newspaper, the Los Angeles Tribune, which carries a regular motion picture department, published a half column double story with a big half-tone picture under this heading:

Woozy? Seen it? Do not stare At this funny thing so square, Born in Cubist Artist's Lair.
This is Noted Woozy Beast, Can be seen at Alhambra Feast. Of Screen Plays it's Not the Least.

The news story concerning the parade of the Woozy followed this bit of verse:

The Woozy is a funny beast, With most peculiar habits, He lives on unfermented yeast, And little Easter rabbits, A Cubist artist's wildest dream. Could picture nothing rarer, The Woozy is a cubist scream, For nothing could be squarer.

This is the Woozy from Woozy town, He has no hair and his skin is brown, His eyes are filled with a cheerful stare, To be a Woozy you must be SQUARE.

The Woozy soon his ears will flap, Upon your radiator cap, And there he sings his little ode, "Be square and give me half the road."
The Woozy opens his cubist mouth, And has the children "going south." But though he's indolent, beware, The Woozy's always On the Square.

A company of Los Angeles business men has been formed and they will have miniature wozies manufactured of wood, which will be placed on the market as toys. It is believed they will become as popular as the Pensive Pup, Kewpies and other novelties.

UNITED PROGRAM COMPANIES HAVE LIVELY COMEDIES

The producing companies which form the United program, to be released through Warner's Features, are already at work and have turned out a few one-reel subjects. The Premier and Superba brands have each produced a comedy and another company whose name has not yet been decided upon has made two.

A number of well-known faces will appear in the pictures of these various companies, among them being Charlie De Forrest, one time the leading man of the Crystal pictures which are released through the Universal program. He appears in his same funny role.

The old Frontier company, or part of it, is appearing under the Premier brand. Willis Roberts is director, and his leading men are Joe Franz and Arthur Allardt.

These pictures together with Dot Farley and the Albuquerque company form the nucleus of the program, which will shortly be ready for release.

by Edward Eggleston. The picture was arranged and produced by M. de La Parelle, assisted by Elliott J. Clawson, consists of five reels and notwithstanding the name of the company, is entitled to being classed as a masterpiece on its merits.

Ralph Hartsook (played by Max Figman), a bookish man with a high sense of moral obligation but "not much in a tussle," goes to Flat Creek district. There he meets Hannah Thompson (Lolita Robertson), a girl educated beyond her surroundings, of a retiring disposition, who is bound out as a servant in the Means household. She is made a slave by the brutality of the family. Ralph sees beneath the soiled clothes the "Queen of the rosebud garden of girls."

Conspiring Mrs. Means takes Ralph into the family with the intention of making a match between him and her daughter, and at the same time detests Ralph as a schoolmaster, but would boast of him as a son-in-law.

From the day of his arrival the schoolmaster is looked upon as the natural enemy of the Flat Creek people. Bud Means (Roy Stewart) is the champion schoolmaster-hater. But despite rumors and threats, Ralph decides to stay and organize his "Church of the Licks."

When his pupils fail in their attempts to drive the schoolmaster out of the district the patriarchy undertake the job under the leadership of Pete Jones (W. R. Walters), a politician. The responsibility of a grave crime is fast-ended upon Ralph. Crowds gather and public sentiment runs high. There is always a crowd of men waiting with a

“Hoosier Schoolmaster” Proves a Masterpiece

Los Angeles, Oct. 12.

MORE than one thousand people, State rights lovers, exchange men, exhibitors, photographers, and their friends were the guests of the Masterpiece Film Company, Friday evening, October 2, and witnessed the first showing of the company's initial production, "The Hoosier Schoolmaster," from the new famous Indiana pioneer days' story and threats, Ralph decides to stay and organize his "Church of the Licks."

When his pupils fail in their attempts to drive the schoolmaster out of the district the patriarchy undertake the job under the leadership of Pete Jones (W. R. Walters), a politician. $200,000 THEATRE FOR NEW HAVEN

NOTWITHSTANDING that trifling technical points of law have thus far prevented the obtaining of a building permit (which in any event must be forthcoming in the near future), the Gordon Brothers, heads of the large theatrical syndicate, have commenced work on the new $200,000 theatre they are to erect here, and have already broken ground for the historic Old Robinson site at the corner of Temple and Crown streets, New Haven, Conn.

When completed—early next year, it is hoped—the theatre will be one of the handsomest, best and most modernly equipped in Connecticut, if not in New England. Plans have been in the hands of the building inspector for some time, and are to stand with the exception of a few slight changes in the front elevation. According to these plans, the building will be two stories in height, of brick construction with marble front, lobbies and stairs, and will be in a "L" form. The portion of the structure facing on Temple street (in which will be two stores and the main public entrance to the theatre) will have a frontage of 78 feet by a depth of 136 feet. Adjoining this, with a frontage of 82 feet on Crown street, will be part of the theatre proper, 100 feet in depth. This gives the theatre itself a total depth of 178 feet.

The house will have a seating capacity of about 1,500, with orchestra and one balcony. Details of the interior decorations have not yet been made known. There will be a large stage, 82 x 36 feet, while the two stores in Temple street will measure 24 x 60 and 18 x 60 feet, respectively.

No official announcement has yet been made as to what the policy of the house will be, though it is understood that the Gordon system of combined vaudeville and motion pictures will be used. At any rate there is assurance that moving pictures will play a more important part in the new theatre than before.

The construction of the building is in the charge of the David H. Clark Company, local contractors. L. W. Robinson is supervising architect, acting in behalf of C. H. Blackwell, designer of the building, of 20 Beacon Street, Boston. Its location speaks well for the success of the new Gordon Theatre. It is in the heart of the business district, and on the site once occupied by the famous Robinson homestead, one of New Haven's historic landmarks. The house was purchased by the Gordon's and torn down to make way for the theatre.

BIG THEATRE IN ROCHESTER

THE first authoritative announcement concerning the plans of the owners of the new East Avenue Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., which has been in course of construction since last spring, has been made by George E. Simpson, a member of the corporation which is building it, and the manager of the enterprise.

The theatre is to be known as the Regent. It will operate on a high class scale, showing the best pictures and the highest priced features in the market, yet at a reasonable admission fee. The management has already contracted for the Paramount picture service.

Prices in the new house will range from 10 cents up. The theatre, which is now nearing completion, will be ready to open its doors about December 1. The work of decorating it has begun, and only the placing of the seats and other equipment remain to be done once the artists have completed their decorative work.

Every modern feature is to be found in the theatre, says the architect, Leon H. Lempert. Its seating capacity will also be greater than that of any theatre in this part of the country. The theatre has an exceptionally large seating capacity on the ground floor, and, in addition, has a spacious balcony. The projection booth will be located in the center of the balcony, thus giving a short projection distance, which makes for clear pictures.

A big feature is the promenade which has been provided on the mezzanine floor, in the rear of the balcony. It is large and will be prettily furnished. Restoring and smoking rooms will open off it.

The Regent has a stage, equipped for producing vaudeville or regular attractions, but will show only pictures. There is a large organ, half being located on each side, over the boxes. There will be a large number of box and loge seats.

TWO MORE IN GALESBURG

THE new Colonial Theatre on South Prairie street, in Galesburg, III., will be opened about November 1, and when it is completed it will rank among the finest motion picture theatres in Illinois. The building is to be fireproof. It will have a heated air ventilation system. The lobby is to be in marble. In the foyer will be a drinking fountain. There will be toilet rooms for men and women and a retiring room for women. The operating room will be as safe as it possibly can be made. Manager Schroeder plans to show big features exclusively and with a seating capacity of 700 he will be able to handle large crowds.

Lafe Weinberg, who is building a theatre near the new Colonial, expects to have his motion picture play house ready to open about Thanksgiving. His theatre will have a seating capacity of 800, and while it is being particularly built for motion picture shows, it will be equipped with a stage so that vaudeville can be introduced if desired.

FLORIDA THEATRE WILL COST $40,000

WHAT will perhaps be the most perfectly equipped moving picture theatre in the South at the present time will be the Florida Theatre of Jacksonville, Fla., upon its opening on October 15. The new theatre, which will probably run a feature program of the highest water, occupies the same building vacated by Moulton & Kyle, undertakers, on West Forsyth street. The work of remodeling and fitting has been going on since July 1, and, when finished, will have cost about $40,000.

The entire furnishings, color scheme of green, ivory and gold high lights and equipment of the house will be of the most modern pattern and absolutely fire proof. Comfort will be assured, as the seats are the best and highest-priced on the market. The seating capacity will be between 700 and 800. The clearance from pit to dome, together with a ventilating system of the best, insures a total lack of stuffiness and a sufficient amount of cool or warm air at all times. The exits have been so arranged that the house may be emptied within the shortest possible time.

The orchestra, which has already been picked with extreme care, will be located... on the stage. The screen, of the most modern make, will be raised six feet above the floor, in accordance with the most modern ideas of getting the best effects from the pictures.

The work of construction has been under H. H. MacKigan, who has spared no pains in the making of the house as perfect and attractive as possible. No hitches in the building have been experienced thus far, and everything bids fair to come out smoothly.

THEATRES HERE AND THERE

It is rumored that Rochester parties have purchased the corner opposite Hotel Despatch, Main and Commercial streets, Pittston, N. Y., where they intend erecting a fireproof picture theatre with a notable living apartments on the second floor.

Work has commenced on Cedarhurst's (Long Island City) new theatre on Spruce street. The building is being erected by Charles Hetrick. It is to have two stories in front. The auditorium in the rear of the stores on the ground floor will accommodate 750 people.

Architect E. J. Bormeyer has completed working plans for the brick moving picture theatre and store building to be built at Calexico, Cal., for J. G. Scott. It will be a one-story structure, 50 x 150 feet, and will contain two stores and an auditorium to seat 800 people. The cost will be about $30,000.

Plasterers have finished on the interior work of the Mahoney moving picture house on West Third street between Hayes street and Highland avenue, Chester, Pa., and this work will be pushed toward completion, as the new theatre should be ready for occupancy in about one month. Frank Downey, a West End contractor, has the plastering.

Preliminary steps have been taken toward organizing a stock company in Findlay, Ohio, to erect a large movie house. The goal in view of the promoters is, it is understood, a house on Broadway with a seating capacity of a thousand people, with new films, orchestras, etc., at a price of five cents.

A permit for the erection of a motion picture theatre at 1607 Plymouth avenue, Minneapolis, Minn., has been issued by the city building inspector to J. E. Anderson, and H. A. Winperis. The building is to be of frame construction, one-story high. It will cost $3,500 and will be completed within a few weeks.

The foundation of the New Strand Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y., is nearing completion and the structure is expected to assume form very shortly.

Plans have been filed for a motion picture theatre at Front and Allegheny avenue, Philadelphia, by Peter Kuhn, architect. The building is to be erected at 2701 North Broad street, that city. The structure will cost about $15,000.

Work has commenced on a new moving-picture theatre to be erected at 886, 888 and 890 DeKalb avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., plans for which have been filed by Shampan & Shampan, architects, for M. Eiser, as owner.

The building will have a roof garden with a capacity of 600, making a total capacity of 1,200 people. The structure will occupy a plot of ground 60 x 100 feet.

The general contract for the construction of the new $110,000 Majestic Theatre to be built in Detroit on Woodward avenue, near Willis, has been awarded to Frank Farrington. He has sublet the job to C. H. Pillsbury & Company, of New York.

The building will cover a ground area of 45 feet 8 inches x 65 feet, and will be of fireproof construction with tiled floors.

An up-to-date motion picture theatre in Swampscott, Mass., is among the theatrical probabilities of the coming season. A representative of prominent Lynn theatrical interests is now considering the proposition, and although the identity has not yet been made public, it is known that a Lynn architect is working on the plans and an option has been obtained upon a location near the Swampscott Avenue Theatre, M. R. R. Greene.

Geneva, N. Y., is to have another picture theatre, according to negotiations by Charles H. Sweeney, Edward D. O'Reily, of this city, and H. H. Hooven, representing Hooven & Degraff, of Scranton, Pa. It is proposed to build upon the site of the present O'Reily block, in Exchange street, at a cost of $30,000.

Harry Swartz, brother of Dr. W. W. Swartz, of Auburn, Ind., will open a moving picture theatre in near future in the building on North Main street, now occupied by H. H. Strode and J. R. McDowell, plumbers and electricians. Mr. Swartz is the owner of this building and will remodel it into an up-to-date picture theatre.

A new two-story theatre is being erected for R. M. Frey at Steelton, Pa., by Bailey & Bassett, architects. The house will measure 40 x 120 feet and will cost about $12,000.

Irwin & Lattin are asking bids on plans for a three-story theatre building 120 x 161 feet, to be erected in Mahanoy City, Pa., for the Grand Amusement Company. A permit has been granted to Stacey Reeves, 2011 Market street, Philadelphia, for the erection of a film theatre at 1529 Chestnut street. The cost will be about $34,000. Henon & Boyle are the architects.

A. C. Kelley is drawing plans for a moving picture theatre on Fairfield avenue, Bridgeport, Conn. The name of the owner is being withheld at present. The house will seat about 1,000, and will be the rear of a nation store.

A construction permit has been granted for the erection of a modern film theatre on the site of the old Majestic Theatre in Manila.

Alterations and Improvements

Plans were filed recently by R. A. Knapp, with Municipal Building Officials, for the remodeling of the Astor Theatre at 124 West Second street, Blaine, Ind., to be done by the Bassett Co., of Philadelphia. The old rear auditorium will be used as a stage. The rear will be closed up, and the stage window will be made larger. The new rear will be built entirely of modern materials. The capacity of the house will be increased from 1,200 to 1,400.

A. B. Kellett, proprietor of the Lyric Theatre at Cicero, Ill., has decided to remodel his house. The right rear will be used as a theatre, and plans are being made to complete the left rear, and the lobby will be closed and other improvements are being made. When completed the theatre will be one of the most modern of its class in the country.

Louis Gymnich, proprietor of the Lyric Theatre at Muncie, Ind., has decided to close his theatre and to build a new one.

Jacob Silverman, of the Pastime theatre at Asbury Park, is planning some improvements to the theatre in the near future.

The entire interest in the motion picture theatre at Elkhart, Ky., by Peter Bailey and Harry White, has been taken over by Mr. White. He will make several improvements, and will install new fixtures and will keep the house open to the standard demanded of a first class picture theatre.

Permit was granted by Building Inspector W. E. Harper, of Milwaukee, Wis., for the erection of an addition to the Liberty theatre at Villet and Twenty-seventh street, to be closed out at a cost of $584. The new addition will be built of concrete, brick and steel, and the contract is to be given to Mr. D. C. Tharling the architect. More than $1,000 value of electrical work will be installed.

A. Baltimore, of New Castle, Pa., has just finished the remodeling of his theatre and it now fills all the requirements of the State law. The entrances and exits were enlarged and the auditorium will now accommodate its large patronage. Two machines will now be operated instead of one. Mr. Baltimore has kept his shows up to a high standard and has built up a large patronage by having done so.

A permit has been issued to Morris Ahearn and Harry Drier to extensively alter the Astor Theatre at 224 West Second street, Blaine, Ind., and having an entrance on West Front street. The entire building, which was recently leased for a term of years to Joseph Coven, of Paterson, who also has an option for one year within the time, has been removed and the lease the property, will cost in the vicinity of $10,600.

The last building is a large one and the others are smaller. The present seating will take care of about 300, and under the new plans it will be enlarged to accommodate about 600.

The moving picture house on Tenth avenue, Boston, N. J., has been thoroughly renovated and several improvements made, and is open for the season.
TO MAKE MONEY, GIVE IT AWAY

R. E. GUMM, of Lagrange, Ky., has put into operation an advertising scheme which he found to work to good advantage. He announced a certain night as "pay day." Everyone in the audience was to receive a coin in a small sealed envelope.

These envelopes were to be handed out at the box-office with every ticket sold. He instructed the cashier to arrange the envelopes in a box and give them out as she came to them.

On his first night there was an outlay of 200 pennies, 20 nickels, 10 dimes, 4 quarters, 2 halves, and a dollar. There were 237 coins at 10 cents, the equivalent of $23.70. Deducting from this $7, the value of the 237 coins, and there was a balance of $16.70.

Wednesday night is Mr. Gumm's dulllest performance, and this $16.70 night was his first "pay day." He is in a very small town, and the receipts of the Grand Theatre are usually from $8 to $10.

On the second "pay-day" performance the total receipts were more than $30, and the amount given away was in the same proportion.

The advertising scheme could be operated with other agricultural communities. The hillside, which Mr. Gumm scattered broadcast throughout the surrounding country, is given for the benefit of exhibitors who see in the plan a chance to draw full houses in their own towns. It follows:

WHEAT SOLD

Bob Gumm, an extensive farmer (?) of Oldham County, has disposed of his crop of wheat, for which he received a car load of money.

Here's the plan which will interest you: This entire carload of money will be given away at THE GRAND THEATRE. The first lot of money will be given out WEDNESDAY NIGHT, SEPTEMBER 9.

Each person attending will receive a sealed envelope containing MONEY. In most cases several times the admission charge.

This is a proposition where you have all to gain and nothing to lose, as the price of admission will not be increased and you will receive the envelope of money in addition to our usual high-class motion picture program.

It is our intention to distribute this money during the month of September on every Wednesday night. The reason for this sudden outburst of charity is due to the fact that this is the first carload of money Mr. Gumm has ever owned, and to prove that money is "not tight," as stated by some, on account of the European situation.

REMEMBER! WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, IS THE FIRST PAY DAY AT THE GRAND.

MAKING PATRIOTISM PAY

E. LIZABETH, N. J., is known pretty widely as a "slow" town and it partially deserves its reputation. Among the business interests of the city there is a general lack of initiative, it is said, which is holding the town back from the place which it should attain by reason of its natural advantages and mechanical facilities for advancement.

But Elizabeth is intensely patriotic. It is rich in historical lore and it is a stronghold of such societies as the Sons of the American Revolution, the Daughters of 1812 and similar organizations.

Despite this fact, the lack of initiative pervading the city would have prevented any observance of the Star Spangled Banner Centennial on September 6 if it had not been for the enterprise of a local motion picture house manager.

Incidentally, B. A. Holway, who directs the affairs of Proctor's Broad Street Theatre, raised his house considerably in the estimation of the public, secured several hundred dollars' worth of free advertising and "put one over" his competitors. It happened this way:

Holway knows his town and its people. He knew there was great interest in Elizabeth in Star Spangled Banner Day, and he knew there was to be no public celebration. He decided that his theatre would be a good place to nurse patriotism so he got busy and arranged a patriotic program, put out a lot of special advertising announcing the exercises and awaited results.

On the evening of September 6, he was able to view with satisfaction a house packed to the doors. As each person entered the theatre he or she was given a distinctive little program with a flag border and a picture of Liberty embossing the first page.

Several pictures of patriotic interest were shown, and then the stage lights were turned on and the window of the palace, which forms part of the regular stage setting, was opened revealing Maybelle Fisher, a New York soloist, dressed in a Liberty costume. Miss Fisher sang "The Flag That Waves at Baltimore," which was written especially for the ceremonies in the Maryland city.

Then a troop of Boy Scouts marched upon the stage and went through an impressive drill, closing with a salute to Old Glory. At the end of the drill the orchestra played "The Star Spangled Banner," Boy Scouts who were scattered through the theatre leading in the singing. The whole audience arose and joined in the chorus, and the demonstration was one of the most impressive ever seen in the city.

The newspapers reviewed the exercises at length on the following day and the celebration aroused widespread comment. The usual admission prices were charged, and as the exercises necessitated very little extra outlay, the results from a financial standpoint were entirely satisfactory.

USING LOCAL COLOR IN LOBBY DECORATIONS

MANAGER M. H. SCHWARTZ, of the New Regent Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y., showed "The Wrath of the Gods" two days recently and on both nights there were from fifty to seventy autos lined up and down the street.

Manager Schwartz decorated his lobby with Japanese flags on the ticket booth corners and Japanese fans unfolded on the booth border. Scores of Japanese lanterns hung gracefully around the entrance arch and with the burning incense it was surely an invitation "to come in."

ISSUING A BOOKLET PATRONS LIKE TO KEEP

THE Broad Street Theatre, Bethlehem, Pa., issues a live program for its patrons, which not only contains a list of the coming attractions but is full of interesting film news for reading during the intervals of the performances.

The text consists of gossipy accounts of screen players and synopses of features scheduled for a future appearance at the house. The idea is an excellent one inasmuch as everybody more or less takes a serious interest in everything pertaining to motion pictures these days.

The management of the Broad Street Theatre realizes that people are more apt to take home and save a program of this character; hence, the advertising value of such a booklet.
ADELE FARRINGTON IN NEW BOSWORTH PLAY

ADELE FARRINGTON, the eminent comedienne, has forsaken the legitimate stage for the screen. Her first appearance as a photo-play star will be as

Addie Balderson in "The Country Mouse."

This play was written and produced by Hobart Bosworth himself, who also takes the co-lead. The story is a serious-comedy of a country couple transplanted into an atmosphere of state capital politics.

CLEVER DOUBLE EXPOSURE IN "PATH FORBIDDEN"

With Octavia Handworth in "The Path Forbidden," the Excelsior Company has produced a picture that has proven to be a big surprise, and a revelation in double exposure. Miss Handworth playing the dual role of the twin sisters, proved to be an ideal selection for the part, and this fact can be readily realized when you see her actually passing a card, dress and other articles to herself.

This film is the result of six years of constant study on the part of Harry Handworth, the Excelsior Company's chief director.

KLEINE OPENS NEW BOSTON OFFICE

George Kleine has opened a new office in Boston, Mass., to handle his line of attractions throughout New England. The office will be in charge of W. R. Marston, at 597 Washington street.

Mr. Marston will have the entire list of Kleine Attractions, including some recent releases which have not yet been shown in that territory. Mr. Marston is well known in the film business, particularly in New England.

Life Photo Buys Out High Grade Company

Producers of "The Greyhound" and Other Successes Also Enlarge Quarters And Will Redecorate Offices and Projection Room

THE Life Photo Film Corporation has bought out the High Grade Feature Film Company, taking over its lease and all its properties. The offices of the High Grade concern adjoin the present offices of the former concern.

Included in the sale is the projection room which will be redecorated and refitted by the Life Photo concern and devoted to projection for the trade.

Bauman and Company has been engaged to redecorate the new offices, particularly the projection room, which will be lined with velvet, and has every convenience.

In addition, the suite of the Life Photo Film Corporation now gives the company the entire Forty-second street front of the Candler Building.

The progress made by the Life Photo Film Corporation since its first release, "The Banker's Daughter," which was succeeded by "The Greyhound," "Northern Lights," "Captain Swift" and "The Ordeal," has been so rapid as to necessitate these enlarged quarters.

The present offices of the company will be devoted to private rooms for Bernard Loewenthal, the treasurer: Edward M. Roskam, the president; and Jesse J. Goldburg, the secretary. The additional offices will be devoted to the auditors, booking and display departments.

American Company Lives "Close to Nature"

Members Enjoy the Delights of the Open in Camp at Santa Ynez, California—Tell Stirring Yarns by Firelight

MEMBERS of the Flying A company recently enjoyed an outing at Santa Ynez, Cal., in the neighborhood of the construction works and the new dam. Charlotte Burton was especially interested in the works. She was on duty, and dressed for the part. Her costume scarcely could have been more picturesque, or more advantageous to her striking brunette beauty. She wore riding breeches, a hunting jacket with a boy's shirt underneath, and a large velvet hat.

At night a huge camp fire was lighted on the sands. Winnifred Greenwood says that never had she enjoyed such romantic evenings. Everybody rolled himself in blankets and "reminisced."

Ed Coxen told many tales of his adventures on the stage and "on locations" picture-making, that were even more thrilling than the role he plays before the camera. And Miss Greenwood herself, who has a wonderful memory, and a gift for narrative, followed suit.

McELROY MANAGER OF GENERAL FILM IN HARRISBURG

C. F. McElroy, who until recently was special representative of the World Film Corporation in Dallas, Texas, has just become manager of the General Film Company's Harrisburg branch, 322 Chestnut street, succeeding I. A. Farrah, resigned.
In the making of a two reel comedy, featuring Roscoe Arbuckle and Mabel Normand, the Keystone players secured the services of a very excellent actor in the person of Big Ben, a tame seal that makes its home off the coast of Catalina Islands, where the company was working, and Director Mack Sennett immediately changed the story in order to give the seal a good part. The picture is entitled "The Water Nymphs—Fatty and Mabel," and the negative and first print is now on its way to the New York laboratories of the company.

Announcement is soon to be made by the Mutual company of a special two reel feature comedy, to be released every two weeks by the Keystone company. The first of these has been made and will be released under the title of "Dough and Dynamite."

The first features Charles Chaplin and all the stars of the seven Keystone companies took part in the two reel production.

"The comedy feature is to take the place of the so-called feature picture, but this will be a feature in reality," Managing Director Mack Sennett said at the studio the other morning. "These features are not to be ordinary Keystone comedies—they are to be better than the average. We felt that something was needed so that exhibitors could advertise widely and then have the good will of their patrons after they came and saw the picture. No, this will not interfere with our regular program of three releases each week."

Plays Opposite Heavy Squaw

This week Roscoe Arbuckle is working opposite Minnie, the 350-pound Sioux squaw, of the tribe of Indians who live at the New York Motion Picture Company studio camp, in a western Indian comedy. More than two hundred Indians are used in some of the scenes, all of which are being made in the canyons and along the shore line beyond Santa Monica.

Chester Conklin, who invented the walrus mustache, and for that work of art is now known as "Ish face" about the studio, made "The Love Thief" last week, in which he brought the Keystone police force back into life. It is a one reeler of action in which a roof riot and chase take the place of beautiful scenery.

Sid Chaplin, English comedian, brother of Charlie, who was due to arrive at the Keystone studio last week to play leads, kept the wires between here and Quebec hot asking for night and day letters of consolation. Sid occupied a stateroom next to one in which a man became ill with scarlet fever.

The quarantine officers came aboard, and as Chaplin was the only one who had a room near the man, he was taken... into quarantine. The comedian is immune from the disease, having experienced it in the days of mumps, whooping cough and measles; so now all he has to do is to wait and prove it to the health authorities. He is now expected to arrive in Los Angeles about November.

California Feature Ships Negatives

The California Feature Film Company, a partnership composed of G. W. Brown, president; Frank Montgomery, producer and general manager, and Rex Downs, secretary, have shipped their first negatives to New York, where they will be released through Sawyer, Inc. The company is making two brands, the "Monty" comedies, being produced by James Davis, and the "Darkfeather Series," featuring Princess Mona Darkfeather (Mrs. Montgomery).

The series will consist of twelve subjects of two reels each, and the first is entitled "The Romance of a Red Princess." This was taken in the snow-bound north of Glendale and a tribe of several hundred extras as Indians were used. The stock company is composed of Joseph E. Singleton, Raymond Nye, William Ryno, William H. Carroll, J. E. Messick and Anna Messick. The second picture, "The Adventures of an Indian Maiden in the City and at College" was recently filmed. The scenarios are by D. F. Whitcomb.

The Monty comedy company has made two pictures, "Touching Dad" and "A Horse of Another Color," in which the principals are Rex Downs, Miss Billie Rhodes and Harry Fisher, Jr.

At the Selig Edendale studio, Director E. J. LaSaine last week made "Check Mates," in which two old men used the science of the game to prevent the son of one from being ensnared by an adventurer. The part of the father was taken by Guy Oliver; his friend was Jack McDonald; Al. Blake played the part of the son, and Stella Razeto the woman.

"Doc" Cook in Polar Feature

Jack Prescott, former husband of Thais MacOran, and well known comedian of the speaking stage, is now a photoplayer, having joined the forces of the Albert W. Hale Kalem Comedy company at the Santa Monica studio, succeeding John Brennan.

Announcements have been made by the Balboa company, of Long Beach, that Dr. Frederick A. Cook, Arctic explorer, Chautauqua lecturer and reputed discoverer of the North Pole, is to cooperate with the company in the making of a six reel feature picture, "The Explorer." Dr. Cook, it is announced, will play the name role. Frank M. Willemood, scenario editor for the Balboa company, is writing the photoplay story, and will incorporate numerous scenes to substantiate the claim of Cook that he reached the Pole on April 29, 1908.

Locations for many of the scenes have been selected on the San Bernardino Mountains, where there is snow the year around. Eskimo dogs and sleds, Arctic zone clothing and expedition necessities are being collected and the explorer himself in all probability materially assist the company in securing for the picture the true atmosphere of the Far North. Many of the snapshots taken by Dr. Cook will be used in this picture, which constitutes a romance in which the explorer wins a bride by proving his claim of being the first to reach the Pole.

It is the intention to make the picture educational as far as possible, without interfering with the story, and with this end in view the ascent of Mt. McKinley by Cook and scenes of the Belgian South Pole Expedition of 1897 will be shown.

A comedy of all stars, including Henry B. Walthall, Wallace Reid, Robert Harron, Blanch Sweet and Miriam Cooper, was directed by Donald Crisp last week in the production of a two reel Majestic picture from the story "The Odaliske," by Leroy Scott, appearing in a recent issue of a popular magazine. The story contains a double romance and deals with the struggles of two young girl clerks in a department store, the forced attention given them by managers, and the break in friendship caused so often by promotions.

"What's-His-Name" Coming Soon

The postponed release of the Lasky production of George Barr McCutcheon's picturized book, "What's His Name," will occur on the Paramount program, November 22, when Max Figman, whose work in "The Man on the Box" suggested his further engagement by the Lasky company, will be seen in a role exceptionally to his liking.

Mr. Figman plays the part of the husband of a prominent actress who is "intended" at Tarrytown in a home for which the actress is paying. He is being "kept out of the way" by her, at the suggestion of a Mr. Fairfax, millionaire and man-about-town, who is fascinated by "What's His Name's" wife.

Director General Cecil De Mille considers "What's His Name" the most compelling story Lasky has yet filmed. Its heart interest is direct and the story is one that should strike a responsive chord in all classes.

"Ready Money" Set for November 5

Within the next two weeks the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company will release the third of the Edward Abeles photo-plays with the famous comedian in roles aptly suited to his peculiar comedy abilities, when James Montgomery's highly interesting play, "Ready Money," is seen on the screen November 5. “Ready Money,” although a purely American play, enjoyed success in seven different languages at one time.

While the New York company was playing at Maxine Elliott’s Theatre, other companies were playing, simultaneously at Duke of York’s Theatre, London; Theatre Polychroma, Buenos Aires, and Berlin, Paris, St. Petersburg (Petrograd), Bucharest. Roumania and Vienna enjoyed Montgomery’s show, which was one of the few American plays to be translated literally into other tongues without radical changes in locale, plot, and so on.

In addition to Edward Abbele, Theodore Roberts and Bessie Barriscale were cast in prominent roles. Five reels and two hundred and sixty scenes compose the complete production.

Lillian Gish Back to Majestic

Lillian Gish, who has not appeared in Majestic-Mutual releases for the past three months, because all of her time was taken in playing a leading part in the D. W. Griffith feature of nine reels, “The Clansman,” was last week featured in a two reel production, “The Tear That Burned,” for the Majestic release, produced by John B. O’Brien. This picture is from the story by John W. Kellette, and was spoken of at the studio as a heart interest drama. Miss Gish takes the character part of Meg, a woman of the streets who reform and leads a better life because of her love for an old blind woman. Mrs. Josepha Crowell and W. A. Lowrey are assigned important parts in the cast.

Walter Long, heavy head at the Reliance-Majestic studio who serves as a life saver at Ocean Park Beach on Sunday, declares he has found the stingiest man. After rescuing a swimmer from far beyond the breaker line, the man appeared on the beach, thanked Long for saving his life, and then with his bed-demolished hand offered a dime to the life saver with the suggestion, “Here, buy yourself a cigar!”

Long, at the time, was on the way to the “hot-dog” stand for a sandwich, and carried a nickel in his hand. “Here, mister, is your change,” he called to the departing stranger, who took the nickel and walked away. Long has the dime nailed on the wall of his dressing room as a momento of the occasion.

Lehmann in Speed Case

Henry “Pathe” Lehmann, producer of the new comedy brand for the Universal program, the L. KO., was recently arrested for exceeding the speed limit with his big Fiat while on the way to the studio. Lehmann pleaded guilty, and this being the third offense, the judge ordered him to jail. He received a sentence of thirty days. Lehmann appealed to the higher court and was released on $300 bond. A balloon on the way to motorcycle officers may be expected.

“The Ghost of Smiling Jim,” a western mining story by Grace Cunard, was filmed last week by Francis Ford. Miss Cunard played the double role of mother and daughter in this picture which shows the husband and father, a miner, who makes a lucky strike. He is attacked by a chain jumper who throws him over the cliff. The fall causes him to lose his memory which he recovers fifteen years later when hit by a falling tree. He and his daughter then recover the mine, taken by Highy, who in the meantime ejected the mother and daughter for non-payment of rent.

Society Sees How Pictures Are Made

The Marshall Neihand-Ruth Roland Kalem company is making a one reel Chinese picture at the Hollywood studio. The men of the cast found it convenient to use pajamas for the oriental costumes to the embarrassment of a number of Los Angeles society women who called at the studio that afternoon to see how motion pictures are made.

Local Manager Fred Kley, of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, has leased a 1,200 acre ranch and secured exclusive use for pictures of 3,000 additional acres adjoining, in the San Fernando Valley, fifteen miles north of the company’s studio in Hollywood, where practically all of the company’s exterior scenes will be made in the future.

The property known as the Wilson ranch, is ideal for a motion picture farm, and was selected after Directors Cecil de Mille, Oscar Apfel, William C. de Mille, Technical Director Wilford Bucklin and Manager Fred Kley had visited numerous localities.

“It is the most beautiful natural spot about Los Angeles,” Mr. Kley said, “and practically every conceivable kind of a scene may be made there. A very pretty river passes through the center of the land and it will be possible for us to make a very pretty artificial lake of considerable size.

“Here are hundreds of cliffs, valleys, canyons and other useful scenes, including mines, forests and desert. Give us a few weeks and we will have the finest place to make pictures in the world.”

Moonlight Scenes Without Tinting

Hardly before the ink of the lease was dry Manager Kley had a score or more workmen at the ranch building the rancho house, a two-story structure of brick and rocks, on top of which several thrilling scenes for “The Rose of the Rancho,” filmed by Director General Cecil de Mille and featuring Bessie Barriscale, were taken. The building walls are 20 feet high and about 60 x 60 feet.

Director General Cecil de Mille and Technical Director Wilford Bucklin, of the Jesse L. Lasky studio, have perfected a way of making moonlight scenes without the aid of tinting, and the first successful films will be shown in the coming Paramount release, “The Rose of the Rancho,” featuring Bessie Barriscale.

While the new facilities for photographing scenes of this character were in use, strict orders were issued to keep all except regular members of the companies out of the studio, and the Hollywood police in charge had a strenuous time.

One of the largest, and no doubt the handsomest, set used at the Lasky studio was that made for this scene. It required all of the mammoth stage, and represented the court yard at the rancho house.

The comedy company at the Balboa studio, headed by Ben Deely and Mayne Wayne, and directed by William Wolbert, were busy last week making the fifth of the Lima Simp series, featuring Deely and Wayne, whose work is very well known.

BELLIE DULUTH INTRODUCES HER HUSBAND TO FAIRFAX

Scene from “What’s His Name” (Lucky-Paramount Feature) “WHERE THE TRAIL DIVIDES”
(Lasky—Paramount—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WHERE the Trail Divides” is an impressive picture. Impressiveness is no new merit in a Lasky production, and to say that it possesses that quality is saying that this particular picture upholds the name that its forerunners have created for the brand. Besides being produced with evident care and enacted by a capable cast, and again possessing a remarkably strong story, a question is asked which has long been debated. Should a white person marry an Indian? The picture seems to answer in the affirmative, although in the course of the story there is ample substance presented to form the basis of an argument.

The story is developed with great skill and care by the director and the principals of the cast, which is headed by Robert Edeson. He renders a fine characterization of “Howard” Lander, the Indian, who takes a white woman as his wife. In order to give the appearance of an Indian he has darkened his face considerably, and in the picture it seems a trifle too dark in some of the scenes.

J. W. Johnston is a well cast heavy, and Winnifred Kingston plays the part of the girl whom “Howard” marries. It is regrettable that Theodore Roberts was cast for such a small part as Colonel Lander. James Neil, Constance Adams, Fred Montague, Antrim Short and Mary Jane Highbee complete the cast, the latter two playing the part of the principals when they are children.

The light and shadow effects which have been noticeable in all Lasky pictures are also prominent in this one. In “The Virginian” we had the hanging scene in shadows, here when “Howard” has taken Bess as his wife, we see him fondly take her in his arms, but through the window, with the shade pulled down. No photographic faults can be found.

When a picture presents such an absorbing story, and also puts such a vital question, it will gain an even stronger hold on its audiences than just a plain drama. After the marriage Bess is seen in perfect contentment with her Indian husband; then comes the realization of her position, when a man calls her a squaw. After she has eloped with a persistent lover, who takes her to the city and later she had had a taste of his mode of life, she realizes again that the Indian is the better man. She returns to him.

Her second husband, learning of her acquired wealth comes after her, and attempts to force her to return, but she is protected by “Howard,” who after a terrific struggle finally knocks him unconscious and does not hesitate to put two bullets in his prostrate form.

It may be seen that the plot presented here differs largely from the general run of picture plots. In the manner produced and acted also, it will not pass without creating a very big impression.

“THE DRIFT”
(Warner’s-Marion Leonard—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

QUITE a clever device has been employed in this picture to cause it to be exceptionally entertaining, and more so than a good many society dramas. In making the villain appear to be the hero for the greater part of the story lies the merit. His guilt is even concealed from the spectators for a short time, and from the other characters in the play, but one, until the finale.

This may not be a new arrangement of material in film drama, but just the same the interest is greatly heightened because of it. And then again the hero is not so much of a hero after all, unless a man who kills another may be termed such. But his crime is never made known to the rest of the characters in the play, and as he committed it in self defense it does not appear as bad as it might.

Aside from these unconventional motion picture characters, characters that are more human than many seen on the screen, the picture contains a good strong story, entertaining from the start. The action runs along in a smooth and natural manner, and the incidents are well connected, leading up to a well-built climax, which comes as a partial surprise.

Playing the lead in the picture is Marion Leonard. Miss Leonard is a popular star, and will be well received in the role she plays here. She is supported by a cast that is quite well chosen.

The story. A young man robs his firm, lends the money to his friend, who loses it at cards. On hearing this the other man makes good his escape. The other returns home to find a burglar in the house. After a fight with him the house catches fire and the body of the burglar is burned. The other man meets the girl and they are married, after she has given evidence against the innocence of her husband’s former companion.

But in the end matters are settled according to justice, the guilty man is discovered, and the other is set free from prison, where he was sent after the trial.

NOVEL DECORATIVE EFFECTS IN COAST THEATRE

Los Angeles, Oct. 12.

THE Loring Opera House, at Riverside, Cal., opened as a motion picture theatre October 12, under the management of P. S. Harrison and M. M. Rause, who were formerly connected with the Progressive Motion Picture Company exchange in Los Angeles.

A feature of the house is the stage setting. This was made by the Edwin H. Flagg Company, of Los Angeles, in charge of decorations for all Orpheum Circuit theatres on the West Coast, and has a music conservatory setting, with window effects, and a very attractive garden scene for a background.

The pictures are projected above the orchestra.
"WILDFLOWER"
(Famous Player—Paramount—Four Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

There is an inherent love of beauty and romance in the majority of persons is illustrated by the fact that practically no literary or dramatic compositions have gained real popularity unless these factors were present. Experiments with crime stories, problem dramas and the like have been made, but the heart interest story is always the one that wins out. "Wildflower" represents the finest type of this form of story.

It is simple in plot and situations; flaws could be picked in its dramatic construction, but the great outstanding fact is that it tugs at the heart strings of the spectators, and makes them completely forget themselves in the charm of the story. In other words, it accomplishes its end perfectly. What more could be asked?

WILDFLOWER CONFIDES IN HER DOLLY

This excellence is gained by a happy combination. First, there is Marguerite Clark, then there is a wealth of beautiful out-of-doors scenes, then there is Marguerite Clark, then a touching story, then Marguerite Clark, then a smoothness of action and a complete absence of useless material, and finally—Marguerite Clark.

The effectiveness of Miss Clark's acting is strengthened by a large amount of clever stage business. The most conspicuous of the properties used in this way is a white rabbit. This doleful, and at times, long suffering animal shares all of the varying fortunes of the Wildflower, Letty. Some of the most appealing scenes in the picture are obtained by using this rabbit, as well as sundry smaller kittens and puppies.

In itself, Miss Clark's acting is beyond criticism for the quite simple reason that she accomplishes what she attempts in a way which apparently could not be improved upon. Harold Lockwood, who plays the leading masculine part, handles the role in a forceful manner, although he would probably be more popular if made up as a younger man.

James Cooley as the weak brother, and E. L. Davenport as the lawyer, do good work. Jack Pickford as Bud Haskins rather overacts the part of the country boy.

Letty Roberts is a charming and inexperienced daughter of the woods who becomes a friend of Arnold Boyd, a wealthy man who has a camp near her home. He takes his wild younger brother to the camp, and is much disturbed by the flirtation he starts with Letty, especially as he is already married.

He is thunderstruck when he learns that she has eloped with his brother. He starts in pursuit and is lucky enough to overtake them just as they have been married, the ceremony of course being void. Arnold takes her to his home to save her from his brother. Then he falls in love with her himself. After a surprising series of happenings the younger brother realizes his folly, and returns to his wife.

"DOUGH AND DYNAMITE"
(Keystone-Mutual—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

When Charles Chaplin, the inimitable English comedian, appears in the title role of a Keystone comedy, supported by a star, hardly less renowned, Chester Conklin, it is a safe bet that one may settle back in his seat to indulge in continuous laughter, for he will see a slapstick comedy of the highest order.

There are some comedians, who in an attempt to be uproariously funny, areundeniably vulgar, and who demand a good stretch of the imagination to be termed humorous at all. But no such shortcomings can be charged against Mr. Chaplin and his partner.

Mack Sennett, the director of "Dough and Dynamite," again proves his remarkable ability as producer of this variety of comedy. In the entire two reels, very few scenes appear. There are about five in which the greater part of the action transpires, but these five contain everything that is necessary for the principals to utilize in creating the heartiest laughter.

The circumstance that brings about the uproarious situations that follow one another in rapid succession in this picture is that a number of bakers in a restaurant have gone on strike, and it remains for the two waiters, played by Chaplin and Conklin, to do the baking of the establishment. If their actions were anything but farcical, they would not be conducive to the enjoyment of one's bread and rolls hereafter, but the happy part of it is they are farcical, and of the funniest sort conceivable.

In the finale due to the angry bakers' actions the whole place is blown up by dynamite. Chaplin is buried in dough, and the rest among the ruins of the oven. But from the very outset of the picture until this unexpected denouement, the spectator will be convulsed with laughter.

And if by chance he sees the name of Chaplin outside of any theatre in the future he will most surely enter, for the simple reason that he knows that Chaplin is funny at all times.
"THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY"
(Taken Mater—Seventeenth Episode)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

FRANK FARRINGTON, who has become famous through his clever characterization of Braine, the active leader of the band of conspirators in "The Million Dollar Mystery," is sometimes overlooked, due to the fact that he is not the hero of the story. But even though he be a villain he should not be neglected, and he deserves as much praise as his more favored enemy.

He has shown in many instances his remarkable power of imitation. He can assume the part of beggar, doctor, millionaire—in short, any character he may be called upon to impersonate—with the same ease that he carries off his part as the conspirators' chief.

In this episode, with the aid of a wig and false mustache and a slight alteration of his clothing, he disguises himself as a benevolent old gentleman. His disguise is so perfect that Jim is completely taken in, and it is due to no fault of Braine's that he isn't now a captive of the band. As usual, it is the awkwardness of a minor character that brings all the carefully laid plans of the conspirators to an abrupt ending.

"A Battle of Wits" is the caption of this chapter, but it might be called, and just as appropriately, too, "A Battle of Forces," as the second reel ends in a grand scrimmage between Jim and the butler, on one side, and Braine and some four or five of his confederates, on the other, with the former party finally getting the best of the argument. An excellent suspense-producing effect is introduced in the scene in which Jim sees one of the conspirators ready to black-jack him by the reflection in the bottom of his wine glass.

This is the incident that upsets Braine's plans, and when the butler breaks into the house a moment afterwards the scrimmage commences.

There seems to be a little unreasonable and perhaps mis-

A TIMELY RESCUE

"THE PHANTOM VIOLIN"
(Universal Special—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS picture, directed by Francis Ford and played by Mr. Ford, who is supported by Grace Coolidge and a large cast, departs decidedly from the common path of dramas and melodramas.

Perhaps it is more like a work of Edgar Allan Poe's than anything else, as it is gruesome, mystifying from the beginning, ending in a horrible manner.

Grace Coolidge, who is also the author of the scenario, has done well with it, and if perchance she left some morbid point out, it is obvious that Mr. Ford has put it in. It is a matter of individual opinion whether the picture will take or not; some will like it, some will not.

The locale is supposed to be Paris. At first we see Ellis, the musician, who plays in a cabaret show, brooding over his violin, the sweet sounds of which entrances a young girl.

The two become very much in love, but after the girl has seen the gay life of Paris she casts him aside, and turns to another. Realistic scenes in a Parisian cabaret, perhaps a little over done, are shown.

Ellis then discovers a cellar under the structure, as it was one of an old castle, and there he makes his retreat, to emerge after several days of voluntary imprisonment, to bring about the death of two other men that the young woman has been toying with.

Later both he and the woman meet a horrible death by falling a great height into the old cellar.
THE answer should be an unhesitating "Yes!" in every case.

And—yet—to the shame of the exhibitors who will do it be it said—the League heads will almost certainly meet with the discouraging retort in some (perhaps many) cases:

"Yes, you did something for us on the war tax situation. But it wasn't nearly what you ought to have done. It didn't help us much, after all. You'll have to do better than that before we'll come in," and so on, indefinitely.

And the irritating feature of this attitude is that, pig-headed and superlatively ungrateful as the retort will be, it will be, on the surface, true.

THE new schedule which the Senate committee accepted from Mr. Brylawski is far from being the ideal one for the motion picture exhibitors. Mr. Brylawski could be the first to admit it.

But it was the best substitute that could be devised in the time left for action, before the bill went before the Senate.

And—let this be borne in mind—it was the best substitute that President Pearce, Fulton Brylawski and a few others, with only the name of an organization to back them, could offer to the national legislators with any hope of success.

THE important fact is, not that more was not accomplished, but that anything at all was accomplished.

Now that the League has done the best it could, in spite of the exasperating indifference of the exhibitors, we shall undoubtedly hear from every one of these indifferent souls that they could have done better, if their own pet schemes had been adopted.

But that is not the point.

The point is that, while hundreds of panic-stricken exhibitors have been wailing and complaining and ranting and mouthing over the situation, a few men have DONE something, something that will benefit all and save the lives of many of those who did not have the power or knowledge to help themselves.

IF those few men were unable to do all that might have been done, it is the fault of those who have always criticized them and will criticize them now, instead of supporting them, and making it possible for their leaders to have gained a complete victory for them and for the League.

This is not the time for complaint or criticism. It is the time for organization, for cooperation, for shoulder-to-shoulder fighting.

HELP the national organization to help you.

The League can never be worth anything to you, unless you give it your strength and support.

Let this war tax crisis be a lesson, and profit by what you have learned NOW.

California Hires Circus Performers for Scene
Company Stages Regular Sawdust-Ring Event and Invites Public to Watch Stunts and Get Filmed for "Cabbage Patch"

WHEN the film version of Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" is released by the California Motion Picture Corporation, the patrons of film drama will have an opportunity to see how elaborately a first-class company of this kind works to produce realistic effects.

The circus scene in the play is the genuine article. No make-shifts would do, no second-rate performance would satisfy the stage manager. He had to depict a circus; so he made a circus. He hired a small army of professionals, former stars of the sawdust ring. He erected a big tent at the company's outdoor studio near San Rafael. He advertised his show free to all who might care to see a circus for nothing, and at the same time, see how a big motion picture reel was filmed.

The day of the novel circus found the tent packed. The crowd of willing "spectators" enjoyed the treat, and relished not a little the chance to be photographed for motion pictures.

Just as the audience was the real, joyous article, so the performance was professionally a top-notcher. A program was given which was not one whit behind the kind that the small boy risks a spanking to see by crawling under the tent.

La Savillas, a crack tumbling troupe, performed on one stage, while the Benings did bareback riding in an adjoining ring, and, up overhead, the Three Benos did terrifying marvels in an aerial web of trapezes and swings. Komic Kemp, an educated horse, whose comedy act has convulsed hundreds of thousands, romped around the big ring, and La Belle Carmen, former Barnum and Bailey's feature wire-ropes walker and dancer, performed one of her famous acts.

LIFE PHOTO TO SIGN FORBES-ROBERTSON

The Life Photo Film Corporation has secured an option on Jerome K. Jerome's famous play, "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," together with the services of Forbes-Robertson, the famous English actor.

The consummation and closing of the deal only awaits the signature of Forbes-Robertson to the contract, upon his arrival in America.

It will be recalled that Mr. Robertson has played his farewell tour in America, and contrary to the usual farewell tours, insists that he will not again appear on the legitimate stage here. This does not, however, prevent him from appearing on the screen.

COSMOS ANNOUNCES NEXT FEATURE FILM

The Cosmos productions have met with considerable success.

EDWARD ABLES IN A SCENE FROM "READY MONEY" (Lasky-Paramount Feature)
"EVEN UNTO DEATH"
(Albuquerque—Warner—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. FANGBURG

DOROTHY FARLEY may be called the presiding genius of this film, as she wrote the scenario and played the leading feminine part. As the title implies, the story is a tragedy, but it is not a tragedy in the strict sense of the word, because it portrays the triumph of a perfect love.

The scenes of the story are all laid about a fishing village, and are very attractive. Considerable interest is added to one portion by some pictures of live seals swimming near the shore, from which the heroine is making sketches of the animals. There are many other scenes in which the sea plays a most important part, and they are all very well done.

The climax of the story and the highest point of photographic excellence is reached in the fight between Dorthea’s fisherman lover and her brother. The former is getting ready to turn in for the night.

He is standing alone in his little cabin, the moonlight streaming in through the window being the only illumination. Suddenly the door opens and his sweetheart’s brother enters.

In another moment he seizes a revolver lying on the table and attempts to shoot the fisherman. A furious struggle takes place. The men circle about the room; now they are seen clearly in the beams of moonlight, now they are vague forms in the shadow. The dust from the floor floats up through the moonbeams, swirling about as a piece of furniture is knocked over, or the fighters quicken their movements.

At last, the younger man gains an advantage. The revolver flashes, and the assailant is dead. It is a splendid scene.

Jack Conway plays the part of the humble lover. His acting, as well as that of Miss Farley, is effective and convincing. The love scenes are especially well acted. The minor characters are also well played, particularly those of the old minister and his wife.

The story concerns two brothers who are fishermen at a small seaside town, and a brother and sister of wealth, who live in the same place. By rescuing the wealthy girl when trapped by the tide, one of the fishermen becomes acquainted with her, and they fall in love.

The girl’s brother is bitterly opposed to the match, and tries to interfere. He is finally made to believe that their relations are improper by the gospel of an old maid. He attempts to kill the young man, as described above.

His plea of self-defense being no avail, the hero escapes from jail with the help of friends, and lives on an island for weeks, an overturned boat leading to the belief that he is drowned. His sweetheart is taken ill and pines away with grief. He comes back to her only to have her die in his arms. Taking her up he walks out into the sea.

"THE SQUATTER"
(Eclair—Universal—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THOSE who are familiar with the films of the Eclair brand need not be told of their excellent photography, as such a merit is a common occurrence in these pictures, and this one takes its place with the many others of the company.

And the art of the photographer has been extended to take in some exceptionally beautiful scenes. One especially pretty is that in which the San Xavier Mission is shown in the distance. In fact, the entire picture is one in which beautiful scenes, shown off prettily by excellent photography, follow one another in rapid succession.

While the picture contains a most absorbing story, one that holds the interest continually, it could be shortened without harming the beauty of it; and in all probability it will be, as the picture has almost three distinct endings in the last reel; and the first of these three should have been made the actual end.

Enacted by the capable Eclair Western stock company, with Boa Fraier and Edna Payne playing the leads, supported by Norbert Myles, Fred Hearne and Will Shearer, the production deserves great praise in regard to this line.

The dishonest ranch foreman, whose main object is to make all the money he can, and cheat everyone he meets, is finally brought to justice by his employer’s nephew, who comes out West under an assumed name.

"THE PURSUIT OF THE PHANTOM"
(Bosworth—Paramount—Five Parts)
REVIEWED BY JULIAN M. SOLOMON, JR.

THE first thing that strikes the spectator, after the clever introduction of the principal characters in this play, is the excellent photography and the beautiful natural setting.

The story opens with Richard Alden (Hobart Bosworth), artist, trudging along the cliffs at Laguna, California, with his dog, Skookum, his bicycle and his painting kit. After finding a spot that suits his purpose he starts to work.

At the village he meets a city girl (Rhea Haines) and their acquaintance ship ripens into love. They make daily journeys to the beach cliffs, where he works on his pictures which grows before the spectator’s eyes. Unknown to them they are watched by a little, elfin sprite, a waif of the beach (Helen Wolcott), who, after reading her “Grimm’s Fairy Tales,” weaves dreams of romance and happiness around the two. She can see nothing but happiness for them.

Soon, however, comes Wyant Van Zandt (Courtney Foote), a young millionaire, on his private yacht. He courts the city girl, thinking how well she would grace his home. Thinking to find happiness along the path of wealth and power, they sail away together. Brokenhearted, the artist feels that the pursuit of happiness has been in vain. He remarks “What I had, I lost.”

The play closes with an allegorical scene in the artist’s den. A three-part decorated window forms the background. On the left panel is shown in rapid succession by means of trick photography the pursuit of happiness by the rich man, and in successive stages until he holds in his arms not a flesh and blood woman, but a skeleton in black.

On the right side is shown the artist and also in successive stages his rise to happiness from despair until he finds his wife of today by his side. On the centre panel is shown the legend which runs throughout the story. Then the scene fades out and this legend alone is visible as a single point of light in the distance. This rapidly advances towards the spectator until it fairly jumps at him and fills the entire screen.

The story itself was written and directed by Hobart Bosworth, who handles his part with much feeling. Courtney Foote is excellent as the rich man. Helen Wolcott as the waif and as the artist’s wife is very capable and very charming. Rhea Haines as the city girl and the wife of the rich man does not do the work of which she is capable. Myrtle Stedman, as Helen Alden, her daughter, needs no comment; her work is uniformly good. E. J. Flynn gives a manly, clean-cut definition as young Van Zandt.
"BOOTLES’ BABY"
(Edison—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY J. BURROUGHS NOELL

A DIRECTOR is treading upon dangerous ground when he puts on the screen a story that is centered around a baby disowned by the father and deserted, however reluctantly, by the mother.

The author has not the same likelihood of being misunderstood, because he can say exactly what he means without fear of misconception; but the producer of motion pictures, having entirely different tools at his command, takes a big chance where the possibility of more than one construction is present.

BOOTLE’S HAPPY MOMENT

His task becomes at once twofold or threefold difficult, and he has to depend entirely upon the interpretation of his players for conveying the correct impression, unless he is willing to clog his play with subtitles, and no director with a fine artistic sense is content to do that.

"Bootles’ Baby" is a photoplay in two parts, made from the story by John Strange Winter. The baby's father, Gilchrist, has refused to acknowledge his marriage with the mother, and declines to help the mother to support herself and the child.

She is driven by force of necessity to leave the baby and earn her living, because the fact of the child would be hard to explain, and she could not in that compromising light hold a position in a household as companion, the only sort of work for which she is in any way fitted.

Therefore, she places the baby in her father's room in the barracks, and takes a loving farewell. When Gilchrist finds the child, he knows very well that it is his own daughter, but hard-hearted man that he is, he has not a spark of affection for his offspring, and maliciously puts the baby off on an unmarried fellow officer, a captain that always goes by the name Bootles.

Bootles becomes attached to the child at once, and in spite of gossip takes care of the child most carefully and tenderly. Later, at a house party, the mother and Bootles meet, the mother as companion to the Countess.

They become interested in each other, and finally the captain proposes, but the woman has to hide her real feelings and hold a barrier between them. Gilchrist is present at the same house, and treats the unhappy mother with sneers and derision whenever he has a private opportunity.

But his heartlessness is short-lived, his useless life being cut off by an accident. He confesses that he is the father of the baby. Soon Bootles receives a letter from the mother, asking for the child, and Bootles, after a struggle, resolves that the only manly and honorable course is to give up the child, great as his love has become.

But the happiness of all is complete when he meets the one woman that he least expected to meet. She claims the child, and he claims her, and she is now free to submit.

It is easily apparent that only superior acting could convey the right impression to the audience of this story. Put the cast which has been chosen performs its far from easy task with supreme confidence in its ability to portray this tender and yet happy story of misplaced and also rejuvenating affection.

Every delineation is characterized by simplicity, truth, and genuine feeling, and the determination to give distinctness to the role. There is everywhere the repose that only finished players can attain; never is there a useless display of emotionality even in the most intense dramatic moments.

Herbert Prior, as Gilchrist; Robert Conness, as Bootles, and Mabel Trumelle, as the mother, have had no better vehicle to demonstrate the worth of their respective abilities than this latest Edison release.

"THE SPIRIT OF THE POPPY"
(Kinestophoto—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULL

A PSYCHOLOGICAL study of the deterioration of humanity through the drug habit, which in a well connected story points a strong moral.

After a rather novel introduction of the principal characters, comes a scene depicting a large field of poppies in full bloom, and this in turn dissolves into the opening scene of the story itself.

In the part of the artist's wife, Edith Luckett deserves special mention. Jack Dunn makes an acceptable villain, and, taken altogether, the cast is well chosen. Special attention seems to have been given the interior settings, and the exteriors, especially the views of New York harbor with the Brooklyn bridge in the background, are very clear and distinct.

For a finale the poppy scene is again used, only this time in the foreground are seen the heads of babies and young children in the centers of the flowers. The foreground fades and older children, then young men and women, and finally the wrecks of humanity, caused by indulgence in the evil, appear in gradual sequence.

"THREE WEEKS"
(Reliable Feature Film—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THREE WEEKS"! It's here at last, the much-debated novel by Elnor Glyn has now been put on the film, and there won't be much of a chance for Anthony Comstock and his partisans to raise such a hue and cry, after all.

Those who visited the Maxine Elliott Theatre in New York on Thursday, October 8, when the picture received its initial showing, for the avowed purpose of unfavorably criticizing it, were undoubtedly disappointed.

Those who have read the novel will notice that the picture follows it, almost without variation, except perhaps in one or two places, where certain periods of time have been skipped over lightly. The principals of the cast are exact duplicates of their famed forerunners in the book.

But the somewhat questionable bits of dialogue which were prominent in the novel have been left to the imagination.

As it stands by itself, it is an exceptionally entertaining production, entirely original, and acted and produced splendidly by actors and a director who knew what they were about. The story lends itself to screen adaptation remarkably well, the situations have been well put together, and never for one moment does the picture lose the inspired interest of the spectator that it gained when the first scene appeared on the screen. These merits, coupled with the great publicity that the novel has enjoyed, will cause the picture to have a very big success.

In regard to the story, it is so well known that it need not be told here. It is enough to say that it is absorbing from start to finish. Madeleine Traverse gives an excellent characterization of Queen Sonia. She is well suited to the part, and never overdoes a scene. Mahlon Hamilton is equally as good as Paul Verduyne, the young Englishman, who, it develops, is of royal blood. Arthur Donaldson is very good as Dimitri, the faithful bodyguard of the queen; his fight with the king and Pavlovitch is most realistic.

George Pierce does well as the slovenly and debauched King Stefan, and his boon companion, Pavlovitch, as played by John Webb Dillion, is an excellent second heavy. Pauline Seymour plays the queen's companion, and Joseph C. Fay appears as the Prime Minister. Claude Cooper is a spy.

The characters of the prologue are H. J. Smith, Baby McGrath, R. J. Barrett, Joseph Moore, T. Curran and Pauline Seymour. Perry N. Vekroff, who adapted the story for the picture, and who was also director of the production, deserves great praise, which he will surely enjoy when the public has once seen the picture.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG IN "THE BUTTERFLY"

THE World Film Corporation announces that Clara Kimball Young's second feature is to be based on Henry Kitchell Webster's story of "The Butterfly," which is one of the most popular current works of fiction and which enjoyed great popularity when it appeared as a serial story in "The Saturday Evening Post." Clara Kimball Young is just finishing the work on "Lola." Captain Leslie Peacocke is writing the scenario of "The Butterfly."

"LENA RIVERS" (Comedy—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

"LENA RIVERS" is a play which has a rather unusual history. It was written by the woman who has played the principal part all over the United States. But if such a combination is unusual it is a good one. The theatre-going public has liked the play, and long before its appearance it had become fond of its star.

As a result, Miss Poynter's popularity was increased by her appearance in a play which proved to be a favorite. Now the play has been produced for the screen, and is certain to be popular among all who formerly enjoyed it on the stage, as well as among many others who were unable to see it in its original form.

Beulah Poynter by reason of her familiarity with the play, both as the author and the principal for many performances, knew exactly what was necessary in preparing the production. This has enabled her to retain many of the comedy features which are difficult to transfer from the spoken to the silent drama. It has also resulted in a presentation of the story almost exactly as in the stage version.

The role played by Miss Poynter is a double one. During the first part of the picture she is seen as Helena Nichols, a country girl. Later she appears as Lena Rivers, the daughter of Helena. The two parts naturally resemble each other, but the latter one is the more important. Charlie De Forest, as Joel, a country bumpkin, supplies considerable comedy of a rural type. Caroline Rankin as Nancy Scoverydye gives a most remarkable portrayal of an old but hopeful spinster.

The story opens with the departure to the city of Helena Nichols. She marries Harry Graham, a young southerner, who has adopted the name of Rivers. They are very happy until the young husband is falsely accused of murder and sent to prison. As he is tried under his right name his wife does not know of his trouble, but thinks herself abandoned. Later the husband escapes from prison with another man. His companion is killed by the guards, but Graham is reported as the one dead. Helena dies and leaves her child Lena with her grandmother.

The grandmother goes to live with Helena's brother. Little Lena's cousin makes life miserable for her, especially after learning that Durward Belmont, a man she had marked for her husband, is in love with Lena.

Graham has regained his position in life and has married Belmont's mother. When he meets his stepson's fiancée he knows she is his daughter because of her resemblance to her mother. When he is seen embracing her his motive is of course misunderstood, but everything finally comes out all right.
“THE WAR OF WARS”
%(Name—Six Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

The existence of war in Europe does not necessarily make a motion picture founded on it timely. In fact, it might most easily be made the reverse. "The War of Wars," however is a triumph of neutrality.

During its course fortune smiles alternately on the contending parties, and the German and French principals are seen as heroes in a regular sequence. As a final victory of non-partisanship the film closes with an impending Franco-German alliance between an officer from the Fatherland and a fair maid of la belle France.

In one sense, the title is a bit misleading, as it suggests scenes of a titanic character. No attempt is actually made to depict any great battles, the action being concerned with a series of sharp skirmishes about the village Longwy.

The mass action in the fighting scenes is excellent.

There is a dash and snap, and at times an apparent desperation which is most convincing. The success of first one and then the other side adds an element of suspense which strengthens the interest.

One of the most meritorious features of the picture is the success which has been attained in the matter of local color and general atmosphere. The uniforms worn by both the German and French troops are quite close to the actual service equipment of the armies of those nations, while the interpolation at strategic intervals of scenes of actual war manoeuvres increases the realism to a noticeable extent.

The outdoor scenes have been selected with much care. In the matter of interiors the picture is especially commendable, both as to their arrangement and variety. Much of the action takes place in a large chateau, and the great variety of interior views of it go far to make up for the necessary absence of any outside picture of the edifice. The mere number of the inside scenes gives the impression of a large and pretentious establishment.

The acting is another good feature of "The War of Wars." In some of the battle scenes there is rather an excess of flag waving and standing about in exposed positions on the part of the soldiers, but actors were ever loath to seek cover when facing the fire of the camera man, and it all looks quite patriotic.

Eric, known as "The Babe," who plays the lead for the German Empire, is portrayed by Stuart Holmes. Eric runs through nearly the entire gamut of human emotions, but Mr. Holmes seems to be quite at home in most of them.

The story tells of the invasion of a French village by the Germans. A young officer when drunk wrecks things about a fine chateau and finally attempts the honor of the daughter of the house. Her rebuke brings him to his senses and his brutal passion is transformed into love. He kills a French inn-keeper to save the girl, who tried to shield him.

For this she is taken by the French, and sentenced to be shot. A German shell strikes down the firing squad and saves her. Many other exciting incidents are introduced, but in the end the French girl and the German officer are seen in each others arms. The war seems to be still in an undecided state.

“THE MYSTERIOUS HAND”
%(101-Brown-Universal—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

Grace Cunard and Francis Ford have a name for creating mystery stories, and this picture, which is mysterious in each and every scene, only goes to confirm and uphold the opinion already so well established by their appearances in this series of pictures portraying the adventures of "My Lady Raffles."

The entire three reels are replete with mystery, and mystery of the most thrilling and awe-inspiring sort. But the story is not obscure nor difficult to understand, as might easily be the case unless great care was taken in its production. All the sly actions and exciting happenings point to a clearly obvious end, so that one is not left in the dark, trying to unravel a long and meaningless picture.

Supporting Miss Cunard and Mr. Ford, the director and leading man are Duke Worne and Arthur Mumms.

The story deals with the efforts of Kelly, a detective, to apprehend a band of crooks, led by a woman, whom Kelly once knew as a servant girl. At a reception given by a young debutante the crooks are present, bent on stealing all the girl's presents. Kelly is also on hand, suspecting such action on their part, and he manages to catch a glimpse of My Lady Raffles at work, but she escapes from him by a clever ruse, and Kelly is still left without his prey.

There is an exciting raid and a thrilling chase between two automobiles.

CINCINNATI MAY SHOW FILMS WITHOUT LEADERS

The censorship problem has been practically settled for the exhibitors and all are now showing approved films without the state leaders, with the approval of the police.

Some of the exchange men are not satisfied, however, as their films are still being turned back and the number of refusals to pass films has seemed to have increased in several instances.
"THE TICKET-OF-LEAVE MAN"
(Pathe—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD M. PANBURN

FOUNDED on Charles Reade's novel, "Foul Play," this film has an excellent story to tell, and it tells it well. Practically all of the exterior scenes are laid in Australia or on an uninhabited island. By taking these scenes in Bermuda correctly as well as attractive effects have been obtained throughout.

The cast is a strong one, including many of the favorites of Eclectic pictures. The heroine, Helen Gerard, is played by Eleanor Woodruff, who blends good acting and charm, even when she has to appear in a rather unfashionable gown made of a gummy sack.

Harold Meltzer as the persecuted hero is equally effective, while Sheldon Lewis, if the phrase is allowed, is an admirable villain. William Riley Hatch appears as Helen's father, a much more agreeable role than many in which he has been seen. M. O. Penn and George Middleton also have important parts.

There are a few points in the story which do not seem very plausible. For example, insurance companies are not in the habit of insuring ten good-sized cases alleged to contain gold, without first making quite certain that metal is present. However, that is something for which the author of the novel is responsible, and it does not detract from the interest.

Allan Bancroft is left in control of his father's business, as the older man wishes to retire. Being pressed for a large loan by a money-lender and not daring to ask his father for it at the time, he forges a note for the amount in his father's name, payable to a friend, Chester Livingston.

By pretending that it is a harmless ruse he gets his friend to indorse the note. It is protested by the father and the son's friend is arrested and tried for forgery. His treacherous friend refuses to clear him, and is taken with brain fever as a result of his fear.

Chester is sent to a penal colony in Australia. After a little over a year of his five-year sentence he is released because of good conduct and for saving the life of the governor-general's daughter by stopping a runaway horse. He is given a ticket-of-leave. Meantime, the false friend has come to Australia and is engaged to Helen, the girl Chester had rescued.

Allan, being again hard pressed for cash, arranged to wreck a steamer having a fake shipment of gold on board. Unknown to him, his fiancée starts for England on the ship.

The plot is discovered by Chester and a sailor, but not until it is too late. However, Chester and Helen reach a desert island, where they live for some time.

Helen learns the true story of her lover's perfidy, and falls in love with Chester. They are rescued by a searching party on her father's yacht. Allan is exposed and Chester's innocence established. The father blesses the happy young people, and—"all's well that ends well."

"THE GREAT GOD FEAR"
(Majestic-Mutual—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE two young stars, Robert Harron and Mae Marsh, perform here, and give ample proof that no matter how young they are, they are capable of creating just as much interest and performing just as well as some of the more mature players of the day. Donald Crisp directed the picture, and he also proves that he is just as good a director as he is an actor, which is saying a good deal.

The story is not one which is worked to death and sets forth some original ideas on the part of the scenario writer and the director. These, however, would count for little if the picture were not acted capably. The scenes and photography leave little to be desired and reach the usual standard set by all pictures of this brand.

"The Great God Fear," which gains possession of a suspicious member of a northern lumber camp, is responsible for his mistake in spreading broadcast the report that one of the members has leprosy, when in reality it is only a slight skin disease, and not at all contagious. He comes near breaking up a happy love affair in the bargain, but is prevented by a wise doctor, who calms the fears of all.

"THE LONG WAY"
(Edison—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY J. BURROWS NOELL

WHEN the love affairs of five different persons are closely interlocked, one may expect complications and heart aches before the misunderstandings can be straightened out, the mistakes lived down, and joy and happiness come to those that deserve joy and happiness.

But there is room for but four persons and one of the five must be gotten rid of somehow.

How this unusual state of affairs is brought about and how it is resolved is told in a novel by Mary Inlay Taylor. The Edison Company, with the capable players in its force and the superb settings at its command, has reproduced this story in all its fullness of heart interest and novelty of plot.

The story is condensed into the smallest measure of film that will give satisfactory completeness to this entertaining study of modern society life, occupying just three reels.

Strict economy of scenes has thus been made absolutely necessary, and that the result is so eminently successful is due to the skill and the clear vision of the director. Consequently, there are no side scenes that are simply for the purpose of giving atmosphere or unimportant touches of characterization.

The greatest simplicity of detail has been practiced, which has made the responsibility of the players all the greater in making their parts perfectly intelligible in a few strokes.
Bosworth Will Screen Van Loan Stories

Bosworth Finds a Los Angeles Lad, Gordon Griffith, Who Is Particularly Fitted for the Chief Role in "Little Sunset"

HOBART BOSWORTH is to be seen daily about the new Bosworth studio in the guise of "the terrible Swede," Gus Bergstrom, made famous by the stories of Charles Van Loan, while filming "Little Sunset," a four reel comedy drama, the scenario of which is based upon the Van Loan baseball stories.

For this picture Mr. Bosworth has made a find in the person of Gordon Griffith, a Los Angeles lad, who is playing the name role of little Sunset Jones. Besides being a real baseball fan, he is also capable of portraying baseball in such a realistic manner that he has wrecked several big scenes by causing other photoplayers to forget their parts.

This picture will constitute the November offering of the Bosworth company, and "Hypocrates," produced by Phillips Smalley and Lois Webber, is released this month.

The Smalley-Webber company at the Bosworth studio is now filming "False Colors," which will consist of four reels. The scenario is by Lois Webber and portrays the life of a celebrated actor, who because of his profession, was forced to leave his child in the care of supposedly good people.

For this some very special scenes will be made and the Morosco Majestic Theatre in Los Angeles will be artificially lighted and used for a number of big sets. The leads are taken by Mr. Smalley and Miss Webber with a supporting company including Courttenay Foote, Charles Marriott, Adele Farrington, Herbert Standing and others.

English Firm After Rights of "The Ordeal"

Foreign Company Said to Want Life Photo Feature for Exhibition in France and England—Subject a Strong Peace Argument

The appointment made between Acting Secretary of State Lansing and Mr. Goldberg, secretary of the Life Photo Film Corporation, for the purpose of having a representative of the government review the picture in Washington, has been postponed.

Several offers have been received by the Life Photo Film Corporation to purchase the rights to this production in the United States and Canada, but these offers have been declined.

Negotiations, however, are in progress for the sale of the rights to this picture for England and France, a large sum having been offered by a representative of one of the biggest film producing concerns in London.

Mr. Roskam, the president of the company, maintains that it is a strong argument for peace, in view of the fact that it shows the horrors of war.

In the making of the picture the company built its own village and streets, including several buildings, which, in the course of the production, were destroyed by fire and shell.

The picture will not be released through the ordinary channels in New York, but will be shown in one of the large regular theatres, and run as an independent production.

THE EARL BRINGS KATHLEEN AND UNA TO HIS HOME

FOUR OUT OF FIVE THEATRES USE KEYSTONE

No fewer than four out of five Broadway theatres in a distance of six blocks used Keystone-Mutual comedies in one week recently. Beginning with the Broadway Theatre at Broadway and Forty-first street, then including Hammerstein's, the New York, the Palace and the Strand, every house used one of these great mirth provokers. The only house running pictures in all of the theatrical district that did not use Keystone comedies is a theatre devoted to the output of one manufacturer and owned by him.

An attempt is being made to increase the output of the Keystone-Mutual plant, in order to take care of the business that is indicated by this deserved popularity.

WINIFRED KINGSTON POSES FOR NOTED ARTIST

Winifred Kingston, who will play the leading feminine role opposite Dustin Farnum, in the Lasky-Liebler production of "Cameo Kirby," is posing for Coles Phillips, the prominent artist.

The finished product will appear on the front page of one of the big metropolitan magazines. Miss Kingston was requested, through the Lasky company, by the editor of the magazine, who saw her in "the Call of the North," and suggested to Mr. Goldfish that she would make an excellent ornament for an art page.

Mr. Goldfish then arranged with Mr. Phillips and the work is now well under way.

Fox, of New York, have opened an exchange at 3632 Olive street, St. Louis, Ralph Pinkham, former manager for Warner's Features, in the Benoist Building, is general manager, and Lou Bent, for several years connected with the Mutual Corporation Exchange, is assistant manager.

Mr. Pinkham has been in the city for only a few months, but his evident ability and his strong and pleasing personality, have created a very favorable impression in film circles, and Lou Bent, whose middle name is "moving pictures," is one of the old timers in the industry.

The exchange is in a brand new building with a force fully and completely equipped to handle film rental business with promptness and dispatch down to the most minute detail.

Bert Angeles, who gained considerable reputation as director of comedies and dramatic features while with the Vitagraph, Imp, Pilot and Historical Film Company is now at liberty.

Mr. Angeles is well known throughout film circles, having attracted a great deal of attention from the time he first appeared in the field.

His work is characterized by an adroitness and skill which have placed him in the front ranks of his profession. It is said by those who are familiar with his attainments that he has a remarkable faculty for seeing the possibilities in apparently insignificant incidents in script, and can, by sheer force of imagination and clever direction of the players, build up scenes of gripping power.

Mr. Angeles' present address is the Screen Club, 165 West Forty-seventh street, New York City.

Arthur A. Lee, formerly with the General Film Company, in Canada, has assumed charge of the Syracuse, N. Y., offices of the Picture Playhouse Company, which located in the Eckel Theatre Building recently.

All of the big feature exchanges in Syracuse, N. Y., report unusually heavy business for this time of the year, and are very optimistic regarding business.

Milton Hirshfield, of the State Street Theatre, Trenton, N. J., has signed a contract for the exclusive right to the Paramount Feature Photoplays for that city.

A. J. Norwine, proprietor of the Odeon Theatre, Bonne Terre, Mo., has reopened for the fall and winter season, using Mutual service.

I. Dubinsky, of Bonne Terre, Mo., is planning to build a new and strictly modern theatre to replace the one which was destroyed by fire in September.

A contract was recently signed between Harold Edel, of the Strand Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., and Leon J. Bamberger, representing the World Film Corporation, whereby the Strand will have first-run in Buffalo of all the Shubert, William A. Brady, Charles E. Blaney and Owen Davis features, now controlled by the above corporation.

The first of this new series to be presented at the Strand will be "The Dollar Mark," with Robert Warwick in a leading role. It is expected that the World Film Corporation will do a larger business in western New York since they took on these productions.

"The Nightingale," the first release of the All-Star Feature Corporation through the Alco program, featuring Ethel Barrymore, has created a big demand from all the new Alco exchanges. The next release of this company, entitled "Shore Acres," is to be released on October 19.

"Shore Acres" and "Michael Strogoff" will be the third and fourth releases of the Alco Film Corporation, respectively. "Shore Acres" is an All-Star production, and the Popular Plays and Players produced "Michael Strogoff," with Jacob P. Adler in the title role.

A private showing of "Salomy Jane," founded on Bret Harte's famous story, with Beatrice Miehle in the lead, and filmed by the California Motion Picture Corporation, was held at the Hotel St. Francis, San Francisco, on October 8.

E. S. McFadden, of New York, has succeeded William G. Kaliska as manager of the Allendale theatre, Buffalo, and has already started a number of "different" things to attract larger audiences. Mr. McFadden intends to issue a weekly house organ, containing stories of his attractions and news of the players. The big electric organ is nearing completion and will add greatly to the musical programs at this popular neighborhood house.

George H. Verbeck, of the Buffalo Feature Film company, at 15 West Swan street, that city, reports a number of bookings on "The Littlest Rebel." This feature opened the new Regent theatre in Syracuse recently. It plays the Strand for the entire week of October 5. Among other features which this company controls are: "Ireland a Nation" and "The Life of Verdi," both of which have been booked at several theaters in Buffalo and western New York.

D. M. O'Brien, the new manager at Warner's Pittsburgh office, has taken charge of the place and brought his assistant with him. He states that the business of the company there will be conducted on a most wide-awake schedule and that the company has a lot of good things in store for the exhibitors, who are invited, when in the neighborhood of the office, to drop in and make themselves at home.

A Peerless self-playing piano has been installed at the motion picture theatre in Harrodsburg, Ky., by Lewis and Sills.

George H. Christoffer, special representative of the World Film Corporation, is at present at the helm of the local exchange of that organization during the absence of its managers. Both William H. Irvine and his assistant, Alex. G. Irvine, are in the South, arranging fall and winter contracts. Mr. Christoffer spoke in terms of praise of the Washington office with very bright outlook for the winter season.

S. J. Baker has been in charge of the Kansas City offices of the Blache features for several weeks, during the absence of R. E. Boland.

Management of the Orpheum Theatre, Tuscarawas street, Canton, Ohio, has been shifted into the hands of W. L. Hill, former manager of the Jefferson Theatre at Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Mr. Hill will act as local manager for O. G. Murray, V. L. Schram, former manager of the Orpheum, resigned to become booker manager for the western circuit of theaters owned by Feiber & Shea, of New York.

Previous to his work in Ft. Wayne, Mr. Hill managed motion picture houses in California. The Orpheum will be his first theater in Ohio. His progressiveness is marked by his two first acts as an Ohio manager which were to apply for membership in the Ohio branch of the National Motion Picture Exhibitors' league and to subscribe for The Motion Picture News.

The Pastime theatre, Wickliffe, Ky., has just installed a new electric pianoforte with eighty pieces of music.

Mayer Silverman, of the Liberty Renting Film company, of Pittsburgh, is angry and threatens to resort to the law to get his due. He states that he has the sole right to the "Last Days of Pompeii" and that pirates are getting ahead of him by renting the film in Pennsylvania.

Wallace Beery, of the Essanay company, who is playing Swedie in the comedies of that name, recently received a letter regarding his "million dollar" face. The writer dreamed that Mr. Beery was Marc Antony and that she was Cleopatra; but she added, "Lord help Marc Antony with your face."

A scene constructed in the Imp-Universal studio, New York City, will undoubtedly attract unusual attention when released in the two-reel melodrama, "The Three Men Who Knew." It is an Oriental palace, and pillars, draperies and the images of the Heathen Gods were furnished at great expense.

Stuart Paton is the author, and is also assisting Mr. Crane in the direction of the picture. Dorothy Phillips plays the only feminine role.

Those members of the New York Police Department who were not present at the Police Carnival, held at the Brighton Beach Race Track in June, have been able to see their brother officers in action, since a film taken on that occasion was released by the Edison Company on September 1.

F. A. Wall, scenario editor of the American Film Company, and Marc Edmund Jones, another scenario editor of note, returned to the offices of the company recently from a visit to Santa Inez Valley, Cal. They visited this place to witness part of the construction of the Gibraltar Dam, that will create a reservoir which will furnish water to the city of Santa Barbara. They have been writing scenarios about the dam that will give the public an idea of its construction.

The Photo Drama Company's production, "After the Ball," featuring Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon, will be handled by A. E. Siegel in the States of Ohio and Michigan. The company name of the new enterprise is the Big Attraction Film Company, and will be located on the fifth floor of the Columbia Building, Cleveland, Ohio.

Another Frontier company has been formed under the direction of Joe Franz, which will produce western dramas. Mr. Franz formerly played heavy leads for the old company.

Helen Dunbar, character woman of the Essanay Company, has displayed remarkable aptitude in bringing up the Japanese baby which she adopted several months ago. The child has grown to be the pet of the studio.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company, through the Albany office, has just installed a Wurlitzer motion picture orchestra in the Columbia Theatre, Rensselaer, N. Y., which John J. Sullivan owns.

John Jones, well known along the west coast as a character actor, has joined the Frontier Company at Santa Paula, Cal. In addition to his acting he will have charge of the stage mechanics.

The World Film Corporation, distributors under the management of Arthur S. Hyman, for the Shubert and Brady productions, has established quite a record since the recent opening of an office in Atlanta, Ga.

During the past fourteen days contracts have been signed for business amounting to $36,038.

Leo Levison, of the World Film Corporation's office in Pittsburgh, has been planning to come to New York for some time to go over business with General Manager Selznick. Every time Mr. Levison is ready to come to New York, he finds some Pittsburgh exhibitor on hand ready to sign a year's contract for his pictures and the trip is postponed. This has happened many times in the last fortnight, but Mr. Levison hasn't given up hope of reaching New York yet.

For the direction of Henry Bernstein's picture, "The Thief," the Box Office company has secured the services of Edgar Lewis, producer of "The Littlest Rebel," "Northern Lights" and "Captain Swift."

Hal August, who was with the Universal west coast studios for two years, is now under contract with the Eaco Films. Mr. August gained a reputation when with the Universal as a clever interpreter of light comedy parts.

As a novelty, the parents and other members of the family of Edwin August, of the Eaco Films, have appeared in the leading parts of a special picture taken under the direction of Mr. August. It is the intention of the elder August to preserve the reel and hand it down to his children.

Earl L. Thursten, a well known musician of Louisville, Ky., has succeeded Frank Wilson as organist of the Walnut theatre in that city. He was formerly with the Wurlitzer company.

Adele Lane, playing under the Selig brand, was recently severely injured in the taking of a picture. A scene called for her struggling with a bear, who suddenly lost his temper and clawed Miss Lane on both arms. The injuries sustained caused her great pain. The heartiest sympathy is felt for her.

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"The Rose and the Thorns." (Vitagraph. Two reels. Sat., Oct. 10.)—A drama intended to point out the fact that a girl brings her miseries. In this case the flirt is saved from her difficulties by the man she loves, but too late, and is seen as a happy married woman. In the cast are Darwin Kari, Nelly Childers, Harry Kendall and Frank Currier.

"His Mother's Home." (Biograph. Sat., Oct. 10.)—A drama of a type which is too familiar, but with great interest, but would please some audiences.

"On the Battle Line." (Kline-Cines. Two reels. Tues., Oct. 13.)—A story in which a man is forced to struggle between his promise to his mother—never to enter a duel—and of defending his country. The love of a dead mother proves the stronger. He is estranged from society but on his deathbed he sees his adopted daughter in the arms of a man whom she formerly denounced. This is a highly effective story; the performance of the heroine is an aroused suspense. The scenes and photography are excellent.

"In Old Virginia." (Lubin. Two reels. Thurs., Oct. 8.)—A highly melodramatic story of the Civil War. A young soldier plays the coward and shames death in his first battle. He joins another company and courts death but is spared. He learns that another man is about to marry the girl he loves and that the family homestead is about to be destroyed. He kills the crook and is fatally injured. An old servant who knew the family never knows of his act. John E. Ince plays the lead.

"The Green Eyed Monster." (Lubin, Fri., Oct. 9.)—A rude tailor in jealous of what he believes to be the infatuation of his sweetheart for a man of wealth. He tries to kill the man, and thinks he has succeeded. The intended victim helps in the reconciliation. In the cast are Eza M. White, George Stanley, L. C. Shumway and Paul Parr Smith.

"When the Ham Turned." (Lubin. Sat., Oct. 10.)—A "ham actor" is chased out of town by his wife and the village police. He turns the tables and is made chief himself. A rather amusing comedy. Raymond McKee plays the part of the actor.

"The Hand of Iron." (Edison. Sat., Oct. 31.)—A cruel army officer succeeds in making the colonel's daughter dislike a decent officer whom he wants in the regiment with his own. The colonel begins to suspect that his daughter is the girl to the scene of the riot. The colonel is driven mad by the scheme. The worthless officer loses his head and orders the troops to fire, but is stopped in time by the other one. Eventually the better man wins the girl.

"For Love of Him." (Selig. Tues., Sept. 22.)—A story of a villain and a woman and in her profession puts acid in her face, creating scenes which are beyond beauty. The plot is frustrated by accident, and the repentant actress gives up thoughts of venereal disease. The story is not too deep.

"The New Partner." (Edison. Two. Nov. 3.)—Gertrude McCoy and Robert Brower do some very good work in this picture. A girl inherits a share of a fortune. She hears the bad conditions which exist in, and learns of their truth by being disguised as an employee. Her partner rescues her when a fire threatens to change the policy and operate the factory with some regard for the workers.

"Buster Brown Plays Out the Costumes." (Edison. Wed., Oct. 6.)—A comedy recital which ought to please the children. Buster selects rather odd costumes for two masks of which he is very proud. The minister and others are slightly shocked. Norval Mottington is seen as Buster.

"She Slanded a Big One." (Essanay. Mon., Oct. 19.)—A detective recital featuring Wallace Beery. Her beau attempts suicide. He then gives her a witnessed how the friend saved him. Sweetie goes fishing. She cannot pull in her catch. The police department is called to give aid. A three-foot fish is finally pulled to shore.

"Mother o' Dreams." (Essanay. Tues., Oct. 20.)—A good picture with a lot of human interest in it. Played by a strong cast, including Richard C. Traverse, Gerda Holmes, Blancy Washington and Roscoe Arbuckle. This is a strong one-reeler that will be enjoyed by everyone. The story is how to love her teacher, who unknowingly restores her to her husband. The plot of course is simple, the situations are good and the characters splendid.

"The Long Range Lover and the Lollipoose." (Essanay. Wed., Oct. 21.)—Another George Ade comedy of the funny kind. Young lawyer sees the girl of his dreams. He meets her time after time, but does not become acquainted for several years. When he does she merely utter a few sentences. In her own words, "It's fierce." So the long-range lover's dream is shattered.

"Regan's Daughter." (Vitagraph. Two reels. Tues., Sept. 29.)—A crooked politician and but makes a speech in ignorance of his character. A fine young de-

"Jinks and the Barber." (Lubin. Tues., Sept. 29.)—This is the same reel with "Jealous James." A man agrees to pay the price for another man's shop. The other man takes every treatment in the place. There are other complications.

"The Blue Flame." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., Oct. 5.)—A good detective drama that has the proper proportion of mystery and trickery to make it worth while. The photo-

"Jimmy Hayes and Muriel." (Selig. Tues., Oct. 26.)—A western drama with a good story. Jimmy Hayes is an operator who have de-

"The Ragah's Vacation." (Selig. Wed., Oct. 21.)—This is a one-reeler written by Har-

"Rice Industry in the U. S." (Victor. May, 1914.)—A very instructive reel showing the planting, flooding, reaping, threshing and polishing of rice. It is obvious the film was exposed on a dark day.

"The Violinist." (Eclair. Two reels. Wed., Oct. 21.)—This is a well played offering with Victor Garber in the lead. The violinist. The young girl marries a violinist much against her father's wishes. Her future is made perfect art, the father loses all letters. With the arrival of the child the whole family is reconciled and the daughter are united. Altogether a very pleas-

"Vivian's Transformation." (Crystal. Tues., Oct. 20.)—Vivian indulges in the madame's clothes for a visit to the beach with her beau. The happenings at the beach are funny but seem to neglect the main line of the story.
The Eastern lady is sought after by all the bachelors. She is a conventional girl of average appearance and no unusual beauty, but her lowly condition is a tragedy to be pitied when one sees her face. She is as beautiful as a gypsies girl, and no one but a gypsies girl could love a rich man.

"Suspended Sentence." (Powers. Fri., Oct. 25.)--Quite an unusual story, with Edna Hall and Elia B. Hall as the leading parts, supported by the Universal Juvenile Company. The daughter of a wealthy man wants to marry a crippled man, and her father opposes her. The story is well written and well acted. It is an unusual story for Universal Juvenile Company.

"The Little Blonde Lady." (Rex, Sun., Oct. 25.)--Robert Leonard and Ella Hall appear at their best in this picture, supported by Olive Golden. The young debutante ignites her suitor when she learns that he has become penniless, but her little sister doesn't, and when he regains his riches, he prefers the faithful one. This is an excellent comedy drama.

"Old Erickson, Boss." (Rex, Two reels. Thu., Oct. 19.)--The story of a wooden leg flapper, who has a wooden leg. The story is well written, and the acting is excellent. It is an interesting story for all lovers of Universal Juvenile Company.

"Across the Court." (Joker, Sat., Oct. 17.)--Max Asher, Louise Fazenda, Gale Henry and William Holden are the stars in this uproarious comedy. The old bachelor flirts across the court with an old maid, but he is prevented from going much more than his liking, and proceeds to get married. A lot of trouble and laughter ensue.

"The Countess Court." (Joker, Wed., Oct. 21.)--This was the title charged from "Count Nooksack." The friend of the sufferer, a father dressed as a girl and is the victim of a trick. He marries to the count, while the daughter elopes with her choice. Great fun furnished by this comedy in which Ernest Shields, Philip Dunbar and Bert Byrne appear.

"Universal Boy in the Gates of Liberty." (Joker, Sat., Oct. 17.)--As a comedy, it is quite entertaining. Matty saves two immigrants from the clutches of spies from their own country. A well constructed picture.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Out of the Air." (Majestic. Two reels. Sun., Oct. 4.)--An exciting series of events, with Eve Arden, Frank Merrill and Wallace Ford as the leading parts. It is a story of a girl who is caught in a whirlwind of adventure and excitement, and the story is well written and well acted. It is an exciting story for all lovers of Majestic.

"The End of the Galley." (Broncho-Mutoscope. Mon., Oct. 14.)--This is a picture that succeeds in making the audience laugh. It is a comedy of errors and confusion, but it is presented with fine artistry, in all respects. The film is well made, acting, settings and photography. Thus the story is both amusing and entertaining. The story is a good one, and the acting is excellent. It is a very well made picture.

"The Word of His People." (Kay-Bee. Fri., Oct. 16.)--The lieutenant is the last of his race, and his father on his death-bed urges him as he dies that he marry his ward, but the ward refuses to comply with the father's wishes, but she loves another. The son learns this and is honorably released from his engagement. Later the fort is attacked by Sioux Indians; the lieutenant gives up his life that she may have her freedom. The story doesn't give a fair idea of the strength of the story, the many dramatic moments, which brings the sacrifice of the lieutenant.

"Jimmy." (Domino-Mutual. Two parts. Thu., Oct. 5.)--One of the most interesting and well written stories of the season. The human interest is an elusive thing and is extremely hard to define in clear terms. Here is a story in which one instinctively feels it. The loyalty of a little girl towards her father is almost unanswerable, but even the most callous hearted will be touched. A story full of tragedy and happiness, which, in the words of the reviewer, is a story of love and loyalty. It is a story full of adventure and excitement, and the acting is excellent. It is a very well made picture.

"The Million Dollar Bride." (Komic, Sun. Oct. 4.)--Something funny and at the same time original. Tom Ringling, Fife Tinker, Ed Dillon and Max Davidson are in the cast. The penniless count attempts to marry a rich old woman, but his designs are foiled. He is frustrated and in jail.

"Nieda." (Beauty, Tues., Oct. 6.)--This is a fairly good offering, which is not especially, if at all, in the line of the usual comedy. It is a story of a rich man and a poor girl, and when its conclusion arrives. The lovely of the wild mountain girl meets his death from a fall. In a vision she sees him and goes towards him, and she also falls to her death. Beautiful mountain scenery, beautiful acting. Harry Pollard and Joseph Harris are the only people that appear.

"Our Mutual Girl, No. 38." (Reliance, Mon., Oct. 5.)--In this chapter Margaret has a number of trying experiences all due to the fact that she is a woman. In the opening scenes Aunt Abbie inspects the family's income for the benefit of children.

"The Inquisite." (American, Wed., Sept. 30.)--A drunken brute causes his family much misery, but finally meets a timely death, not before he has caused the death of his little grandchild.

"Hello Mabel." (Keystone, Thurs., Oct. 8.)--There is quite an interesting story in this, and a very good one. Mabel Normand as a telephone girl gets herself, her lover, an a wedded couple into all manner of mixups by her telephonic personality.

"Their Ups and Downs." (Keystone, Mon., Oct. 5.)--This is a real sidesplitter with Roscoe Arbuckle in the leading role. Midway in the picture his sweetheart, as is always the case, is carried up in the air by a bunch of balloons. An excellent double may have been written here.

"Daphnia." (American. Two reels. Mon., Oct. 19.)--This is a picture of a counterfeiter's daughter, who had suffered greatly at the hands of fortune. Finally, after years of suffering, her chance for revenge when the officer's son is discovered passing bad money. The story is highly interesting, and the acting is excellent. The film exposure work appears in a number of sections, and the photography is good. Winnis Greenfield is seen in the rôle of a girl, with support by George Field and Ed. Coxen.

"The Cripple." (Thunhouse. Two reels. Tues., Oct. 6.)--When her lover is a cripple, she is practical and, not upon the way, has regained the use of both his legs she gladly accepts him. Thus drama is put in a very nice way, and the pitiable actions of the girl will not be condemned. This story is well written and well developed, and is interesting in its entirety.
The Anglers." (Keystone, Mon., Oct. 12.)—The story of a double-lix. Two furious suitors clash are portrayed here, but contain a little too much business. The hero and heroine are a near." There are, laughs in parts, especially when Charles Murray ap-

The High Spots on Broadway." (Keystone, Thurs., Oct. 15.)—This picture is as risque as possible, but just misses the vulgar mark. Margaret finds herself in a hotel and is courted by a foreigner. There is an interesting photo playing with good acting and very good sharp photography.

The Diamond of Disaster." (Thaunseder, Two reels, Oct. 12.)—A story of the sacrifice of a young man who realizes that another has won the love of his life. The hero turns it over to a picture, Greenwood and Ed Coxen play the leads. With no comedy it is nevertheless an interesting photo playing with good acting and very good sharp photography.

Down by the Sea." (American, Wed., Oct. 14.)—A story of the sacrifice of a young man who realizes that another has won the love of his life. Billy's Rival." (American, Wed., Oct. 7.)—True to the proverbial motion picture husband, that gentleman's suspicions are aroused in this picture, when he sees his wife delivering a dialogue to an unknown person, but it's only the neighbor's baby. Quite an amusing situation, together, that contains a fair amount of fun, played by William Garwood and Vivian Rich.

The Pet of the Petticoats." (Royal, Sat., Oct. 10.)—A poor attempt at comedy is made, but it is doubtful if many will enjoy it.

Those Love Pangs." (Keystone, Sat., Oct. 10.)—Whenever Charles Chaplin and Alfonso come together in an effort to get a girl, it is certain to be one continual laugh. Try to keep on laughing, perhaps the action may get "tired" low some, but the story is never-

NEWS WEEKLY

"Animated Weekly, No. 135."—The ruins of the city of Termonde after twelve hours of terrific bombardment gives the spectator an idea of the power of modern siege guns; a scene in Ostend, Belgium shows thousands of tons of food being shipped on its way to the war-stricken parts of Europe, and one sees General Joffre inspecting his forces. The usual clever pictures of Hy Mayer are, of course, a part of the program.

"Mutual Weekly, No. 92."—The war pictures are varied and thrilling. There is the first line of defense at Ostend, Bruges, Ghent and Malines. Belgium’s armies destroying German ammunition wagons; and cords of wire being placed in the trenches by Germans to catch the enemy’s shells. In contrast to such satellite subjects, there is a magnificent peace meeting at Grant’s Tomb, New York City.

"Animated Weekly, No. 134."—The rest of the country will have an opportunity to see Coney Island’s famous March Grass this week. The carnival is graphically reproduced. In contrast to this exhibition of safety there is a disastrous railroad wreck in Livingston, Ala., where seven people were killed. Some of the other topics that will prove of interest are: the largest wagging ferry, recently launched in Philadelphia; Admission Day celebration in California; and the changing of a British ship’s registry in New Orleans.

"Mutual Weekly, No. 94."—A number of interesting views of foreign scenes are shown. One scene, which will attract unusual attention are the fortifications at Antwerp, German prisoners of war, ruins of Malines, Belgian soldiers joining the Allies at Ostend, and Canadian troops leaving for the Continent.

"Animated Weekly, No. 116."—The patrons of film drama will see in the issue of this week a number of interesting topics which cannot fail to cause wide interest. Among the best features are the subjects and the excellent photography. Just opening the championship series in the Wide Refills, everybody will want to see the portraits of such men as Pitcher Busch, Amos Strunk and others. Fine scenes of Canada’s war camp, the Belgians defending Louvain, and warships in the New York harbor are also shown.

Mr. Rothschild be made an honorary member of the organization.

A member brought up the question of exchange service, protesting against the present arrangement whereby a certain number of reels must be taken each week, regardless of the needs of exhibitors. He expressed the opinion that more flexible rules might be adopted by exchange men if exhibitors insisted on it. M. E. Cory made a few remarks on this subject and stated that as the meeting was open to all it would probably be possible to have several exchange men on hand to give reasons for the existing arrangements.

The handling of reels on the part of exhibitors was then taken up as a subject for discussion at the present meeting. Should a system of inspection of machines be gone into? No action was taken on the inspection proposition and on motion of M. E. Cory the meeting was adjourned for the day.

Exchanges Make Fine Displays

As the exchange men contributed liberally toward the expenses of the convention they were allowed the privilege of making displays in the assembly hall and some very fine exhibits were installed. The World Film Corporation had two magnificent illuminated lobby stands.

The Box Office Attractions Company had a twenty-four sheet poster that was declared to be one of the best pieces of paper ever put out, and "Billy" Citron was on hand to tell all about the new exchange. The Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., the Mutual Film Corporation, the Syndicate Film Corporation, the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, the Progressive Motion Picture Company and the Nat A. Magner Company, all had attractive displays and also had representatives on hand to meet exhibitors.

On Wednesday morning the sessions were resumed and the secretary read the minutes of the meeting of the day before. Mr. Beach, chairman of the committee having the proposition of issuing a monthly bulletin in charge, stated that the committee had found this matter feasible and suggested that this be taken up as soon as the finances of the league made it possible.

Tugwell the Star Orator

President Goddard then called upon A. P. Tugwell of Los Angeles, who had just arrived at San Francisco, and that gentleman delivered one of the finest speeches heard at the convention.

He outlined present conditions in Los Angeles, declaring that that city had more moving picture houses than any other city in the State, and probably more than any city of a corresponding size in the United States. He declared that he was not proud of this fact, however, that competition was very keen there, that many theatres did not pay and that there were frequent changes in management. He promised that next year a heavy delegation would be present at the State meeting from the Southern city.

In citing some of the benefits of organization, he told of the efforts of the chief of police of Los Angeles to secure the passage of a measure to segregate men and women in moving picture shows and how this was defeated through the organized effort of theatre owners. Mr. Tugwell told of how the efforts to enforce unfair union rules were thwarted.

He also related how three dangerous bills were defeated at the last Legislature through the efforts of the State League and how the moving picture men had found in Governor Johnson a true friend.

Secretary W. A. Cory then presented his annual report showing the financial standing of the organization. He stated that during the past year the membership had decreased more than thirty per cent and urged that exhibitors rally around the league and place it on a firm basis again. He declared that much good had been accomplished but that the work had been sadly handicapped through lack of funds. He stated that he was retiring from office and that under no consideration would he again accept the position. The gathering then adjourned in order that all might be on hand to take the boat trip in the afternoon.

THE SCARECROW OF OZ
Oz Film—Five Reels
REVIEWED BY WILLIAM REXSMAN ANDREWS

The Never-Never Land of quaint fancy is a place of delightful retirement from the harsh realities of a workaday world. This realm of poesy and odd conceits, whose surprises are limited only by the exuberance of an author's imaginative flights, has been explored by L. Frank Baum with pleasing results.

In "The Scarecrow of Oz" he has found a region of quirks and quarks, a place so full of whimsical abandon that adults will give themselves up to the illusion of its fairy land with as much absorption as children.

Indeed, in some respects this latest production of the Oz Film Company will make a stronger appeal to grown-ups. Here and there are sly touches of humor which can be appreciated only by the matured mind, as in the case of Stevenson's "A Child's Garden of Verses," and Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland" and "Alice Through the Looking Glass."

A man or woman can sit through "The Scarecrow of Oz" or "The Patchwork Girl of Oz" and get more real enjoyment out of the extravaganza than from many pretentious dramas.

No doubt a large percentage of parents who have seen the first of the Oz series will take the children to the second one in the same spirit that so many of us go to the circus—merely to "please the youngsters"—without admitting that we really want to see it ourselves.

Like the best fairy tales, so dear to our childhood recollection—those that mothers have told the youngsters at their knees from time immemorial, and the eager fancy of youth never tires of hearing—a tender love story runs through the play.

There is the old, old theme—old but never threadbare—of parental opposition preventing the "course of true love from running smooth." King Krewl does not like his daughter's suitor and calls in the services of a heartless witch to make the beautiful princess forget the object of her affections.

And the old witch does it effectively—with all the expertness of her tribe in the days when those things could be done—in fairy land. The grimming hag, accoutred with all the traditional regalia of her office, peaked hat and bizarre garments, goes to her task with a diabolical zest.

The magic wand conjures up her ally, Old Nick himself, and she ladies from a regular Macbeth witches' caldron the direful potion which shall make the girl forget all mortal love. This is poured on her breast, and the mixture freezes the heart of the princess. Then the witch removes the heart.

This seems impossible, yet it is true. If you don't believe it, ask any young child in the audience—deeply learned in all knowledge of fairy land and the mean ways of witches—for the poor girl's heart is taken out before your very eyes; so it must be true!

This is only one touching whimsy in this masterpiece of "lovable foolery." Space forbids mention of other incidents except the scene where the Scarecrow is brought to life by the Spirit of the Corn.

What a wonderful place to sojourn in, this topsy-turvy land where happy children wander about accompanied by friendly lions, frisky kangaroos and wise mules who know that malicious witches deserve to be properly kicked for all the trouble they bring in the lives of deserving lovers!

TWO LOS ANGELES THEATRES RAISE PRICES

Los Angeles, Oct. 12

Two more retail district motion picture theatres of Los Angeles have announced their intention of increasing prices. The Woodley, 833 South Broadway, which has been showing feature pictures only for the past six months, at ten, fifteen and twenty cents for evening performances and ten cents for matinees, has raised the price for performances to ten cents general admission, fifteen cents rear seats, and twenty-five cents loges.

The Symphony, opened in August, is charging ten cents for general admission, twenty for rear seats and twenty-five for loges, instead of ten, fifteen and twenty cents. The change has proved a good move.

BARRIE VISITS FAMOUS PLAYERS

Sir James M. Barrie, the distinguished English dramatist, whose every visit to America is a distinct event in theatrical and literary circles, got his first glimpse of a motion picture studio when he visited the Famous Players Film Company recently. Sir James spent several hours with Adolph Zukor and Daniel Frohman, and made a complete tour of the Famous Players' immense studio and laboratory.

Sir James termed his visit “a peep into fairyland,” and often expressed astonishment at the methods and mechanism of the big plant.

The eminent dramatist, who is the author of a greater number of theatrical successes than any other living writer for the stage, was introduced to the various Famous Players directors, and also Mary Pickford.

PARAMOUNT BOOKLET MAKES FINE SOUVENIR

A unique bit of advertising has been issued by Paramount Pictures Corporation. It consists of a dainty booklet, vest-pocket size, entitled “The Story of Paramount,” profusely illustrated with half-tones of the prominent actors and actresses appearing in the productions of the companies releasing through Paramount.

Short notices accompanying the portraits make interesting reading for those who desire to refresh their recollection of the accomplishments of the various players. The booklet because of its handsome appearance and the high quality of its contents will appeal to the general public as a desirable souvenir of a "Paramount evening."

“AFTE THE BALL" HAS BIG BOOKINGS

"After the Ball," featuring Keely and Shanley, produced by the Photo Drama Company under Pierce Kingley's direction, is having great success throughout the country. The hundreds of letters coming in every day to the Photo Drama office attest this. There are over two hundred bookings alone listed at the New York office, while the reports from the out of town offices are double that of any other feature ever sent out from the office of the Photo Drama Company.

Preparations are being made to cover the coast country and Canada. Big Bill Steiner and Jim Maher are the men at the helm, while its publicity is being covered by Pierce Kingsley.

SPECIAL ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS.

No matter how thrilling a story one may read, interest is not sustained if poor type, poor paper and poor press work make hard work for the eyes. It's the same with motion pictures. A clear picture is as necessary as a good scenario.

Because the basic product is right, the clearest pictures are on "Eastman" film. Look for the stencil mark in the margin.

TITLES
Our Title Department has been re-organized, elaborately equipped and placed under the direction of recognized experts.

Its highly perfected apparatus, linotype machine and job presses enable us to produce the most difficult title work in any language—artistically, accurately and quickly—and at lower prices than have ever yet been quoted.

DEVELOPING AND PRINTING
Save money and insure the best results by entrusting your work to the largest and most complete commercial plant in America.

 BOX OFFICE OPENES 13 BRANCH EXCHANGES
Four companies are engaged on the pretentious productions scheduled for The Box Office Attraction Company's program. These productions are adaptations from well-known novels and plays. It is the intention of the organization to release three features a week and three elaborate features a month with single reel comedies to fill in.

In all of the large cities have been opened as follows:

Cleveland, Boston, Syracuse, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Kansas City, Dallas, San Francisco, Denver, Minneapolis, Chicago and Seattle.

 Eleven more branches are now in the process of organization. The twelve that are now in full operation are managed by experts who have a thorough knowledge of local conditions.

KIRKWOOD ELECTED SCREEN CLUB PRESIDENT James Kirkwood was elected president of the Screen Club at the annual election held Saturday, October 3, by a vote nearly two and a half times larger than that of his closest competitor. The entire ticket advocated by Mr.
Kirkwood's supporters was also elected, with the exception of the second vice-president. "Doc" Willat won out for this place over Adolph Zinkor, the candidate on the Kirkwood ticket.

The total number of votes cast was 226. Of these Mr. Kirkwood received 127, "Joe" Farnham 53, and Mr. "Billy" Quirk 46. The votes for the other of ficers were distributed in about the same proportion.

Those elected were: Bennie Wilson, vice-president; "Doc" Willat, second vice-president; Charles Bauman, third vice-president; George Blaisdell, treasurer; William Barry, corresponding secretary, and Paul Scardan, recording secretary. The board of governors elected is made up of King Baggot, Jake Gerhardt, Jules Berstein and Frank Powell.

The election followed a spirited campaign which had been carried on for some time. Those members who wanted to see the club president drawn from the ranks of the business men in the film industry, rather than from the actors, advocated the election of a ticket headed by Joseph Farnham.

Billy Quirk, of the Vitagraph company, headed another ticket which asked for the actor vote, as did Mr. Kirkwood's. All of the candidates published "campaign literature," and in other ways worked hard to present their cause.

MORRISON AND POPPE LAUNCH NEW FIRM

The latest along Broadway is the formation of a company composed of two men young in years but old in the motion picture game. Ed. Morrison and Harry Poppe, as they are known to the trade, compose the new organization which has made its abode in the Times Building, Times Square, New York.

Mr. Poppe hails from Cincinnati, where he began his career as press representative for Henck & Fennessey, owners and managers of the Lyric Theatre and Heuck’s Opera House in Cincinnati, and other houses in Indianapolis and the West.

He next accepted a position in the Cincinnati office of the “Billboard,” where he grew to be associate editor, and was later made manager of the vaudeville, music and burlesque departments in that company’s New York office. After four years with this paper he left to manage “The Goose Girl” for Baker and Castle.

From this position Mr. Poppe’s rise in the amusement business was sure and rapid. He held positions as advance agent and press man for Arthur Nikisch and his London Orchestra and other important attractions. He became associated with his present partner, Mr. Morrison, while on the “Billboard,” where the two men worked side by side for many years.

Mr. Morrison needs no introduction to the motion picture trade. He conducted the motion picture department of the “Billboard” for three years and was then made manager of that paper’s Chicago office. This position he left to work under Adolph Eissner, then manager of the Mutual Exchange in Chicago. Mr. Morrison has also managed exchanges in New York State. He recently formed a company of his own which forms the nucleus of the present company which has been organized and has developed a new project.

The plan of the new project has not been disclosed, but it looks like a big one and a going proposition. The company’s first advertisement appears in the rear advertising section of this issue opposite the inside back cover.

LIONEL BARRYMORE JOINS KINETOPHOTE

An interesting piece of news has come from the offices of the Kinetophone Corporation at 126 West 46th street, New York, in the statement made to The News that a large company is filming “The Span of Life” for that company with Lionel Barrymore in the role of Richard Blunt.

The scenario was written by Catherine Carr from the late Sutton Vane’s famous old drama of the same name.
The World’s rights to the work as a picture play were recently bought by the Kinetophone from the Blunt estate.

Associated with Mr. Barrymore in the piece are Gladys
Wynne, former leading woman with George Arliss, and Lye’d Chambers.
The picture is being staged under the direction of Edward Mackay. When the film is finished it will be booked exclusively through the Montgomery - Simmons Film Service, Inc., which has offices at 126 West 46th street. Elaborate settings are now in preparation for the play.

Adler, in the title role. “Michael Strogoff” is in five reels with demanding, more film dramas with the talented Miss Barrymore. Dallas Store Devotes Window to “Kitty Cobb”

Tiche-Goettiniger Makes an Elaborate Display of Flagg Book and Lithographs With List of Theatres Showing Warner Film

WORD has just been received from H. E. Stahler, manager of the Dallas, Texas, exchange of Warner’s Features, Inc., of a co-operative advertising plan.

Mr. Stahler has booked “The Adventures of Kitty Cobb” very extensively in the Dallas territory. During the time that the film was shown there, the big department store of Tiche-Goettinger had an elaborate window display of James Montgomery Flagg’s famous book.

The window was decorated with the beautiful Kitty Cobb lithographs in seven colors and also with photographs. A card gave the names and addresses of the motion picture theatres where this big four-part feature was on display.

The theatres co-operated by displaying slides stating that a special sale of the book telling the story of Kitty Cobb in picture and text was held by the department store.

Mr. Stahler reports that Kitty Cobb has already made a hit in the Southwest and that it promises to become one of the most popular features ever shown there.

August 21st, 1914.

Dear Leslie:—

Whenever there is an opportunity for real enterprise—chuckful of brightness, originality and broad helpfulness—always one man can be relied upon to leap into the foreground and that is Arthur Leslie.

This is true of the motion picture field and it has been of every other work you have been engaged in.

Thank you most sincerely for your remarkable exhibit of results from your advertisement in the "News," proving it beyond any doubt to be the publication that "reaches the exhibitors." It shows in one flash what I am trying hard to prove with many arguments.

You may be sure that I deeply appreciate your friendliness—as I always have your cleverness.

With best wishes, I am

Very truly yours,

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON,

A NEW FILM SERVICE IN THE FIELD

The Montgomery-Simmons Film Service, Inc., began operations this week in new quarters in the offices of the Kinetophone Corporation at 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York, where the service will be the exclusive booking agent of all the feature films put out by the Kinetophone.

Both members of the firm are well known to the moving picture trade, especially in the way of booking films and exciting them. George N. Montgomery was identified with the exchange and exhibitor's end of the business for a long time in the South and knows that field thoroughly. Ira H. Simmons was booking manager of the World Film Corporation and of the Shubert Feature Film Company before forming his partnership with Mr. Montgomery. Mr. Simmons has had a wide experience among exhibitors all over the country having traveled extensively in the interests of various amusement enterprises in the past. Marcus A. Miller is active as vice-president of the company and Saul G. Lippman is in charge of the New York exchange.

Just now the Montgomery-Simmons Service is pushing "Mark" or "The Destruction of Carthage," an Italian masterpiece which is being exploited by the Kinetophone Corporation, in addition to several other big features among which are "The Line-Up" for New York State, featuring Commissioner George S. Dougherty, New York's famous police detective. "Forgiven; or, the Jack of Diamonds," a picture play built on the famous old drama of the same name and featuring Edwin Frosberg who starred in the stage production of the piece for which Montgomery-Simmons has the New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia rights, and "The Spirit of the Poppy," a psychological study of the effects of the drug habit. There are eighteen big film stories in the vaults of the concern which are to be released this winter.

These eighteen film dramas cover a wide range of subjects, and the variety will appeal to every photoplay patron in the country. Comedy, melodrama, tragedy, farce, all kinds of theatrical entertainment, are represented in the repertoire of the Montgomery-Simmons company.

The poster is your greatest asset. It is the medium through which you bring the public from the street into the theatre. THE RIGHT KIND OF POSTERS ARE ABSOLUTELY INDISPENSABLE.

THE MORGAN POSTERS ARE THE RIGHT KIND

That is a proven fact. Here's what Maurice Seidlitz, of the Grant Theatre, New York, says, "I have used the UNIVERSAL program for over two years. The MORGAN POSTERS, coming with the UNIVERSAL service, are so far above the average poster on the market today, that comparison would be out of place."

Here's what Ned K. Miller, of the Ditmas Theatre, Perth Amboy, N. J., says, "The MORGAN POSTERS now supplied by the UNIVERSAL are without an equal, and it is certainly a pleasure to be affiliated in a business way with an organization that is endeavoring in every way to help the exhibitor."

EXHIBITORS ALL SAY THAT MORGAN POSTERS ARE THE BEST

THE HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL

Earliest and Best War Films

Here are the Proofs:

HEARST-SELIG WAR BEATS.

FIRST pictures in America showing destruction wrought at Termonde, Belgium, by the Kaiser’s artillery in the attack on that city were exhibited in the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, reel No. 52, released Thursday, October 1.

In presenting pictures of Russian prisoners—thousands of them—being herded by the Germans at Koenigsberg, and French prisoners being marched through the streets of Koenigsbruck, the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial secured a remarkable moving picture beat. Nowhere else in the United States or in any country in Europe were these pictures shown. They were exhibited in Hearst-Selig reel No. 62, released on Thursday, October 1.

On Monday, September 28, in the Hearst-Selig release No. 61, remarkable moving pictures showing long columns of grey-clad German troops, occupying Brussels, the evacuated capital of Belgium, were presented. These were the first and only pictures of the German army in motion, on hostile soil, shown in the United States. The pictures were made by a Hearst-Selig News Pictorial photographer, sent from Holland, who held special German passports and permits. These pictures showed the dusty and battle-worn artillery, infantry and cavalry of General von der Goltz’s army, triumphant from Liege, marching through the streets of Brussels, while the silent Belgian populace looked on. They showed how the marvelous equipment of the German troops—they were evidence of the strikingly excellent morale of the Kaiser’s soldiers, who as they passed the camera, laughed, smiled, joked and waved their hands in greeting. Soup kitchens, from which the legions of the Kaiser are fed on the march and in battle field alike, halted before the eye of the camera, where officer and private made their noon-day meal.

The first moving pictures from Berlin to be exhibited in the United States were shown in the Hearst-Selig reel No. 58, released Thursday, September 17. The thrilling and exciting scenes that took place in the German capital soon after war had been declared were presented. The Hearst-Selig moving picture camera registered the cheering crowds that gathered before the Kaiser’s Palace—artillery rumbling through the streets on the way to the front—and perhaps most interesting of all, the call of Reservists to the Colors, one method of which was a military band which marched through the streets, the Reservists—bankers, business men in afternoon coats and silk hats, workmen and clerks—following behind.

On August 5, Great Britain announced that it was in a state of war with Germany. Then followed many days of worry and excitement. A little more than two weeks later, despite the suspension of steamship traffic and the rigid censorship put into effect in Great Britain—Monday, August 24, to be exact—the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial in reel No. 51 presented the first genuine moving pictures from London. These were pictures of the vast crowds that gathered outside the Buildings of Parliament and the War Office, awaiting the expected Declaration of War against Germany. Three days later, on Thursday, August 27, the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial in release No. 52 presented scenes of recruiting in London and other English cities, and in the following weeks exhibited many pictures of the raising of the British Expeditionary Force.

Less than one month after the Germans commenced their attack on Liege, the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial was exhibiting in all parts of the United States pictures of war scenes in Belgium; on August 7, the German cavalry screen advances upon Liege and a few days later the terrific artillery duel commenced. On Thursday, September 3, in release No. 54, the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial presented moving pictures of King Albert of Belgium in Brussels, bidding farewell to the Ninth Regiment, later annihilated at Liege—troops entraining at Brussels preparatory to departure for Liege, and Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, caring for the Belgian wounded in the Royal Palace at Brussels, which had been converted into a hospital.

In release No. 55, Monday, September 7, the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial showed pictures of Belgian refugees fleeing Tirlemont, as scouting parties of Uhlan and the German cavalry screen drew close to that city. In this same reel pictures of Belgian troops advancing from Brussels to meet the oncoming foe, and pictures of Belgians in trenches prepared for the defense of Louvain were shown.

Among the more interesting war scenes from Belgium were those shown in reel No. 56, released Thursday, September 10. These were of Belgian soldiers at Waelhelm, preparing to meet the German attack. Some of these striking pictures included scenes of Belgian soldiers destroying and burning houses that stood in the path of the great forts at Waelhelt, and might have obstructed artillery fire. Infantrymen were shown in the act of pouring oil upon the burning homes of Belgian non-combatants.

The Thanhouser Three-a-Week

Tuesday, October 27th. "A Madonna of the Poor." (Two reels)
This is an exceptionally interesting drama written and directed by Carroll Fleming—"the man with 10,000,000 friends." Fleming's popularity as a writer and director is due to his wonderful ability. In this two-reel play his talents are well displayed. The cast includes John Reinhard, Muriel Ostriche and Dave Thompson.

Sunday, November 1st. "Shep's Race With Death."
The announcement that "Shep"—the Thanhouser dog—is in the cast is sufficient to cause a big demand for the Films. Exhibitors know the remarkable acting for which "Shep" is noted. In this drama "Shep" plays a very important part—actually rescuing frightened Madeline Fairbanks from the path of a fast express train. The scene is thrilling. In this cast are Mrs. Whitcove, J. S. Murray, Marie Rainford, Marion and Madeline Fairbanks and "Shep" himself.

Two Letters

Mr. Fred S. Meyer, assistant to Mr. J. V. Bryson in the management of the Laemmle Film Service at Minneapolis, took part in a recent subscription contest among the ninety-seven representatives of the Motion Picture News. He won first prize. His letter of explanation is particularly interesting because it demonstrates that a quality trade journal, like a quality film or program, is capable of meeting and successfully overcoming any amount of competition.

"The Motion Picture News.

"Gentlemen: In acknowledging receipt of your check for the amount of the first prize in your recent contest, I want to make an explanation.

"When I decided to enter the contest, I anticipated some hard plugging and a maximum of fifteen or twenty subscriptions. I had no more than started when I found that the 'Motion Picture News' was considered some paper in the Northwest. You were right when you said: 'The News is its own best selling argument.'

"Attached is a letter I received this morning, to give you an idea of how good future prospects are in this section. I have got many more subscriptions promised and will send them to you as rapidly as they are received.

"Very truly yours,
"Fred S. Meyer."

"Mr. Fred S. Meyer.

"Dear Sir: Permit me to express my appreciation to you for having sent me the 'Motion Picture News.' I believe that the two dollars I paid for the year is the best investment I ever made. . . .

"I would not call it a magazine. It is an EDUCATOR for the motion picture industry. The knowledge and aid that an experienced exhibitor can derive from it are worth more than fifty times the amount of the subscription. . . .

"If every exhibitor and film man in every branch of the business would read 'The News' each week they would be better qualified. . . .

"Again I thank you, as well as the publishers, for the 'Motion Picture News.'

"Respectfully yours,
(Signed) "S. H. KAHM."

To Follow
The Million Dollar Mystery—
—a newer, greater serial story by Harold MacGrath, to be run in more than 500 leading newspapers.
—a more startling, more sensational photoplay by Daniel Carson Goodman, consisting of 20 episodes—each a complete and baffling portrayal of Hindu mysticism and science.

ZUDORA
Thanhouser’s Greatest Photoplay

November 23rd is the date set for the first release of this new Thanhouser masterpiece. A two-reel episode will be released each week.

In the cast are 1000 American people—including the favorites: Marguerite Snow, Harry Benham and James Cruze. 3000 scenes are necessary.

EXHIBITORS: This is positively the most wonderful attraction ever offered. It is an independent release and may be obtained regardless of the regular program being used. But quick action is necessary if you wish to secure this feature. Get in touch at once with the Thanhouser-Syndicate representative at any Mutual Exchange in America. Or write to

Wanted:—Some Workers

If we are to have an exhibitors' national organization, have it reasonably soon and reasonably strong, the necessity for workers, real workers, grows more and more apparent.

In the first place, a national organization cannot be had until there are strong, active leagues in every state and in those large cities that demand active local association.

These units must make the groundwork of a national body. The efficiency of the national body will depend very largely upon the individual strength of the organization units.

In the second place, we shall not have state and local leagues of any strength until in each instance one or more men will step forward, throw off their coats and work!

It is hard work, and often it is thankless work, but if the exhibitors are to have an organization—which means their prosperity, yes, their very existence—someone, everywhere, has got to step into the breach.

WHEREVER we have such men—men patterns, energetic, unselfish—we have good local and state organizations. When such men are lacking, there is no organization.

Jeep in Michigan, Brylawski in Washington, Pearce in Baltimore, Rath, Furniss and Steppes in Minnesota, Bullock in Cleveland, Trigger, Bauerfreund, Whitman in New York, Tugwell and Cory in California, Finnegan in Texas, Denton in New Jersey, Sweeney in Chicago—here are some workers, and there are several others, together with able and willing co-workers and supporters.

THE whole list is an imposing one. It inspires hope and confidence.

Also, we know that there must be still other men in states and cities where leagues are now dormant or non-existent—men just as capable of hard work and self-sacrifice. There are. But they must come forth—now.

THE theatrical managers have perfected an organization. But that was comparatively easy.

They simply began at the top—got together the warring factions in the legitimate, vaudeville and burlesque fields—only half a dozen companies owning circuits comprising all the theatres—and the thing was done.

But picture theatres are for the most part independently owned.

There is but one way to group them for united, successful effort, and that is through local and state associations founded and run for common good.

But these organizations will never be created or maintained—and this has been the history of every association of every nature—except one man, or a few good men put and keep their shoulders to the wheel.

SURELY no exhibitor denies the necessity of organization.

Certainly it cannot be possible that there are men, today wailing over exorbitant rentals and low admission prices, struggling against licenses, taxes, Sunday closing, censorship—such organization and only organization will correct these serious difficulties.

But the painful, unbelievable fact is that there are such men—thousands of them.

They don't deserve the name "exhibitor," they don't deserve success.

But they exist, and their only salvation is for some few leaders to organize them and save them in spite of themselves.

LAST week the Baltimore League succeeded in having a certain film rental cut in two and made an outlaw theatre raise its price from two to five cents.

And here and there—not in many places—good work is being done by local and state bodies.

This kind of work can be done everywhere—but only with and through an organization.

ORGANIZERS, volunteer organizers are wanted.

Don't wait for the next man.
If he's asleep, let him sleep. He will either go out of business eventually, or else come begging your organization to let him in.

Be the worker your organization must have.
Volunteer, yourself. And start now.

AUSTRIA BANS ENGLISH AND FRENCH FILMS

Exhibitors in Austria-Hungary have been forbidden by the police of Vienna to show films of the following brands:

French: Pathe, Gaumont, Eclair, Eclipse, Cosmograph, Film d’Art, Film Parisien, Monofilm, Filma, Minerva Film, Aubert, Polichinelle.

And all the Russian brands.

A disregard of this manifesto will result in the revocation of license and six months’ imprisonment for the guilty party. All pictures must be shown with their original brand, in order to let the audience know where the films come from.

This embargo on the above firms does not apply, however, in the case of a manufacturer putting out a film lending Austro-Hungarian patriotism.

In this tabloid list of English films are the Famous Players and Western Import pictures, of American origin.

NEW CHAIN OF THEATRES IN BUFFALO

A. R. Sherry, well known in Buffalo, N. Y., theatrical circles, has been appointed general manager of the Continental Enterprises, Inc., a company recently formed to promote motion picture theatres. The corporation at present has two theatres, one located in East Aurora, N. Y., known as the Bell Theatre and the other on Niagara street, Buffalo, which will be known as Bell No. 2.

The theatres of the company will be numbered in consecutive order as they come under the control of the Continental. Each will have the name of Bell and its number. Mr. Sherry has been connected with various Buffalo theatres as manager, among them being the Lyric, Family, Academy and Shea’s Hippodrome. The offices of the new company are at 505 General Electric Building, Buffalo, N. Y.

PATRONS RESPOND TO RISE IN PRICE

The Star Theatre at Export, Pa., a town of 2,000 inhabitants, put one over on the larger theatres in the larger towns.

"Sealed Orders" was put on at the theatre at 25 cents admission and the proprietor cleaned up on the picture.

This is the first time in the history of the town that a picture of that kind has been shown and the first time in the history of the town that the people paid more than 10 cents for admission to a motion picture show.

Pittsburgh Exhibitors Rally for Protection

First Mass Meeting Held to Deal With Question of Obtaining Repeal of Obnoxious Laws—Decide Matter of Supporting Candidates

Special to Motion Picture News

Pittsburgh, October 21.

A MASS meeting to which all who are interested in the motion picture business are invited, is called for Sunday afternoon, October 25, at 3 o’clock, in the Olympic Theatre, in Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, at which time the subject of supporting the various candidates for State Senate and Legislature will be discussed. It is plain from the way the motion picture men have been aroused during the past few weeks that only the candidates who favor them will be countenanced.

Among some of the questions to be taken up at the next meeting, the State Legislature will be new building code law, the repeal of the obnoxious state censorship law, which will also settle the poster question in this State, and several others.

If the new building code law is permitted to go through it will undoubtedly mean the putting out of business a number of theatres that are at present able to operate under the old law, and it will work a hardship with many of the small and large exhibitors of the state.

In the State we have already had a taste of censorship and the exhibitors and the exchange men alike are opposed to the bill. There can be only one way of assisting in ridding the State of these obnoxious laws, and that is to get together and fight them, tooth and nail. That the candidates, no matter upon what party ticket they stand, are willing to promise anything in order to be elected is true, but the exhibitors this time are determined that they will make sure of their men, and they are going to fight stronger now that they have gotten their organization in good fighting shape.

The matter of using their screen for the advancement of the chances of their candidates will also come up for discussion. That they can do a lot of good in throwing a slide upon which is printed the names of the candidates they favor upon the lighted screen has been shown by the way they have helped in this district with the advertising of many charities, and that this method will undoubtedly be used seems assured.

The candidates are already getting busy with the exhibitors, and they are more than willing to lend their assistance in getting some of the laws killed, but the men who will be favored by the exhibitors are the ones that will stand by their given word and lend their assistance in killing bills that work a hardship on the motion picture business.

Georgia Is Building Theatres “Over Night”

A New House in Atlanta, Another in Macon, One Planned for Columbus, While Several Elsewhere Have Been Reopened

Special to Motion Picture News

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 20.

GEORGIA exhibitors refuse to echo the “hard times” cries. Calamity howlers must do their howling in vain if they are expecting sympathy from this section. There is convincing evidence in the form of splendid new theatres in all parts of the state to substantiate the above.

The general opinion is that there will be just as many new theatres this fall as ever before, and probably more. Certainly this year's crop means the investment of more money in buildings and fixtures than in many previous years.

Atlanta’s contribution to the fall building is the Strand, on Peachtree street, said to be the most costly motion picture theatre in the South. The Strand has been open several weeks and is doing a rushing business.

Macon follows with the new Palace Theatre, a $30,000 house, which has recently opened and with important changes in the Majestic, which now is under the management of J. F. Arnold. Columbus stands well up in the list with expensive improvements in the Majestic, which has been leased by J. B. Melton, of Macon. Mr. Melton has announced that he proposes to erect a new theatre next summer. Although the Majestic is primarily a playhouse, it is understood that Mr. Melton intends to introduce some of the best plays.

In Athens both the Alamo and Crystal Theatres have been reopened, the former under the management of M. H. Epps, of Atlanta.

The Colonial, a new theatre at Mill-edgeville, has just opened, under the management of Edmund Reid.

Exhibitors and exchange men are of the opinion that the above is beginning the list of new houses of the year.

LINTON K. STARR

HISTORIC NEW YORK THEATRE JOINS FILM RANKS

Charles A. Taylor has taken a five-year lease on Daly’s Theatre, Broadway and Twenty-ninth street, which has been closed for over two years, and will present motion pictures.

The theatre will reopen about November 1, and the first offering will be “Yosemite.” The year’s rental for the theatre, which will be renovated and redecorated, will be $30,000.
A SPECIAL meeting of the Greater New York Association of Exhibitors was held October 16 at the rooms of the association in the Hotel Marlborough, New York City.

The occasion was the installation of the recently elected officers. About forty members were present.

President Pearce came on from Baltimore, and made an earnest plea for the amalgamation of the Greater New York Association, the Cinema Club and the State League under one banner.

Among other things he said:

"I am distressed by the delay in amalgamation in New York State. I really thought that this would be effected almost as soon as the convention at Dayton was over, and I am so anxious to see this brought to a speedy and successful finish that I have made a special trip over here to see if something cannot be done to hasten action and finally close what I believe every man here will agree should have been closed a good while ago.

"I am acquainted fully the somewhat delicate complications surrounding conditions here. I'm not losing sight for a second of the impediments that have to be overcome before the perfect and complete amalgamation of the state can be accomplished—but I firmly believe that conditions are such throughout the state right now that this amalgamation can be accomplished within a few weeks.

Warns Against Further Delay

"If this is true, and we find it possible to do this without more than a few weeks' delay, then let us so adjust everything else, and be sufficiently broad minded as to side track anything that might have a tendency to hinder progress along this line.

"I have just had the pleasing assurance of Mr. Trigger, just recently back from a trip up state, that he felt sure from his interviews with exhibitors that they were ready for amalgamation, and that as soon as other state matters were adjusted this could be accomplished without further delay.

"I can't urge you too strongly to further the cause of amalgamation in New York State in every way you find possible; this state needs it, the League needs it, and I'm sure you'll find it will prove the one best big action you could take. Finish this up quickly and let New York State stand solid as the strongest part of the League that is to be found in the whole country."

John D. Denton, of Hashbrouck Heights, N. J., who at present is busily engaged in reviving the New Jersey State League, was asked to install the new officers, and did so in a most pleasing manner.

The following officers were installed:

Samuel H. Trigger, retiring president, who heads the executive committee, composed as follows:

In his speech of acceptance, Mr. Landau, who already indicates that he will conduct his office in a virile and business-like manner, paid high tribute to the retiring president. Mr. Landau said that he would devote an hour or two per day to his executive duties but that he would not let the office make a slave of him and interfere with his own business, as had been the case with Mr. Trigger. Every other officer joined him in words of praise for Mr. Trigger's untiring and self-sacrificing efforts in building up and maintaining the Greater New York Association.

Tribute to Ex-President Trigger

The Motion Picture News wishes to add its own tribute to Mr. Trigger as an organization man. Like every active and forceful personality, Mr. Trigger has his enemies and friends. But there is one thing that not an enemy can say of him—that he has ever misused his office, shirked his duties or even put his own business affairs ahead of the interests of the organization. If every local and state League in the country had a Sam Trigger, we should have today a strong and comprehensive national organization.

President Pearce at Meeting in Hackensack

The key note of enthusiasm was struck at the meeting of the Bergen County, N. J., exhibitors, at Hackensack, when recognition of the State of New Jersey was under discussion.

President Pearce thought that the war tax measure may prove to be a blessing in disguise, in this locality at least, by reason of the fact that it has awakened to action the exhibitors in this particular section, and brought home to them the absolute need for perfect organization and harmony throughout the state.

While exhibitors appreciated the success in the substitution of the graduated scale for the original flat rate bill, and the fact that the League has really worked wonders in having this bill with its equitable graded features passed by the Senate, yet almost every member expressed the belief that with the right sort of organization—the solid front, powerful, well directed forces of a League all over the country that didn't know a weak link, it might have been possible to secure a decided reduction in the scale and not to eliminate the tax on theatres entirely.

President Pearce found the members especially anxious to perfect the strongest sort of state organization, not only to protect perfectly their interests as a state branch, but for the general good of League members everywhere and the advancement of the League as a working factor of sufficient power and influence to sidetrack anything detrimental to its advancement and welfare, and to secure every advantage possible whenever opportunity afforded.

President Pearce was especially pleased to note the activity in this locality. It's the best sort of evidence of an awakening that's sure to bring forth results that will be worth looking at. With such perfect organization as the members of Hackensack Heights and Bergen county have as their aim, they are sure to accomplish such a measure of success and improvement as will not only reflect the greatest credit on themselves but prove to be the making of one of the strongest links in the nation-wide organization of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

REVIEW OF TRADE CONDITIONS REVEALS PROSPERITY THROUGHOUT COUNTRY

Outlook Is Everywhere Encouraging, Even Where Business Has Slackened During the Past Few Months —Few Dull Periods Laid to the War—Many Movements for Higher Admission Prices in Progress—Features in Almost Universal Demand, but Complaint Is Made of Dearth of First-Class One and Two-Reel Pictures—Opinions on Serials Vary

Special to Motion Picture News

THERE Albany film men are not calamity howlers nor do they want to be classed with those individuals, but there is not one who will not tell you that business for the last six months has been bad, in fact, very bad. Of course, a fall off in attendance is always expected during the summer months, but a majority of the managers declare that this has been the worst summer since the institution of the silent drama.

Many houses have been met, with perhaps a little profit, this year instead of clearing expenses there has been a loss. Some of the houses, that is the larger ones, have come through all right, but even these do not show any kind of a profit.

Not one of the managers can tell the direct cause of the weakness. They attribute it rather to the fact that the general business depression in Albany, which seems to be hitting all businesses.

In the West Albany yards lying idle are ninety-four New York Central engines. This means that the West Albany shop's payroll decreases over $1,000,000 in a year. A loss of that much money to a city running a loss to most every line, especially to the places of amusement, and the film theatres are the ones that are being hit the hardest.

It is only a question of how long these theatres can keep up at this small price of admission for the film service; in fact, everything connected with the business is going up in price.

The war has sent carbons up to $7 a hundred, just $5 more than they were before.

Competition is another thing that is helping kill the business. Albany at present is well taken care of with motion picture theatres, in fact, there is no room for any others. With these changes there are now twenty-six motion picture houses in Albany, twenty-seven counting the Colonial. This last theatre is now running pictures, but it is only a matter of time when it will go back to its old policy of pictures and vaudeville.

One pleasing feature of the business in Albany is the class of people who are patronizing the silent drama houses. It has always been known as the amusement for the medium class in Albany, but now it is not a strange sight to see an automobile drive up in front of any of the theatres.

On all sides are heard words of praise for the class of films the various companies are now turning out. "Great!" "Best ever!" "Getting better all the time!" are a few of the expressions from the managers. There are some who say the films are very much worn when they get them, but this cannot be laid to the manufacturers. The fault finders are the ones who are running the cheaper programs; that is, getting the films after they have made the run of several houses. Generally speaking, there is not a kick registered about any of the products of the film companies.

Feature productions have always been more or less popular, but at present are more sought for than ever.

It is not easy to try and pick out the class of film that the patrons desire. Each section of the city has its likes and dislikes and the comedy, educational, topical, travel, classic and the sensational film goes equally as well in this city. This has not always been the rule, but within the last few months all has changed. The success of serial pictures has been marked.

Buffalo, Oct. 21.

THE film situation in Buffalo and Western New York is, on the average, in a fair condition. The question which is uppermost in the exhibitors' minds of this section is the general increase in rental service, which in the past has been raised to an almost prohibitive figure.

Meetings have been held protesting against the raise and from present rumors it looks as though the managers are going to resist the price increase. The question of the trend has been toward the ten-cent house no five-cent theatres have closed; in fact, no photoplay theatres have closed their doors this year in Buffalo.

Exhibitors announce that they are drawing a much better class of patronage. Buffalonians are crowding the theatres showing features every night. The legitimate houses are noticing the increased demand for the pictures, as inroads have been cut into their business. It seems that the day of the two-dollar legitimate in this city is "marching toward Waterloo."

Although the audiences have increased, film rentals "followed suit" and everything connected with the operating end of the theatres increased in price, admissions have remained the same, and that is ten cents.

Feature productions continue to hold sway and both local exchanges and state rights buyer are doing a good business in Buffalo with this class of film. If some of the local exchanges continue to boost prices, the state rights buyer is going to do more business.

While features have made money for some of the large theatres they have not for some of the smaller places, as patrons are expecting to see features wherever they go with the consequence that exhibitors are forced to show them with their regular service and at the five-cent price in some instances.

Features have to make themselves in Buffalo; that is, they require a four-day or even a week's run in the larger downtown houses to make money for the next theatre in the outlying district which may choose to show it. A feature is demanded every change in the larger houses.

Exhibitors do not think that exchanges are extending greater co-operation to them in operating their theatres.

The idea with the exchange is to get as much as possible out of every exhibitor, in fact, there are no two exhibitors in Buffalo, says one manager, that are paying the same price for service. One man is afraid to tell another what he is paying for service for fear that he will divulge the secret that he has "got it for less than the other fellow."

The European war has effected exhibitors to the extent that it has boosted expenses in many ways, especially in carbons and condensers.

As regards the future, all exhibitors think that business will get better and many think that there should be a set market price for film service and that the class of film story has got to get better.

It will not be enough to have a star, which many local managers think is necessary, but an entire cast capable of acting. One manager thinks that the first man to open an exchange with a set rate for service which everyone knows and which exhibitors can pay or leave, will make a great success and eventually put some others out of business.

It is predicted that many of the smaller theatres, with prices connecting with the operating end of the theatre about doubled, will find it necessary to close.
It is noticed that local motion picture theatres are doing more advertising in the daily and Sunday papers than ever before. This is indicative of the "power of the press" as regards theatrical advertising. Motion pictures are getting the same amount of space as the legitimate houses and the local papers are devoting, besides their regular amusement pages, entire sections devoted to "hearing the films." Exhibitors are taking advantage of this free publicity and getting their advertisements in these sections. Electronic signs in the downtown section and atop large buildings have been utilized by some of the theatres for advertising purposes. If expenses continue to go up, this year is going to be a much worse one than last, from a financial standpoint. Even now exhibitors are commencing to figure out how to reduce the operating end of their houses. If the war continues, retrenchment will be the "order of the day."

Price of Carbons Only War Effect on Rochester

SPECIAL TO MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 22.

Looking over the motion picture field in Rochester, exhibitors find much on which to congratulate themselves, and very little over which to feel blue. The business is thriving, and the number of picture houses is increasing constantly.

By this time, the downtown houses of Rochester have established themselves so firmly that they may be said to enjoy a constant patronage, graded according to the entertainment offered, and the prices asked. Little by little, as the attractions are improved, a better class of patrons is attracted.

The tendency has been among exhibitors to hold admission prices on the same scale as last spring, except when some special attraction is offered. Local exhibitors have about made up their minds that ten cents and fifteen cents are as much as can be asked.

The outside houses stick to the five-cent shows. A few of the downtown houses get ten cents at night, and five cents in the afternoon, while the special feature houses get fifteen cents as a rule, and twenty-five cents for special attractions. Feature productions are in great demand here, but they must be good ones. Rochester boasts a discriminating motion picture public, and a special feature must really be "the goods."

The regular program houses downtown seldom depart from their straight service, and offer but a poor field for the state rights buyers. The regular programs are so uniformly good that there is little profit in going into the market for special features. As a rule, too, the regular houses do not care for the multiple reel features, as their audiences like shorter films, dropping in for short times only.

Occasionally houses in the outskirts use special features, but not as first runs. This city regards the prices asked for feature productions as excessive, especially the prices for the entire feature services say of two releases a week.

One local house subscribed to a special feature service and dropped it after one month, claiming that it could get better results by buying features in the open market, instead of being tied up to one service and compelled to take its features, good or bad.

The smaller theatres of this city have never taken very cordially to the big features of any service, even at sixty or ninety days.

Good features are invariably money-makers for the big houses. Admission prices always go up when a house using only regular program features books special features. The average program in Rochester consists of about six reels, though some of the downtown houses go as high as eight.

Rental prices for films have shown only the usual fluctuation with the season's changes. Serial pictures have not made a big hit in Rochester. In fact, one house dropped one of the big ones, after starting it.

About the only effect of the war on the theatres is the boost in price of carbon.

Newark Looks to Sunday Opening to Combat War Depression

SPECIAL TO MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Growth of the motion picture business in this city has been checked temporarily by conditions resulting from the European war and the film men see in Sunday opening their only hope of fair profits during the winter. The picture business in Newark has expanded amazingly during the last year, and houses devoted to the silent drama have taken their place among the foremost amusement enterprises in the city. It is improbable, however, that there will be much further development until general business conditions improve.

Nearly every picture house in the city is drawing a better class of patronage than ever before and some of them are attracting the same classes that frequent the highest priced dramatic houses.

Admission prices have increased generally. The five-cent admission is speedily being eliminated and there are very few houses in the city where admission may be gained for a nickel, at evening performances at least. Some houses, principally in the centre of the city, get as high as thirty-five cents for the best seats at evening performances. Only a year ago, five and ten cent admissions were the rule.

The great call is for feature pictures. The bigger the feature, the more demand there is for it. Most of the houses have a constant policy and do not alter their prices when features are shown. In fact, most of them show features at every performance.

Opinions of exhibitors differ as to the quality of the film stories, although the consensus is that the pictures secured in regular programs are no better than they were a year ago. There seems to be a general complaint about the poor quality of one-reel comedies. Classic dramas and good comedies without too much slap-stick work seem to be most in favor with the public. The exchange men say there is a big demand for war features. There is general dissatisfaction with serial pictures, and if the expressions of exhibitors mean anything, there will be a mighty small demand for these pictures in Newark when the present supply is exhausted.

Features Prove Strong Drawing Cards in Connecticut

SPECIAL TO MOTION PICTURE NEWS

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 21.

New Haven is one of the most promising of cities in the motion picture field. The financial depression that seems general all over the country is felt here also, yet it has had little effect on the industry in this city. As a matter of fact, thousands of dollars have been spent in the past few months for improvements, and a larger amount is still in reserve, to be devoted to the same purpose during the winter.

The city is proud of the fact that the few theatres that have been forced to close down are only the airdomes, driven out by approaching cold weather.

Feature pictures are exceedingly popular in this city. Likewise the serials are strong drawing cards, and likely to continue so. Neighborhood, as well as central houses, use the big pictures, and continue to hold the patronage of mixed classes. As a rule, feature pictures cause an increase in admission prices, and pay exhibitors well, so that an excellent market is afforded feature dealers and state rights buyers.

Neither the war nor any other cause has affected the local market greatly, notwithstanding that the price of carbons has advanced so greatly, and other necessities seem likely to become more costly.

Rental prices remain unchanged, both for feature and regular service, and the only thing that motion picture men can talk of as being expensive is the necessity for their changing programs daily and showing from six to eight reels at each performance.

Elizabeth Feels Effect of Slack Business

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

MOTION picture exhibitors probably have suffered more as a direct result of the influence of the European war than the present business enterprise in Elizabeth or vicinity. More than 4,000 employees, half of the working force, at the Singer Sewing Machine factory in this city have been laid off.

The railroad shops have laid off large numbers, and other manufacturing concerns have cut down the list of employees, materially until it is estimated by the Citizens' Committee for the Relief of the Unemployed that 15,000 persons in Elizabeth at the present time are without work.

The local industrial depression was felt almost at once among the motion picture exhibitors. The smaller houses where an admission of five cents is charged have been the greater sufferers. However, the bigger houses have not escaped. From the standpoint of patronage there was little to complain of until after the outbreak of the European conflict.

Although the film patrons of Elizabeth are strong for feature pictures, local managers insist that there is no money in them. Exhibitors do not hesitate to place themselves on record as being in favor of dealing directly with the producer. Patrons are calling for real comedy that is free from the suggestion of burlesque, and managers are meeting demands with the statement that good comedy films are the most difficult of all films to secure. Dramatic films are played up by exhibitors as the best of the drawing cards.

The reproduction of some big Broadway successes never fails to draw well.

The topical and educational films are attracting fewer than any other. They are not unpopular—they are simply endured. But serial pictures have the local managers frowning. They are no longer favorites with the public, who complain that the pictures are too long drawn out, save too much of the impossible, far-fetched in plot and, after the first couple episodes, tiresome. It is safe to predict that local managers will not dabble in serial pictures for many months to come.

EASTERN CITIES RIPE FOR HIGHER PRICES

The Philadelphia feature exchanges report good business on big features, which are running well ahead of the smaller features.

The Famous Players Exchange, handling Paramount pictures, reports an average of one new contract daily, and pre-Paramount releases booking very strong by those houses which are not in a position to run the Paramount program on account of restricted territory.

One of the best going films at the present time is "Sea Wolf," due to the recent publicity campaign waged on Market street. Incidentally, the Palace theatre, at which "Sea Wolf" was shown, has learned the wisdom of advertising and now takes space in the newspapers with more or less regularity. The owners used to say that they got the crowds anyway, but they now find that "it pays to advertise."

The Alco Exchange also reports good business, with new contracts constantly being signed. Ethel Barrymore, in "The Night tablets," broke box office records at the Regent theatre, Seventeenth and Market streets.

The Electric Theatre Supply Company says that its big features are booking about 25 per cent. more rapidly than the smaller ones. Since the break-up of the Exclusive Program, which they handled during the past year, they have made arrangements to supply their customers with American film. With this end in view they have secured the Alliance Program and are now negotiating for the products of other American manufacturers.

The Syndicate Film Corporation continues to book the "Million Dollar Mystery," and estimates that the contracts to date, in this territory alone, will total over $100,000.

The Continental Feature Film Company states that business is fair, but it expects the new two-reel Keystone features to take like wildfire. The mere announcement that these would be handled outside of the service has brought numerous requests for bookings on "Dough and Dynamite."

The Box Office Attractions Company seems to be doing very well, as it says, "for a newcomer in this locality."

The drop in prices of features to two dollars a reel by the Special Feature Department of the General Film Company is a matter of the smaller exchanges.

The Calhoun Supply Company says that it finds nothing the matter with business, which is a very good indication, because when an exhibitor is not making money he naturally hesitates to invest in any more supplies than are absolutely necessary.

At my own viewpoint, those exhibitors who have been seen say that business is not as good as it should be at this season of the year, possibly due to the recent warm spell. And this is in spite of the various reports of exchanges that the exhibitors are booking the larger features.

The manager of the Lafayette theatre says that he is not doing any more business now than he did during the summer, due, no doubt, to the fact that his competitors, who were either rebuilding or had closed for alterations, are now open again.

The Jefferson theatre has seemed to strike better luck with smaller features than with the larger ones, not because of the features themselves, but because of weather conditions, as it happening that the smaller features were shown on pleasant days, while the big features happened to strike inclement weather.

The General Film Company reports business as very good on service. Their features, which are already released, are booked almost solid until Christmas.

The Eclectic Film Exchange, which has taken over all Pathé releases, says that business has doubled in the past month over the normal for the summer. The manager, who has interviewed about twenty-five or thirty exhibitors, says that the consensus of opinion is that big features have come to stay.

On the whole, the outlook for a good winter business, by both exchanges and theatres, seems to be excellent.

The advent of the large feature running in the legitimate theatres will tend to raise the interest of the better element in motion pictures, with the result that new patrons will be made for the neighborhood houses, and the theatre owners will also be encouraged to increase their prices.

The Chestnut Street Opera House, which, until this year, has never run anything but the very best and highest-priced legitimate attractions, has for the present at least gone over to a photoplay policy.

Baltimore Wants Best Pictures at Same Price: Features Popular

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Baltimore, Oct. 21.

A GROWING demand for the better class of pictures, but with no advance in the price of admissions, is the problem which is confronting the Baltimore exhibitors now. Many of the leading theatre owners maintain that there is but one thing to do, and that is advance the price to 10 cents.

Many feel that it is only a matter of a few months before all of the better class motion picture houses will be charging 10 cents as the regular admission price.

Of course there will always be the 5-cent house, the theatre of the single and double-reel subjects, but there is a growing demand for the higher grade productions, and the latter cannot be secured with profit to the exhibitor unless he gets twice the present admission rate.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

"The Baltimore audience is different from that of most cities, and it requires close study to find out just what will please the patrons of your house," said Mr. Bernard Depkin, manager of the New Pickwick, 115 North Howard street.

"Numerous productions which went big in other cities attracted little or no attention here. To carry a pleased audience away from the city, you have to give them something well-executed and with the leading characters impersonated by the players they know."

"Frequently a picture version of a well-known play falls flat because the cast is unknown. The Baltimore audience is not unappreciative, however. Give them what they want and they will pay for it. In my judgment it is coming to the ten-cent proposition in this city. There is so much good film stuff being made now, both by the leading manufacturers who release through a regular service as well as by independent makers that it is impossible to get all of the good stuff. An up-to-the-minute house wants the best of the releases, however, and in order to get it it is necessary to pay much more money than four or five months ago. The picture public is growing daily, and with the increase in the interest it is natural that the public becomes more critical and no business can live unless it keeps pace, or, in fact, just a little ahead of its patrons."

There is a decided better demand in Baltimore this fall for feature productions. Features were very popular last spring, but with the near approach of cooler weather, exhibitors are mapping out their campaign for the winter. The outlook for features has never been as bright as it is at present.

Not only are the larger houses booking more features, but nearly all of the smaller ones, houses that formerly used only the regular service, are carrying one of two feature days a week. There is also a tendency to have one or two days a week when the larger features are presented and the price of admission made 10 cents in place of 5 cents.

Ten Cent Show Growing In Popularity at Washington

Special to Motion Picture News

From reports received from the exhibitors and exchange men of the national capital, the outlook in the motion picture field is bright. The consensus of opinion is that the industry has progressed in many ways.

The photoplays are of a much higher character, the photography is better, the dramatic art has improved and the filming of standard works has proved advantageous. The producer is paying more attention to details and accuracy. Features are considered now an important part of the daily program. The slapstick comedy is popular in the downtown districts, but there is a call for some change in this type.

The exhibitor is paying more attention to balancing his program and is more particular about the class of pictures offered.

The ten-cent show is becoming more popular, which has enabled the exhibitor to offer a better program and give more comforts to his patrons. Among the large newer houses that have entered the field may be mentioned Crandall's Theatre, Moore's Strand, the American, Avenue Grand, Savoy, Apollo, Empire, Regent, Liberty and Washington. The largest of these is the Strand with a capacity of 2,200, the others ranging from 500 to 1,000. Tom Moore contemplates building a five-cent house on the site of the Plaza which will excel in beauty and cozy anything now in the city, with a large seating capacity.

The personality of the actors and actresses plays a large part in the popularity of productions. Francis X. Bushman is always sure to bring a packed house. Speaking of this, Harry Crandall said, "The Bushman pictures certainly are money-makers for me, and I use every one that is released."

Mary Pickford is another big favorite. Tom Moore remarked: "The single-reel Pickford pictures which I am using daily proved one of my biggest assets during the summer, and they show no signs of losing favor now."

hosts of other stars who are always popular, and the celebrities of the stage always attract patronage.

In this connection it might be well to state that some producers are making a serious mistake in always putting their best players in multi-reel features, thus leaving the single reels without the strong support they demand.

"This is the day of the big features and the big theatre," said Tom Moore, "and I will say without reservation that the Shubert productions stand among the best. I had more requests by phone and letter—hundreds of them—for a return engagement of "The Lure" than any play I have had at the Garden." Theodore Franklin.

Film Drama Suffers Less Than Other Lines of Business in Harrisburg

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 21.

The last three months have seen a remarkable growth in the number of motion picture theatres in this city, which can be taken, perhaps, as the best indication of how local exhibitors generally view the prospects for the expansion of the business. There are now fifteen theatres in operation in Harrisburg.

The best evidence of how experienced exhibitors here feel with respect to the future of motion pictures is the fact that two of the brand new houses that were built during the summer and are now drawing big audiences were put up by men who already were successfully operating theatres. In each of the cases the exhibitor is now running two theatres instead of one.

The fact that Harrisburg has now, roughly speaking, about 25 per cent, more motion picture houses than it had last spring may be regarded by conservative business men as a most case that is a little too rapid. Perhaps some of the new theatres may not stay as well as the outset was anticipated, but those who note the growth of the city and the increasing percentage of the population that is becoming interested in film drama are of the opinion that it will not be long until there is plenty of patrons for all the present theatres.

The new houses are all of the most modern type of construction.

The same high class of patronage that the local theatres have recently been enjoying is still noted. In the last three months the theatres in the central or business district of the city have uniformly advanced the price of admittance to ten cents, while in the outlying sections the price continues to be five cents. It will not be surprising, however, if ultimately the ten-cent rate becomes general.

The reason for the advance in the business sections is that the exhibitors declare they could not live without it, in view of the keen competition and the higher rates for films. This latter condition is attributed in part to the fee that is exacted from manufacturers on every new film that passes through the hands of the Pennsylvania Board of Censors for approval. The manufacturers, the local exhibitors say, are shifting at least part of this increased burden on the backs of the exhibitors in the form of higher film rentals.

Feature films are still in demand to some extent, but certain of the leading exhibitors are beginning to become undecided as to whether the public is not tiring of features. Features, like other films, are renting for higher figures, and there is a question whether their permanency is assured in Harrisburg, especially among the smaller theatres, although thus far features have proved money-makers for those displaying them and properly advertising them. There is no additional charge for admittance here when feature films are offered.

Serial films seem to have drawing qualities when used in this city and this is attributed largely to the fact that patrons become interested in the actors with whom they have become familiar and like to follow them through succeeding adventures. The motion picture theatres have not suffered, perhaps, as much as some other lines of business.

V. H. Bergershaus.
LITTLE change, if any, is to be noted in the motion picture theatre conditions of Birmingham in the past three or four months. Business, generally speaking, is said by theatre operators to be about on a par with this time last year.

This is the only effect of the "war scare" and the current "hard times" as far as the Birmingham motion picture theatre operators are concerned; that is, this fall shows no apparent improvement in patronage or general conditions over last fall, while previous years have shown a steady development and growth.

The same number of theatres are now in operation as three months ago. There have been no changes.

As to the class of patronage compared with three months ago, local exhibitors say they notice an improvement in that the business and professional men appear to be patronizing pictures shows here in larger numbers. The Birmingham "legitimate" theatre season opened two or three weeks ago, and the patronage of these theatres is admittedly not as good as in former years. Why? Most people agree that the motion picture shows are responsible because they are satisfying more and more people in so far as they desire a little daily or weekly amusement.

Admission prices have not changed, except in this one way. There appears to be more feature films run than formerly and these are put on at from ten cents to twenty-five cents. They draw good crowds, too, and local exhibitors say the feature productions are in better demand. They follow the policy, however, of not mixing a usual program with a feature film if possible.

When a feature is put on it usually is run alone or at most with one other short film. This is due to the belief that people, while the show may be good, do not desire a too lengthy program.

The outside feature productions, apart from the regular program material, are in good demand and are renting for about the same as formerly, it is said.

Some slight advance in rental prices for regular programs has been experienced by exhibitors, over which, of course, they are not enthusiastic. They attribute it to the disappearance of the European made films from the American market and therefore a resultant greater demand for the American made films.

No complaints regarding the films other than the ordinary, which come regularly in every-day business, are made by local exhibitors. The war films, which of course attract much public attention at present, are censored by each exhibitor before being produced and any parts liable to excite a demonstration are cut out.

Exhibitors generally try to run a varied program. Serial pictures are popular in a certain way, but Birmingham exhibitors are not particularly enthusiastic over them. They state the main trouble is that if a patron for some reasons misses the first one or two installments of the picture, he always feels he has missed a part of a connected story and will not go to see the remaining installations of the serial if another theatre happens to be putting on a regular program at the time he is in the notion of "taking in" a picture. - Ralph R. Silver.

No Complaints of Poor Business in and Around Louisville

The motion picture business in Louisville at the present time is in a thriving condition, according to local exhibitors, and most of the houses will have a nice profit to show for the year 1914.

There are more motion picture theatres in the city now than ever before, and few are complaining of poor business.

Four small houses which were carelessly located in the outskirts have closed in the last year. It is the opinion of exhibitors that a better class of patrons than formerly are now attending picture shows for the reason that a higher class of films are being shown today than ever before.

The prices of admission are about the same as heretofore, five and ten cents. One local house often gets as high as fifty cents for the best seats, exhibiting, as it does, nothing but high-class feature films. With this one house omitted from calculation, the average price of admission is about eight cents. Feature films are in great demand.

Although the feature film rents for more than it used to, the demand for this class of entertainment necessitates the managers of most of the houses having a feature on at least one or two days of the week.

Exhibitors say that there is no doubt that features increase the receipts of the box office, but that, in many cases, after the film is paid for the margin of profit is slight.

Exhibitors have not to contend with the question of censorship, or any very harmful legislation in Kentucky, so the picture men are able to give all their attention to the development of their business. Just now most of them are developing the use of the feature film. Although there is a diversity of opinion as to how well the feature pays in net profits, it is conceded that the feature film draws patrons to the theatre and that is what every manager is looking for.

To sum up the situation in Louisville, there are about thirty houses now in operation, the business can be said to be in a sound condition. The supply does not seem to be greater than the demand.

Almost all of the exhibitors are making money, and some are making lots of it. The exhibitors seem to be well satisfied with conditions, and there is a bright outlook for the future.

Improved Programs Bring Better Results in Attendance at Charleston

The number of theatres in operation in this city is the same as in the last quarterly market report, although a number of theatres have gone out of business. The new theatres which have taken the place of the old are of greatly improved type and the capacity is generally greater.

The class of patronage in the theatres here has remained practically the same during the past three months, with a slight tendency toward betterment, due to the improvement in the programs offered. Although there has been a decided improvement in the latter, prices have remained the same, and it is thought that an increase is not warranted at this time.

Feature productions are in much greater demand than they were during the summer months. The rental remains practically the same. The features generally have proven to be money makers for the exhibitors, but in several instances where the features were not especially good this does not hold true. Admission prices remain the same when features, aside from the regular program, are exhibited, except in rare instances, when the offering is one of unusual local interest.

It is the general opinion of local exhibitors that the quality of film stories has not improved to any remarkable degree, although they continue attractive.

The exhibitors have few complaints to make regarding film stories. Some are of the better nature, but the rather difficult matter to ascertain in respect to the quality of the films, as the local theatre-going public is greatly varied in its opinions, some liking one thing and some another in the way of film stories, and seldom all agreeing as to the same film, whether good or bad.

The local exhibitors are of the opinion that the smaller exchanges will ultimately be eliminated! that there will be little or no change in the policy of operating theatres and that the quality of films must be constantly in the ascendancy.

NOTE OF OPTIMISM IN MIDDLE WEST

Special to Motion Picture News

With new theatres in a number of cities of central Illinois, the winter season of the motion picture business opens promisingly and with a better class of pictures than ever before. So far, attendance has been good and bids fair to remain so, even to increase.

In cities where new theatres have been opened these theatres for the most part are of larger seating capacity, attractively decorated inside and out, and in a majority of cases managers have promised feature pictures as a part of their offerings.

Exhibitors express themselves as being pleased with the kind of pictures that the manufacturers are turning out. The pictures, both in photography and story, are constantly getting better and as a result patrons are expressing more satisfaction with the bills offered.

Among some exhibitors there is a tendency not to break into their regular bills with features.

Several cities in the central part of the state have one house which shows feature and big productions exclusively.

These are offered at increased admission prices and are, generally, drawing paying business.

The three-reel bill at an admission price of five cents continues to attract the most business. Theatres offering five first release pictures at ten cents are attracting good business, however.

In some small towns where competition is keen longer bills are offered for a nickel.

There seems to be no demand for any certain kind of pictures unless it is for comedies. Exhibitors who are keen try and book programs that appeal to their particular patronage, and just about every exhibitor has his own problem in this respect.

Canton Complains Against Small Exchanges Raises Admission to Ten Cents

Special to Motion Picture News
Canton, O., Oct. 20.

A general admission price of ten cents has at last been fairly well established in this city. A few years ago the air-dome craze attacked the city and seriously interfered with natural development of the business. These amusement places had a tendency to lower the grade of pictures and, as would naturally follow, the price of admission.

Two houses now show five-cent programs four days in the week. Three houses charge ten cents for all performances.

The general consensus of opinion among exhibitors is that the serial pictures now in vogue are unsuccessful.

No complaints are made against quality of films, with the single exception of the general opinion that not enough good comedies are being made. These would be royally welcomed in this city.

Exhibitors here are looking forward to the elimination of the small exchanges on which reliability cannot be placed. Most of the exhibitors of this city deal with exchanges in Cleveland. In that city there are 24 exchanges now. It is believed here that this number will be soon cut down appreciably by the close competition and that afterwards the surviving exchanges will be bigger and of the kind in which absolute reliability can be placed by the exhibitor.

So Called Hard Times Fail to Affect St. Louis Exhibitors

Special to Motion Picture News
St. Louis, Oct. 20.

The film industry in St. Louis is normal. There is talk of hard times, but it is not the penny-pinching, nickel-grasping, business-throttling hard times that make people stay at home, afraid to spend a cent. It is merely the panicily feeling engendered by the European war.

If anything, there is a better condition among film men, taking it all around, than there was six months ago.

Admission prices, except for the bigger features, are about the same. Some of the five-cent houses have the habit of adding four or five-reel features to their bills Saturday and Sunday nights, and raising the price of admission to ten cents. Ordinarily the prices are the same, with a majority of houses charging ten cents.

Features are growing in popularity. Many of the houses that book the regular exchange programs seem willing to add outside features from state right buyers and pay the extra price, in addition to the service from the regular exchange.

The class of patronage is improving, a good condition brought about largely by such exhibitors as Sievers, of the New Grand Central, who has conducted regular campaigns of advertising designed to attract the better class of people. There always was a friendly feeling for films in St. Louis among the better class of people, but now the feeling seems even better than usual.

There is little or no complaint from exhibitors about unfair treatment from the exchanges regarding the price of service, but there is complaint, and lots of it, about the kind and quality of the stories of the releases.

One exhibitor is particularly bitter about this phase of the business. "There are so many good subjects they might make," he says, "so many good, tense little stories of real life, that the people like and want, and they ignore them all and give us the eternal 'old mill at midnight,' 'wronged wife,' 'jealous husband cured of his suspicions by his wife's brother,' and such.

"And many of the stories that would be good are spoiled by the director, who puts what he calls the 'punch' in them, which usually takes the form of an automobile accident, or a man sneaking up a dark alley with a knife in his teeth, and a bundle of important papers in either hand.""

Another exhibitor who would not be quoted, complains about the quality of acting in the short release. He says as soon as an actor displays any ability he is taken out of the one-reel work and booked as a star, and the one-reel, which is really the backbone of the business, is dashed up with new performers, who regard the work merely as a training camp for the feature end of the game.

The better class of pictures, the really big stuff, is wanted. That, and clean comedy, seem to take best with St. Louis audiences. Classic drama and spectacular subjects are very popular. The serials all take well.

There are criticisms, however, on the fact that the serials are all too long drawn out. Some of them have no end in view; in other words, they will be released as long as the people will stand for them. The manufacturers seem to consider pictures solely from the standpoint of footage. This is not good; it is too much like buying books by the pound; it is poor business policy, and it is very bad art.

There is no likelihood of any change in the method of marketing films; changes of that sort will necessarily be slow, and there is a tendency to keep to the rut.

Movement in Nebraska Toward Higher Admission Prices

Special to Motion Picture News

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 20.

NO time during the last few years has seen a more decided step toward advancement in the motion picture business throughout the central West than the last three months. It has been marked by the increase of exhibitors who go into the field to make themselves permanent, and the consequent decrease of the fly-by-night exhibitor and the exhibitor who conducts all his regular business with all his attention, and lets his motion picture theatre get along the best it can.

This permanent population is gradually increasing in Nebraska. There are still many, many prosperous towns needing the presence of a live-wire exhibitor. This will be brought home more forcibly by the statement that Nebraska has the smallest motion picture theatre population of any state in the union that is near its size. It might seem almost unbelievable on account of its geographical position.

There is a general movement throughout the state for an increase in admission prices. Practically every theatre has a sliding scale of prices. When a big feature is being shown the price is increased. It is astonishing how many downtown theatres in Omaha charge only five cents for admission on program days.

There is an excellent field here for combined effort to get a regulation price if there were only concerted action on the part of managers.

Cut-throat competition has a big effect on some of the downtown corner theaters. Where there is more than one theatre in a block there is bound to be competition of the bitter kind. Some of the exhibitors have not yet learned the uselessness of cutting their own throats in an effort to outdo their neighbors. Such competition is all that prevents the existence of uniform prices in Omaha. Outside the city there has been a marked increase in admission prices. Everywhere the change is ten cents for regular programs and 15 cents for features. Several theatres have started charging as much as 25 cents for features and say it is a success.

One noteworthy feature of the last three months in this territory is the effort of exchangemen for more co-operation between themselves and exhibitors.

Exhibitors and exchangemen agree that co-operation should be the key word from now on if success is to be assured. An effort to allow greater freedom to the exhibitors in selecting their programs and in choosing between features and regular service is being made. Exhibitors are confident it will result as they desire. Exchange managers are trying their best to arrive at a solution to the problem that will at once satisfy the demands of the exhibitors and at the same time not be too hard on the exchanges.

Exhibitors and exchangemen both are agitating a higher scale of admission prices. The higher prices will enable the exchange men to deal in better service and in higher grade films, and will allow the patrons the kind of service and pictures they are most desirous of going to the theatre to see.

One thing is apparent in this territory: Better times for exhibitors and exchangemen are directly ahead. Nebraska, while small in motion picture population, is on the clearer side of a big effort to attain better conditions, and the leaders are men in the business for permanent success and who are building their own theatres, studying their patronage and using every effort to become leaders in their line.

In Face of War and Strong Competition Des Moines Business is Good

Special to Motion Picture News

Des Moines, Oct. 20.

EARLY in the summer an effort was made to raise the price of all picture houses to ten cents. The local associations, never strong, failed to stick. The plans crashed.

If the houses had stuck together the scheme might have been successful, at least until the war broke out. It is probable that by this time the public would have been so well initiated into the ten-cent idea that even the war would not have chilled the purse strings into inactivity.

Some of the exhibitors declare that the public would not stand for the raise.

To declare that the exhibitors are drawing a better class of patronage is answered differently by different picture men. Observation would encourage the belief that there is an improvement along this line. It is not striking, but it is pronounced enough to be noticed.

Features in Des Moines as a rule are not regarded as money-makers. The regular program is given the preference.

It is difficult to determine how some pictures take. Even the attendance will not always determine this. There is a large patronage that will take a chance at anything. In view of the fact that the picture actor is not applauded it is not always possible to tell if the play takes. If the play is appreciated the fact is not manifested in the funeral silence of the spectators. If it happens to meet disapproval there is the same grave-like silence.

On the whole, the picture business is good. Competition is strong, rates have advanced, but the war has had no appreciable effect on the attendance, excepting perhaps to shorten the supply of carbon. The relations between exhibitor and exchange man have not always been cordial, but they are growing closer together and in this locality they are doing business on a very friendly basis.

VERITABLE BOOM IS ON IN NORTHWEST

Special to Motion Picture News

Minneapolis, Oct. 20.

The motion picture business in Minnesota and the Minneapolis trade district which reaches far beyond the state boundary, is progressing rapidly, is on a firm financial footing and is becoming rated among the important business factors in every city and town. And it has become an influential factor in the life of each community.

The motion picture houses of Minneapolis and St. Paul are now taking more as much billboard space as the legitimate theatres, and the picture houses are occupying a more prominent place in the minds of the majority of the people than the regular plays.

Shakespeare in film, accompanied by refined music, would draw the crowd away from the regular houses with the prices equal, in the opinion of many persons versed in the show business.

Admission prices in Minneapolis have not increased except at one house.

Features are the pictures that are in demand in Minneapolis, and hence they are money makers. The patrons have taken to features like ducks to water. Of course, they cost money, but then a good feature never fails to draw a house if the patrons have ample notice of it.

The Minneapolis exhibitors have carefully avoided a raise in price when state rights films are shown, though the so-called legitimate theatres raise the price. The state rights prices have remained about the same, but some predict that in the future the regular agencies will gradually crowd out the state rights proposition.

The tinted educational films and views are being talked about in Minneapolis. Several theatres are showing them, and this is going to be one of the ways of "seeing Europe" soon.
NO HARD TIMES IN MILWAUKEE WITH ADMISSION GOING UP

THE effect of the war on the business in this city may best be illustrated in the words of Ahrent Trinz, manager of the Rainbow theatre, twenty-seventh street and Lisbon avenue, who said: "The only time the war hurts business is when the program is poor."

There has been a very healthy increase of photoplay houses since last May, this increase amounting to about 10 per cent. Out of all of these new houses but one was built in the downtown district, the rest being in the outskirts. All of them are of the latest and most improved design, the present building code making cheap and shoddy houses a thing of the past.

Most of the new houses have a seating capacity well over the five hundred mark and quite a number of the houses now seating five hundred are enlarging their capacity to a thousand seats. Though there has been an increase of new houses, none of the old ones have closed.

When it comes to the quality of the product, the class of patronage has changed for the better, as has the admission price. Where a ten-cent night was a rarity with the outskirt houses in the past it is now the rule, most of the houses playing to ten cents three or four nights a week, while the Alhambra theatre has boosted the price of its downstair seats to twenty cents in the evening.

The exhibitors and exchange men seem to be very divided in regards to feature productions, some claiming that the demand for this sort of picture is falling off while others say that it was never as large as it is today. The big features are renting for more money than ever, while the small ones are getting cheaper; in fact, many of the little ones can be bought for a song.

A house must have the location and capacity to handle the bigger features, say the exhibitors, and the little fellow with the limited capacity cannot handle a production of this kind any more than could a tank opera house handle a two-dollar Broadway attraction.

Features have not, with a few exceptions, proven a money-maker, if considered from the standpoint of the box office, but as a business builder they have proven invaluable. It has been through the feature productions that the outskirt houses in particular have been able to boost their admission prices and get their public accustomed to paying ten cents.

Four reels constitutes the average show in this city, with a change of program daily. The rental price for service has increased, and exchange men say that the increased cost of producing them has been offset by the higher price.

With a few exceptions the exhibitors make no complaint over this increase, feeling that it is justified as long as the quality of their program has increased, making it possible for them to make a stronger bid for patronage to offset the added expense.

The chief complaint the exhibitor has against the film is the padding now so much the custom among the manufacturers. Many of the exhibitors complain that a four-reel production will not hold the audience, as it is usually a two-reel production padded into four.

The drama, social and classic as well as comedy, has the call in this vicinity. Most of the exhibitors are of the opinion that the serial picture has lost its novelty and bores rather than appeals to their patrons.

J. W. MARTIN.

LACK OF HARMONY IN PROGRAM MANAGEMENT, SAY BILLINGS MANAGERS

EXHIBITORS agree that, generally speaking, their houses are constantly drawing a better class of patronage. As details of plot, staging, acting and photography are developed to their highest perfection, the more intelligent and educated classes of people become interested, and exhibitors believe that the art of producing photoplays has advanced to such an extent that the poorer and cheaper productions are bound to be discarded.

People have learned to discriminate and judge the plays according to their true value, they say, and nothing but the best finds favor.

Admission prices for regular programs have not advanced, though all-feature theatres are charging fifteen cents as against ten cents for the other houses. Efforts made to raise the admission above these figures for unusual features have met with failure, as a sliding scale is held in great disfavor by the public.

A regular advance meets with no opposition if the product comes up to standard, but the admission, whether high or low, must remain fixed.

Feature productions rent for more now than formerly, and exhibitors here feel that the town is rated too high. From lack of union and co-operation, however, they have been unable to secure any reduction.

Classic drama and educational features appeal alike to men and women, but Montana exhibitors have found that comedies find favor with a much larger percentage of men than of women. Men especially enjoy laugh-producing pictures.

The European war has affected the attendance in motion picture houses very little. It is affecting exhibitors, however, for carbons, which are manufactured in Germany, are coming scarce.

Serial pictures, especially those with an involved and long drawn-out plot, are falling into disfavor. The serial that is to receive the favor of the public in the future will be the one that makes each reel complete in itself, though showing the same actors in different plots. Such is the opinion heard here and abroad.

One exhibitor has adopted the plan of sending out simple and attractive announcement cards. Persons receiving these feel sure something unusually worth while is being offered and respond accordingly.

Newspaper advertising has come to be the principle medium of the man who watches for leaks, and strives to eliminate them. With these simple means of advertising, coupled with good music, clean, comfortable and well ventilated houses, local exhibitors draw capacity houses.

Signs of the times apparently indicate that the password in the motion picture business, as well as other lines, is "War." The small theatre will have small chance in the future. He will be crowded out by his competitors with more life and initiative. The small, close house, with its old projectors and cracked and soiled screens, cannot hope to successfully compete with houses which offer more modern conveniences and accessories for the comfort and pleasure of its patrons.

The old cry of insufficient diversity and lack of harmony in the arrangement of programs is also raised, as it has been raised by exhibitors throughout the country since the motion picture business attained large proportions and exhibitors began to study their requirements.

As the men at the other end of the line become more familiar with the needs of the exhibitor, the latter hopes this complaint will automatically adjust itself. Some of the exhibitors do think, however, that—to be decent about it—a woeful lack of judgment is often shown in grouping plays scot out. This criticism, as all others, is offered for what it is worth—bread cast upon the waters or a pebble cast into the sea, according to the point of view.

Butte Feels Depression Less Than Any Other City

Special to Motion Picture News

IN Montana the advance in the motion picture business has not been uniform. The past year has been marked by the same rapid development which marked the resources of the great commonwealth. In the various small towns that mushroom-like have sprung up in the different sections, small picture theatres have arisen to answer the demand by the settlers for a little entertainment.

The admission continued to be but ten cents until about a year ago. It was then that the demand of the patrons for larger shows, for more features, for vaudeville in addition to the pictures, for orchestras of more than two or three pieces and for generally as much comfort as was to be found in the big opera houses, told the managers that it would be impossible to continue on a ten-cent admission basis.

The situation was easily remedied. The prices were raised to 15 cents and at that standard they have remained. It is very seldom that the price has been advanced even for a big attraction. In fact, in the past year there has been no record of any of the theatres advancing, regardless of the size of the extra attraction. The 15-cent admission at first was a little distasteful, but very soon the people became accustomed to the idea.

The quality of the shows was increased and every one is satisfied at the present time.

In common with the rest of the country, Butte as well as the other towns of the state, there has been a big demand for features and the people are willing to pay for them.

All sections of motion picture work are represented at the Butte theatres and, judging from the patronage, all are liked. The Butte theatres accommodate from 1,200 to 500 each at a sitting and the shows run in the afternoon and evening. The change of mining shifts makes the afternoons as important as the nights. Butte has as many men working at night in the mines as in the daytime and hence the matinees are very popular, especially so amongst the single men who happen to be on night duty. Nowhere else, probably, are they so well attended.

Even under the depressing conditions—which perhaps have affected Butte less than most towns in the United States as a result of the war conditions in Europe and the general decline through the country—the attendance at the theatres has abated little. Managers are not kicking. Their advertisements are as big and as boasting as ever and the crowds are as long and as wide as at any time before.

If the succeeding year brings as much to the motion picture business in Butte and in Montana generally as the past year has, the managers will have little cause for complaint.

Boise Exhibitors Express Different Views Regarding Features

Special to Motion Picture News

THAT the motion picture films are of a higher quality than formerly and have gradually grown better from year to year, thus commanding a much better class of patronage, while prices have not generally advanced, except on special features, is shown by interviews with the proprietors of the five motion picture show managers of Boise.

Business conditions are fairly good here, but little complaint is made by exhibitors, and while competition is keen, the houses generally are doing a good business, and as the programs are so many and varied that the public has an unlimited choice, and it is not unusual to find one theatre party taking in from one to three shows a night and thinking nothing of it.

There is a wide difference of opinion among managers as to the most attractive program, some believe the special feature programs are the best business getters, while others like a varied program and believe they are most desired by the public.

One exhibitor is strong in his opinion that the exhibitors should do business direct with the manufacturers and eliminate the exchange man. His reasons for making such changes are that the exchange men try to do business on a limited number of reels, thus not being able to supply all the territory and that the films often arrive in bad condition, whereas if exhibitors were dealing direct with manufacturers, a greater number of reels would be manufactured, they would be delivered in better condition and reels containing certain pictures in demand could be secured on short notice instead of being obliged to wait from twenty to sixty days for a film and then get one which will not command transient trade because it has been over such a vast territory that many have already witnessed it.

Business conditions are improving, notwithstanding two additional houses have been added here since May, with a seating capacity of some 1,300.

J. N. FLOYD.
on a basis of four reels per week, changed as the exhibitors desire.

The complaint is heard concerning western dramas than other classes of photoplays. The exhibitors believe too many of this character, practically all of which are overdrawn, have been made, and the public has grown tired of the posse, cowboy pastime, bunk-house scenes and gun play. "To put up a piece of western paper," one exhibitor remarked the other day, "is just like inviting all my patrons to stay away."

"Padding" is an overworked word of the exhibitor's vocabulary just now. Many complaints are made regarding insufficient action for the footage, and the producer's failure to cut the scenes when the desired action is completed. Poor stories, unattractive titles and sensational paper are other causes.

Retail district theatres have found the serial pictures do not draw well, while the suburban and small city theatre men find them excellent business getters. This condition has been attributed to the fact that people were glad to go a short distance to see such a picture, but did not consider them worth a special trip down to the retail district.

There is a spirit of dissatisfaction among the suburban exhibitors of Los Angeles. Primarily they are unable to get a service which is exclusive for their district and is not shown in retail section theatres. Quietly a number have been organizing for the purpose of renting the first three or four weeks exclusively serials. Their plan is to show the first, second, third and fourth week service among themselves, and all pay an equal portion of the rentals. So far they have not been able to induce an exchange to rent them a service in this manner.

The manager of one of the principal exchanges, who asked that be not quoted, made the assertion that nine out of every ten exhibitors were demanding lower rental rates. "The prices now," the exchangeman continued, "are far less than ever before, and we are down to the bottom." The cause of the complaints is based upon poor business in the suburban theatres, due largely, it is believed, to being more theatres than the field warrants. The picture theatres of this city will average 600 seats each, and there is one for every 4,500 population. In addition to these, there are a number of vaudeville and legitimate houses, and Los Angeles is a summer town the year round, with many parks, beaches and similar attractions.

No complaint is to be heard regarding the municipal censor board, nor the city license; there is no legislation of an injurious nature pending, and exhibitors have been successful in preventing passage of an ordinance providing that only licensed operators, more than twenty-one years of age, who have passed the examination given by the city electrician, be allowed in the ticket selling booths.

Exhibitors have given little attention to the matter of organization. Most of the owners of the larger theatres of the retail district are members of the Theatres Managers' Association, affiliated with a national organization, and there are not to exceed twelve or fifteen members of the local Exhibitors' League now in good standing. Generally speaking, there is no co-operation between managers here. Each exhibitor is fighting his own battles separately.

Exhibitors of the smaller houses and those in the suburbs are returning to the regular program. One exchange with such service has increased its business fully 50 per cent. in the past sixty days. Another has added a number of houses, and exchange men in charge of regular programs believe exhibitors will discontinue the poor quality features altogether.

From estimates made by exchange men, fully half of the theatres are not at this time paying a profit in keeping with the demands of the present business, due partially to the general financial stringency the country over, and in a greater extent to the over-abundance of theatres here.

The European war, causing a sudden tightening, made this decrease in business acute. Coming as it did at a time when people were optimistically regarding economic conditions, it caused all to retrench and prepare for a future by a general tightening of the purse strings. The places of amusement were the first to feel this condition.

One change that will probably take place here in the near future is that with regard to changing programs daily. The retail district theatres using regular programs change twice weekly, and the suburban houses three and four times. Already many—fully thirty per cent. of the suburban houses are now changing daily, and it is believed this will become universal.

All over the West men of all lines of business believe the fall and winter of 1914 and the year of 1915 will be the greatest in the history of California. All are expecting an era of prosperity because they believe the people are coming.

If the prophecy proves true—and there is no reason to doubt that it will—the motion picture theatre men will be greatly benefited. Railroads have arranged that all tickets to the San Francisco and San Diego expositions will be the same price to any point in California, and the stop-over limits will be greatly lengthened, which will prove a great inducement to people to visit Southern California if they attend the Panama Exposition.

Films Based on Dramatic Successes Lead in Spokane Photoplay Theatres

Special to Motion Picture News

Spokane, Oct. 19.

TWO big theatres, among the finest in Spokane, which could not have qualified as picture houses last May, now are drawing heavy patronage with their films. The Empress, former home of Sullivan and Considine vaudeville, has been taken over by Sam W. B. Cohn as a feature film house, and the change of policy at the old Orpheum, now Loew's, which has added five reels of film to each program, now puts that theatre practically into the film ranks.

None of the picture houses then operating has left the field. The American, the largest picture theatre in the city, has changed management and is doing larger business than at the time of the previous market report.

The Casino, Clem, Lyric, Majestic, Best, Rex and Cineograph among the other downtown houses, and the picture theatres in the outlying sections of the city, are operating under favorable circumstances.

Undoubtedly a better class of patronage is being drawn to the picture theatres. The long lines of automobiles standing nightly in front of the film houses is one of the plain indications of this. Again, there is slightly less competition from the legitimate and variety houses, the withdrawal of the Orpheum Circuit from the Northwest being a factor beneficial to the film business.

Admission prices are practically the same as they have been. The best of the feature services are tied up on permanent contracts.

Features, as a general rule, have been of most value to exhibitors whose houses are furthest from the heart of the downtown district and who have succeeded in making patrons walk a block or two further to see a particular film than they would to see routine pictures. At present, the houses closest downtown are too small to make feature pictures profitable, for the reason that they have to give more shows per day and must curtail their programs.

There is no agreement among the theatre managers as to what sort of film is the most valuable, and the choice varies with the houses. The news weeklies are considered valuable assets, but educational films are in no demand except as fillers. Comedies of the slap-stick school are wanted only in the cheaper houses. "Blood and thunder" is vamping in popularity, and at least the houses which have specialized in it are trying to work out change.

Dramatic productions, particularly those which have important names in their casts, have proved altogether the best investment.

The theatres are learning that it is hard to sustain interest in motion picture materials unless the stories are run currently in the newspapers and the latter are beginning to be scary of the idea.

ANIMATED WEEKLY HAS WORLD'S SERIES

Through careful planning and clever manipulation, Editor Jack Cohn and Cameraman U. E. Whipple, of the Universal Animated Weekly, were the only ones able to secure pictures of the world's series inside the grounds, it is said.

Cohn and Whipple left the offices of the Animated Weekly and, accompanied by another cameraman, boarded a train bound for Philadelphia. On the way down many discussions arose as to the chances for getting into the grounds, and all voted it would be impossible.

The editor and his cameraman hurried over to Shibe Park, where they separated from the rest of the cameramen, who had given up the thought of getting inside the park, and contented themselves with taking pictures of the crowds outside. Editor Cohn's plan worked out successfully, for within half an hour he and Whipple had the camera set up on the diamond behind third base, and were busy grinding out foot after foot of film of what is said to be the greatest baseball film ever taken.

HIGH PRAISE FOR "SALOMY JANE"

A private exhibition of "Salomy Jane," the Alco release from the cameras of the California Motion Picture Corporation, was given in the releasing corporation's projection room last week.

Many prominent film men expressed admiration, as the scenes of the Bret Harte romance were spread before them. Particularly were the directors of the California organization pleased, for the projection meant the end of two years' work in California.

SELLS WESTERN STATE RIGHTS FOR "CRUSADERS"

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Oct. 20.

The Italian film, "Crusaders," has been sold to Charles Marley for state rights in California, Arizona and Nevada. Although this picture was made more than a year ago, it has never been shown in any of these states, and judging from the success it has had, Mr. Marley believes he will experience no difficulty in making steady booking.

BEHREND SLIDES HAVE MANY GOOD POINTS

The Behrend Motion Picture Supply House, New York City, is manufacturing a line of unbreakable, unburnable, uncrackable brass slides, which gives the average exhibitor an indestructible article.

The line is obtainable at all branches of the General Film Company, Mutual Film Corporation and a majority of dealers throughout the United States and Canada.

John Barrymore in "Legitimate" Laugh-Maker

"The Man From Mexico," Remembered for Its Phenomenal Run Some Years Ago, Now in Famous Players Film on Paramount Program

JOHN BARRYMORE, who made his first appearance in motion pictures a few months ago, when he was starred in the Famous Players comedy production, "An American Citizen," returns to the screen in a second Famous Players—Paramount release, H. A. Du Souchet's comedy triumph, "The Man From Mexico."

The situations are just the kind that afford the star ample opportunities for the display of his droll mannerisms, and delightful, mirth-provoking pranks.

"The Man From Mexico" has been recorded in theatrical history as one of the greatest comedies of the past two decades. The humorous incidents occur so rapidly that there is scarcely a pause of laughter throughout the entire production. In the film version the plot is greatly amplified, and many laughable situations that were only referred to in the original production are incorporated in the film, with the result that the motion picture production surpasses the stage version in humor and appeal.

The character is a light-headed and light-hearted, bibulous gentleman, named Fitzhew. Fitzhew gets into and out of more difficulties than can be enumerated. Fitzhew prides himself on a talent for lying, but attains the masterpiece of mendacity when he is called upon to explain to his wife the reason for a necessary absence of thirty days—necessary because he has been sentenced to the island for that period of time for disorderly conduct. Fitzhew invents a story to the effect that he is compelled to go to Mexico on business for a month, but at the expiration of his sentence he returns home to find that his wife has, during his absence, diligently studied and mastered the habits and language of Mexico—of which Fitzhew knows nothing. All his former troubles pale into insignificance beside the great dilemma he now finds himself in, and his desperate and frenzied attempts to explain matters to his puzzled wife provide a series of laugh-provoking incidents rarely equalled in number and degree, in a film comedy.

The production, which is in five parts, will be released on the Paramount program November 2.

OLD NEW YORK IN NEW WORLD FILM PLAY

Barbara Tennant, the well-known motion picture star, who has recently been seen in the William A. Brady feature, "The Dollar Mark," is making her appearance in the Shubert feature that the World Film Corporation is releasing, "When Broadway Was a Trail," the work of O. A. C. Lund.

Not only has Mr. Lund produced the photo-play, he also played the part of Henry Minuet, the son of the Dutch governor of New Amsterdam. The early days in America's colonizing period are shown.

The picture is unique, in that it contrasts the community of New Amsterdam and the Puritan settlement of Danvers, which is today known as Salem, Mass., while New Amsterdam is the basis for the present-day New York.
Let the Patron Own the Theatre

If you don't like good motion pictures yourself, keep out of the motion picture business," is John C. Karlsen's advice to the man who is seeking to please his trade. "If you do like them, get films that you really enjoy, and the chances are that your patrons will like them.

Karlsen is manager of the Garrick Theatre, 2541 Nicollet avenue, Minneapolis, Minn., in the heart of an exclusive residence section of the city.

Mr. Karlsen further believes in the use of neat, inexpensive programs, to keep his patrons informed. For instance, his program just issued announces the Famous Players Star features seven weeks ahead. These will be run every Tuesday. He begins with Mary Pickford in "The Care," and the series will run indefinitely. He also announces the "Trey O' Heaths" on Friday and Saturday, and the "Lucille Love" series on Monday nights.

There are more than a dozen homes of millionaires within six blocks of this theatre, and there are laborers' homes within the same radius. He has found that the occupants of the marble homes enjoy melodramas occasionally, and that the men who tin roofs, shovel coal and deliver groceries appreciate such plays as "The Bishop's Carriage," mixed in with their comedy and melodrama.

The program at the Garrick is well-balanced, and that is why it plays up-to-date films as early as the bigger theatres.

"Those girls act as though they own the place," a man said to Karlsen when twenty students from an exclusive girls' school went to the door and asked if they could have twenty seats together.

"They own it, along with the other people of the district, and I am running it for them," he said. "I have the seats for them, for they usually come on Tuesdays."

If acting as though one owns a theatre is a fault, Karlsen certainly encourages the fault. The theatre is fitted as comfortably as a home, and the patrons feel at home. They mention a film they would like to see and they see it. All this is done by being neighborly, and by running five reels at a show with five changes of program weekly.

All Elsie Esmond Films for Albany

O wing to the fact that Elsie Esmond in "On the Border Line" has filled the Hudson theatre, Albany, N. Y., on two occasions, Manager Roberts has contracted for all the films in which that young woman is starred.

Miss Esmond was featured for a season with the Bert Lytell stock company in Albany, and she became a big favorite. Mr. Roberts is to be congratulated for his efforts to secure what Albanians want, and his efforts will meet with appreciation.

Matinees for the School Children

Manager George W. Erdmann, of the Elmwood Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., which is located in the heart of the west side school district, has inaugurated a series of "student matinees" on Saturday afternoons during the fall and winter. Realizing the great educative value of the films, especially in supplementing the various courses being pursued in the public and high schools, Manager Erdmann has seen an opportunity.

In an effort to make this opportunity a realization, he has booked the programme of educational pictures covering travel, science and literary subjects. The first feature, presented on Saturday, September 26, was Charles Dickens' "The Chimes," which many of the local high school students study in their English literature classes. In order that students may know what is to be shown every Saturday afternoon, letters are written to each of the principals in the Elmwood district, informing them of the list, with the request that the letter be placed upon the bulletin board where the students may see it.

In his first letter, informing the teachers and principals of his "student matinees," Manager Erdmann requested that the teachers send in subjects which they would like to have their pupils see on the screen, and the management, in so far as it is possible, will try to procure the subject. All the principals and teachers were sent invitations to be on hand at the first of the series.

During the fall and winter, Mr. Erdmann will attend the different schools on the west side and give short talks on the educative value of the motion picture and show the pupils wherein they may profit by attending good theatres and viewing the many educational films now being manufactured.

On these afternoons, all children under 16 years of age, when accompanied by their parents or guardians, will be admitted at 5 cents. On all other occasions, only children under ten years are admitted at this price.

It is thought that this lowering of the admission price will bring a larger number of child patrons on these afternoons. Parents will be urged to send their children to these matinees and they will be assured that all subjects shown will be perfectly safe in every way.

This is one thing on which Mr. Erdmann is always very careful and he needs must be in his district. No objectionable film is ever allowed to creep into the Elmwood programs.

As yet, Mr. Erdmann has had no replies to his letters, but a few phone calls from some of the principals have greatly encouraged him in his efforts, as these few were all enthusiastic over the idea and offered Mr. Erdmann their assistance in every way possible.

If a pupil can see the subject which he or she is studying, much greater interest will be aroused in the school work. The music program will not be overlooked on these "student matinées," as Mr. Erdmann will select each week a number of examples from the different masters, which will represent their best effort. These selections will be played by the Elmwood orchestra and organ.

Mr. Erdmann is very optimistic about the idea.

BOOSTING PRICES WITH TIMELY ADVERTISING

The advertising stunts resorted to by the exhibitors of "Les Misérables" at Convention Hall to advertise their film proved successful. The special attraction did good business throughout the week, despite weather which was very unfavorable for motion pictures.

N. H. Gordon, of Boston, has the State rights to the picture, and when he prepared to put it in here, he instructed his manager to provide for a free exhibition for the clergy of the city, the educators, members of the Rochester Ad. Club, business men and others. This was given the Friday night previous to the opening, and was well attended.

When the regular engagement opened there was much interest in the film, and good business was done during the week, and this in spite of the fact that the prices were higher than any ever asked here, from 25 to 50 cents.

BLOTTERS FOR "KIDDIES"

Manager Fred Siegert of the Columbia Theatre, with four hundred seats, at West Jefferson street and Arlington avenue, Los Angeles, is getting patronage from school children by distributing blotters each week, upon which the program for the week is printed.

The theatre is located very advantageously for this, being about in the center of three schools. In addition to supplying school children, Mr. Siegert sees to it that all stores, offices and stationary stores receive generous amounts.

FIRST LASKY-BELASCO PICTURE COMPLETED

"Rose of the Rancho" Reveals New Departures in Artistic Effect and Realistic Settings in Land of the Golden West

In the production of the "Rose of the Rancho," the first of the Belasco productions to be released by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, and in which a complete Belasco cast is being used, the Lasky company have gone to extremes to make this production the most artistic that concern has yet turned out.

Two reels of the picture were re-taken in order to introduce therein a Spanish saddle which was discovered shortly after the first part of the picture had been finished, and in order to gain the atmospheric detail that this saddle would lend the picture, Mr. De Mille retook the first two thousand feet.

By making a monetary donation to the mission of San Fernando at Monterey, Mr. De Mille was allowed to use the mission grounds, and many of the scenes are laid in the historic old buildings throughout the vast acreage fronting the mission house.

An exact replica of the Castro Ranch was built on the new Lasky ranch as was also a duplicate, in appearance, of the old Spanish custom house, both of which are to be destroyed in the final scenes of the "Rose of the Rancho."

Cecil B. De Mille and Wilfred Buckland made a trip to Guadalajara, Mexico, and there engaged forty native actors to appear in the roles of Vaqueros, Caballeros and Mexican Indians, and prevailed upon the Mexicans to bring their native costumes and characteristic mantillas and multi-colored gowns.

Padre Francisca de la Dianna, head of the Monterey mission, consented to appear in the picture, and actually performed the mock ceremony between Bessie Barriscale as the "Rose" and Monroe Salisbury as the "Gringo."

Richard Walton Tully, co-author of the play, assisted in the production, while Cecil B. De Mille and Wilfred Buckland handled the staging of the piece.

It will be released November 16 and shown at the Strand Theatre for the first time, when the Strand Theatre management will be the hosts to David Belasco, Jesse Lasky and Samuel Goldfish, the three men who are associated in the Lasky-Belasco productions.

ATTRACTIVE LOBBY FRAMES DRAW PATRONAGE

Nothing advertises a theatre more than its outward appearance. The lobby which is neat and decorated attractively with the best of lobby display frames filled with high-class posters or sheets and photographs will attract the patrons. This is nothing but human nature, for we all like cleanliness and are attracted by it.

William Fox, in his chain of houses, is putting this into practice by establishing uniform single sheet frames. The color is Pompeian red with gold trimmings. These particular frames are being turned out as fast as possible by Menger & King, of New York.

GOOD BUSINESS FOR "AFTER THE BALL"

S. N. Silberman, of the Photo Drama Company, New York, has returned from a very successful trip through Wisconsin and upper Michigan, and reports that he has $6,000 worth of advanced booking on "After the Ball." The war does not seem to affect this feature, and "After the Ball" is playing capacity business wherever shown.

Mr. Silberman is making his headquarters at 401 Manhattan Building, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.
LOS ANGELES WILL HAVE THREE NEW EXCHANGES

Los Angeles is to have three new film exchanges within the next week or two, one that will handle the Alco program, one for the Box Office Attraction pictures, and a branch of the Nat A. Magnar Feature Service.

The Magnar office will be located in the Soka Theatre building, 520 South Broadway, and will be in charge of H. E. White, who was formerly connected with the local Golden Gate Film Exchange. The company is composed of Nat A. Magnar, formerly connected with Kohl & Dill, one of the leading theatrical producing firms of the West Coast, and Charles B. Kavanaugh, former business manager of Ferris Hartman. They have the state rights for "Neptune's Daughter," "Strangers of Paris," "House of Bondage," and a number of other pictures.

Sol Lesser, president of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., with main office at San Francisco and branches in all the principal western cities, has been in Los Angeles making arrangements for opening another exchange there for handling the Alco feature program. Mr. Lesser has contracted for this service for California, Arizona and Nevada and will maintain separate exchanges in both Los Angeles and at San Francisco.

A. G. Drumm, West Coast district manager of the World Film Corporation exchanges, stopped off in Los Angeles, after a trip from Seattle. He found that cities in the north had suffered from a slight business depression but that business now is normal.

"There seemed to be a wave of prosperity coming south for the exhibitors," he explained. "When I visited Seattle, the theatre men there told me they had experienced a few dull weeks, but with the arrival of cooler weather attendance at the theatres increased. As I came down the coast I heard the same story at practically every city. Now in Los Angeles the house managers tell me conditions are better than they were last week.

The poor business on the coast, I am certain, is over now and conditions will continue to improve."

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

PARAMOUNT INVADES CAPITAL

The Paramount program is now an item in Washington, D. C., under the caption of The Famous Players Exchange. Offices have been secured in the Second National Bank building with Geo. Mann as manager.

"We are not hurrying to place our films in Washington theatres," commented Mr. Mann, "because it is our desire to have the Paramount program run exclusively in at least one theatre here. We have many requests for individual plays from the local houses, but it is not exactly in accordance with our policy to offer our productions in that manner. In my survey of the field, our Washington office promises advantageous. We anticipate shortly to establish the Paramount program in one of the large theatres."

Mr. Mann comes from Philadelphia, where he was associated with the Stanley Company. He is well known in the motion picture and theatrical business.

LICHTMAN AND KANE TOUR ALCO EXCHANGES

A. LICHTMAN, vice-president and general manager of the Alco Film Corporation, and Robert T. Kane, president of the allied Atsco, are making a tour of inspection of the organization's eastern and western exchanges. Mr. Kane began his inspection in Minneapolis. He reports that he found a steady demand for the Alco releases and for the Radium Gold Fibre screen.

He will visit in turn all of the corporation's western exchanges, while Mr. Lichtman visits the eastern organizations, returning to New York at frequent intervals.

BOX OFFICE FLOURISHES IN PITTSBURGH

MANAGER HARRY B. DAY, of the Box Office Attraction Company, in Pittsburgh, is pleased with the amount of business his company has been doing in that section. He stated the patrons of the company are on the increase, and he is being kept busy with bookings on all of his big features. He also states his efforts in building up the Fox program has met with the biggest kind of success, and he is running them in many of the Pittsburgh and out of town theatres, with inquiries coming in from all over his district.

UNIVERSAL, MILWAUKEE, SPREADS OUT INTO LARGER QUARTERS

The Milwaukee branch of the Universal Film Company has enlarged its quarters in the Manhattan Building. It now occupies the entire front of the second floor.

These new quarters will give them a large, light and airy fireproof inspection room, a big vault for the storage of films, a new stock room, and considerable more office room. Manager W. C. Brimmer reports that business is increasing every day, and that the new quarters will give them splendid facilities for handling the volume of business.

OLD Faces in New Places

S. BARRETT McCORMICK has taken the feature management of the Mutual Film Company in Denver and Denham Palmer the same position with the General Film Company. Both young men are enterprising, versed thoroughly in the motion picture business, and immensely popular with their respective trades.

Mr. McCormick is something of a motion picture expert, having been interested in the game almost since its start and having had success as a scenario author.

Mr. Palmer has been with the General Film Company a year in Denver and had much experience in the game in the East. He succeeds W. W. Drum, who has gone to Seattle, Wash., to take a position with the World Film Company.

Changes In St. Louis

Charles Werner has been appointed manager of the World's Features Exchange in St. Louis. Mr. Werner declares he is working sixteen hours a day, and then cannot keep up with the rush. World's Features have recently acquired the Shubert and the Brady releases, and they are furnishing two new theatres with the features, the Lindell, Grand and Hebert street, and the West End Lyric, Delmar and Euclid avenues.

C. P. Cuff, former manager of World Features, is managing a theatre at Springfield, Mo.

Warner's Features Exchange, in the Benoist Building, St. Louis, has a new manager, Richard Broderick, who was exchange manager for the same company in Detroit. Warner's Features have also a new traveling representative, in the person of James Arnette, who was at one time an exhibitor in Oklahoma.

Joseph Weintraub, a traveling salesman for the Swanson-Crawford Film Company, St. Louis, reports doing good business during a recent trip in the outlying districts.

Klein Goes to Detroit

Joseph Klein, formerly of the Warner's of Atlanta Ga., has taken charge of the Detroit branch of the World Film Corporation, succeeding Mr. Dickenson. Mr. Klein has had a number of years of experience in the film game.
Four Oz Players Favorites With Public

Vivian Reed, Jane Urban, J. Farrell MacDonald and Violet Macmillan Make Hit With Thousands of Film Patrons

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Oct. 19.

T HE Oz Film Manufacturing Company has engaged four well known players whose acting in the company’s productions has caused much favorable comment in film circles. Their work in different roles, calling forth all their histrionic powers, has placed them high in the estimate of screen critics and the public.

The first, Vivian Reed, became a screen actress almost unnoticed. She formerly posed for New York artists, and on a visit to California visited the Oz studio from curiosity to see how motion pictures were made.

Attracted by her beauty, Mr. Baum engaged her for a small part. In this small part she proved so graceful and attractive that she was cast in the next picture for a much more prominent role, and in the third picture she impersonated the principal character with distinction.

Jane Urban, another Oz player, is well known to the legitimate stage. For a number of years she has had leading parts in musical comedies and stock companies.

Miss Urban is a great favorite and her appearance in motion pictures will undoubtedly give her added prestige.

J. Farrell MacDonald has been well known to the theatrical world for over twenty-four years. He has played important leads with Robert Manell, Nance O’Neill, Holbrook Blinn and others. He also played leads with Ethel Garden Stock Company, Denver; Poli Stock Company, in Springfield, Mass., and Crescent Stock Company, in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mr. MacDonald also played for nine years in various operatic companies, including D’Oyly Carte Opera Company of London; Danville Opera Company in United Kingdom, and his own opera company in Canada.

For seven years Mr. MacDonald has been in motion pictures, being at various times connected with the Imp, Ajax, Pathé Frères, Powers, Universal, Warner’s Features and Oz Film Company in important positions.

Violet Macmillan first became prominent when she appeared in the leading role of Dorothy in the “Wizard of Oz” Company organized by Hurdig and Seaman.

She created the lead in “The Time, The Place and The Girl,” and has been identified with musical comedy for a number of years with uniform success.

“Zudora,” Thanhouser Serial, Full of Realism

Director Makes Use of Miners in Explosion Scene—Court Room Episode Filmed in Historic Building

A CORPS of experienced miners, drillers and fire control men were utilized by Director Frederick Sullivan when taking the explosion scene in “Zudora,” Thanhouser’s new serial.

The title role, played by Margaret Snow (Countess Olga in “The Million Dollar Mystery”), gains name from a mine owned by Zudora’s father, in which he meets his death, the result of a premature blasting charge.

The run of pay ore has been suddenly increased, and in his exuberance, after years of patient prospecting, the father becomes over zealous and accidentally meets his death.

The astounding accuracy of this scene will hold spellbound all those who view it. It is a tragedy portrayed, which carries with it a living story of a life ambition frustrated.

The mine entrance with its patched beams, the building effort of one man “harried sore” is shown, and then the fateful events up to the final tragic climax occur with telling effect.

It was because of the great danger in taking this scene that trained fire control men were employed.

Some of the most famous orators of a bygone day have declaimed within those musty old walls. Director Frederick Sullivan has carried onto the screen that attitude of mingled awe and expectancy which is typical of a court room thrill.

In this scene, Harry Benham, who plays John Storm, the young sweetheart of Zudora, exacts a full measure of the opportunities afforded him, carrying along a breath-holding thrill to an unique climax.

ON TOUR FOR WORLD FILM

Joseph F. Partridge, acting as special representative for the World Film Corporation, is making a trip through western Canada in the interests of the concern. He will go as far as Vancouver on this tour.
PRESENT indications point to the emancipation of exhibitors in Ohio from the bondage of legalized censorship. J. W. Binder, director of publicity and finance of the National Board of Censorship, who has just returned from a tour of that state with Dr. Orrin G. Cocks, advisory secretary of the board, made for the purpose of studying conditions at first hand, declares that public sentiment is so strong against the law and its unjust operations that it will in all probability be repealed at the next session of the Ohio legislature early in the year.

The National Board of Censorship has a plan for the adequate exercise of censorship to take the place of all official censor boards, not only in Ohio, but throughout the country.

The new idea consists of making each city a unit body consisting of men and women in the community who shall serve without pay in the judgment of films in the same manner as the members of the National Board of Censorship.

Cities the Unit

As a result of the Ohio investigations the board will take charge of an active campaign to have the present law in that state repealed. Public opinion throughout the state will be created through the newspapers and trade journals. The board representing, as it does, the social service viewpoint, and being entirely unhampered and independent, is in a better position to make a winning fight than almost any other organization. The legalized censor board may object, but they cannot "disbar" the board from following its convictions through action in Ohio, nor visit "penalties" upon it.

"Legalized censorship of motion pictures in Ohio, we have reason to believe, will be repealed early in the new year after the legislature assembles," says J. W. Binder. "There is no sentiment in favor of it, either in official circles or among the thousands who patronize the motion picture shows. The bill out of which the law came was introduced at the request of one man—then, apparently, somewhat of a figure in the motion picture world—and since less important.

"At the hearings before the measure became a law there was no opposition from any source, and the bill became a law by negation rather than by affirmation. Under the operation of the law there are many complaints of unfairness, delays and annoyances. "Exchanges of both feature and regular releases speak of these things, but, pretty generally, will not allow themselves to be quoted for fear of the consequences that might be visited upon their pictures if they told the facts. Sinister hints are made in connection with an enterprise to publish an Ohio motion picture paper to which manufacturers, exchange men and others will be 'invited' to subscribe, and in which they will be asked to advertise.

No Attempt to Fix Standard

"The board makes no attempt to fix standards, or to advise manufacturers why their pictures have been rejected. The penal section of the act under which the board operates has been denied and declared invalid by one of the courts of Ohio. This allows exhibitors to run films that have been censored without the official "leader" on which the board's approval is registered.

"The above are a few of the conditions which our investigations of censor conditions in Ohio discovered. Dr. Orrin G. Cocks, advisory secretary of the board, and I made a tour of the principal cities of Ohio and talked with leading officials of the state and cities, as well as with exchanges, feature men, exhibitors and others. Our object was to determine for ourselves, at first hand, what the facts were.

"We found that while the facts of the actual working of official censorship were as above stated, that in almost every case where the constructive, time-tried plan of the National Board was explained making the city the unit, and having a committee of unpaid men and women of the same caliber as the personnel of the National Board, confining its activities largely to those pictures, less than five per cent. of the entire output, which are not seen by the National Board, was explained it was received as a sane, conservative plan, and the board was assured of the hearty co-operation in putting the plan through of the men who have the power to make it a success."

300-Foot Drop Provides Impromptu Thrills

Reckless Cowboy Gallop, Almost Fatal, Ends in Fall Over Cliff and Is Caught by Alert New York Motion Camera Man

Alertness of a motion picture camera man is a quality that is demanded for the success of almost any film production, and on that account little wonder is expressed at a majority of the thrilling actions that are caught by lenses.

But an accident was "shot" recently by one of the expert camera men employed by Thomas H. Ince, of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, that undoubtedly will go down in the annals of motion picture photography as one of the most remarkable since the birth of the industry.

It was an accident that for its seemingly inevitable fatal consequences has been unparalleled, and was very fortunately timed during the production of Mr. Ince's "The Two-Gun Man," a seven reel feature in which W. S. Hart is presented.

It was during the tacking of a wild ride by a cowboy on horseback that the mishap occurred. A stride a beautiful black charger the cowboy galloped along the ridge of a range running parallel with the ocean shore. At the base of the cliff stood the camera man, recording every step taken by the steed and its rider. For half a mile the cowboy rode, when suddenly the animal flashed directly into a hole.

The abrupt stop sent the horse and rider crashing to the ground. But the momentum had been too great to permit of a safe landing. The cowboy and his steel topped over the edge of the cliff and started to roll to the bottom.

For a distance of more than 300 feet the horse and cowboy rolled, and their miraculous escape from death was learned when they stood upon their feet practically unscathed. A few scratches and a bruise or two were dressed, and both returned to the action of the picture.
Kinetophone Announces New Features

Political Picture, “The Coming Power,” Will be the First, Followed by a Feature Based on Metropolitan Life—K. C. Booking Company, Inc., Established to Handle Concern’s Output, with Ira H. Simmons as General Manager

R EADY to book the features of the Kinetophone Corporation as well as other multiples which are already controlled by that organization, the K. C. Booking Company, Inc., has established offices at 126 West Forty-sixth street, in the offices of the Kinetophone, with Ira H. Simmons as general manager.

Mr. Simmons has retired from the Montgomery-Simmons Film Service, Inc., in which film he was a big factor.

The offices of the Kinetophone have been busy preparing for the early release and booking of two features of a timely nature which will be put on the market in a short time.

The first, of special interest at this period of the year, when things political loom on the horizon, is “The Coming Power,” a strong story of political intrigue and the triumph of right over the forces of corruption. The tale is told by Catherine Carr in three reels of swiftly moving action and was written from a script submitted to the Kinetophone by Raymond C. Hill.

Cast Is Carefully Selected

Contrary to what is often found in films of political stories, each character in “The Coming Power” has been chosen to fit the part. The part of the young radical is taken by Lionel Adams, who starred on the stage in “The Man of the Hour.” For the character of the money king and boss of lesser politicians, William Crimmins, who played last winter in “At Bay,” was chosen. Edith Lucket, who is playing the lead with Chauncey Olcott this year, and Annette Rose, whose work in “The Spirit of the Poppy” and other big feature films has caused much enviable comment, divide honors in the roles assigned to the gentler sex. The cast also includes William Phillips and Leonard Grover, who were chosen from many screen actors who were considered for their parts.

“The Little Jewess” is the second early release planned by the Kinetophone, with Annette Rose in the leading character, and such persons in the cast as Edith Luckett, Sonia Mossell, Edward Mackay, Charles Lytton and Cochrane Bayly.

“Markia’ Wins Wide Success

“Markia’ Wins Wide Success

“Markia’ Wins Wide Success

“The Little Jewess” is a story of New York life, prefaced by the scattering of the members of an immigrant family in their rescue from shipwreck. Strong characterization marks this work of Catherine Carr, who wrote it from the central idea of a script by Walba Waldo.

The Kinetophone reports a big suc- ccess with “Markia, or The Destruction of Carthage,” which was reviewed in Motion Picture News a few weeks ago. This story of barbaric warfare, as exemplified in the third Punic war, seems to have caught on with exhibitors everywhere. The contrast between the scenes in this picture and those now being enacted in Europe make a lesson in history which the managers of motion picture theatres evidently believe will be of interest to their public.

“The Spirit of the Poppy,” one of the biggest things the Kinetophone has done, is finding favor with exhibitors who have seen the film. They are all grasping the lesson taught by this dramatic story of the heroin traffic in New York, and appreciate the purpose through which it was written.

The K. C. Booking Company, Inc., is setting great store by “The Span of Life,” in which Lionel Barrymore is featured. The film is about finished and should attract thousands of old theatre-goers, since turned film fans, who remember the stage production of Sutton Vane’s famous old melodrama.

Oriental Glamour Marks First “Zudora” Episode

Scenario Writer Weaves Golden Threads of Mysterious East in Woof of Striking Imaginative Thanhouser Photo Play

“T HE Mystic Message of the Spotted Collar,” the title of the first episode of “Zudora,” gives an intimation of the mysticism of the forthcoming Thanhouser serial.

Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, the creator of the photoplay, has woven into the plot every possible thread of imagery, and his characters bear the imprint of the master craftsman who shaped them. The vision in the secret chamber, where Hassam Ali, portrayed by James Cruze, sees in the scented smoke from an incense filled brazier those events in his past life which bear directly upon his present wicked activities, offers a splendid insight into this weird Oriental character, and shows plainly Hassam Ali’s all-devouring greed for Zudora’s inheritance.

Then when Zudora, played by Marguerite Snow, the Countess Olga of “The Million Dollar Mystery,” enters, and with a charming Cinderella innocence lays her hand upon Hassam Ali’s shoulder, the contrasting emotions—the girl—the designing fakir-uncle—pres-sents a situation of dramatic intensity seldom seen upon the screen. The girl smiles up into Hassam Ali’s face and he returns the smile, but when her glance is elsewhere, the anxiety, the irl-ternal lust for Zudora’s wealth effaces his smile, and the real Hassam Ali beams in feverish glare upon the girl marked for his victim.

There is a letter which figures in “Zudora,” the appearance of which upon the screen must be that of an aged document. Director Frederick Sullivan searched New York City for paper of the required size, quality and age. He was unsuccessful. Finally he obtained the back portion of a will filed in the Delaware county courthouse in 1876, a man whose property reverted to the county because of a felony committed.

This paper was just what Director Sullivan desired.

It is upon this almost historic paper that the following is written:

Madam:

Your dead husband in his will made provision for your child, Zudora, as follows:

1. The Zudora mine, valued at $20,000.00, becomes hers unconditionally when she reaches her eightteenth birthday.

2. At her death, the property goes to her husband, or in case she is unmarried, to her nearest heir at law.

A special ink was necessary in the writing of this letter, as the fabric of the paper was so impoverished that every care was taken that the picture value of the old parchment might not be impaired. The experiment proved a success.
In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Oct. 19.

UNSETTLED weather conditions severely handicapped the cameramen of the Inceville studio— that of the New York Motion Picture Company, located on the beach near Santa Monica, recently. There were heavy fogs most every morning, and cloudy conditions each day caused loss of time, which required that additional efforts be put forth in order that schedule not be disrupted.

Principal among the more elaborate of Mr. Ince’s output was “The Hateful God,” a strong story of a bigot and his two children. A large number of the settings depict a circus and for those it was necessary to erect a mammoth tent.

Under the folds of this was staged a genuine circus scene. Action in three rings was filmed at one time, and retired circus clowns, now photolayers, enlivened the scenes. Another tent housed the manager and other close-up views of the animals were made. J. Frank Burke plays the part of a calloused father, supported by Enid Markey. The direction is in charge of Scott Sidney.

“The Mills of the Gods,” in which Jay Hunt plays the principal character as well as directing the production, is from a Dutch story, and the scenes for the picture required the construction of a complete Dutch colony.

Canals were built on the plateau above the studio, and a row of Holland houses built for a back ground. J. Barney Sherry and Margaret Thompson were assigned prominent parts in this picture.

Stanton in Thrilling Scene

Richard Stanton, director and actor, has been given ample opportunity to prove himself a dare devil, in playing the name part of “The Desperado,” from a story by Thomas H. Ince. In this he stands behind a window while the glass is broken out by bullets by a sheriff’s posse attempting to capture him. Leona Hutton is playing opposite Mr. Stanton in this picture.

Walter Edwards has been filming a crook story at the New York Motion Picture Company studio, released under the title of “Destiny’s Night.” It shows the exciting experiences of a gentleman burglar and a society burglarress, which has for its climax a pretty romance.

A heart interest two-reel drama, “His Responsibility,” from a scenario by Russell E. Smith, dealing with the story of a crook who embroils from his em-quaintance. Murdock MacQuarrie and Agnes Vernon play leading parts.

Al E. Christie has made an auto comedy in which a big feature was the race between a modern taxi in trouble and a primeval Olds with a bad heart. Lee Moran is the villain, Eddie Lyons the hero, and Virginia Ford the girl. Incidentally a Dutch grocery is introduced.

"A Dream of a Painting" is the title of the comedy vehicle of the Jokers players under the direction of Allen Curtis. William Franey as the husband is dragged to an art exhibit by his wife, Gail Henry, where he sees and is fascinated by the painting of a princess. How he escapes from his wife, returns to the picture, and sees images in his dreams bring about many unusual comedy situations.

ROBERT LEONARD

Operation in "Yellow Streak"

Director Lloyd Ingraham, of the U studio, has been making a melodrama entitled "The Yellow Streak," in which lovers are parted by one coincident and reunited years later by another extraordinary event.

It will depict eastern and western life, and show numerous scenes in and about a local hospital, one being a very difficult surgical operation. The scenario for this is by Phil Walsh.

Francis Forde is busy with the filming of "Whom the Gods Love," for the Universal Rex brand, featuring Grace Cunard. This is another detective story and will contain a number of very exciting scenes in the kidnapping of the female detective and the rescue by her lover.

Production work was begun last week at the Universal studio in charge of the production after an absence of more than three weeks, during which time his company composed of Herbert Rawlinson, Frank Lloyd, William Worthington, Anna Little and Helen Wright was directed by Mr. Lloyd. Mr. Turner recently filmed a one reel Christmas story written by Ruth Anna Baldwin in collaboration with Manager Isadore Bernstein. Later Mr. Turner took up the filming of a multiple reel feature, "The Suburban," from the story by C. F. Dazy and scenario by James Dayton. This contains some very unusual scenes, including special horse races put on at the new Universal ranch.

The Rex Universal Company, directed by Joseph DeGrasse was home from a two weeks stay at the Angeles National Forest Reserve, near Saugus, Cal., where two pictures were filmed, "The Lion, the Lamb, and the Man," a story of Kentucky hills people; and "An Idol of the Hills." The latter is a light breezy comedy and the first Pauline Bush has appeared in. The picture, when shown at the studio projection room elicited much very favorable comment.

Al E. Christie, Universal Nestor comedy director, is on his way to New York City, to spend a short vacation with friends there. Mr. Christie has been at the West Coast making pictures for the past three years without a vacation; and during that time has witnessed the growth of what is now the Universal studio from one shanty with two sets to one of the largest motion picture studios in the world.

One Reel Christmas Story

Otis Turner is again at work at the Universal studio in charge of the production after an absence of more than three weeks, during which time his company composed of Herbert Rawlinson, Frank Lloyd, William Worthington, Anna Little and Helen Wright was directed by Mr. Lloyd. Mr. Turner recently filmed a one reel Christmas story written by Ruth Anna Baldwin in collaboration with Manager Isadore Bernstein. Later Mr. Turner took up the filming of a multiple reel feature, "The Suburban," from the story by C. F. Dazy and scenario by James Dayton. LEWIS DURHAM

Chance Plays Trick with Actor

Director Henry McRea, of the 101 Bison Universal Company, in the filming of "The Trail Breakers," a western picture, made at the New, Universal Ranch, made a daring leap from a locomotive running twenty-five miles an hour down an embankment fully thirty feet in height, without injury, and two minutes later while running across some broken ground to stop some horses that were stampeding, slipped and twisted his knee badly tearing the ligaments of his leg.

Lewis "Bull" Durham, former moun man for the New York Giants, now with the New York Motion Picture Company at Inceville, claims the distinction of being "put away" more times and more ways than any other photographer. He has been kicked, punched, hanged, drowned, shot and smothered to death. In a recent production he was "killed" just as he was in the act of committing "murder."

To obtain the proper coloring for an elaborate story of the north woods, a large company from Inceville studio of the New York Motion Picture Company is spending a month at Bear Valley. The company will be directed by Walter Edwards and among the leads are Frank Borzage, who played a principal part in the Ince production of "The Typhoon." Louise Glau and Jerome Storm.

Photograph Ball Scene from Derrick

Members of the Bosworth, Inc., companies had a holiday last week, both the Hobart Bosworth and Phillips Smalley pictures, "Little Sunset" and "False Colours," respectively, being finished. Both companies have begun on new pictures. One of the most tedious tasks attempted at the Bosworth studio was that of making almost three hundred Reach baseballs—and in world series week at that—roll into place and spell the title "Little Sunset," for the baseball picture presented at the Wild West and assisted by the wild animals and cowboys put on a regular Buffalo Bill attraction.

Robert Leonard a Hypnotist

Francis Ford and Grace Cunard staged the Hindu cabinet mystery and others. Robert Leonard made his first appearance as a hypnotist. Al Curtis as the magician for the Queen, Marie Walscamp, produced everything she wanted from snakes to a real—or rea!-hero, William Clifford. Aerialists and trapeze performers were present with good acts. A big favorite was the melodrama harlequeen staged by Lee Moran, Joe King, Stella Adams and Eddie Lyons, to the accompaniment of a fiddler. "Kurtis' Curious Creatures" was the title of the side show and the receipts amounted to more than $300 which go to the funds of the Children's Hospital of Hollywood.

Manager Bernstein was grand marshal of the event, and like the chief mogul of the county fair appeared always on his pretty white pony. Local newspapers estimated the attendance at between forty and fifty thousand people.

To use the words of the playwright, this is "A comedy based on the sober truth," in which an heir, who had spent his days joking and jesting, buys a newspaper and resolves that it shall print only the truth. This recalls his loss of friends and money; the defeat of his father for governor; in him becoming the target for the wrath of politicians and capitalists; and creates many stirring scenes that may well be portrayed in pictures. Lollie Robertson will play the part of Helen Dunn, the "sob" sister.

"Last Egyptian," New Oz Film

The Rolin Film Company has begun producing, after being closed for two weeks. The company is now nine reels ahead of its release with Sawyer.

The Oz company players recently began "The Last Egyptian," from a novel by L. Frank Baum, which will consist of five reels. As with all previous productions, the company had all new sets made for this picture. Two of these were remarkable for their size and beauty. One was an English hall-room and the other the exact reproduction of the Lord Cromer Palaces in Cairo, made from photographs. By comparison of pictures of Egyptian palms with the California palms it was found there is very little similarity, and the scenic department made a grove of eighty trees, each sixty feet high, which were "planted" in the sand on the bank of Balboa Bay, southwest of Los Angeles.

Billy Elmer, one of the leading members of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, taking the parts of Cash Hawkins in "The Squaw Man," Frampas in "The Virginian," Biff Bates in "The Making of Bobby Burnitt," all of which have been released, has had a very remarkable career.

VIOLET MERSEREAU

from the stories of Charles Van Loan, produced by Mr. Bosworth.

For this title the company built a derrick of the design used at oil wells, thirty feet high, and from the top of this the camera was operated.

The chamber of commerce and citizens of Hollywood—the home of the Universal in California—wanted to celebrate the turning on of the new cluster street lighting system recently installed, and they asked Manager Isadore Bernstein to help them out.

He did and the Universal players put on a regular circus parade, side show, the big three-ringer, wild animal show, Wild West, and turned loose the red lemonade, peanuts and pop corn. It was the biggest night in the history of Hollywood.

Henry McRea and Rex de Rosella presided at the Wild West and assisted by the wild animals and cowboys put on a regular Buffalo Bill attraction.

BILLY ELMER

First he studied law, but gave up Blackstone for the lyceum platform. In New York he became a Shakespearean actor, which line he followed for several years. For three years he was in stock in New York, Chicago and San Francisco, and it was at the latter place that he first entered the fighting ring at the suggestion of a physical culture trainer of an athletic club.

He climbed to the championship of the welterweight class and then with Bob Hollard appeared in "Sporting Life," the big English melodrama, for three seasons. Then he became a physical culture instructor of the Millionaire's Club in New York; wrote two books on boxing, published by Spalding; went back to the stage to play in stock: with his father, a San Francisco banker, entered the oil business at a time when conditions were good, but suffered severe losses when the bottom dropped out of the market. A friend persuaded him to "come down and see us make pictures," which resulted in Elmer becoming a photoplayer. He has since been with the Biograph, Selig and other companies, and with the Lasky players since the opening of the studio the early part of this year.

Mr. Elmer will be seen playing the heavy part of the Spaniard in "The Ghost Breakers," featuring H. B. Warner, and Isaac Perry, the colored attorney, in "The Rose of the Ring," featuring Theodore Roberts.

Kinotophone's film production of the late Sutton Vane's "The Span of Life."

She was brought to this country from the English stage to take the part of Mary in "The Servant in the House" at the instance of her cousin, Edith Wynne Matthison. That was in 1908 after she had played in London with such men as F. R. Benson and H. P. Irving. Later she returned to London and played in "The Servant in the House" with Henry Miller. Returning to New York she was engaged for the metropolitan run of "Romance," after which she became a part of the brief life of "What Would You Do?"

William J. Flynn in New Serial

Well Known Detective to Appear in a Series, Each Episode Complete in Itself—Film Attractions Will Release Picture

A NEW kind of serial, combining the name of an individual known by title to millions of persons, releasing through state rights buyers only, and basing its appeal on the completeness of each release rather than on suspended interest, is being prepared.

William J. Flynn, chief of the United States secret service, is one of the men behind the idea. His present position, as the head of Government detectives, and a continuous period of service of almost twenty-five years, have been productive of many experiences which will be produced in motion pictures.

C. V. Henkel, president of the Film Attractions Company, is in charge of the production. Mr. Henkel's most recent feature release was the six-reel costume spectacle, "The Three Musketeers."

The serial will consist of approximately twenty releases, or episodes. The aggregate material for the score of scenarios has been taken from the twenty most famous cases of which Mr. Flynn has had charge as chief of the secret service.

Each episode will be complete in itself, but the same principals will be featured in each of the twenty releases. The theme of the serial, covering a wide range of activities by government agents, will be Chief Flynn's personally evolved slogan to those whom he and his operatives have convicted, that "crime does not pay."

Instead of releasing through program exchanges, the serial will be marketed to state rights buyers. Some territory, it is said, for which Mr. Henkel has conducted negotiations in person, already has been closed.

"There is no doubt about the general popularity of serials," he stated. "Their tremendous success everywhere is evidence of their value to exhibitors. But the feature exchanges, apart from those operated by program producing companies, have never had an opportunity to capitalize this popularity. This secret service serial has been designed with that purpose in view."

"Chief Flynn's name is known either directly or by title to almost every man, woman and child in America. He is a big man, with a big job, and the stories portrayed in each release is based upon one of his twenty biggest cases."

"The principal characters will be two of his most experienced and confidential agents—a man and a woman. To this day neither is aware that the other is a government operative. Each believes the other to be active in behalf of "system" or bands of criminals operating in defiance of the government, either as counterfeiters, embezzlers, smugglers, and in some instances as promoters of monopolies in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law."

Mr. Flynn has often been called upon to pass final judgment upon certain kinds of film wherein he has contained scenes affecting government operations, and is conversant with practically every phase of the industry.

His personal acquaintance with newspapermen throughout the country has proven valuable in making arrangements for publicity to accompany the releases. Recently a series of articles by him about his various experiences was published in the New York Herald, and one other Eastern paper. Many of his personal experiences have been syndicated in narrative form to newspapers throughout the entire United States.

Each episode of the serial will be written in fiction form for publication in newspapers in all of the cities where the series is booked to exhibitors, thus enhancing the popularity of this unusual series of photoplays.

EDISON ACTRESS A SCREEN FAVORITE

One of the most popular and fascinating girls on the screen today is Sally Crute, the leading lady of the Edison Company.

SALLY CRUTE

After successful engagements on the legitimate stage in such productions as the "Rosary," "Three Twins," and "The Deep Purple," Miss Crute responded to the call of the silent drama and made her debut with Essanay in Chicago. A season with Solax followed, and in August, 1913, she joined the Edison ranks at Bedford Park.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Vol. 10. No. 17.
A Proof of Healthy Prosperity

In this issue Motion Picture News offers its second quarterly report of national trade conditions for the consideration of the industry. The report published in the Dayton Convention Number, dated July 11, was the first undertaking of its kind attempted in this field. It created a profound impression and satisfied an actual need. The present one, for several reasons, will be found even more useful than its predecessor.

To enable the reader to comprehend, almost at first sight, the significance of the mass of data presented to him in the report, the substantial facts contained in the entire collection of articles have been tabulated in a chart, under column headings which will permit the reader to ascertain immediately anything he wishes to know about the business in any particular section.

Supplementing the chart are articles which elaborate upon the data in its columns and present such additional facts about conditions in the various localities as did not lend themselves readily to tabulation.

Taken together, the two form a compact and readily understood digest of the business, the value of which no producer, feature buyer or exchange man can ignore.

The most important feature of the report is the revelation of a general prosperity throughout the industry which has demonstrated itself to be war-proof and depression-proof.

In a few cities near the large industrial centers of the East, conditions brought about by the European conflict have reacted directly upon the exhibitor.

But these make the condition of healthy prosperity elsewhere all the more convincing.

Most of the motion picture trade centers of the country have had dull periods of long or short duration. But scarcely an exhibitor can be found who traces this to the war.

The market for good pictures is just as big and just as capable of absorbing all high quality film that is offered as it ever was. For the mediocre picture, the feature in name only, the slovenly, slipshod, badly produced, badly acted and badly photographed photoplay, whether a split reel or an eight-reel multiple, there never was a large market, and there is less and less opportunity to "put them across" every month.

The fact that it is becoming less and less profitable to produce poor pictures, and more and more profitable to produce good ones is a symptom of normal, healthy prosperity.

And all the calamity howls of those who are experiencing the shock of having worthless pictures thrown back at them will not make it otherwise.

A Magazine With a Purpose,—But What Purpose?

The announcement that M. A. Neff and two members of the Ohio Board of Censors are about to issue a magazine "in the interests (?) of the exhibitors of Ohio" is calculated to excite both laughter and curiosity.

Perhaps also a little suspicion. It is only natural, after the unsolicited censor law which Neff foisted upon the exhibitors he was supposed to protect, that anything he does "in the interests" of the exhibitor should be looked at askance.

But why are two members of the censor board cast for parts in Neff's latest benevolent farce? It is acknowledged, without argument, that the Ohio censors need a good many things. But do they need a house organ?

Or is it rather to be supposed that the new publication needs them?

The Ohio exhibitor, having had forced upon him a censor law which he didn't want, is now to be called upon to support a paper emanating from the same source and of which he doesn't see the necessity.

Unless, of course, the Neff publication goes out of existence when the Neff censor law is repealed. That is the one ray of hope.
Graham Sees Fewer Five-Cent Theatres
Manager of Universal, on Eight-Week Tour of United States and Canada, Finds General Demand for Quality Pictures

"Four weeks ago I left New York and I have been going ever since," Mr. Graham said. "From here I will go north through Oregon and Washington, and then through Canada, where our company has a large number of exchanges. So far I have found the Universal company products in good demand. For the number of releases we have each week we stand in the front rank. We have a very good percentage of the rentals.

"The most notable change that has come to my observation is the passing of the five-cent theatre as a place of amusement. It will remain, but will decrease in number. The general trend is toward better quality and the demand means that the exhibitor must first increase the price of admission, so that he can afford to pay the exchange a higher rental.

"In turn, the exchange can pay better prices for pictures, and the manufacturer will thereby be in a position to spend more money on its productions, and consequently make better productions."

WILD WELL KNOWN IN FILM CIRCLES

Jack Wild, the publicity manager of Hepworth-American, has become known throughout film circles as one of the live wire men in the business.

He has a thorough knowledge of the industry and is conversant to a high degree with the advertising methods best suited for successful exploitation of his company's productions.

ROLFE GETS FILM RIGHTS

The B. A. Rolfe Photo-Play Company, which releases through the Aco program, has signed a contract with the Bobbs-Merrill Company in which they acquired the motion picture rights for the novel, "Satan Sanderson," by Hallie Erminie Rives. The sale was effected through Frank Henry Rice, literary agent, 145 West Forty-fifth street.

MARGUERITE CLARK IN LASKY'S "MERELY MARY ANN"

By arrangement entered into between Samuel Goldfish, general manager of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, and Adolph Zukor of the Famous Players Film Company, dainty Marguerite Clark, best remembered from her recent triumphs at the Little Theatre, will appear in the Lasky production of the Liebler Company's famous dramatic success, "Merely Mary Ann."

Miss Clark's first professional appearance was under Milton Aborn, at Baltimore, in 1899. Following a season or two as leading woman with De Wolf Hopper, Miss Clark appeared successfully in "Babes In Toyland," "The Pied Piper," "The Beauty Spot," "The Golden Garter," "The King Of Cadonia," "Jim, the Penman," "Baby Mine," "Snow White," "When the World Was Young," "Are You a Crook," and following these triumphs, was heartily commended by the entire press of New York for her work in the Little Theatre production of "The Affairs of Anatol."

Wm. C. De Mille will write the screen version of "Merely Mary Ann." Cecil De Mille will direct and stage the picture, Wilfred Buckland will act as artistic director and the entire facilities of the Lasky studio will be devoted to making Miss Clark's first Lasky appearance an important event.

FOREIGN FILM CONCERN IN CORPORATES FOR $100,000

The Foreign Film Corporation, of Philadelphia, has been organized with a capital stock of $100,000 for the sale of state rights and exclusive territory. The corporation represents the leading manufacturers of Italy and France. Their first release, on October 10th, was a beautiful feature entitled, "Back to the Waves."
“SHORE ACRES”
(All Star-Alco—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. FANGBURN

JAMES A. HERNE, famous for his plays depicting the life of the simple fisher folk of the Maine coast, wrote his most popular work in “Shore Acres.” Its popularity alone would justify its production for the motion picture screen, but the excellence with which this transfer has been accomplished makes it thoroughly worth while.

The mere fact that the action takes place beside the ocean makes the advantage of a film production obvious. However skilled a scenic artist may handle a production on the stage, his efforts lack puerility when compared to the background of real ocean waves, provided by the camera. The scenes on the storm-tossed schooner, which are most realistic in the film, would be entirely impossible in the original form of the play.

The interiors are few in number, and none of them require anything elaborate in the nature of decorations, but they really look like the humble homes which they represent, which is far more important. As for the exteriors, there is a wide variety in them, and they are all well chosen, some being unusually fine examples of photographic art.

Charles A. Stephenson, who is featured in the role of Nathaniel Berry, plays the lovable old soldier in a convincing and sympathetic way, which wins the audience from the start. William Riley Hatch is his hard-hearted brother. Wades Horner makes a charming heroine, and in common with the other principals, handles an emotional part without over acting. Conway Tearle is seen as her lover, while others are E. J. Connelly, Harry Knowles and Gladys Fairbanks.

The story very much condensed concerns a farmer who is influenced to put his farm into a building scheme. The man who so influences him wants to marry his daughter and when she elopes with a younger daughter makes insinuations which lead her father to seek the young couple’s lives.

The father’s brother is a fine old man, a veteran of the Civil war and the keeper of the lighthouse. He acts as a peacemaker and eventually the family is reunited by the last of his long series of tremendous sacrifices.

Altogether, “Shore Acres” is a picture which any exhibitor should be proud to run and which ought to give him solid reasons for his pride. The fame of the play gives it advertising value, and it comes up to expectations.

“A GENTLEMAN FROM MISSISSIPPI”
(World Film—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE merry old Southern colonel, kind to his employees, humorously severe with his family, philanthropic towards the poor, and hard on his enemies, if such he has, has often been made the central figure of books and plays; and here we have one of the latter turned into a picture, with Thomas Wise leading the cast, and making the picture.

He is exceptionally well cast, as he has a perfect understanding of the part, having played the same role on the stage several years ago. The humorous touches that he puts in throughout the picture are genuine humor, and it may be said that in less accomplished hands these touches would appear entirely forced and lose their excellent effect.

The story is simple, easy to follow and never unfathomable or at all involved. It is conventional, true, but it is Mr. Wise’s acting that will carry it through, and give it the appearance of an un hackneyed picture.

Although containing enough comical phases to produce many a hearty laugh, the picture is not all comedy, as it contains a number of dramatic situations, which materially heighten the interest.

Imagine the situations that arise when a gentleman from Mississippi, who has newly been elected Senator, arrives in Washington and suffers all the pangs of fear that beset one when sitting foot in a taxicab for the first time, again making his maiden speech in the Senate, meeting newspaper men and at last defeating a group of corrupt Senators, who only hold their positions, by virtue of crooked methods, and who have tried hard to bring about the downfall of the honest man.

The picture is full of just such situations combined with a very plain love story, which is prominent only in parts. It is truly refreshing to see a picture that does not rely on its love element for success, and one that does rely on its character portrayal, which is carried off in a convincing manner, by an artist, who knows his business.

“The TREY O’ HEARTS”
(Gold Seal—Twelfth Chapter.)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

We have here the twelfth episode of “The Trey O’ Hearts.”

Only three more to follow. And what will be the outcome? It has come now to be a difficult question to answer as to which of the Tine sisters will marry.

In the beginning of the story it was Judith’s avowed purpose to murder Law in cold blood. But she didn’t figure on falling in love with the gentleman. And now Judith, as well as Rose, is continually plunging herself into great difficulties, from which Alan is called upon to rescue her.

So it seems a perfectly legitimate question to ask as to which of the young ladies he will eventually take as his wife. Perhaps he will prefer to remain a bachelor, and spend the rest of his life resting up after his strenuous duties, but it is hardly likely that the story will terminate in this manner, and it will be a decided departure if we are not given to understand that Law and one of the twin sisters are made one.

Then again, Seneca Trine swore that if Alan ever married Rose, Alan would not live to spread the good news. It is a debatable question as to whether Trine’s prophecy will be correct or no. Certain it is that if any villain ever deserved triumph, friend Trine does. He is the most abhorrent director of villainy we have ever seen, anywhere, on the screen, stage or off. He seems as he sits huddled in his cripple’s chair, or as he lately been the case, in his private car, the very embodiment of all that is bad and unworthy. When his carefully laid plans go amiss he fairly boils with rage. He is so utterly helpless in his fury that he sometimes strikes one as being rather humorous.

It’s only three weeks more now until we shall see the last of the heroines and villains, and these questions will doubtless be answered in the last three chapters. And, although difficult as it may seem, we must wait. Here in this episode entitled “Mirage,” the action takes place for the most part on a desert. That it is a real desert is ascertained by the sandstorms that continually appear.

A fine exposure of a trail marks the end of the second reel, with Alan and Judith holding sway over the latter’s father, and Rose for the time under the protection of Barcus.
“SIR GALAHAD OF THE TWILIGHT”
(American—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

This is a most admirable picture of an interesting and plausible drama, the scenes of which are laid in the forests of the great Northwest. The play hinges upon the unselfish love of Jacques Lennaux, a big-hearted, honest trapper, for Clotilde, a tangle-haired, dreamy-eyed daughter of the North.

Through the perfectly logical development of the plot are dispersed enough exciting incidents to hold the attention from start to finish. The many beautiful forest scenes reproduced by excellent photography would alone be sufficient to place this picture far above the ordinary.

Clotilde weaves a chain of romance around the picture of Watt’s Sir Galahad, which she has run across, near a deserted lumber camp. She knows not what it means, but it expresses her ideal man. Jacques she loves with the devotion of a little, trusting sister, while Jacques loves her with all the passion of the forest. At her father’s deathbed—such is her father’s dying wish—they are married.

She is happy, until one day her Sir Galahad appears in the guise of a strange young trapper. Dick, the stranger, chivalrously befriends her in an hour of need. Later, he saves the life of Jacques, who is returning from a visit.

A note from Clotilde to Dick falls into the hands of Jacques, and shows him the true situation. His jealousy is conquered by his big, better nature, and in order that he may no longer stand between Clotilde and happiness, he sacrifices his own life, thereby proving himself the real Sir Galahad of the Twilight. The personality of Vivian Rich is particularly suited to the role of Clotilde, and she plays it with much charm and freshness. The other parts are most convincingly rendered by a cast including Harry Von Meter, William Garwood, Jack Richardson, Perry Banks, and Reaves Eason.

DAYTON EXHIBITORS WILL FIGHT FOR LOWER ELECTRICITY RATE
Special to Motion Picture News

Dayton, O., Oct. 21.

NEGOTIATIONS between a special committee from the Dayton exhibitors’ league and officials of the local power and light company, relative to the securing of a better rate for light and power for motion picture houses, has proven fruitless. In reply to the exhibitors’ protest that there should be a uniform, reasonable rate to the motion picture shows, the lighting company has declared that the state laws prevent them from discriminating in favor of the exhibitors and now declines to take any action in the matter.

The complaint of the exhibitors has been that the rate varies from 2 to 9 cents. Members of the league say they are preparing slides which will be thrown on the screen in support of the proposed local bond issue for a municipal lighting plant, which proposition is to be voted on at the general election, November 3.

“THE TREY O’ HEARTS”
(Gold Seal—Thirteenth Chapter)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

If the principals of the cast were expecting something unlucky to befall them, as this is the thirteenth episode of the thrilling serial, they had ample ground for their fears, if they knew just the variety of stunts the script contained for them to perform. “The Jaws of Death” just as a descriptive title could be employed, defines, only partially, the substance of the two reels.

To say that the events staged are hair raising seems almost too weak; to say that they are death defying seems nearer their correct nature. But it is not the events alone that are wholly responsible for the numerous thrills that put in their appearance in this number.

It is the remarkably clever manner in which they are staged, that keeps one in continual suspense, so that when the event which has been so cleverly led up to occurs, the spectator will have to be thirsty for sensation indeed, if he has not had enough.

When the chapter has gained headway, and after the usual synopsis has appeared, followed by a few introductory scenes, Alan, Barcus and Rose are seen crossing a deep gorge, by means of a bridge, suspended from the two banks by ropes.

Marrophat and another of Trine’s party follow them. When the first party has arrived at an old mine, Alan returns to destroy the bridge in order to cut off pursuit. He has partially severed one of the ropes when he is made the captive of Marrophat, and made prisoner in an old mine together with Rose and Barcus.

Marrophat’s fiendish plan is to dawn the three of them by turning on the water and flooding the mine, which plan he straightaway follows out. Then Judith enters, bent on saving Alan from destruction. She steps on the bridge, is half way across, and then—no it doesn’t happen—then, a flash back shows the rope sliding coming apart under the strain, another flash shows Alan, Rose and Barcus up to their necks in water, another flash, shows the fuse of a bomb placed in the mine rapidly burning, then another scene of the rope, and then a glimpse of Judith, just as the bridge has broken, and she has grasped the remaining rope as a last resort.

We leave her swinging in midair and return to the other three who are all but exhausted, then the bomb explodes, tearing a hole in their prison and they are saved.

Judith manages to reach the side of the gorge in safety, and after a few supplementary scenes the installment is over—but, and the word is accepted, if you think that the other chapters were thrilling, just wait.

JUDITH AND TRINE IN LAW’S POWER
THE COUNTY CHAIRMAN
(Famous Players-Paramount-Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

It is rather strange when one stops to think of it, but the old plays that amused and entertained the audiences of former times still retain a strong hold on the patrons of the silent drama. Recently there has been a considerable number of past stage successes reproduced in motion pictures. If any of them don’t take there is something radically wrong with the people, not with the pictures.

But there is no conceivable apparent reason why "The County Chairman" will not be a huge success. It certainly ought to be and judging from the warm receptions it has already received, it will be.

Considering the picture from every side, it is perfect enough for the most critical. Written by George Ade, produced by Henry W. Savage, and acted by a cast headed by Maclyn Arbuckle, the three most important angles of the play are well taken care of. And photography, lighting, scenes, and the rest of the acting, even to the host of supernumeraries employed are as near perfection as has ever been reached.

George Ade’s works have been seen on the screen before, and have been universally acclaimed as very funny. This picture, a mixture of comedy and drama, is destined to even greater success, due to its many merits.

Maclyn Arbuckle, who carries the title role of Jim Hackler, played the same part in the stage production and has therefore a perfect understanding of it; his acting is not to be criticized, as he plays his role of the jovial, yet severe county chairman in excellent style. Willis P. Sweetnam as Sassafras Livingston, the old colored servant, gives a good account of himself. Harold Lockwood, whose face is well known in Famous Players pictures, plays the part of the lover and the partner of Hackler in his usual brisk style.

William Lloyd as Elias Rigby, the rival candidate, is the villain of the play and a good one. The rest of the cast, Daisy Robinson, Helen Aubrey, Mahel Wilbur, Amy Summers and Wellington A. Player give a correspondingly good account of themselves.

THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY
(Townshouse-Eighteenth Episode)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

From the very outset of this startling story it has been obvious that no money was spared on the magnificence scenes that demanded it. The film possesses a distinctive individuality in regard to this end of the producing, and it is well that it does, as however well attired and imposing the players are, they will appear out of place if the sets have been neglected or left to take care of themselves.

But no such fault can be charged against the producers of "The Million Dollar Mystery," and here in this chapter the magnificence of the sets and the gorgeousness of the dress of the people that move about in them will be noticed by all. A ball is staged in the princess’ house, who happens to be a member of the Black Hundred, and the main ball room which is the background for not a few scenes looks the part to perfection.

To make the spectacle all the more imposing, the ball in progress is a costume affair, and all manner of elegantly arrayed personages are seen to be moving to and fro. Flo and Jim are also present at this ball, as the princess was forced by the countess to invite them. They are attired in the old Colonial style of dress. Braine and the countess come clothed in exactly the same kind of costumes, and their plan which works wonderfully well for a pace, is to kidnap Florence and lock her in a room of the house. This they do. Jim goes home to look for her after he has waited for some time. Not finding her he comes back to the ball, with Jones, the butler.

Florence in an upper room is threatened with death by being blown to atoms by a bomb if she doesn’t disclose the whereabouts of the million. She is protesting her ignorance of the matter when a premature explosion of the bomb sets the house on fire.

This forms a thrilling spectacle, and Jim after entering the burning house to rescue his fiancée, is forced to descend via a rope after she has gone before. Safely away from the burning house the second reel of "Trapped by the Flames" comes to a close, and will be sure to leave the audience in the same state of wonderment that has followed each episode.

“IN THE GLARE OF THE LIGHTS”
(Review—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY C. J. VERHALEN

This three reel production, adapted from the story of the same name running in the Ladies’ World, was released on October 17. This is the second of the prize stories containing the missing chapter.

Bushman again plays the lead in his inimitable style. His role, however, this time, is that of a young mill worker who is ambitious to become an actor. Some very splendid views of steel mills are shown with the roaring and red-hot furnaces illuminating the pitch darkness.

One especially exciting scene is the sight in close proximity to tanks containing molten metal. A very good cast has been provided, which includes Lillian Drew as the other lead. Miss Drew does some very good work in the interpretation of the role she assumes. Harry Dunkinson as Corrigan is to be commended. Other well known players are Helen Dunbar, Beverly Bayne and Lester Cuneo.

Glen Duval, a worker in the steel mills, desires to become an actor. Brandigan, who is working in the same mill, is jealous of Glen because of the fact that Joe’s sweetheart, Martha, appears to like young Duval too much.

One morning on his way to work Glen finds the unconscious form of Wanda Dawson, the actress, by the railroad track. That evening, when Glen returns from the mill, he tells Wanda of his ambitions for the stage. She encourages him, and later Wanda’s manager appears and engages him as an actor. Glen falls in love with Wanda, is afraid to declare it because his position is so much below hers. One evening Bland is unable to appear. The manager seizes on Glen as a last resort. Glen’s work is a great success.

Bland offers Wanda the chance to start in another produc-

“THE MIDNIGHT RIDE OF PAUL REVERE” (Review—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURR

Much of the interest in this picture is due to the fact that it is a reissue of a film made ten years ago. Much has been written about the startling advances of the film industry and art during the past ten years, and most of it is correct, yet this ten-year-old film seems quite the equal of many of the most modern.

One of the most difficult things which confronts the motion picture producer is the staging of a film depicting Colonial days in such a way as to give an effect of realism. For some reason it seems a particularly hard age to depict, and the very latest pictures of the sort show this just as much as older ones.

For this reason it is interesting to note the considerable success which the producer of this picture has made in the matter of obtaining a convincing atmosphere. He did his work ten years ago, but he knew what he was doing and how to do it.

The film is the story of Paul Revere’s ride, and the historical details as far as known were carefully followed.

“LOVE AND SURGERY”
(L. K.—Universal—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

We have seen all varieties and brands of slapstick comedy that the market of today offers, but “Love and Surgery” contains more slapstickism, so to speak, than all the rest.

The L. K. is a new brand added to the many now under the Universal banner, and if more follow and come up to the standard set by this, they will establish a name for themselves, a name to be smiled at whenever it be heard.

Slapstick comedies have for some time been great favorites with some people, but, like all great favorites, they have those who do not look upon them in such a favorable light. The farcical burlesque elements of this picture will be enjoyed to their fullest extent by most of the male audiences. And by those who do not mind the extreme rough work, perhaps a little suggestive in its roughest moments, a warm welcome will be awaiting the picture.

Henry Pathe Lehrman is the director and second leading man of this picture and Billy Richie is the star to whom the final honor of creating laughs must be allotted. But it is the ingenuity of the director that conceived the plan and to him must go a great amount of praise.

As is usual with this variety of picture, there is no plot; if there is, it will be completely obliterated in the mass of uproarious events brick throwing, punching, running, darting falls, diving through walls and roofs, flirting, shooting and countless other varieties of furnishing hilarity are linked together in this picture with such startling rapidity that he will be a morose individual indeed who is not aching and crying from laughter at the end of the farce.

BLAND MAKES HIS AVOWAL

SPOKANE REVOKES BAN ON WAR FILMS

Spokane, Oct. 19.

The official ukase, barring the exhibition in local theatres of pictures dealing with the European war, has been revoked. Mayor W. J. Hindley, who is city theatre censor, has sent a letter to the theatre managers with the information that he has reconsidered his original order.
“WHEN BROADWAY WAS A TRAIL”
(Word Film—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

Not many pictures have been produced dealing with the city of New York when it was in its infancy, and this offering which takes us back to the days of Peter Minuet, or to be more accurate Henry Minuet, his son, who lived and loved in 1626 or thereabouts, will be warmly received by the motion picture public.

Most New Yorkers and those who have visited the city will take great pleasure in seeing how their forefather’s lived in the same locale that now boasts of the only and unparalleled Broadway.

Aside from its freshness in regard to time and place, the picture is plainly the finished effort of a competent director, assisted by an equally competent cast, which he himself leads.

MINUET REFUSES TO DEFEND HIMSELF

O. A. C. Lund is the director, and on the whole he has made an admirable picture, one that is bound to please.

Mr. Lund himself appears as Henry Minuet, the son of Peter, the governor of Manhattan, who after several severe trials and misfortunes is at last happily united with Priscilla, a Puritan maid from Danvers. This character is played by Barbara Tennant, who is well suited to the part.

Peter Minuet is played by Edward Roseman. Salvation Hibbens, Henry’s puppy rival is carried off by Lindsay J. Hall. Alec B. Francis in the role of Hope, the mayor of Danvers, is as good as ever. Mary Navarre gives an excellent characterization of the strict Puritanical housewife in the role of Mistress Hibbens. Julia Stuart appears as Mistress Minuet, and George Cowl as the chief of the Iroquis Indians.

The progress of the story is rather slow but hardly ever tiring, and the incidental scenes, the escape from the prison, continued through an underground passage, seething with furious waters, and the attacking and massacring of a band of whites by the redskias, together with a number of others of the same thrilling variety, will not allow the interest to falter.

We have seen better artificial snow—or is it mist—than that which falls in “bunches” in the latter reel, but this seems to be the only fault that the average person will notice. Some of the exterior scenes are obviously sets, but this is quite pardonable, as it would have caused great trouble to erect an entire village.

RICHARDSONS WON BY CALIFORNIA SCENERY

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Oct. 19.

The Richardsons, of the American Film Manufacturing Company, have taken a larger house on Anacapa street, Santa Barbara, Cal., and are finding fresh inspirations in the glorious sunsets, which they are able to see from their studio windows.

Mrs. Richardson says that she never so fully appreciated the beauty of Santa Barbara before.

“A CHANGE OF HEART”
(Pathe—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

This film presents a fine story which is not new, but in real life is all too rare. This gives it interest, while its value as an attraction is added to by good setting and fine photography.

The events of the story are not such as demand anything spectacular in the line of scenes, but they do require care to obtain natural results. In this the producers have been entirely successful. M. O. Penn and Thurlow Bergen play the principal roles in a creditable manner.

The story tells of a young man of good family who had fallen in with a bunch of get-rich-quick men. They planted a fine office for the purpose of robbing in the unawary.

A dear old lady from the country comes and buys their worthless stock with $5,000, which represents her life savings. The young man is so affected by the old lady’s remarks about his mother that he takes her money from his companions at the point of a gun and returns it to her.

“THE PERILS OF PAULINE”
(Kelso—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

Many and various are the adventures which beset an heiress under any circumstances, but when she is brought into daily contact with a man who will inherit her fortune in case of her death, and who is entirely unsuspicious it is small wonder that her path is beset with danger.

There have been many thrills in the career of Pauline, as already shown on the screen, but in this episode her life is menaced in a new and terrible way. Her desperate enemy makes another of his ingenious attempts to dispose of her in a manner which will leave him entirely free from suspicion.

There are not so many thrilling scenes in this as have occurred in some of the earlier installments. In fact, the only one which is at all out of the ordinary is that in which the hero rides a motorcycle off the end of a pier. However, there is good photographic work, and the acting done by Pearl White is effective. Her part during the time when she is supposed to be a victim of disease is one that is difficult to handle without making it seem ridiculous, but she has avoided that element successfully.

THE DOG KNOWS A VILLAIN

The story relates how Owen had his hired villain steal some disease germs from a laboratory of a specialist. These caused a person infected to seek to submerge himself in water, doubtless causing a mental attitude similar to that of rats after partaking the brand of poison specially provided for them. Owen puts this culture of germs on some of Pauline’s candy, and then does all he can to prevent her recovery. He even hires a fake doctor, but Harry wins out and Pauline’s life is saved.
Laemmlle Family, Stranded in War Zone, Home
Maurice Fleckles, Armed with Passports from High Officials, Penetrates Lines and Rescues Wife and Children of Universal President

President Carl Laemmle, of the Universal Film Company, recently received a cablegram from Rotterdam which informed him that Maurice Fleckles succeeded in obtaining the release of Mrs. Laemmle, Mrs. Fleckles and the two Laemmle children, Julius and Rosabelle, who were detained in Germany since the beginning of hostilities.

This greatly relieves the tension, inasmuch as nothing had been heard from them for over a month. The party sailed from Rotterdam on October 15, and arrived in New York on the twenty-fifth on the Holland-American liner, "Rotterdam."

Eaco Films Will Release Through Craft
Strand Film Company Gets Contract, Winik London Agent—Single Reel Comedies and Three-Reel Features Planned—Other Details

The Eaco Films, with Edwin August as their star, have signed contracts with P. P. Craft, the head of The Apex Film Company, with offices in the West Forty-Fifth Street Exchange Building, New York City, to handle exclusively the Eaco releases in the United States and Canada through the Strand Film Company channels, and likewise with J. Simmonds, who represents Mr. H. Winik, of 35 Little Newport street, London, W., England, who will control the foreign rights.

Mr. Fleckles left the office of the Universal nearly a month ago, well supplied with American gold, his mission being to find the Laemmle party, who were in Flieiden, the birthplace of Mrs. Laemmle. During his absence no communication reached the anxious relatives on this side, save for a cablegram.

He carried with him passports signed by the American Secretary of State and Daniel Von Haimhausen, charge d'affaires in Washington, as well as personal letters of introduction from Hon. William Jennings Bryan to the American diplomatic and consular officers of the United States and Europe.

Biarker Learned Business From the Ground Up
O. W. Biarker, of Copenhagen, who made the acquaintance of David Horsley while traveling in this country, and finally became associated with the Cen taur Film Company, learned the busi-NESS FROM THE GROUND UP IN THE BAYONNE, N. J., FACTORY.

He started in the developing room. After that he worked his way through every department, learning every phase of this intricate business.

Later on he was appointed traveling representative of Mr. Horsley and visited every city of importance in the United States and Canada, establishing offices for the Lumiere stock, of which Mr. Horsley holds the American rights.

Returning to New York, Mr. Biarker was placed in charge of the main office of Lumiere, and during the last year has been sales manager of the commercial department of the Cen taur Film Company, whose mammoth plant at Bayonne does a developing, printing and title business amounting to upwards of a million and a quarter feet of film each week.

Kelcey and Shannon in "Salt of the Earth"
Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon have been selected by Winthrop Ames to play the leading parts in Alice Brown's prize play, "Salt of the Earth." Those two popular stars are very much in evidence before the public just now in the Photo Drama Company's magnificent production, "After the Ball," taken from Charles K. Harris' famous song and produced under the direction of Pierce Kingsley.

Steiner and Maher report that "After the Ball" receipts surpass all expectations.

EDWIN AUGUST IN "A MILLIONAIRE DETECTIVE"
First Release of the Eaco Films through the Strand Film Company

It is also the intention of Mr. August to do down to Bermuda for a series of mythical photoplays in which he will play the principal roles. For special releases, well-known plays and widely read novels will be picturized, in which Mr. August will appear as well as directing the production.
in a flourishing business. The old trouble commences again. Wallace Beery, Leo White and Betty Brown play the leads.

"Why the Sheriff Is a Bachelor." (Selig, Tues., Oct. 27.)—This is a Tom Mix picture with plenty of action and an interesting story. Tom in the discharge of his official duties is the greatest interest to his brother of his sweetheart, whom he is soon to marry. She pleads with him to release her brother but duty compels him to take him to jail. The girl refuses to marry him because of this.

"The Wasp." (Selig, Wed., Oct. 28.)—A detective drama of the "blue flame" variety. Same splendid characterizations. It shows how some good situations and detective work of an interesting character. W. V. K. Smith, a political boss, tries to besmirch the character of the independent young woman candidate by implicating her father of his. His plan, however, fails, and he is badly whipped at the polls at election.

"The Grate. Impenetrable Sirius." (Selig, Thurs., Oct. 28.)—A splendid comedy enacted by children. Parents and other_companions play their town. They do everything that one might expect from a town clow in an amiable way. Elsie Greewan as the prime mover in this successful comedy is very convincingly. The real elephant finally joins their race and opens the "Dime Show," a carnival show, followed by a crowd of the villagers who bring prosperity to the deserted aggregation.

"At the Transfer Center." (Selig, Fri., Oct. 31.)—A comedy that finally settles dually so laughingly that it gives him his consent to the marriage of his son to what he terms a flirt, and also brings him under the charms of the flirt's mother. The young couple's return from Europe with their "sur- prise," are all so well put over by one better by dad who plays a pair of twins.

"The Lost Melody." (Edison, Wed., Oct. 28.)—A touching drama of a musician who is located with quarrelsome relatives. He finally settles up politics by a couple of smooth talking bosses and loses all of his money after being assured by the "dream book" that he will win. Thomas Commerford as the politician is all that one might wish in the part.

"Snakeville and the Corset Demonstrator." (Essanay, Thurs., Oct. 29.)—The male inhabitants of Snakeville are all upset by the arrival of a corset demonstrator in their town. The young bachelor does not find favor with the ladies because he is the swain that pay court to her. A funny picture with the entire cast. Phillips, Sophie Clotts, Slippery Slim and all.

"Broncho Billy's Mother." (Essanay, Sat., Oct. 31.)—Broncho Billy, the sad man of the town, terrorizes the village. He is arrested, but his mother arrives as they are to take him to prison—one of the most entertaining scenes on the lot. A plot that has been overworked.

"Shorty." (Edison, Tues., Nov. 3.)—A good drama of a sea captain of a diamond ship, which is frustrated by a bright cabin boy. There is a touch of the excellent comedy supplied by Edward O'Connor. The others in the cast are also good.

"Jenkins and the Janitor." (Edison, Wed., Nov. 4.)—On the same reel with one of the Buster Brown comedies. It is a rather entertaining story, a man who gave a suit of his clothes to the janitor, and as a result the janitor had troubles of his own. May Abbey and Dan Mason are in the cast.

"Getting to the Ball Game." (Edison, Sat., Nov. 7.)—Not a story but a series of events showing a man who faked to get to the ball field in time.

"With Slight Variations." (Edison, Mon., Nov. 9.)—A rather good burlesque of the famous eighty-day's around the world. The story of Terrible cannibals and other wild creatures are featured. Frank Williams, Frank Lyons and William Walmouth.

"The Heritage of Hamilton Creek." (Essanay, Tues., Nov. 10.)—Last picture of the series. The detective's bride is kidnapped on her wedding day, but Creek rescues her. On her return to the town that by death she wins a throne, but declines to accept. Ben Wilson, Tavlor. McCoy with the usual supporting cast appear.

"A Question of Identity." (Two reels, Vitagraph, Nov. 10.)—Another version of the story, "The Window that Monsoon Forgot" by Mary Inday Taylor. The story is fairly good, but marred by the large number of variations from anything which could possibly take place in a single good day. This picture will please the average audience. Among the cast are Ade Calhoun, Bessie Lear, Anthony Stevens, Frank Moss, Mabel Trutelle, Edward Earle and William West. It is a story of a man who has been wrongfully sentenced to death, but is proved innocent of a murder committed by his brother. A few of the stars of this picture are Stillman, Emily, Myrtle and Alva Kirk.

"The Bond of Womanhood." (Lubin, Two reels, Wed., Oct. 14.)—Nell, the wife of a wealthy man, leaves him on account of his questionable associations. Mary, the wife of a poor man, is deserted by her drunken brute of a husband. The two women meet through an automobile accident to the former, and as the result of circumstances, there arise sympathy springs up between them. Unknown to each other, each sets out to try to induce the other's husband to come home. The story is good, and the part which the poor man by appealing to his sense of duty, husband and father, giving him the information that he is a father to one of the girls. His wife is his only burden. In the cast are Dorothy Calhoun, Bessie Larner, Alva Kirk, and the fair Girls. The scenario is by Shannon Fin. Justina Huff and William Cobbi are the other stars. Joe Snell and Lillie Leslie are the poor couple. John Snell and Eleanor Vanhorn take part. The work of all of these is very good. The photography is hazy in spots.

"Fatty's Sweetheart." (Vitagraph, Fri., Oct. 16.)—A rural comedy utilizing the familiar situation of fake thieves being captured by real ones, and in turn capturing real ones who suppose to be fake. Hughie Mack is Fatty, and others in the cast are Lucile Lee, Tod Talford, Ralph Ince and Charles Eldridge.

"The Long Lane." (Lubin, Fri., Oct. 16.)—A man loses his sweetheart because he is believed dead at the result of his rival's act. Seven years after her marriage her now brutal husband comes to a town, and she works her former lover. In the cast are Dolly Larkin, John Frances, William Parace, Joseph Carle and Janie Powell.

"Tell Tale Knife." (Selig, Tues., Nov. 3.)—An exceptionally interesting and well produced western drama. The story of the identity of a castle rustler is disclosed through the use of a magic mirror. A pistol fight in a saloon follows. The rustler gets away, only to run down and killed after the most vividly exciting finale. The picture contains lots of real fighting, and unusually good acting.

"C. D." (Selig, Wed., Nov. 4.)—A very interesting civil war drama of the "Blue Fold" variety. A love story is woven through a United States secret service agent's exciting experiences in reporting important news by telegraph—Stella Katero and Guy Devine send many such messages."

No Wedding Bells for Her. (Selig. Fri., Nov. 6.)—Norval MacGregor puts over another sentimental-gambole-film. He utilizes many ridiculous situations the victim dines and justice triumphs. She is married to the villain comes out of the visit.

The Losing Fight. (Selig. Sat., Nov. 7.)—Kitty, the belle of a fishing village, 775 away from her home comes to Washington, where he becomes infatuated with a cue- stick, but not too much. Eddie Lyons and Linda Huntley, two lovers, meet, but the villain spys on him and finally the picture comes out that the couple have been married.

Lights and Shadows. (Rex. Two reels. Nov. 8.)—This story is slightly too long, and the picture and too much time is covered. The ending is abrupt and the story leaves the audience with an unsatisfactory outcome. Pauline Bush, Lon Chaney, Beatrice Tatterson, William Dodge, and Karl Struss. After a lengthy introductory we see a young girl who has fallen in love with the leading man of the theatrical company, and after the leading lady has done her best to ruin the love affair, they are seen to depart together in a cab.

That's the Hills. (Powers. Fri., Nov. 8.)—For the reason that the woman once befriended her, she will let her rob her husband, go, who was justified in his attempted return. Will Mason leads the cast of this pleasant drama.

The Mysterious Rose. (101 Bison. Two reels, Sat., Nov. 7.)—Another one of the Keaton-MacGregor comedies. Francis Ford and a large supporting cast. All the wonders of the world are seen in this picture, and the district attorney's son, who threatened to kill himself and his mother, finally marries her with her affections. A great fight is staged, as usual most realistic, but the final outcome is left to the discretion of the audience. Rough slapstick work throughout.

The Fatal Marriage. (L. K. O. Sun., Nov. 9.—Two competent players are used. There is a young woman whom they want to marry to some misguided person, but they are unsuccessful after a younger and prettier girl puts in her appearance and wins the attention of the audience. A comic chase is the feature of the picture in which some acrobatic work is performed. Rough slapstick action marks the entire reel.

The Desperado. (Broncho. Two reels. Wed., Nov. 4.)—A picture showing an old man with a developing romance. It is said to be the worst kind of a desperado. The story is taken in to the old man and the young woman, the female is the best, and as that suspense and interest are always kept at the highest.

Stout Heart But Weak Knees. (Keystone. Mon., Nov. 8.)—Two comedians according to the uproarious Keystone notice are the chief characters in the story. They are fun makers in every sense of the word and the picture will keep one in continual laughter.

Shot in the Excitement. (Keystone. Mon., Oct. 26.)—We don't know just exactly where the "excitement" is, but from the picture it could be taken that the eyes of the human anatomy. Shooting, falling and throwing consume the greater part of the picture, and we are left with nothing but a few weird gags. Usually especially when a ridiculously slow cannon ball is aimed in junge of a garter, it provokes a laugh.

Left in the Train. (Thompson. Sun., Oct. 18.)—The reconciliation of the girl and her father comes when the former's child is left at the station, the former being 현 by his two grand nieces. A very pretty story with the Thompson twins and the Kiblet play important parts.

Persistent Lovers. (Crysta. Tues., Oct. 27.)—The plot of this story is quite good, the effects that were trite at Coney Island, are new here. Best of all the story is portrayed, and the self on the various conundrums that the hero faces, and he is a hard horse with a humorous reel, which could be better.

GoverNMENT Installs 60
POWERS MACHINES
That the practical value of the motion picture is thoroughly appreciated by the various departments of the United States Government has been amply proved by the use made of it in many ways. No departments make more extensive use of the screen, however, than do those of the Army and Navy.

In those two departments alone, there have been installed over sixty Powers cameragraph motion picture projection machines. They have been placed at West Point and at Annapolis, in the principal army posts throughout the country, and on a number of battleships, where they are used not only for entertainment purposes, but for instruction in military and naval tactics.
Among the most recent of these installations have been machines on the battleships Utah and Montana.

ROSSKAM HAS NARROW ESCAPE
IN AUTO ACCIDENT
While Edward M. Roskam, president of
was driving along the Palisades with the superintendent of the laboratory, Charles Hirliman, his automobile became unmanageable and skidded, sending the two thousand pound machine over a ten-foot embankment.

Luckily the machine did not turn turtle, and Mr. Hirliman, with presence of mind, shut off the motor, stopping the machine ten feet from the edge of the Palisades.

Although the machine is a total wreck, neither Mr. Roskam nor Mr. Hirliman received any injuries.
Mr. Roskam says he now owes his life, as well as the wonderful laboratory work the Life Photo Film Corporation and the Commercial Motion Pictures Company are obtaining, to Charlie.

TRADE CONDITIONS REVIEW SHOWS HEALTHY PROSPERITY THROUGHOUT COUNTRY

Pictures Cut Into Seattle Vaudeville
Special to Motion Picture News
Seattle, Oct. 19.

THE motion picture condition in Seattle as compared with last May is much more favorable. Patronage is better, houses that were having a hard time to "get by" at that time are now paying nicely, and those that were doing well then are doing almost as well as before.

One thing stands out prominently, and that is the fact that no catch-penny schemes, country store ideas or free admission stunts of any kind are used by any of the theatres here, and there are no cut-throat policies used either as to prices charged for admissions or in the number of reels used or number of changes per week.

All of the first-class houses; in fact, all of the regular downtown theatres, are charging bills but twice weekly and showing just five reels of film. That, of course, does not include a few "store shows" who change oftener and run old stuff at a nickel.

The theatres are changing but once a week, running each program for seven days at the rate of eight shows daily. These two theatres are using Paramount programs and getting 20 cents downstairs and 10 cents in the balcony, both afternoon and evening. Five specially-constructed neighborhood shows charge a dime and change four times a week.

Exhibitors claim that the quality of all of the regular programs has decreased. The main objection seems to be that the stories are either impossible or the dramatic interest is lacking. A good two-part drama seems hard to get as a regular thing. A lack of good, clean-cut comedies is complained of.

The exchanges do absolutely nothing for the theatres except supply the film.

Another thing that has its effect on the regular theatre is the fact that the two legitimate houses are in the habit of showing feature films on "dark" weeks.

Motion picture patronage has cut into the vaudeville business as well as the legitimate to a very noticeable extent. Exhibitors seem to feel that the features are held too high by the exchanges.

Baltimore Theatres Unite to Raise Prices
Special to Motion Picture News
Baltimore, Oct. 21.

THE first steps toward a general advance in the price of admission to motion-picture theatres to 10 cents, in Baltimore, have been taken by a number of the leading theatres in the centre parts of the city.

Ten of the most prominent shopping district theatrical managers have entered into an agreement by which they agree to charge 10 cents each Saturday. This agreement goes into effect on Saturday, October 24. It is generally felt that the plan will be a big success, but in order to hold those who may become dissatisfied with the proposition, the agreement binds the exhibitor to charge 10 cents for four consecutive Saturdays only, to give the plan a fair tryout.

There are only two theatres in the shopping district which charge 10 cents admission every day. Several of the larger houses that have not been included in the agreement above mentioned have been running a special Saturday show for which 10 cents has been charged.

Many of the exhibitors have felt for a long time that with the advanced price in film rentals, as well as material used in operating picture houses, it is necessary, in order to give the best production on the market, to charge an increased admission. It is felt here that the advance in Saturday's increased admission will be followed in the very near future by a general increase in price for the entire week.

With this move on the part of the picture exhibitors, it makes a much more attractive field in Baltimore for the special feature proposition. Practically every house that charges ten cents will book special features on Saturday.

“WHATSOEVER A WOMAN SOWETH”
(Essay—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY G. J. VERHALEN

ONE of those photoplays with a world of human interest in which the entire action lays very close to nature. As the film unwinds you become more and more engrossed. The story is compelling and makes you wait anxiously each coming incident.

It has none of the melodramatic in it, but is a clean, wholesome tale which might happen in every-day life. It has its sympathetic moments when you feel a lump rising in your throat. That part of the story which is contained in the first reel strikes you as being a strong man’s play, showing his ambition, his sympathy for his fellow man.

The second reel continues along the same line but brings out the characteristics of a woman to a greater degree. Gerda Holmes plays a splendid part in her interpretation of Pauline. Her acting, always admirable, is brought out more strongly in its finer parts in this role.

Richard Traverse, in the part of Robert Caldwell, plays a splendid role in a convincing manner.

The date of the marriage of Pauline Marlowe and Robert Caldwell has been set. A few days before the wedding, Robert’s father is proven to be an embezzler, and it is a great question in Pauline’s mind whether she shall marry Robert, despite the fact that his name is blackened, or whether she should face the comments of the unsympathetic public.

She decides to turn from him and afterwards marries another, only to find that her married life is unhappy.

Don’t Be Alarmed About CARBONS

[Columns]

Unscrupulous speculators are still shouting “CARBON FAMINE” and trying to scare exhibitors into paying as high as fifteen dollars per hundred for 3/8 x 12 carbons—an increase of over four hundred per cent.

We have endeavored to protect you against this extortion by offering to divide our limited stock at the old prices among those shows which were in danger of closing, but our announcement probably did not reach every one.

We are beginning to get returns from our increased equipment and by the time this goes to press, we will be in position to take care of all exhibitors who are short on carbons, if they do not come at us too strong.

We have made no advance in price, but we reserve the right to cut any order to five hundred or less in case our stock does not warrant filling larger orders.

Universal Bog, No. 9.” (Imp, Thurs., Nov. 3.)—Universal's second appeal for peace is aerto-heroic dealing with an old Frenchman and his live-long neighbor, a German. They almost come to blows over the war, but are prevented by their children, who are in love. The plot is in the two dialects. The story would be better if condensed. Ben Wilson and Frances Nel- son are the lovers.

The Wall of Flame.” (Nestor, Tues., Oct. 27.)—The forest fire scenes in this picture are excellent and the rescue of the wife of the chief by an old buffalo hunter makes a fine story. Murdock MacQuarrie and Ag- nes Vernon are in the leads.

White Roses.” (Rex, Thurs., Oct. 29.)—Lee Moran and Fred Mac- dyth play the leads in this comedy, which contains less slapstick work than usual with this brand. Lee teaches her sweet- heart to write verses by telling a lie in his in- quaintances to keep away from her. Very laughable and well acted.

Noad's Addless Day.” (Joker, Wed., Oct. 28.)—Edward Keane in the leading part will create a big hit. He plays the part of a man much adverse to advertising. In his efforts he discovers how valuable adver- tising is.

A Daughter of the Redskins.” (101 Bison. Two reels, Sat., Oct. 31.)—Played by William Clifford, Marie Walcamp, Sherman Rain- bridge and Val Pal. The old Indian and his daughter are driven from the village because he will not consent to his daughter's marriage to Wanana, the chief. Later the girl's father is killed by a bandit, and it is assumed that her lover did the deed, which leads to a fight between him and Wanana, in which the latter is victorious and says claim to the girl.

"Self-Defense." (Imp. Two reels, Thurs., Oct. 30.)—A novel and complete story directed by Herbert Brenon and played by William Stay, Crawford Hohb, Hobart Hen- ley and William Welsh. Beautiful scenery to match the story. The story is a typical picture of lake fishing. Bob, a detective, is engaged; his fiancée is insulted by Tom, a gambler. He is permitted to have a good time until the fri- ght gets on the job and finally Hobart confesses that he and Bob are going to go free when his story is told. A noticeable inconsistency is a dead man breathing deeply.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Sweet and Low." (American, Wed., Oct. 27.)—A tale of an old man on a park bench. She reminds him of his little girl, whom he lost at the time of her father's death, while she was away in the gold fields of Alaska. The child takes the old man home, where, of course, he discovers his own, long lost daughter, as the mother of the little girl. A touching story, with especially good juvenile acting by William Garwood and Vi- vian Rich are the principals.

"A Rude Awakening." (Beauty, Tues., Oct. 27.)—The husband is cured of night life and madam foolishness by a dream in which she is changed from a severe do- mestic into a coquettish lady, while there is a pro- voker of the center of attraction in the cafe and gambling room.

"Max's Money." (Royal, Sat., Nov. 7.)—A good story of the little man who inherits a fortune. A detective is looking for him to tell him he is a lawyer, but when Max has stolen some money, he tries to avoid the officer. Louis Simon is the prin- cipal.

"Back to the Kitchen." (Majestic, Fri., Oct. 16.)—The familiar story of a French chef attempting to pass himself off as a count. Rather well done, however, and containing many funny scenes. Dorothy Gil is the girl whom his heart seems to be after.

"The Revenue Officer's Deputy." (Reliance. Two reels, Sat., Oct. 17.)—A young man who is assisted by an officer of that organization is by no means lacking in courage when a real test comes. He is an assistant of a re- venue officer who is attempting to run down some moonshiners.

"Environment." (Majestic, Tues., Oct. 20.)—A story of a cowboy who goes after many of crooks and thieves. As a result of his environment, he gets well worked, and is easily persuaded to start a career of crime. That his end is not worse is not his fault.

"In the Open." (American, Wed., Oct. 21.)—A story of a cowman and Mexicans in the old days. The former seeing a pretty Mexican girl being whipped by her stepfather rescues her, and then rescues her again when her father makes off with her. Vivian Rich and William Garwood are featured.

"For Her Father's Sins." (Majestic. Two reels, Sun., Oct. 18.)—A department store owner's daughter leaves home to become a working girl, and resorts to listening to her plea on behalf of his employees. She meets a settlement worker with whom she falls in love, and later reunites him with his lost sister. At risk of her life she saves the girl from death. Later she prevails upon her father to change his ways. There is a strong cast, including Billie West, Blanche Wallace Reid and Al Flohio.

"Out of the Deputy's Hands." (Reliance. Wed., Oct. 26.)—A story in which the man that he is looking for is in love with the same girl whom he wants to find. He discovers that he had shot a man for attacking the girl. He resigns as sheriff, and goes away without making any explanation. Frederick and Arthur Mackley are featured.

"The Touch of a Little Hand." (Princess, Fri., Oct. 16.)—The old but entertaining story of a hard hearted old man being warmed and changed because of a little girl; in this case his change of heart frees an innocent young man from jail. Boyd Marshall and Mayre Hall play the leads.

"Our Mutual Girl, No. 40." (Reliance, Mon. Oct. 19.)—A view of New York from the roof of the Flatiron Building starts this reel; later a view of 'Hollywood'establishment and inspects the latest in fashions. In the mean time, Baby Lily and the precious pin is cleared.

"The Black Hand." (Royal, Sat. Oct. 17.)—May be a story of the man who employs the Black Hand. He decides that he wants to live, and when a man who has been fighting the love leaves "black hand" marks all over the house, his fears will be apt to propitiate him.

"Old Jackson's Girl." (Thameshouse. Two reels, Tues. Oct. 28.)—This is a Western in which the characters are hardly well enough introduced to show much interest in their actions. The murderer who has thrown the blame of murder upon another, is apprehended at length and killed. The sheriff's pose lay- ing siege to wagon is that of an innocent man is hiding is a good series of scenes.

"The Love Thief." (Keystone. Thurs. Oct. 23.)—Chester Cookson appears in this little-different, in a very corny role. The sit-

WARNER'S FEATURES

"Prince Charlie." (Superba, Sun., Nov. 8.)—A laughable offering with Charlie De Renzy and his well known friend, Jack J.

A Noa's work, as a sailor Charlie is cast adrift on an island which is inhabited by hampered characters. After going through a number of funny experiences he arrives home, just in time to keep his wife from leaving him.

"Wung by Cooking."—Quite the contrary. The son wants to marry a young actress, and his father persuades him not to do so, persuades her to pose as such. Her cooking flirt is good in this and many laughs will be the result.

"His Wedding Day."—On this eventful day the young groom is pursued by his creditors and gets into all manner of difficulties which are for the most part funny. Finally, his worthless stocks turn out to be his and he is married amidst great rejoicing.

"Soul Mates." (Albuquerque.)—A merry little lac, in which Dot Farley and Buck Couters are the principals. Two homely creatures masquerade in good clothes, and get married before they have seen each other.

"As a Man Chooses." (Premier.)—The action is slightly too slow. The white man who is separated and then returns to his family and turns to his former sweetheart, but on second thought sees that it is his duty to remain with the Indian.

"The Green Eyed Monster." (Klacks' Komics.)—The ravings of a jealous husband who drives the major to his hotel. He attacks an innocent man and accuses him of flirting with his wife. Quite a little humor in this.

"Slim and the Mummy." (U. S. Film Corporation.)—Slim has to take the mummy's place and is hurled by the boys as a joke. Aside from the fact that the print shown seems slightly light struck this is a very desirable comedy.

"For His Brother's Crime." (Warner's.)—The rustler's brother takes his place and goes to prison in his stead for the love of the miscreant's wife. This is a fast western and one of the majors can talk.

"Nearly an Artist."—To win the girl her father over to his side the young man poses as a painter. The situations that follow will be liable to strike at all the humorous.

"The Vegetarians."—Before marrying the girl her lover wins her over from vegetarian-isim in a way which might be considered if the principals were better performers.

"Modern Sampson."—An old man sweats never to slave until his party is in his favor. His prospects office for him to joke and thereafter he is taken seriously. Quite an inexplicable situation. Rather humorous.

"The Imposters."—After an elopement the two lovers are met with by the girl's father in a way that is quite unusual. They go as caretakers for a house but when the mistress leaves they give a party. The mistress turns out to be the old man's sweetheart so all ends well.

“SAVING THE COLORS”
(Cosmofotofilm—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGRUN

THIS is another of the crop of war pictures. Whatever business may be crippled by England by war, a number of films seems to have been made since hostilities started which depend on the war for their ideas.

“Saving the Colors” is an example. The primary object of the picture seems to be to impress upon the English public the importance of enlisting and the cowardice of the men who do not respond to their country’s call. By making use of a number of scenes evidently made for earlier battle pictures the atmosphere of actual conflict is obtained.

The picture was made by the Regent company, under the direction of C. H. Weston, and the leading part is played by Jane Gail.

A wealthy young Englishman is thrown from his horse and badly hurt. A nurse, on her way to her home for a vacation, passes by and takes the injured man home.

She aids her mother in caring for him, and before he leaves she has fallen in love with her. After her return to the London hospital he continues to see her, and before long they are married.

The young husband is a well-meaning fellow, but has a lot of worthless friends, who lead him into foolish, not to say evil, society pastimes. His young wife, unused to their ways, quarrels with them, thus getting into her husband’s bad graces. When she learns that he is flirting with another woman she goes to the war as a nurse.

The husband regards her act as very silly and also laughs at his valet for enlisting. When his friends jeer at his wife he is averse, and, seeing his own cowardice, enlists. In a battle he saves the flag at enormous risk to himself and is badly wounded. He finds his wife among the nurses who care for him.

Mabel Taliaferro is the latest recruit to the screen world. Contracts have been signed between Miss Taliaferro and B. A. Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., whereby Miss Taliaferro will be seen in an early release of the Alco program.

The first picturization in which Miss Taliaferro will appear will be "The Three of Us," originally presented as a legitimate offering at the Madison Square theatre in the days of its latter prosperity. It is a work in the earlier style of Rachel Crothers and had a run in New York of more than two years. B. A. Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., expect to present Miss Taliaferro in other photo plays.

The Photo Drama Company of New York City makes the announcement that one Shaw has been using the name of A. E. Siegel, the Cleveland representative of the company, without authority, on heralds describing "After the Ball," produced by the Photo Drama Company.

The Photo Drama Company's representative in Wisconsin is Mr. Silberman, located at 401 Madison Building, Milwaukee, Wis., and the Illinois rights to "After the Ball" have been contracted for by the Photo Play Production Company, of Chicago.

Simon Calvin, manager of the New Joy Theatre, Pana, III., has just opened for business. The new house is modern and up to date, and seats three hundred people. Mr. Calvin expects to show only the best pictures.

3,500 AT PRIVATE EXHIBITION OF SECOND OZ PICTURE

The Oz Film Manufacturing Company recently gave a private exhibition of "His Majesty, the Scarecrow of Oz," in the auditorium of the Los Angeles Athletic Club.

Over thirty-five hundred people attended and enjoyed every foot of the photo extravaganza.

The general opinion seems to be that in this second picture, the Oz Film Manufacturing Company has turned out a picture far superior to the "Patchwork Girl of Oz," which is at present playing with such tremendous success throughout the country. Both pictures are capable of drawing immense crowds.

NEW DEPARTMENT FOR "NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER"

The ever increasing demand from leading theatres of the country who play the latest, and most prominent Broadway successes for Annette Kellermann in the seven-part photo play masterpiece, "Neptune's Daughter," has encouraged the Universal Film Manufacturing Company to establish a special booking department for the purpose of handling this increasing volume of business.

Past arrangements with the United Booking Offices or any other agencies have been terminated. "Neptune's Daughter" is reaping its greatest whirlwind of success from return bookings, thereby demonstrating unequivocally that this is one picture which really pleases the better class of theatre-goers.

Nine companies are now on tour and a tenth opens at the Metropolitan Opera House, St. Paul, on October 25. All inquiries for this attraction from unsold territory should be made direct to the Universal Booking Offices, 1600 Broadway, New York City.

Frank J. Rembusch presided. Opening speeches, explaining the movement, were made by J. W. Farnham, of the All Star Feature Corporation, and Carl Anderson, of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company. Tom Moore explained the manner in which the expositions of the electrical and automobile trades are held by the manufacturers in these other industries.

An open discussion participated in by practically all of the manufacturers present followed. The consensus of opinion was decidedly in favor of having the next exposition of the motion picture industry conducted by the manufacturers.

A great many letters from all over the country showing extreme interest in the movement were read by President Rembusch.

An organization committee was appointed and the meeting adjourned for four weeks.

Among those present were: William Wright, Kalem Company; Eugene F. Ligone, Rudolph Warditzer Company; Arthur James, Mutual Film Company; R. C. Decker, Robbins & Myers Company; Adolph Zukor, Famous Players Film Company; Jacob William Binder, National Board of Censorship; Samuel Goldfish, Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company; B. A. JANE COWL WITH ALL STAR

The All Star Feature Corporation has signed a contract that ensures to that company the services of Jane Cowl. Miss Cowl is to appear in the picturization of Eugene Walter's play "The Easiest Way," which will be released by the Aco Film Corporation. During the past year Miss Cowl has refused many offers from prominent moving picture concerns to appear on the film. Jane Cowl during her first season on the stage understood the part of Laura Murdoch.

"THE CRIMINAL CODE"
(Ballroom-Box Office—Your Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. FANGBURN

A MELODRAMA of unusual excellence. The plot possesses much more novelty than is often found in this type of picture, beside avoiding many of the situations which are so often present in melodrama.

Besides the plot, the general good sense which has been shown in producing the picture adds much to its attractiveness. Anyone who will study a film of this sort can see at a glance that many of the flagrant errors which frequently mar what might be excellent productions can be avoided very simply.

It does not require genius so much as it requires what is commonly called horse sense. In "The Criminal Code" it can be said that there is not a single setting which is not a good representation of whatever is supposed to be represented.

This, it need hardly be stated, partakes almost of the nature of a triumph. Even a large reception and dance at the home of a man of wealth and refinement is well staged amidst surroundings indicative of fairly good taste. The exteriors are as well handled. Full advantage has been taken of the California sunlight and scenery. Among the particularly striking views are those which show the hero fishing in a small stream.

William D. Taylor and Neva Gerber in the leading roles do acting which is in keeping with the other good points of the picture, and the general result is a happy one.

The story concerns a girl who left an orphanage on account of harsh treatment. She is adopted and educated by a man who makes a business of stealing valuable jewelry while passing off as a respectable business man.

He does this because he makes use of social events to help him and thinks the girl can assist. She is so frightened at the thought of being turned out into the streets that she aids in robbery, but when it comes to stealing a necklace from one of her old school friends she rebel. For a time it looks bad for her, but eventually she finds love and happiness with a young lawyer.

MASTERPIECE JOINS ALLIANCE PROGRAM

Frank C. Hill and George S. Hupp, of Los Angeles, secretary and treasurer and assistant secretary, respectively, of the Masterpiece Film Company, who have been in New York for several days, left for the California Coast on Tuesday, October 20.

Messrs. Hill and Hupp have arranged for the distribution of their company’s productions through the Alliance Films Corporation.

After careful investigation they report the Alliance plan of distribution an excellent one.

The first release of the Masterpiece Film Company, “The Hoosier Schoolmaster,” featuring Max Figman and Lolita Robertson, will be followed by other Figman-Robertson features at the rate of at least one production every five weeks. A second company is already at work and other arrangements are being made to increase the output.

Lolita Robertson, in their opinion, will prove the equal in popularity of any screen actress of the day. The company’s contract with Max Figman gives them the exclusive use of this popular and able actor for two years.

Rights have been obtained to “The Truth Wagon,” in which John Cord starred Mr. Figman to “Jack Chaney” to the Williamson’s popular novel “Lord Loveland Discovers America,” and to seventeen other books and plays to be announced later. “Masterpiece policy is quality,” said Mr. Hill, in summing up the company’s plans.

Mr. Exhibitor:

WHY ?

Why is it a fact that an Exhibitor who has invested many thousands of dollars, in a theatre for the display of Motion Pictures, will very often pay so little attention to the importance of the moving picture Screen? THE PUBLIC do not always come to see your building or its furnishings, but they do come to see the pictures; and good pictures depend on perfect projection.

MIRROROID is the best projection surface known, producing the clearest, brightest pictures at less cost for current. It does not crack, peel, or turn black, and is guaranteed for five years against deterioration. It may be washed with soap and water without injury, and it is KING OF ALL PROJECTION SURFACES. The Old Fogey

A 3-part American drama made by Pathé. Say, do you ever think of that golden well-loved day in the long ago when you went down the dusty road all bordered with white and yellow daisies, on your arm a fair young girl in pink, and your goal the great white tents of the circus? The air vibrated with the hooting of the calliope and the barkings of the Ballyhoo men, and your heart vibrated in harmony. That's just what the old fogey did in this circus picture, but the girl in pink left him to follow a lion tamer and lived her life under the "big top." When she came back many exciting things happened. A film that all will enjoy. 1-3-6 sheet posters.

Whiffles Has a Toothache

An uproar in 1 reel. The only Whiffles has trouble with his tooth and with a dentist, yes, and with his employer and also the police. You could tell it was a comedy for blocks.

A Soldier's Duty

So in this fine film the soldier sacrifices his love for a beautiful girl in order to follow the path of duty, which leads to the grave. Superb backgrounds and photography, fine story and acting make this a film to be remembered. 1-3-6 sheet posters.

The Thanhouser Three-a-Week

Following are the Thanhouser releases for the current week. These releases are distributed exclusively in the United States and Canada by the Mutual Film Corporation.

Tuesday, November 3rd, "The Turning of the Road" (two reels). This is a powerful drama of society life. It portrays the actions of a band of thieves who work among the best society. A member of the band—Della Fletcher—is the character around which the plot revolves. Her stealing of the gems and her ultimate reformation and marriage to a handsome rector form a basis for many tense scenes. She is led by love out of the shadows into the light and the turning of a new road. The cast includes Muriel Ostriche, Frank Woods, John Reinhard, Ethyle Cook, Ernest Ward, Carey Hastings, Arthur Bauer, Perry Horton.

Sunday, November 8th, "Keeping a Husband" (one reel). A decidedly clever drama of home life, showing how a wife's strategy makes it possible for her to retain her husband's love in spite of severe temptations. This photoplay is very capably enacted by Mauriel Ostriche, Carey L. Hastings and Ernest C. Ward.

A QUESTION OF IDENTITY

A Dramatic Adaptation of "The Window that Monsieur Forgot"

By CHARLES IMLAY TAYLOR

Here is a film of thrilling dramatic interest. Twin brothers so much resemble each other that in the culmination of the criminal career of one the question of identity was exceedingly difficult to decide. One had murdered the Chevalier but had escaped immediate arrest. The other brother was charged with the crime. Which was which? The final scene in the Police Court, where sentence was about to be passed upon the innocent brother, is halted by the arrival of the dead brother's body, for he had resisted arrest after being hunted down by witnesses to the affair. A thrilling film throughout. The air of reality will cause this film to be widely commented upon.

A STATEMENT made several weeks ago on this page—that there were about 7,000 purchasing exhibitors—seems to be misunderstood by a few. We have been variously accused of killing off exhibitors, of attempting to make the number fit our circulation, and so forth, and so on.

IT was not stated that there were only 7,000 exhibitors—but 7,000 purchasing exhibitors.

For the benefit of our contemporaries, let us explain that a purchasing reader means a reader responsive to advertisements. The word has been used in advertising circles since the Year One.

LET us further explain. Many readers are not responsive. That generally happens where they don't get a paper at all, or where they get it free.

In other words, when they don't read it. Free circulation is little better than no circulation. It doesn't acquire responsive readers.

A READER is only responsive to the advertising pages of a publication when that publication is read by him straight through, when it is conducted altogether in his interests and therefore has his confidence.

He pays for such a publication because he needs it in his business. It is his reading and buying guide.

PERHAPS we should have said live wire exhibitors, instead of purchasing exhibitors, but the two have just exactly the same meaning.

A live wire exhibitor is a purchasing exhibitor; he buys new ideas, good pictures, efficient equipment, courteous employees, attractive environment, advertising—and last, or rather, first—a trade journal to tell him about these very things.

IF you can't sell an exhibitor a trade journal, you cannot sell him any first-hand high-class article.

He is, except for a cheap service and second-hand equipment, a non-purchaser.

SO far as the number of exhibitors in the country is concerned, we have a list of 15,821 to date. It has been compiled and is kept up to date through many avenues of information. We consider it the best list in existence because we constantly check it. But we don't take it seriously; nor do we ask others to regard it so.

We know how it fluctuates—every day—so that a big percentage changes completely every six months. And we know that a bigger percentage still of theatres is impossible to the advertiser and to ourselves.

OUR statement of 7,000 purchasing exhibitors is based upon a mail campaign of a year's duration and upon the personal investigations and reports of over a hundred field representatives.

It is not far wrong.

A man, who for seven years has been a territorial and local exchange manager for the General, Mutual and Universal companies fixes the number at 7,500.

WE accept the amendment. Also, the number—happily—is increasing.

The fakir, the floater, the "dead one"—the man who adds only to the number of theatres and not to their quality, is fast dying out.

Naturally so, and as he disappears the live wire exhibitor is increasing in numbers and prosperity.

HE, the live wire, purchasing exhibitor, is the backbone and ribs of the industry.

He is putting back into it the money it demands for its maintenance.

He is extending it because of his good services to the public.

He is the man worth while.

NUMBERS mean nothing.

The statistics of 15,000, 17,000, 20,000 picture theatres (based upon amusement licenses and unverified newspaper clippings) are of value only to the magazine writer, the stock-jobber and the circulation booster.

To the trade they are misleading.

EVERY manufacturer and exchange man with a knowledge of field conditions knows they are wrong.

They know the figures of 7,000 purchasing exhibitors are right.

Why continue the deception?

Maryland League Checks Price-Cutting

With Co-operation of Exchanges, President Pearce and Baltimore Exhibitors Halt Manager's Attempt to Put on a Two-Cent Program

Special to Motion Picture News

Baltimore, Oct. 29.

THE effectiveness of the Maryland State Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of North America was demonstrated last week when the members of the league with the co-operation of exchange men forced at least one exhibitor to discontinue a rather demoralizing practice. The latter exhibitor is not a member of the league and conducts a small motion picture house in South Baltimore.

He inaugurated a plan by which he gave out coupons each evening, which coupon and two cents was good for a performance the day following. It was in fact nothing more or less than a two-cent admission for which the exhibitor presented five or six reels of pictures. This practice, while not particularly successful as far as patrons were concerned, had a demoralizing effect upon the followers of pictures in the southern section of the city, and, of course, made it very undesirable for the picture men doing a legitimate business in that part of the city.

Marion S. Pearce, president of the Maryland branch as well as the president of the National organization, was communicated with and the matter was placed before him and other members of the executive committee. A meeting was called at which the exchange men and feature men were invited to attend. The proposition of the two-cent admission was presented to them and they all agreed that it was a very undesirable condition and that they would co-operate with the members of the Maryland branch to stamp out this practice among the smaller motion picture exhibitors.

The exchange men immediately notified this South Baltimore exhibitor that his film would be discontinued at the end of last week. The exhibitor wanted to know the reason why and upon being told that the exchanges absolutely declined to supply a two-cent picture show he immediately pledged himself to charge the regular admission in the future.

At a meeting held at the Maryland Exhibitors' League on October 20 the Maryland branch was elected and the two-cent admission proposition was a thing of the past and aroused considerable enthusiasm. It was not so much the elimination of this one undesirable feature that caused enthusiasm among the Maryland exhibitors, but it was the spirit of progress and timely co-operation that they had received from the managers of the Universal, Mutual and Warner's Feature exchanges.

Cory Will Be California Organizer

Plans State-Wide Membership Campaign with Reduction of Initiation Fee—Predicts 100 Per Cent. Increase or More Before January 1

Special to Motion Picture News

San Francisco, Oct. 26. At the third annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of California, held in San Francisco, the following officers were elected:

President, H. L. Beach, of Berkeley; vice-president, Judge A. P. Tugwell, of Los Angeles; national vice-president, W. H. Hills; secretary, W. A. Cory, and treasurer, C. L. Mehren.

Leo Kaufmann, chairman of the committee on organization, rendered a report that set forth the need for an enlarged membership, together with plans for consummating this.

The report stated that to secure new members it would be highly advisable to place an organizer in the field.

It was recommended that the position of state organizer be established and that a fund be raised at once to send this official to the field at the earliest possible moment.

Judge A. P. Tugwell expressed hearty accord with the report of the committee and this was unanimously adopted. The Judge then delivered an eloquent address, during which he said some of the measures he would introduce into the next legislature, affecting the motion picture industry.

He stated that he knew that a Sunday closing bill would be brought forward, that a drastic state censorship bill would be introduced, and that the sixteen-year limitation bill would again come up, with possibly one having for its object the segregation of men and women in moving picture theatres. He described the proposed State censorship law in detail, declaring that it would be the most drastic ever drawn.

Following this speech contributions were asked for an organization fund and within a few minutes two hundred dollars was collected.

W. A. Cory, who has been secretary for several years, and who is now more at liberty than formerly through the sale of his interests in the Fairyland Theatre, has consented to take up this work and is now in the field. He has mapped out an extensive trip and within the next few months plans to visit almost every section of the State, first visiting, of course, the large centers of population.

The initiation fee has been reduced for this campaign and it is estimated that the first of the year the membership will have increased by more than one hundred per cent.

EXHIBITORS TALK ORGANIZATION FINANCE

Brylawski Believes $2 Per Capita Tax for State League Members Is Sufficient—Milwaukee Manager Urges Salary for Officers; Tax of One Dollar a Month on State League Men Not Too High, He Declares—Organization Needs Capital

Special to Motion Picture News

FULTON BRYLAWSKI, secretary of the Exhibitors League of the District of Columbia, and vice-president of the National League, is a man of wide experience in organization affairs, so his views regarding the present situation of local and national matters will carry food for thought. In speaking to him on this subject, Mr. Brylawski had this to say:

"The officers of the Motion Picture League of the District have had the same experience regarding attendance at meetings and the interest manifested at such gatherings as have fraternal organizations.

"There is a very marked tendency for the exhibitors in general to allow the actual work of running the affairs of the league to devolve upon a dozen or more members—and the same dozen or more all the time.

"Thus it is almost impossible to secure a complete attendance at the meetings unless there is some form of entertainment, or some danger which threatens the individual pocketbook.

"To overcome this situation, our League is at present considering the advisability of amending its constitution and by-laws, so that the affairs of the league may be almost exclusively executed by a committee, and the full membership should only meet four times a year. These quarterly meetings would be partly social gatherings and partly business meetings. The next regular meeting of the local league will be called at some cafe or restaurant, and if the proposition is successful, an executive committee will direct the future affairs of the league."

Some Members Let Dues Slide

Speaking of the financial situation, Mr. Brylawski said: "Of course there are many members of poor standing in the league, in spite of the small amount of our dues. In cases of emergencies, the district exhibitors have always gotten together and raised the necessary amount, but in the absence of any such spirit, there is a tendency to let dues slide.

"We have hope of very materially improving our financial situation from the proceeds of the ball to be given in Convention Hall on October 31. This will also take the form of a reception as well, as we expect to have about fifty photoplay stars from various studios as our guests."

The secretary also stated that the league had in many cases been of service to its members in legal matters when censorship, Sunday closing, license and building privilege had arisen.

"It was only recently," he went on, "that one of our members was fined $100 for showing the Essanay release of 'The Coming Champion Who Was Delayed.' It was alleged by the officer that the film was in violation of the local regulation against showing pictures of prize fighting.

"As a matter of fact, there is not one bit of fighting in the film, and when I brought the matter to the attention of the corporation counsel and had the reel run off for him, the case was closed without a hearing in court."

Two Dollar Per Capita Tax

"So far as the National League is concerned with regard to finances," commented Mr. Brylawski, "I believe that a per capita tax of $2 for each member of the State League organization is quite sufficient. And, indeed, the value to them until there is an organization effected.

"Until they make the exhibitor who is at present outside of the national body realize that he cannot get along without the organization there will never be a chance of getting him into the fold," said Mr. Fischer.

"How do I think the State League can best serve its members? Well, that is a pretty broad question, as there are many ways in which an organization of this sort can benefit its members, but to my mind a State League can do the most good by combating adverse legislation and boosting the picture business as a whole by a statewide publicity campaign.

"I urge the exhibitors to finance the State League I think that where there is a local organization one-half of the dues should go to the state association and in case of the individual members they should be assessed an initiation fee and monthly dues."

League Should Keep Out of Politics

"The State League should by all means keep out of politics, because the constant endeavor to get any of its members into the state legislative body. The principal reason for the lamentable lack of interest shown by the Wisconsin exhibitors in any of the numerous get-together movements that have been started has been the petty squabbles between the exhibitors, which they seem unable to forget.

A local organization in which every member puts up a bond of at least $100 as a guarantee of his good faith and his willingness to abide by the will of the majority and one in which all members who do not attend the meetings would be fined, is the suggestion of Gene Olinger, owner of the American theatre. Mr. Olinger would go even farther and provide a salary for all of the officers who performed active work for the league.

Salary for Organization Officers

"Until the day arrives," said Mr. Olinger, "that all the exhibitors put up a bond of good faith of, say, $100, and until they know that it will cost them money to stay away from the meetings, I doubt that there will ever be an effective organization of exhibitors.

"The present national organization has not done anything for the exhibitor and has been unable to prevent any adverse legislation from becoming effective.

"The best way to build up an effective State League is not to work for numbers but for substantial members, members who can and will back up their words or actions and who are able to give bond. Then it would be possible.
to organize a State League that could pay its officers or members for any work they did for the league and thus get the best from its workers.

"I think that the league should by all means accomplish things of value for its members, but it must first make these members attend the meetings, and the only way that this can be done is by having the members put up a bond and then be liable to a fine in case they do not attend the meetings.

"All matters of importance should be submitted to the members for a direct vote, which can be done where all members attend the meetings, and not be left to the decision of an executive board, as this method is likely to put all the power into the hands of one man or a clique.

"To properly finance a league in this state I think that the members should be taxed at least one dollar a month, and also liable for assessment not to exceed twice the amount of the monthly dues. In this way an organization could be perfected that had some capital and could do much good work."

Only One Organization
Otto Meister, of the Vaudeotte theatre, says that he believes in no organization outside of the National League, and that if the state or city exhibitors ever want to combat any evil they can always get together and fight that particular evil, but there is no need of keeping a permanent organization.

"Though against anything but the national organization," said Mr. Meister, "if a State League is organized I would like to see it go into politics, either putting its own man up for the legislature or getting certain candidates to put themselves on record as to how they stand in regard to the motion picture industry. A State League, however, cannot always make a direct stand against the legislative end and should not interfere with the exchanges or the film men."

Butte Sees Salvation in Unity
Special to Motion Picture News
Butte, Mont., Oct. 27.
PHILIP LEVY, manager of the Ansonia Amusement Company, of this city, controlling the Ansonia, Orpheum and Princess theatres, and president of the Montana State Exhibitors League, is an ardent booster for a Montana State League and a greater National League of motion picture exhibitors and is a believer in the theory that the success of the one means the progress of the other. He said to a representative of the Motion Picture News:

"Picture men need the State League as a means of introduction of one to the other, to exchange ideas, to promote a better understanding of the wants of the public, to fit the individual members for the business of conducting picture houses, to elevate the tone of the shows, and to give better satisfaction to the public.

"It may be that the State Leagues are not as good as they ought to be. Why? The fault lies with the members. Closer union, more frequent meetings, interest in the work, frequent exchange of ideas, cordiality, sympathy and kindliness will put the State League into a position of being of more assistance to the individual operator."

Efforts of the Few Not Enough
"Unfortunately, too, many want to stand aside and let the others do the work. Success can only be attained by the united efforts of the various picture men all pulling together. The efforts of a few will never bring satisfactory results. With good State Leagues the National League will be of the dimensions and effectiveness it deserves to be from the magnitude of the interests it represents.

"A thorough campaign of education along the lines suggested by Motion Picture News will be admirable. If we could only interest ourselves more in what others are doing, the others would soon fall in line and the result would be magnificent State Leagues, a gigantic National League, more pleasure and profit in our work and a higher general standard in the motion picture business.

"I would say for a starter―let each exhibitor learn all he possibly can about every other exhibitor in his state. When we know one another better we will be pleased to meet oftener."

Rochester Operators on Verge of Strike
Booth Men Ask for $20 a Week with Extra Pay for Overtime, But Exhibitors Consider Demands Too One Sided
Special to Motion Picture News
Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 28.

TRADE unionism is the big issue now facing the Rochester exhibitors. Are they to be allowed to run their houses themselves, or are they to turn them over to the operators' organization. That is the question that is before the exhibitors now, and is one that must be settled definitely very soon.

So far the exhibitors have not given in to the demands of the operators. The latter have a new union, and are trying to enforce a new scale of wages, and to put into force an agreement that the exhibitors claim is very one sided.

Both sides have conferred with the city officials. Mayor H. H. Edgerton has expressed his hope from the operators that they will not call a strike without first giving him notice, and an opportunity to try to adjust matters between the owners and their employees.

Objectionable features contained in the agreement submitted by the union are that none but union operators shall be employed; that the union shall permit but one apprentice for each ten houses; and that no man shall be dismissed without a week's notice, except for a cause deemed sufficient by the representatives of the union.

The situation is complicated by the fact that all but a very few of the men licensed by the city board to run motion picture machines are members of the union, and that the state law and city ordinances prohibit any but licensed operators from running machines.

The city licensing board has conducted a series of examinations in the past three months, and has licensed about seventy-five operators. Very few of the owners or managers of houses took the examinations though a few had that forethought.

It is now rumored that the owners and managers will shortly ask for a special examination, so that they may try the test and obtain licenses. Thus, in the event of trouble, they could run their machines themselves, without running the risk of a $100 a day fine.

It looks as though the owners are determined not to sign the proposed agreement, and the next move is up to the operators. The owners and managers made several counter proposals to the operators all, of which were rejected. They then notified the operators that, as an association, it refused to accept the agreement. The operators then said they would deal with the owners individually.

The operators have determined to enforce the scale which they were authorized to enforce months ago, $20 a week for each operator doing a dull trick in a downtown house, with extra pay for overtime, and $17 a week for operators in outside houses, which give only evening performances, except on Saturday.
THE THEATRE THAT REFORMED A DISTRICT

St. Louis Manager Sees Possibilities in a Locality Shunned by Other Exhibitors—His Success Demonstrates the Truth That Daring Enterprise Backed Up by Good Judgment Always Wins Out—Clean Pictures Appreciated in a Drab Neighborhood

The Retina Theatre is at Twentieth and Market streets, just alongside the St. Louis union station. Now union stations, like everything else, have good and bad sides, and the Retina is on the other side of this great passenger depot, not anywhere near the great marble pillars, and gold and white vestibules, where rich travelers and tourists enter and exit on their way to their palatial trains.

The Retina is nearer the side where the poor emigrant and the day coach traveler is likely to be found.

A few years ago the district surrounding Twentieth and Market streets was not well lighted; there were many saloons, and a mixed population of negroes and whites, and when this oil and water mixture was further complicated by the addition of foolish travelers looking for adventure, and confidence men and other light-fingered gentry looking for foolish travelers, there was much to be desired from a law and order standpoint.

The district was the scene of many holdups, many confidence games and even murders.

Then John Gentner opened the Retina Theatre, just where Twentieth street runs into, but does not cross, Market street. Many managers would have read the people of this neighborhood wrongly, many managers would have filled them up with lurid melodrama, many would have given them cheap Westerns, or slap-stick comedy.

John Gentner did none of these things; he gave them good, clean heart interest pictures, stories with a moral as well as a punch, stories that went home and reached the hearts of these Twentieth and Market street denizens quicker and more effectually than a hundred sermons, or a hundred talks on reformation or morals would have done.

Many a wanderer waiting for a train at the station that was to carry him away, perhaps to disgrace and dishonor, stepped into John Gentner’s show and read a lesson on the screen that made him go back and fight his battles, and face his music, or whatever it was that impelled him to cowardly flight.

Many a hardened criminal was turned from his purpose by the moral in one of the pictures on the Retina screen. The whole district began to change, the devil’s idle mind workshops were closed for repairs, because the people were cured of their idleness. Instead of wandering around on the ill-lighted streets, they went to John Gentner’s picture show.

Many of them saw people there that were better dressed than they were, and their pride of person was awakened; many of them saw people whose manners were better, and their behavior was bettered.

DOZENS of them saved the nickels that usually accompanied the tin bucket to the gin mill on the corner, for a ticket to John Gentner’s show.

The lights of the Retina made Market street as light as day, and spread their friendly rays half way up to the next block on Twentieth street.

There was too much light for the crooks and schemers; they sought other hunting grounds. The whole neighborhood felt and profited by the change, and today the block where the Retina stands is as peaceful and quiet as any in the city.

Clean pictures were not the only method John Gentner used in educating the people of the neighborhood. At stated intervals he would print booklets filled with useful information, usually of a historical or patriotic nature, something to give the people pride in their country or city.

The date of the last distribution was on July 2, and the subject used was “The History of Our Flag.” The booklet is of sixteen pages, with a beautiful reproduction of Old Glory in colors, spread all over the two middle pages.

The text of the book is very complete, and contains not only a history of the flag, but the words and music of “The Star Spangled Banner,” a specimen of the original song in the handwriting of Francis Scott Key, the author, together with many pages of information about the flag, and an exhaustive treatise on its origin.

The material for the book was collected by Mr. Gentner personally, and is authentic in every particular.

The night chosen for the distribution of the booklets was the occasion of the showing of the last of the Selig serial feature, “The Adventures of Kathryn.” Two thousand five hundred were given out that night, and a slide was run to inform the public that they could be had on request.

Wireless Not Much Speedier Than Mutual Tug

The enterprise of the “Mutual Weekly” in gathering live news was well illustrated recently when the United Fruit steamer Metapan collided with the Iowa of the Old Dominion line in a fog in the Ambrose Channel. The “Mutual Weekly’s” tug, which is always stationed in New York harbor, was on the scene almost as quickly as the wireless calls for aid were received, and captured many interesting views of the damaged steamer.

After the accident, which occurred on Thursday, October 15, the captain of the Metapan raced his vessel for shallow water, beaching it in the sands not far from Coney Island. All the passengers, who numbered more than one hundred, were landed in safety, but much of the Metapan’s cargo, which was chiefly bananas, went over the rail. Since then Coney Islanders have been feasting on this fruit. The pictures of the wreck will be shown in “Mutual Weekly, No. 96,” released Thursday, October 29, through the company’s exchanges.
WILL PRODUCE TWO NESTORS A WEEK

Al Christie, senior director in point of service of the Universal staff, who has not taken a vacation in six years, returned to the Coast last week after what he termed "a few minutes' vacation" in New York and vicinity. His sojourn was limited, because the distance across the continent is so great and the period at his disposal so short, most of his time was spent in traveling from the Pacific Coast to New York City and back to the scene of his duties.

However, his trip was lost on his arrival in the metropolis in seeing everything worth while and renewing acquaintances.

Mr. Christie has been in California three years, and during that time has produced two hundred pictures, writing the scenarios for all of the releases.

Two Nestor comedies a week will be produced beginning some time in December. Mr. Christie will have charge of the production of the first company, and the second company will be under the supervision of Eddie Lyons, who directed the Nestor studio during Al Christie's trip east. Later Mr. Christie will prepare a series of two-reel Nestors, for the production of which the first and second companies will be merged. These may be looked for around the first of the year.

DAYTON LOCAL ADDS NEW MEMBERS

Special to Motion Picture News

Dayton, O., Oct. 28.

Reorganization of the local branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League was effected during the past week with the enrollment of a number of heretofore unresponsive exhibitors as members.

Resolutions were adopted by the reorganization committee providing for the appointment by the president of a committee of five, to be known as the service committee, consisting of one member for each regular service projected and two members for each feature service. The service committee is to act for all exhibitors in any differences with various film exchanges.

CONTRACT FOR WORLD FILMS

The Alfred Hamburger theatres, including the Zeigfeld, the large downtown Chicago house, are using Robert and Brady features under a yearly contract that they entered into with the Chicago office of the World Film Corporation.

WOMEN ASK FOR A CENSOR

Some apparently well-intending ladies who are unfamiliar with the workings of censorship in other cities, have started a movement to secure a local censor at Lake Charles, La. This plan was taken up at a recent meeting of the Parents' Club of the fourth ward in that town and it was agreed to adopt definite plans at the next meeting.

Excelsior Will Screen "The Under Trail"

Author of "Eagle's Mate" Supplies Alliance Firm with Subject for Next Release—Favorite's Second a Racing Story

THE Excelsior Feature Film Company, Inc., at its studios in Lake Placid is now working on "The Under Trail," pictured from Anna Alice Chapin's book of the same name.

Miss Chapin is the author of "The Eagle's Mate" in which Mary Pickford scored a tremendous success. "The Under Trail" is one of the prettiest romances ever written about the majestic Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia, and with the splendid cast engaged by the Excelsior Company to interpret the characters of this story, it is safe to predict that "The Under Trail" will be one of the best productions made in some time. The picture will be released on the Alliance program.

"The Man Who Could Not Lose," the second release of the Eugene Pictures Film Company, is one of the most original race track stories that has ever been presented.

Hoffman Takes Charge of Universal Exchanges

Former Special Representative of the Company in Middle West Made General Manager of New York Branches

THE local exchange has been pleasantly surprised with the announcement of the appointment of M. H. Hoffman as general manager of the New York Universal exchanges. Mr. Hoffman is a lawyer and a graduate of New York City College and New York University, and practiced his profession in New York and New England for ten years before entering the film business. While an attorney, he became interested in a circuit of theatres, and later W. E. Greene made him manager of his Springfield, Mass., film exchange.

When the Universal Film Manufacturing Company took over the Greene exchanges, Hoffman was made special representative for the Universal in the Middle West, and then manager of the Twenty-third street, New York, exchange. All told, a Mr. Hoffman four short years to accomplish what he is in the film business.

In his new duties, he will have the supervision of the Mecca and Twenty-third street exchanges of the Universal; at the former branch, he will be ably assisted by Emanuel H. Goldstein, and at the downtown branch, by Sam Zierler. Mr. Goldstein was long in charge of the Newark office of the Universal, where he is succeeded by Lee Gainsborough. In addition to the metropolitan offices, the exchanges in Newark, N. J.; New Haven, Conn., and Springfield, Mass., come under Mr. Hoffman's charge.

Pathé Sale Is Emphatically Denied

Officers of American Company and William Fox, Who, It Is Said, Had Bought the Studios, Put Quietus on Rumor

THEATRICAL publication in a recent issue stated that Pathé had sold its American studios and that the Eclectic Film Company with its numerous exchanges was also for sale. The officers of the American Pathé Company are indignant that such a story should be published without any foundation whatsoever, and emphatically deny that any such move is contemplated.

It is presumed that the story arose from the fact that the Jersey City studio was recently rented to a producing company which desired to take advantage of its fine facilities in the making of a picture.

William Fox, president of The Box Office Attraction Company, states that the report being circulated that he has purchased the Pathé studios and all of the Pathé interests in America is untrue. No such purchase was ever contemplated or even discussed.

"My relations with the Pathé Frères has always been quite pleasant and I would not like to have this relationship interrupted by a repetition of trade gossip," said Mr. Fox.

RETURNS TO PHOTOPROES

After a very brief experiment with other companies, the Excelsior, century Theatre, New Orleans, has decided to return permanently to motion pictures, A. B. Seligman is in charge and is using the Mutual program.
Repairing a Theatre's Reputation

Job Had Nothing on Holway For Patience When It Came to Applying Home-Thrust Maxims to the Film Business—This Live Manager Adjusted His Programs to the Tastes of a Steady Clique After Worrying Out Their Preferences

"MAKE the public your friend. Convince your landlord that you are trying to give them all that you can for their money. Make them look up to you instead of down at you."

"Don't try to meet competition by doing the same things that the other fellow does. Do something different."

"Individuality is the life of trade, whether you are selling shoe-strings or theatre seats."

These are some of the maxims of B. A. Holway, manager of Proctor's Broad Street Theatre, Elizabeth, N. J.

He doesn't say to himself for he doesn't believe in talking too much. He just listens and then coins the other fellow's ideas if they are worth coining.

But Holway believes that these principles are way signs on the road to success in the moving picture business and apparently he has picked the right road.

Before he took charge of the Broad Street Theatre, Holway was a newspaperman. He "broke into" the film game less than a year ago, but during his few months' experience he has learned more than many who have been at it for years.

His newspaper training taught him to observe things and this training has stood him in good stead. He knows his public although very few of the public know him. He says in the background—and does things.

The Broad Street Theatre is the largest house in the city devoted exclusively to the presentation of the motion pictures. It seats an audience of about 1,200 and has both orchestra and balcony seats.

It has no gallery. It was formerly a stock theatre. When Holway took hold of the house, it was just a theatre. People went into it when they had nowhere else to go and then, nine times out of ten—kicked themselves for going.

It had few regular patrons. Its exhibition policy was vacillating. Sometimes it showed one make of films and sometimes another. The people were not acquainted with the actors and as a result the audiences were the casual, drop-in kind with the "I'm-here-now—but-never-again" attitude which does not spell profit for any amusement enterprise.

There were always a few hoodlums, several drunks and a chorus of lusty-lunged infants to add to the enjoyment of performances.

Now all this is changed. The same faces are to be seen in the audiences at the theatre every week, and among its patrons are some of the "best people" in town. They know that at the Broad Street Theatre they will see a clean, interesting show amid congenial surroundings.

The theatre has been given a cozy, home-like atmosphere which means a whole lot in dollars and cents to the management. The improvement has been subtly made. How was it brought about?

When Holway took charge of the amusement house, it was enough to discourage Job. Always the front of the theatre was bedecked with lithographs, gaudy and glaring, and nothing especially alluring about the lobby.

It was decorated with the framed photographs of motion picture actors about whom the audiences knew nothing and probably cared less. Even the ticket booth had a "come across" appearance that was flagrantly commercial and the man at the door made you feel that he was doing you a favor by letting you come into his theatre.

The air in the house was generally permeated with a garlic odor too keen to be enjoyable and the babies and hoodlums aforementioned did not tend to enhance the pleasure of the audiences.

And the pictures! The management seemed to jump about from one exchange to another picking up a film here and there in a more or less haphazard fashion. There were never any feature pictures of really high class photo-productions. The pictures were just pictures—that was all—and you gained nothing from looking at them but weary eyes and that tired feeling.

The pictures were shown to the accompaniment of a piano. The player drummed most of the time and the effect was as unmusical as it was irritating.

The first thing that Holway did was to standardize his shows. He mapped out a regular program for the week and stuck to it.

At the present time he books one big feature a week and that is shown on Friday. Patrons of the Broad Street Theatre have been educated to the fact that Friday is feature day, and all they have to do to find out what the feature is, is to look in the Thursday or Friday evening's papers.

Monday is "Ford Sterling day." Sterling is well-known now to Elizabeth theatre-goers and his name alone is enough to draw a full house. Of course, enough other films are shown to round out the bill for the day, but Sterling is the main attraction.

Keystone comedies, "The Mutual Girl" series, "Mutual Weekly," "Animated Weekly" and "Universal Ike" pictures are a few of the other attractions which are booked with regularity at the Broad Street Theatre.

The effect of this method is the same as in a stock theatre. The audiences get acquainted with the actors and the name of the actor acquires a greater drawing power than the title of the picture in which he appears.

Several Mary Pickford films have been shown and if Holway were to advertise tomorrow simply "Mary Pickford Here at" there would be a buzz about at the theatre for all performances.

The faces of Charles Chaplin, Mabel Normand, Margarita Fischer, Florence Lawrence and other film stars are as familiar to patrons of Proctor's Broad Street Theatre as the countenances of their next-door neighbors.

By his method of booking, Holway has secured from his theatre a big list of steady patrons, instead of mere transients. On certain nights you will see certain people at the Broad Street Theatre whether the weather is fair or stormy, and the effect of such a class of patronage is obvious.

By studying his audiences, Holway discovered the character of the pictures most popular with his patrons. He found that "moller-drammers" did not possess very great drawing power.

Photographs of the wild and woolly west did not provoke any outburst of enthusiasm and the exhibition of educational films did not cause any hold-outs.

So pictures under these classifications have been barred out. In their places have been substituted society dramas, lively comedies, and feature productions.

This change in the type of pictures presented not only built up a steady trade but it resulted in the attendance of a higher class of patrons. The people who "ate up" the thrillers, wild west pictures and others of their ilk stayed away and the house was better for their absence. The hoodlums, drunks, and garlic eaters keep away from the Broad Street Theatre now for its performances do not appeal to them.

Having adjusted his programs, Holway set about to improve the incidental features of the theatre. The old piano was replaced by a scrap heap and a new Wurlitzer orchestra was installed.

In the hands of a skillful player, this instrument produces music which adds to rather than detracts from the pleasure of the audiences. It used to be the piano player's custom to change his tune with each deviation in the action of the picture.
CUMMINGS JOINS ROLFE

B. A. Rolfe, of B. A. Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., has engaged Irving Cummings for prominent roles, in a number of his forthcoming productions which are to be released through Ako.

Mr. Cummings was born in New York and prior to a course at Columbia was educated in the public schools. In 1901 he took up stock work at the Columbia Theatre in Washington. The following season he played the boy part in "David Harum" with William H. Crane, and continued in this role for the second season. In 1903 he was playing in "Ben Hur." He was next promoted to juvenile leads and made his bow as a matinee idol to Indianapolis audiences in the English Stock Company.

The season of 1906 found him in "Way Down East." Then came two seasons in "The Man of the Hour," during which Mr. Cummings played Arnold Bennett, the young Mayor. Engagements in stock with the Sherman Brown Company, Milwaukee, and at the Belasco Theatre, Los Angeles, were next. The College Theatre, Chicago, which Father Malone conducted, claimed his service next. Then came engagements with Tyrone Powers in "The Servant in the House," and with Lillian Russell.

Military Authorities in St. John Object to Activities of Camera Men on Account of Strong War Feeling

In "The Man Who Could Not Lose" the Favorite Players Film Company has used two hundred supernumeraries on the stage and in the audience of a theatre hired in Los Angeles to take this scene. "The Man Who Could Not Lose," by Richard Harding Davis, and adapted for the screen by Robert A. Dillon, promises to be an exceptional film, and the Favorite Players is determined to make this production one of the greatest race track stories ever produced.

It is scheduled for release on the Alliance program.
Making Local Films Near the Equator
By Amando Cepedes Marin

There are many styles of cameras in the market, but my purpose in this article is not to describe them nor to recommend any special one. A reliable dealer in photo goods can show you what to get, but if you read last week's article, you would see how, with no knowledge of picture-making, I was able to do something with an amateur's camera.

You do not need a high-priced outfit; only intelligent effort.

Let us say, then, that you have bought a camera, either American or European make, preferably one that is not covered with leather, which often does not prevent warpage. That the mechanism is of the "claw" system, the movement used in many high-grade film cameras. It is simple and reliable, requiring no attention but a few drops of oil and careful cleansing afterwards.

Directions to Be Followed
Most all machines have complete instructions for manipulating them. Take an old piece of film, put it in the box and thread it according to the directions. Turn the handle until you accustom yourself to an even movement, which is the principal effect in any motion picture film.

Bear in mind the speed of the shutter, and have a Goerz, Zeiss, Eronon, or any double Anastigmat motion picture lens. Each turn of the handle produces eight or nine small pictures.

The speed of the pictures depends upon the opening of the diaphragm in your lens, and not from the distance at which the pictures are taken. As the best work is done on a bright day, we will fix our lens with an opening of f/11, and thus, if we turn the handle a complete turn per second, the speed will be 120th part of a second per picture; if we give two turns of the handle per second, it will be one 24th part of a second to each picture; and if three turns, a 360th part of a second.

That speed must be given to prevent blurring the movement of the object, but for a common local view you may use a steady movement of a hundred turns of the handle per minute, which will undoubtedly give you well-exposed negatives, full of detail.

Not Necessary to Cover the Lens
You may expose as much as you want, making a stop without covering the lens, but remember that at each stop of the handle there will be about four inches of the film spot black, which will serve you as a guide for inserting the titles when you make the positive.

Therefore, make a memorandum of the scenes you take and insert titles properly.

Each magazine will contain a roll of 200 feet film, the best size used. And the same will give you about a five-minute exhibition together with titles. The dial will show you how many feet of film have been used so that when finishing the 200 feet you will spoil only a little piece. Four or six stops will be very convenient.

Something that you must bear in mind is the focus of your lens. The distances are marked on the lens' barrel from three or six feet up to infinity. Therefore, be careful to set the distance approximately; but when using a diaphragm as f/16, pretty near everything from 15 feet from the camera will be in focus.

Different Lens Focus
There are different lens focus; a two-inch or fifty-millimeter lens is a common wide angle lens, used for close pictures, like parades from the sidewalk of a street.

It takes more scenery from a distance, as a three-inch lens does from the same distance. The three-inch or 75-millimeter lens is used more for stage work groups, single persons, large heads, plants and film titles. An equipment with both size lenses is decidedly necessary, but the two-inch lens will do well for general work. I have been doing all kinds of work with that size lens and focus less camera.

Before manipulating the machine set the dial measure to zero.

When the film is bad, open up to f/9 the diaphragm and turn the handle with the same speed.

I have taken pictures about 6:15 in the evening, turning the handle about one per second with f/6 with splendid results.

The opening in the shutter is also important, but set it for 1/4-inch opening for regular work.

Taking Rainy Day Pictures
You can take pictures on a rainy day, using larger diaphragm, say f/6 or 9, but I will advise you to start making pictures with f/16 on bright, sunshine days; they will get good results.

At any time use the sun shade cone fitted to the lens flange, as that will prevent reflection. Pictures can be taken against the sun if properly shaded and beautiful effects obtained, little known to the public.

Now, you must learn to use the panoramic tripod part, as it is very interesting and you can work it very easily at the same time you turn the handle gently. Learn first and then soon enough you will secure splendid panoramic effects.

After the film is exposed, clean the aperture of the film window, the track and the pressure door, as small pieces of emulsion are likely to gather and scratch the film when running a new one. Then remove the film box and when at home you may proceed to develop the same.

Developing the Film
There are many concerns that finish the entire work for you, but developing is an easy matter.

Photography is based on the action of light upon silver salts. The action of light upon those salts is to turn them black in a greater or less degree. Those salts are coated upon the celluloid film spread over gelatine emulsion as a general principle.

When the exposure is made, colored white objects turn the emulsion dark, and dark objects which do not reflect white light, affect the emulsion little, if the subject and the length of time of any, in accordance with the color of the exposure.

The effects, if any, can not be seen on the new film at all, but when developing same, under a chemical action.

Thus, we need a developing outfit either home-made like the one mentioned in the first part of my article, or ready bought from a manufacturer.

There are many outfits on the market which you can buy in New York or Chicago. What you need is the following:

One developing tray or tank; one wetting tank, that can be used for staining the film in any color; one fixing tank, and one washing tank.

Either Tank or Tray
As mentioned, they can be either tank or tray. The difference is that with a tank you dip your frames in and the work is easily done; and with the tray you must handle the raw films a little more carefully. The trays can be square or round.

You need also a windin stand or a rewinder. And if needing the work quickly you must have a drying drum roll of course at least two hundred feet of film.

The solutions needed for developing are the following, which obtain the best results:

Developer: Adurool, for 1,000 ounces; water, 660 ounces; sodium sulphite, twenty-one ounces, and sodium carbonate, thirty-two ounces.

Dissolve those chemicals in the order given and when dissolved add six ounces of Adurol Hauff (German make).

The developing must be watched closely with a watch in hand, but it is almost a mechanical one if properly executed.

For the fixing solution: Hypo, for 1,000 ounces; water, 700 ounces; hypo, 10 pounds. Dissolve by continuous revolving the chemical in a tin tank. Add 105 ounces of water, 1/2 ounce bisulphite and 3/2 ounce citric acid.

The bisulphite and citric acids act as a clearing and hardening solution and also as a preserver for the hypo, which can be used repeatedly until exhausted. I mean until it is a weak solution and not until it disappears.

Preparations for Developing

Buy a red electric bulb specially made for photographic work, and install it in the room by merely attaching it to the socket lamp.

Fill the wetting tank with clean water. Have your winding stand or revolver; wind on your film, by attaching the end of the same to the frame with a tack if on a frame, or with the pressure hinges if on the rack.

Revolve the same around so that it exerts the frame without overlapping each side, tightening the film a little, and when the frame is filled, cut the film at the end and put on another tack or pressure hinge.

Thus, we are ready to develop. Though you must bear in mind that all this work is done with the door closed and with only the red light, for white light spoils the film entirely.

Dip the frame in the wetting tank, moving same for a minute. Drop the water before dipping the frame into the developer tank. Then put the frame into the developer (Adurol solution) and you will move the frame up and down, but always covering the whole frame with the solution.

It is not necessary to move the same frequently, but about six times per minute, the images will appear in from 15 to 20 seconds and all will be completely developed in four or five minutes.

Recommends Adurol

I recommend Adurol, because it is a good keeping solution, staining, giving stronger density than others with all details without being a rapid acting developer; and the used developer can be thusly used over and over again. I have used the said solution with four thousand feet of film, negative and positive, which is cheap enough.

After the four or five minutes’ developing, wash off the surplus developer by dipping the frame into the washing solution and then proceed to immerse the frame into the fixing solution, moving the frame for thirty seconds up and down. Leave the frame there for fifteen or twenty minutes.

After twenty minutes the frame can be taken out to any white light, and dipped into the washing tank, which is filled with water from any supply.

The washing of films does not require a given time, unless you want to keep the negative stainless, but for quick work I always wash my films between fifteen and thirty minutes, and let them dry in a draughtless room, or wind them on a drying drum which will continuously revolve either by hand or by electric motor.

I have a home-made drum with a twenty-four inch diameter cylinder made with thirty-five wooden moulding in six feet lengths, to which I attached a twenty-inch round moulding pulley, a machine round belt and a common sewing machine electric motor, which gives my drum a continuous movement of one hundred turns per minute. With a drum like that the film is dried in about one hour or two.

Avoid All Dust

Be careful of dust, as same injures the films badly.

After drying, loosen the film from the frame, rack or drum and wind the film with the gelatine side in.

Clean with a cloth the celluloid part of the film, the brilliant part.

Assort all pieces of film by uniting them carefully and cutting out any bad or spoiled parts, taking care when patching same to leave a stub on the end of the film; just cut exactly on the line of the second film holes, leaving thus a hole after the dividing line of the picture.

The other end must be cut exactly in the line of the dividing picture. Scrape every part of the end film and it is easy done by wetting that little part and scraping the same with your finger-nail covered with a soft handkerchief. The emulsion will be off, leaving the clear celluloid; then apply with your own finger a little of film cement to that part of the celluloid; this makes the cement, and also apply it to the celluloid side of the film that you desire to patch.

By bringing them together, so that the holes of the films correspond exactly, and by pressing carefully for a few seconds, the film is patched, the celluloid will be united.

Many Styles of Film Menders

There are on the markets several styles of film menders, which will help out easily such operation. Film cement can be bought from any dealer, but if you fail to get same, it is easy to be made. A piece of film of celluloid, five inches long and one ounce of acetic, is a satisfactory cement for common celluloid films, but for non-inflammable films one ounce of acetic ether, one ounce of acetone merch and one emulsion less non-inflammable film cut in film strips, it will work fine for either film stock.

When all is assorted, the negative film is ready for printing.

Get from your dealer positive film stock, any kind; Eastman, Alga, Lumiere and so forth. All films come within day wrapped paper in boxes. Handling of the film is the same as with the negative stock, with the exception that the silver emulsion is not so sensitive.

If the printing is to be done by the same camera, load the positive in just the same way as if it were a negative and thread the same likewise into the other film dark box. Have your negative on the special fixture on top of the camera; pass it through the slit directly over the track and through the slit under the camera.

Watch that the film picture window corresponds with the picture itself by turning the handle previously set to the slow crank axle, and see that when the shutter is open in front of the film window, the picture is entirely correct and does not show the dividing line of next picture.

Closing the Entire Camera Door

Thus done, the printing will take place by closing the film door holding both the negative and the positive, and closing the entire camera door to prevent the positive from being struck by light.

The lens door must be opened completely to let the light shine on the shutter mechanism, and the shutter itself all opened, thus it will leave one-third opened and two-thirds closed, before the film window.

Any way, follow the instructions enclosed for the camera manipulation.

When all is ready, get a fifty-candlepower incandescent bulb, and set same about six inches from the camera window for a little dense negative, but for a clear, sharp detail looking negative, a distance of ten inches is good enough.

Have a basket underneath the camera tripod to receive the negative, which naturally shall wind out from the camera, and begin to print by turning the handle of the machine step by step, moving about one hundred pictures per minute, or in other words, one hundred turns per minute, as the lower crank gives one turn per picture while the motion picture crank does eight or nine pictures per turn.

Developing with the Same Solution

When all is printed, rewind the negative and take out the filled positive film box and proceed to develop same, with the same solutions and with the same time as for developing the negative film.

Do not be afraid of doing exactly as I have written, and you will have fine positive films from your negative.

If you have very weak positives, you may tint same, or tint some parts of them as your taste desires by using aniline colors suitable for film staining, and remembering that with two ounces you can make one gallon of tint solution.

Do not tint your films on the same developing frames, but use special frames for that as well as special tank, and dry them on the frame and not on the drum. Those manipulations will help to stain your next batch of films.

You can mix ten ounces of glycerine with each 1,000 ounces of tincture solu- (Continued on page 59.)

LIVING DOWN A NAME

MANAGER W. W. DUNLAP of Clune's Exclusive, Los Angeles, formerly for women and children, and men admitted only when in company with women, finds the name of the theatre to be a hoodoo since the exclusive feature has been discontinued. Beginning Monday October 5, all the newspapers will carry one-inch advertisements containing this copy: "The Haynie Theatre that the way to launch a serial story is to smear the bulk of the advertising money in advance. The serial was opened to remarkably good business and the management feels satisfied with the campaign."

The story was run on Tuesdays in the local daily paper and the pictures were shown on Friday. Buttons were also shown which were considered the best advertising got out for the picture; and the theatre passed a lot of billboard paper. The price was raised to fifteen cents when "The Perils of Pauline" opened. A four-reel regular service was used, and it was a case of either run six reels at an increased price or ditch two reels.

The former course was adopted and the theatre had a fifteen-cent program once in two weeks. Shortly thereafter "Lucille Love" was started on the same plan. A fine business with both of these serials was done at that price, and the only objection heard was that the admission price was so uncertain that nobody could tell in advance what he would have to pay. That defect was remedied by jumping the show to six reels and charging fifteen cents all the time.

The results have been more than satisfactory. More people are seeing the pictures now than ever before. Of course, the management is putting up a good show for the money. It is playing the "open market" a good deal and buying the best pictures that can be found. The film bills are high, judged by the standards of the ordinary country town, but the manager thinks that the public is willing to pay for good service.

PUTTING IT ACROSS WITH ADVERTISING

IT may be that "The Trey o' Hearts" received more than its share of publicity in Fairmont, Minn., but it is the theory of the manager of the Haynie Theatre that the way to launch a serial story is to smear the bulk of the advertising money in advance. The serial was opened to remarkably good business and the management feels satisfied with the campaign.

PICTURE OF THEATRE EFFECTIVE ADVERTISEMENT

MANAGER J. A. BERNOWER, of the Alhambra Theatre in Canton, O., has introduced a form of newspaper advertising that is producing satisfying results for his house.

At the top of his advertisement each day he prints a zinc etching picture of the front of his theatre. The picture makes his advertisement stand out and an appreciable increase of patronage during the past summer was traced absolutely to this particular advertising "stunt" of Bernower.

THE CLIMAX OF "THE HOPELESS GAME" (Lubin—Two Reels—October 21)
big drawing card for the merchants, he discovered, and he came to the conclusion that it would be a good thing for the Broadway.

In three days he had the front of the theatre changed—floral decorations were added; the interior of the house was brightened up in several ways; a new and larger orchestra was secured, and then he advertised:

Fall Opening of CLUNE'S BROADWAY

Everything New

Below was given the features of the program, a mention of the new soprano and the big orchestra. To use the expression of the owner, "it was just like opening a new house." The business for the first two days tripled the corresponding days of the previous week.

NEW PROJECTION MACHINES HAVE GOOD EFFECT ON PATRONAGE

MANAGER JOSEPH WEIDMAN, of the Central and Broadway theatres, Albany, N. Y., is fitting his theatres with new machines. The Broadway was recently treated to two of the best makes, and the patrons were delighted when the pictures were shown clearer and brighter than ever. Mr. Weldman is thinking seriously of making the Broadway house a ten-cent affair; that is, to charge that admission every night in the week. As the Broadway is situated near the Union Station, and thereby gets a big transient trade it is believed the new scheme would be a success.

DRUG STORE LOBBY FRAME CATCHES EVERYBODY

MANAGER WRIGHT, of the Clinton Square Theatre, Albany, N. Y., has stolen a march on his many competitors by placing a show board in the lobby of one of Albany's largest drug stores.

This show being in the shopping district, the board is seen by thousands every day, and has done much to boost the Clinton's business.

"FOR SWEET CHARITY'S SAKE"

CHILDREN from all the Syracuse, N. Y., charitable institutions will be admitted without charge hereafter to the Regent Theatre, on the first two Saturdays of each month. The new house is enjoying an enormous patronage, and the presentation of pictures that children can be taken to with impunity has been one of the big aims of the management.

HAMILTON PREMIUM WITH FIVE CENT TICKET

THE Lyceum Theatre has announced that every Wednesday it will give one Hamilton premium coupon with every five-cent admission. This is the first house in Syracuse, N. Y., to try this method as a business booster.

WASHINGTON BALL WILL MAKE FILM HISTORY

Auto Sight-Seeing, Banquet for Screen Favorites and Celluloid Record of Event Will Make Occasion a Red-Letter Day

Special to Motion Picture News

THE thought uppermost in motion picture circles in the Capital City at present is the ball and reception under the auspices of the local Motion Picture Exhibitors' League and the Washington "Post," to take place on Hallowe'en night, at Convention Hall. All arrangements have been completed for this event, which promises to be a real novelty in Washington.

At least fifty players from various eastern studios will be in the hall to meet and dance with their large circle of admirers here. Arrangements have been made to bring the photoplayers in two special Pullmans from New York on the Congressional Limited Saturday afternoon.

Those from Philadelphia will join the party at that city. A special committee will meet the train at the Union Station and hurry the guests in autos to the Raleigh Hotel and later escort them to the ball room. By popular demand, the Essanay Company have permitted Francis X. Bushman to come all the way from Chicago to greet his host of Washingtonians.

The Convention Hall is being turned into a tented garden by drapers and florists. Two orchestras of twenty-five men will furnish continuous music for the dancing, which will begin early. As soon as the players arrive the floor will be cleared and the photo stars will circle the room in a grand march, led by screen favorites. The reception to the players will continue throughout the entire evening, and many of them will mingle with the public in dancing. Some special features will also be served. At the close of the dance the players will be the guests of the Motion Picture League at a banquet at Harvey's, where an elaborate menu will be served. The arrangement of the menu promises to savor of the screen and some surprises have been arranged for the event. It is planned to take a motion picture of Convention Hall when the ball is at its height, and this will be exhibited in the local theatres.

The various committees who are making this event a success are as follows:

Publicity: Fulton Brylawski, Harry Crandall and Wm. P. Herbst
Program: V. H. Stonesiffer, R. H. Campbell, and T. H. Eastwood
Music: J. Morgan, Julian Brylawski, and Noris Davis
Decoration: Ira LaMott, Alan Bachrach, Ned Stein, and H. S. Wolf Reception: The entire local Motion Picture Exhibitors' League.

THEODORE FRANKLIN.

ELECTRIC SIGN ON ROOF

A LIVE-WIRE stunt in advertising has been started by Harold Edel, manager of the Strand Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y. He has just signed contracts for a second large electric sign atop one of the largest office buildings in Buffalo.

The one on Shelton square is already in working order and it is upon this sign that the weekly attractions are flashed nightly in thousands of immaculate bulbs.

BENEFIT NIGHT FOR REVOLUTIONARY SOCIETY

TO aid the Daughters of the American Revolution in his city, Manager Bulger, of the Lyric motion picture theatre, of Greenville, III, put on a benefit night for the society recently. He arranged a special patriotic program, heading it with the three reel Edison play, "The Southerners." The benefit drew out a big crowd and increased the popularity of the Lyric Theatre.
Cleveland Exhibitors Protest Against Neff and Censors Cleveland, O., Oct. 23.

Editor, Motion Picture News,
New York City,

Dear Sir:—This is to advise that the following resolution was this date passed by the Cleveland Local, No. 1, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League of America:

Whereas, it has been announced that a trade journal in behalf of the motion picture business has been proposed and is about to be launched by Mr. Neff, Mr. Kohl, Mr. Vestal and Mr. Wilson;

Be it resolved, that we absolutely condemn the attempt of anyone using their office with or without intent to take advantage of their official position for the purpose of aiding their private enterprises.

Be it further resolved, that if Mr. Vestal and Mr. Wilson propose to publish such a journal that they immediately resign from the censor board, and Mr. Neff resign from the state presidency of the League and Mr. Kohl as national vice-president of Ohio.

Be it further resolved, that a copy of this resolution be sent to trade journals and all interested parties.

Yours very truly,
W. H. Horsey,
Secretary.

THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS’ LEAGUE OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.
Washington, D. C., Oct. 22.

Editor, Motion Picture News,
New York City.

Dear Sir:—I beg to inform you that the House and Senate have passed the war tax bill relating to theatres after changing the scale as passed by the Senate slightly, so that the new scale is as follows:

Theatres with a seating capacity of 250 or less, $25; more than 250 and less than 300, $30; more than 300 and less than 800, $75; over 800, $100.

Of course this is a little more oppressive than the scale adopted by the Senate, but will nevertheless be an enormous saving to the motion picture exhibitors throughout the United States.

I wish to thank Motion Picture News for the stand taken by them and the support given our efforts for the reduction of the oppressive tax as contained in the House bill. I have, as you know, been subjected to no little criticism for the graded scale which I proposed, and which has been substantially adopted, for the reason that certain exhibitors and associations thought even this was too big.

Personally, of course, I should have been very glad to have had the tax reduced to a minimum or even altogether abolished, but both of these were impossible of accomplishment.

The graded tax which I succeeded in having adopted was not hastily considered by me despite the very brief time in which I had to prepare same, but was the result of very careful consideration and deliberations with a great many members of the United States Senate, particularly the members of the Senate Finance Committee which had the matter in charge, as being the only substitute which we had a chance of having adopted. I believe that insistence on anything materially less would have resulted in a total defeat of our efforts.

I hope that in the future matters affecting the interests of exhibitors in general throughout the country may receive their united and not their divided support.

Very sincerely yours,
Fulton Brylawski.

Arouse the Public Against Censorship

MAJESTIC-RELIANCE STUDIOS
Scenario Bureau
4500 Sunset Boulevard
Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 17.

Editor, Motion Picture News,
New York City.

Dear Sir:—It has occurred to me that one very effective way to bring the question of censorship directly to the attention of the public would be through the use of properly worded slides in theatres. It is difficult to believe that if the people were made sufficiently acquainted with the true conditions, they would continue in their present passive approval of censorship as it is practised in many cities and states. No policy of censorship can long exist in any American community in the face of strong public disapproval.

As evidence that the American public is in a mood to assert opposition to censorship when given the opportunity, permit me to cite the results that followed the projection on the screen of two paragraphs used as preliminary leaders or sub-titles in connection with "The Avenging Conscience," when that picture was exhibited in Pasadena and Los Angeles. The two paragraphs written by Mr. Griffith were as follows:

"A PLEA FOR THE ART OF THE MOTION PICTURE.

"We do not fear censorship, for we have no wish to offend with indecencies or obscenities, but we do demand, as a right, the liberty to show the dark side of wrong, that we may illuminate the bright side of virtue—the same liberty that is conceded to the art of the written word—that art to which we owe the Bible and the works of Shakespeare.

"A great divine is quoted as saying that from childhood his one besetting sin was brutality, but that witnessing the play of 'Oliver Twist,' with its scenes of savage ferocity between Bill and Nancy Sikes, did more to arouse within himself an abhorrence of brutality than all the lessons and sermons otherwise of his entire life."

When these paragraphs were flashed on the screen in Pasadena the spectators broke into applause, and again in Los Angeles, where the picture ran for a week, the applause was repeated at several of the exhibitions. On two of these occasions I was present and noted particularly that the applause was vigorous and distributed over the entire house of nearly 3,000 spectators.

Why would it not be practicable for Motion Picture News to have suitable argumentative slides prepared and furnished to motion picture theatres, to be projected at each show? It appears that an appeal to the public is the only resort left to the motion picture interests, and this plan followed up with vigor could hardly fail to bring forth results in all cities and states where censorship has become a menace to the photodrama.

Yours very truly,
Frank E. Woods.
PHILLIPS PICTURE CONTEST UNIQUE PUBLICITY PLAN

It seems certain that no one thing in motion picture advertising has attracted so much interest among exhibitors in and around New York for some time as the Coles Phillips picture contest. It is new, good, and unquestionably an example of the highest grade advertising ever attempted in the theatrical sphere. Moreover, it is not expensive or troublesome.

Mr. Phillips' art work is well known and ardently admired by the great bulk of the American people; and this, along with the cleverness of the scheme, and the success it is meeting with, are honest reflections of the experience and ability of the men who make up the Coles Phillips Company.

They are really doing something for the motion picture business; and in justice to every exhibitor, as well as to the company, it is only fair to say that the proposition is worthy of attention. It is the kind of thing that appeals to almost every man, woman and child.

The outline of the proposition can only be outlined briefly here. The company furnishes the exhibitor with a series of twenty different kinds of six-color pictures of twenty prominent motion picture actors and actresses.

These are made by the finest method of off-set lithography, and are suitable for framing. Exhibitors give them to their patrons entirely free through a period of twenty weeks, at the end of which the company distributes numerous cash prizes to the people who have collected the greatest number of the pictures. Other attractive advertising is furnished in connection with the contest.

FAMOUS PLAYERS SECURE "ESMERALDA"

For some time past the Famous Players Film Company has been receiving requests from exhibitors and the public to star Mary Pickford in a film version of the celebrated play "Esmeralda." In order to comply with these numerous petitions Famous Players has now secured this favorite drama by Frances Hodgson Burnett and William H. Gillette, in which Miss Pickford will be presented within the next few months.

Miss Pickford's mastery of the art of blending comedy and pathos will have full sway in the role of Esmeralda, the little country girl who suddenly becomes an heiress, and is torn away from home and her farmer lover by an ambitious and mercenary mother, forced to learn the stilted conventions of the ultra-smart society she abhors, and betrothed to a titled fortune-hunter she detests, but who at last rebels and flies back to the brave heart that has been faithful to her.

"Esmeralda" is one of the most notable successes that ever came from the pen of its gifted author, and its charm and appeal should be continued and even increased in the motion picture production.

Lasky Party Leaves for Coast in Private Car

Eighteen Persons, Including President of Company, Who Intends to Remain Four Weeks at California Studio, Start Across Continent.

The private car Lippinopo was engaged by General Manager Goldish, of the Lasky company, and eighteen persons for a through trip to Los Angeles.

Jesse L. Lasky, head of the company, intends to remain at the Lasky studios other Klav and Erlanger-Joseph Brooks' productions, was with the travelers and will make her first screen appearance in "The Goose Girl."

Dustin Farnum, an exclusive Lasky star, will travel as far as Chicago with the Lasky party, when he will divert to one of the Southern roads for New Orleans where he will join Oscar Apfel, who is now there. Farnum will pose for a few Mississippi River scenes, essential to the Lasky-Lieber production.

SOME OF THE LASKY TRANSCONTINENTAL PARTY

for four weeks to watch and aid in the enlarging of the producing facilities and the staging of Harold MacGrath's "The Goose Girl," which will be an early release of that firm.

Another director, a member of the trans-continental party, to join the Lasky staff is Frederick Thompson, the former Vitagraph and Famous Players' director, who will immediately upon arrival at Hollywood begin work on "Merely Mary Ann," in which Marguerite Clark will play the leading role.

During Mr. Thompson's connections with the Famous Players Film Company he produced the "Sign of the Cross" and "The Spitfire," and while with Vitagraph was responsible for many of the better features created by that concern.

Edith Taliano, the dainty younger member of the famous Taliano sisters, well remembered for their work in "Polly of the Circus," "Young Wisdom," "Springtime," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Tipping the Winner," and of "Cameo Kirby" which Farnum played in during its stage vogue.

Winifred Kingston, seen in "The Squaw Man," "Brewster's Millions," "The Only Son," "The Call of the North," "The Virginian" and several other Lasky productions, goes to New Orleans with Farnum and a cameraman. Miss Kingston will play the leading female role opposite Farnum in "Cameo Kirby." From New Orleans Farnum, Apfel, the cameraman and Miss Kingston will journey to Los Angeles on the Southern Pacific.

Marguerite Clark, who appears with the Lasky company by reason of an arrangement with Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players Film Company, accompanied by her sister, is a member of the private car personnel and will begin work on "Merely Mary Ann" just as soon as she arrives at Hollywood.

In addition to the stars and Mr. Lasky, the party contains two wardrobe women, a designer of costumes and two expert "period" seamstresses.
FAMOUS PLAYERS SECURES RIGHTS TO "THE OLD HOMESTEAD"

ONE of the most notable acquisitions of stage successes yet secured for the screen is Denman Thompson's great rural drama, "The Old Homestead," the film rights of which have just been obtained by the Famous Players.

The Famous Players are now making preparations to produce the film version of this celebrated play in the old New Hampshire village which suggested the drama to its author, and to use the very house that is featured in the title.

It is estimated that over twenty million people have laughed and cried over "The Old Homestead" in the United States and Canada alone.

The Famous Players executed the transaction for the motion picture rights with Frank Thompson, son and heir of Denman Thompson, through the agency of Clarkson P. Ryttenberg. For many years Mr. Thompson refused absolutely to consider motion picture propositions for his father's great success, though he received frequent and flattering offers for the work, and his assignment of the film rights of the play to the Famous Players again indicates the esteem with which that concern is held in literary and dramatic circles.

The film production of "The Old Homestead" will forever immortalize this splendid dramatic conception, and the Famous Players film version will undoubtedly uphold the highest traditions of that concern.

Beauty Parlor Transforms "Country Mouse"

ADELE FARRINGTON makes her bow to the screen public in "The Country Mouse," a four-part serio-comedy written especially for her by Hobart Bosworth. The story is cleverly worked out and the very human little touches of her acting will make a hit with any audience.

When Billy Balderson (Hobart Bosworth) and two of the cronies discuss the high-handed ways in which the railroad treats the farmer, dowdy, little Addie (Adele Farrington), Billy's wife, thinks her husband the most wonderful orator in the world. A few days later they attend a political rally, at which a lobbyist, George Marshall (Marshall Stedman), defends the railroad.

FAMOUS PLAYERS WILL RELEASE "THE STRAIGHT ROAD"

"The Straight Road," conceded to be one of the best dramas of the late Clyde Fitch, is to be introduced to the motion picture public through the Famous Players four-part production, released November 12. In the film version, Gladys Hanson, one of America's most talented young leading women, admirably portrays Mill O'Hara, the girl of the slums, who rises above her environment to make one of the most tremendous sacrifices of which the heart of a woman is capable.

"The Straight Road" is the drama of a submerged soul's conflict and triumph. Clyde Fitch knew the city and its various strata, and in "The Straight Road" he supplied a play that does not alone show the city's pavements, but penetrates far beneath the surface, into the hidden soul of New York.

Gladys Hanson is supported by a capable cast who suggest the original characters with commendable fidelity, including William Russell, Iva Shepard, Arthur Hoops and Lorraine Huling.

PAUL PANZER AN "EXEMPT"

Paul Panzer, who spills looks of hatred and deeds of villainy all through the "Perils of Pauline" was telling the other day the reason why he is not fighting for Germany in the present war. It will be remembered that Mr. Panzer, though he has been in this country for twelve years and is thoroughly Americanized, is a lieutenant in the German artillery reserve.

When the war broke out the popular "villain" went to the German consul-general's office and asked for advice. He explained that his two brothers were in service under the Crown Prince Rupprecht of Wuertemberg as lieutenants of artillery and that he is the sole support of his aged mother and wife and child. In view of this he was made exempt from the necessity of answering the call, it is said. The German consul-general has thus saved "poor Pauline" from an untimely and premature death.

HILL THEATRICAL DIRECTORY AN AUTHORITY

The Gus Hill National Theatrical Directory is the latest addition to motion picture literature which should be in the exhibitor's business library, as well as in the hands of exchange men, state rights buyers and producers.

The feature of the 1914-15 edition of the work, which supersedes the Cahn Theatrical Guide, is a comprehensive list of the leading motion picture theatres of the country. But even the information to be found in the legitimate and vaudeville sections of the work, is of direct or indirect importance to anyone in any branch of the amusement field.

About one hundred of the book's six and eighty odd pages are devoted to motion picture theatres, exchanges and cognate information.

"Rip Van Winkle" Revived in Alco Release

Jefferson "Legitimate" Favorite, Considered Dead Speculation by Bouicault, Who Wanted Cash Instead of Royalties, Will Please on Screen

In view of the release by Alco Film Corporation on November 9 of "Rip Van Winkle," which is the production of B. A. Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., the history of the original play, "Rip Van Winkle" is most interesting.

Thomas Jefferson is playing the part of Rip in the Rolfe picturization, but, of course, as everyone knows, Joseph Jefferson, father of Thomas, was the creator of the part. Joseph Jefferson was more than that: He was, indeed, part author of the play. Although his grandfather had played a "Rip Van Winkle" version, Joseph was the first to have a play written along the lines so familiar to the last generation. He disregarded the version of Joseph Jefferson, the third, and took Washington Irving's "Sketch Book" to Dion Bouicault. Joseph Jefferson showed Bouicault what he had written and wanted Bouicault to elaborate on the same lines.

"Great Scott, man," exclaimed Bouicault, "do you think the public would stand for a man sleeping twenty years?"

There was a long argument over the advisability of the thing. Bouicault refused absolutely to put any faith in it. After it was settled that Bouicault was to write the play, Jefferson asked if Bouicault wanted a royalty or cash.

"Give me cash; I want no royalty; I want my money quick; because it is the last I will ever see from Rip Van Winkle. It won't earn a cent of royalty," he said.

So Joseph Jefferson paid $5,000 cash to Bouicault for his rights in the play which he was to fashion.

Thomas Jefferson tells this incident.

"And 'Rip Van Winkle' has made the Jefferson family rich," he adds. "Mem-
FRISCO FILM EXCHANGE FORM TRADE BOARD

THE film exchange interests of San Francisco have succeeded in the efforts to form an organization which have been under way for some time, and have drawn up a constitution and by-laws and elected officers. The new organization will be known as the Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco and will be governed by a board of five directors. Its chief object will be the protection of its members and to afford a ready medium for co-operative work with exhibitors throughout the State of California.

This new organization is looked upon with much favor by the leading exhibitors, many of whom have expressed the opinion that their branch of the business had been made to suffer damage and loss of reputation by unscrupulous members of the business.

At the recent convention of exhibitors held in San Francisco mention was made by a speaker of the fact that the film exchange men were organizing and J. Ray Williams of Sacramento commented at some length on this information, declaring that it was the best piece of news that he had heard in a long time and that he expected to see much good come of it.

The directors who have been chosen for the first term are: M. L. Markowitz, of the California Film Exchange, president; J. R. Crone, of the Mutual Film Company, vice-president; O. V. Traggardh, secretary and treasurer; Thomas North and Sol L. Lesser. At an early date offices are to be established in a downtown building convenient to the film exchanges.

ALCO OPENS DENVER EXCHANGE

The Alco group of exchanges has been increased by the addition of the Alco Film Service of Denver, Colorado.

The newest Alco youngster will serve the territory embraced by Colorado, Wyoming, Utah and New Mexico. Gronbacker and Bailey, two of the best-known film men on the Pacific Coast, have taken over the franchise, and are in direct charge of the new exchange.

Since last August seventeen Alco exchanges have been established over the entire country. From all points come reports of the utmost harmony; everybody in Alco is getting together and staying together. The managers report that the Alco Program is taking first place in the many cities which they serve.

PITTSBURGH EXCHANGES MAY HAVE NEW HOME

Is Pittsburgh to have a new home for exchanges? Will the old town of smoke and fire prove building for their housing and take them from their old haunts in Film Row in the Fourth avenue-Perry street district?

This question has been asked many times and it is likely that it will be answered shortly. A well-known business man of Pittsburgh who is heavily interested in the motion picture industry, it is said, has laid plans for the erection of a nine story building which will contain a fireproof building on the floor and provide, instead of a film row, a film centre which will be a convenience to all concerned as well as eliminate a menace to the city as the conditions surrounding the business now are.

The promoter of the scheme desires his name withheld for the present. He has options on several plots of ground in various parts of the downtown section, but the one favored and the most likely to be used will be the corner of Wood street and Second avenue. The location is excellent.

Plans in the rough have been prepared for a nine-story building, 48 by 92 feet. This location gives a frontage on two streets and the lot runs back to an alley. Freight and passenger elevators will be provided and the necessary vaults and safeguards against fire, such as automatic sprinklers and water sprinklers.

The film men of the city have been worried of late on account of an ordinance that is soon to be introduced requiring them to keep their films in fireproof vaults and make other changes about their plants that will make the industry more safe than it is at this time. The men say they will be put to an enormous expense and will in the end only have to remove from their present locations by virtue of an ordinance that will make it impossible to conduct their business in places where it now is transacted.

Many of the exchange managers fear to answer the telephone when it rings at night at their home after they have retired, saying that they are afraid it will be the announcement that Film Row is in flames.

The present quarters of the film men are such that should a fire start nothing of a miracle would keep the fire from eating up all the exchange houses in that section. This is known to the men who are conducting the film houses and to the fire department of the city and it is with the "Safety First" sign in their minds that the city fathers have anxiously to see the peril of the game eliminated as far as possible.

CAPITAL EXCHANGE MEN PREDICT GOOD YEAR

The exchange managers of Washington, D. C., are optimistic to the point of enthusiasm over the past and future of the business in the nation's capital.

"My business has increased so much," declared Sidney B. Lust, of Warner's Features, "that I have established branches in Baltimore, Md., and Charlotte, N. C."

George H. Christoffers, special representative of the World Film Corporation, had this to say: "If there were closer co-operation between exhibitors and exchanges many unnecessary lawsuits, much money, and much disagreeable controversy could be saved. Market conditions are fine at present."

C. L. Worthington, manager of the Eclectic exchange, said: "The weeding out of the amateur Vitaphone theatre and the high cost of living have assisted the motion picture business. Our exhibit room has been found very useful to exhibitors."

The Electric Film Supply Company, under the able management of D. W. Smiley, reports business improving, and that the big productions are being held back for more favorable booking later. The Greater New York Film Exchange also has only a cheerful report to make.

The Mutual Film Corporation reports: "The Million Dollar Mystery is going strong in the residential districts. Keystone comedies are in demand, as are also the one-reelers."

Mr. Lavelle, at the helm of the Universal forces, made this remark: "Business is excellent, but the long serials are losing favor. However, there is opportunity for short serials, covering from four to six releases."

ALCO IN NEW QUARTERS AT FRISCO

The Alco Film Company has secured quarters in a splendid building now being completed at Eddy and Taylor streets, San Francisco, Cal. Pending the completion of the new offices the business of this concern is being carried on from the Golden Gate Film Exchange, 234 Eddy street.
Alliance Companies Have Many Novelties

"Path Forbidden" Will Make Hit With Fine Double Exposure—"The Man Who Could Not Lose" Contains Distinctive Scenes

THE Excelsior Feature Film Company, Inc., releasing its productions through the Alliance exchange, has received many letters from different exchange men throughout the country commending it on the wonderful double exposure displayed in "The Path Forbidden." There is a constant demand throughout the country for good features, and the Excelsior Company is living up to its policy of supplying pictures manufactured with the one and only idea of furnishing good clean entertainment in a pleasing manner.

The members of the Favorite Players Company were guests at a dinner given by Charles Neville Buck, author of "The Key to Yesterday," which was the book selected by the Favorite Players as a story worthy of being the initial feature of a new company. Their policy is to produce only films of distinction.

Mr. Buck, author of many successful books and plays, made a long speech in which he complimented the company for the wonderful interpretation of the different characters they portrayed, and he was especially lavish in his praise of Carlyle Blackwell, whose insight and keen judgment enabled him to see the dramatic possibilities of Mr. Buck's book.

A paragraph of Mr. Buck's speech is recorded as follows:

"I consider it an honor to be present where I can personally congratulate Mr. Blackwell for his portrayal of the dual role of Marston, the world renowned artist, and Carter, the revolutionist and all-around bad man, which I thought, when writing this book, was a role so difficult that it was an impossibility for one man to play it, and still clearly portray the two widely contrasted characters."

Changes at Electric

Some additions have been made to the force of the Electric Theatre Supply Company, Washington, D. C. These are: H. E. Reddish, who has been placed in charge of the Baltimore distributing branch and Earle E. Reese, who has been sent on the road in the southern district. G. W. Smiley, local manager, considers these men important acquisitions to Electric Theatre Supply Company.

A Proposition for Exhibitors with a Punch
New Firm of Morrison and Poppe Launch an Idea Born of Long and Intimate Study of Exhibitors' Needs

INNOVATIONS in the field of motion pictures are so common that frequently they receive little more than passing notice.

The announcement, however, that Mr. Morrison and Mr. Poppe have entered the business with an absolutely new idea attaches special interest to this fact. Connected with the "Billboard" for several years, they worked side by side, but never until now have they deemed it advisable to get into the business for themselves.

Through their close contact with the business they became intimately acquainted with the needs of the exhibitor and evolved an idea which has culminated in the formation of a new firm operating under the trade name of Morrison & Poppe, with offices in the Times building, New York.

Mr. Morrison is a man of intimate knowledge of the motion picture business and is widely known among the trade in all its branches.

For several years he served as manager of the "Billboard" motion picture department in its New York office and was later made manager of the same paper's Chicago office. Later he acted as manager of regular and feature exchanges. He is thoroughly alive to the necessities of the exhibitor, and promises that the new proposition he and Mr. Poppe have will fill a long felt want.

Mr. Poppe has also been connected with the "Billboard," but in later years was manager and advance representative of various road attractions. He, too, is familiar with the theatre in all its phases.

With the knowledge of the business that Mr. Morrison and Mr. Poppe possess, coupled with an ample store of energy and stick-to-it-ivencess, and a proposition that is a boon to the exhibitor, it behooves every manager to get in touch with the new firm at once.

Their first advertisement appeared in Motion Picture News of October 24.

Grau Volume in Second Print

The Broadway Publishing Company, of 835 Broadway, N. Y., is a busy place in New York these days. From morning until night the 'phone is ringing with orders for shipments of Robert Grau's new volume on the motion picture industry.

Almost every volume sent out produces additional orders from the same source, and it is a remarkable fact that despite the enormous shipments the demand is still unsatisfied.

If any evidence were needed that this work is the only one covering every angle and phase of the wonderful new motion picture art, the demand proves it.

The "Trade Mark Girl" of Oz

Scores of letters have been received at the Oz Film Company's offices asking the name of the trade mark girl of the Oz pictures. One writer suggested that she be known as the Oz girl with "the million dollar smile," and from now on, according to President L. Frank Baum, she will be.

The smile is the property of Vivian Reed, formerly an artist's model in New York City, who came to the West coast on a pleasure trip. A want ad, calling for sixty pretty girls to work in pictures took Miss Reed to the Oz studio. There the directors, in invoicing the appearance of the girls, placed Miss Reed in Class A, and a few days later she was given a contract with the company for a long term of months. Officers of the Oz company believe they have a rare find in Miss Reed, and she is to be given every opportunity to display her talents.

Neff Meets Wolff at Rochester

Subject of Conference Between Ex-President of League and Empire State Head Kept Secret—Trigger Also Journeys Up-State

Special to Motion Picture News

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 22

THAT there is something brewing in state politics among the motion picture exhibitors is shown by the fact that former President Neff, of the Exhibitors' League, was in the city recently, in conference with A. N. Wolff, president of the New York State Branch of the league.

Mr. Wolff said that the former president spent several hours with him and one or two other local exhibitors during the evening at a local hotel, but would say nothing as to the subject discussed at the conference.

So far as is known there is no change in the attitude of the present officers of the state branch of the league toward the independents. The league is waiting for those who left the organization to make their individual applications for reinstatement.

Mr. Trigger was also reported to have been in this part of the state during the week, visiting Buffalo for a conference with exhibitors there.

BUSHMAN FALLS HEIR TO $25,000 FORTUNE

Francis X. Bushman, Essanay's leading man, has been left a fortune of $25,000.

The widow of Marshall Bushman, of Death Valley, called at the Essanay plant to see the actor. She said her husband, just before his death recently, had seen a moving picture show in which Bushman was starring. He declared the actor was his cousin whom he had not seen since childhood, and bequeathed him a part of the fortune he had made in mining. The actor could not remember such a cousin, but was willing to take the money on a chance.

Mrs. Marshall Bushman has gone to the actor's home in Norfolk, Va., to trace the relationship.

Long Heralded Alco Release Ready November 2

"Salomy Jane," Bret Harte's Famous Story Depicting the Stirring Days of '49 in California, Has Many Gripping Scenes

BEATRIZ MICHELENA in "Salomy Jane," the Alco release of November 2, presents to the picture-loving public a peculiar type of heroine.

Salomy is cold and tender in turn. It is nothing to her to demand at the hands of Rufe the death of the man who has insulted her, for she is the daughter of a Kentucky feudist, and to kill a man is a mere incident in her primitive code.

Yet when "The Man" comes, her coldness disappears and melts into resource for the man she loves. She is quick to face peril for the man; she is all tenderness in her efforts to save him.

This dual quality in Salomy Jane, the heroine, leads to the picturing of many thrilling scenes. If Rufe tries to embrace Salomy, she instantly repulses him with a gun, and when The Man is hunted for the murder of Baldwin, she unhesitatingly shares all dangers with him.

Another scene due to the dual personality of Salomy is that in which the heroine and The Man escape down the river screened behind a log, while the bullets of the passing posse strike harmlessly the log.

Salomy Jane has great charm as a heroine. In spite of her fiery Kentucky spirit, the men of the California mining camp are at her feet. Jack Marbury, the gambler, who loves Salomy, feels her charm to such an extent that he allows his rival, The Man, to escape. Later Marbury aids Salomy to dash from the midst of a posse which is about to detach her.

In her dealings with the men of the posse, Salomy is cold and resourceful. But she is again the tender girl when The Man is about to be hanged. The Sheriff asks if anyone will bid The Man good-by, and Salomy unhesitatingly kisses him.

While "Salomy Jane" as a picturization is unusual for its number of gripping scenes, the photography also is remarkable.

As the spectator sits in the darkened theatre, the days of '49 live before him. The illusion is so great that the audience shares with breathless interest the perilous adventures of this interesting type of heroine.

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Oct. 26

THOMAS H. Ince has made a contract with William S. Hart, who made his debut in pictures in the big seven-reeler, "The Two Gun Men," produced by Mr. Ince, to appear in pictures and direct a company for the New York Motion Picture Company for a term of months.

The exact length of time is not stated, but from unofficial sources it is reported that Mr. Hart will remain at the Inceville studio for two years. It is also reported that a six months' contract has been made with Bessie Barriscale and her husband, Howard Hickman, who have been at the Lasky studio.

Shorty Hamilton, comedian of Domino, Kay-Bee and Broncho brand pictures, and Ethel Spurgint, actress at a local theatre, were quietly wedded one evening last week at the home of the parents of the bride, in Venice. Neither members of the theatre stock company or the photoplay companies were advised of the event until after the wedding.

The couple met six weeks ago when Shorty appeared at a Venice theatre to tell the patrons why he did so many funny things before the camera. The manager of the theatre is now demanding another explanation.

The Political Fool" is a two reel Ince production in which Richard Stanton plays leads and directs. The story treats of a poor lad's rise to success in spite of many obstacles.

George Osbourne is again in charge of his company at Inceville, after spending several weeks at his Alamo ranch in the northern part of the state. George reports crops are good.

Another Series is On the Way

Otos Turner, director general of the Universal studio, is writing and producing a series of detective pictures, featuring Herbert Rawlinson as Sanford Quest, scientific criminologist. Work was commenced on the production of the first during the last week, as properties for "The Suburban," from the well-known play, were not ready for the company to begin the making of that four-reel feature directed by Mr. Turner.

Each of the Sanford Quest pictures, consisting of two reels, will be complete within itself, and aside from the character of Quest and his assistants, new characters will be introduced in each of the series.

The J. Warren Kerrigan-Jacques Jacard Victor Company—are now filming the third two-reeler of the Terrance O'Rourke pictures, the second having been completed on the Mojave desert during the past week.

Last week the third series, "The Inn of the Winged God," was filmed. The scenes represent Lutzenburg, where O'Rourke goes in search of the kidnapped daughter of the duchess. For several weeks Mr. Kerrigan and Billie Quinn were practicing broadword and rapier fencing, for scenes in this picture, and their instructor saw that they staged an absolutely correct fight.

The itinerary of the O'Rourke company includes Kara Dagh, in the Balkans; Tangiers, Bombay, Grecian Archipelago, Algiers, Southern France, Port Said, Cuba and other places, but they will not leave Los Angeles, Calif., while on the trip.

In the absence of Al Christie, Nestor director, who is now on his first vacation in three years—spending the time in New York—Eddie Lyons, he of the attractive smile, is taking the part of directing the Nestorites—Lee Moran and Victoria Ford—in two pictures, both comedies, "Love, Luck and Smallpox," and "Jed's Little Elopement." Both will be of one reel.

Elaborate Sets for "Master Key"

It was a very enthusiastic group of photoplayers that emerged from the U. S. projecting room, after witnessing the first two installments of "The Master Key," the next Universal serial. Of the many excellent scenes those of the camp fire, made at night under the direction of Robert Leonard, received the greatest praise.

The company has now taken up the third installment which begins the story—the first installment showing a prologue. This serial carries a synopsis of preceding installments at the beginning of the first reel.

A very elaborate mining town of some forty buildings has been erected at Universal City for this picture, and many of the exteriors are being made there. One of the sensational scenes of the third series will be the rescue, by Leonard, playing the part of the mine engineer, of the daughter of the mine owner.

The girl will be carried down the steep incline in a mine car. Leonard sees her plight, and leaping into a mine bucket suspended from a cable crossing the car tracks at right angles, hangs by his knees and lifts the girl out of the car and carries her to safety.

"The Three O'Hearts" company has filmed the last installment—No. 15—of the Louis Joseph Vance story, at Mission Inn, Riverside, Calif., and following the completion of this all will take a vacation.

The fifteenth installment ends everything happily. In installment seven or eight Judith Trine and Alan Law were married, but later the ceremony was said to be illegal. Judith finds that it is legal.

Her father, Senica Trine, by a fall down the mountains, recovers his senses thought to have been destroyed by paralysis following an auto accident, and arrives at a little country church just as Alan and Rose are to be married.

He raises a revolver to shoot Alan when a belt of lightning kills him and Rose and renders Alan unconscious. Judith then claims Alan as her husband and they are reconciled. Many of the scenes are made in Mission Inn lighted for the occasion by Winfield-Kerner actinic ray lamps, manufactured in Los Angeles.

Unusual Love Story

The Lloyd Ingraham-Powers Company, including Edna Maion, Bert Hadley and Joe King, were spending a week recently at Arrowhead Hot Springs, Calif., utilizing the heretofore unphotographed scenery in the filming of an unusual story. This deals with a city maiden, a daughter of the idle rich, who goes to the fashionable resort in the Canadian timber country to recuperate her health after a strenous social season.

There she meets a woodsman who falls in love with her. The novelty of being courted by an uncouth son of nature pleases the maid and she encourages him. When he shows her a small log cabin he has prepared for her when she becomes his bride, she laughs at him. Months later she is to be welded to a city man.

The guests have assembled at the church, and a package marked a wedding gift is delivered to her by a messenger. She finds a note explaining that insuch the young woodsman gave himself up to her in his life, he should also be hers in death. Inside the package is the woodsman’s skull with a bullet-hole in the forehead. The girl becomes a maniac.

George Bela, working in the big Thalberg production, “The Italian,” had a narrow escape last week, when he insisted upon doing a fall from the rear end of a moving automobile on North Main street, Los Angeles. The scene was taken at the Plaza, a small park where many Mexicans congregate.

Inciville Studio Threatened by Fire

He attempted to climb over the back of an automobile, in which a policeman he had helped to put in power was riding, but who refused to recognize him when he was facing arrest. The automobile was followed by the one from which the picture was taken, and the motorman of a street car, because of the second auto did not see Bela fall and roll onto the car tracks.

The street car was brought to a stop but a few inches from where Bela lay, unconscious from striking his head on a rail. He was rushed to a hospital and was able to resume work in a few days.

Incidentally, the New York Motion Picture Company’s studio at Santa Monica Bayou, was threatened with destruction by fire the past week, during the production of an underworld story by Scott Tenney.

A large portion of one set was lighted in order to secure realistic effects, believing that it would be possible for the stage hands to extinguish it without difficulty. Everything being dry the fire gained headway very speedily and was spreading to other sets before it was gotten under control. Harry G. Koenan, an actor, was badly burned about the hands and arms.

Reliance Director Jack Adolli filmed another crook picture last week, featuring Eugene Pallette, supported by Frances Billington, Sam De Grasse and F. A. Turner, “The Kafi’s Skull,” adapted from the short story of the same title by James Francis Dwyer.

Wallace Reid is playing the part of a “tightwad,” in a picture by that name being filmed under the direction of Majestic Director Donald Crisp. The story is by W. M. Ritchey and is of a heart interest nature.

Feigning insanity, Baldy Belmont, as the husband of Mrs. Henpeck (Fay Timcher) in “Out Again and In Again,” a Komic brand comedy produced by Eddie Dillon, escapes from his wife for a night off with the boys, only to be re-captured and taken home for a more severe pecking.

The company has just completed number eleven of the Bill Series, from the Paul West stories, in which Miss Timcher, as Ethel the stenographer, appeared in a brand splinter new “gown,” that put to shame all her previous “creations,” and is a noise maker in itself. Besides Mr. Dillon, who plays the part of one of the lovers, Tammany Young, as Bill the office boy, and Miss Timcher, the cast includes Tod Browning, Anna Mae Wallhall, Mae Ashton, Mae Gaston, Lucile Brown and Max Davidson.

Playing the part of an illiterate daughter of the village drunkard, Dorothy Gish, featured in the name part of the two reel Majestic picture, “A Child of God,” is educated by and falls in love with the minister. Later when she see him embrace another young woman she tries to induce her father to kill the minister. Then she learns the other woman is his sister. The picture is being produced by W. C. Calanne and the cast includes F. Burns and G. Seigmann.

“The Folly of Ann,” an adaptation from the story of the same name by Ellen Farley, was filmed last week for a Majestic release by Jack O’Brien, with Lillian Gish in the name role and Jack Conway playing the male lead.

“Sheriff” Mackley’s Record

Publicity Chief W. E. Keefee, of the Reliance-Majestic studio, in order to facilitate his department in keeping an accurate record of the number of pictures Arthur Mackley appears in as a western sheriff, has placed a heavy piece of timber near Mr. Mackley’s office, and requested him to register—with a bullet—each time he completes a picture containing such a part, feeling sure that the producer of thrillers of the plains would be more apt to remember this kind of registration as it would be most convenient.

Mr. Mackley always wears his belt with a six-shooter on either side. Pensils are not always so handy. When the timber was placed in position the number totaled even two hundred. Now there are three bullet holes indicating the completion of “The Hidden Message,” “The Widow’s Mitre” and “The Miner’s Peril.”

The Albuquerque Film Company players have taken up the filming of additional releases of The Frontier Twins series, featuring Dot Farley. While with the St. Louis Motion Picture Company several months ago Miss Farley originated this series.
The first release of the Albuquerque company through the newly organized United Motion Picture Producers, Inc., will be "Reuben's Busy Day," a comedy produced by Archer M. Macklin, November 12. Following this will be "A Sage Brush Leading Lady," November 19, and "Soul Mates," November 26. The two latter pictures were directed by G. P. Hamilton and featured Miss Forley.

Apfel Stages Free Circus

Oscar Apfel, directing the production of "The Rose in the Ring," featuring Theodore Roberts as the Ringmaster, entertained Hollywood people one afternoon when he gave a free circus. The largest tent obtainable was erected on the vacant lot adjoining the Jesse Lasky Feature Play Company's studio, and the interior of this was the scene of the big show.

The acts included bare back riding, Roman chariot races, trapeze and horizontal bar acts, and numerous stunts by the clowns, all of which were filmed. Following the performance all members of the company posed in front of the big top for a photograph.

"The Man Who Couldn't Love" has been completed by Carlyle Blackwell's Favorite. Players and the negative film and print are now on their way to New York, after having been viewed by members of the company. The players are now engaged in filming another Richard Harding Davis story, "The Last Chapter."

Sid Chaplin, brother of Charlie, is to arrive at the Keystone studio and will begin work at once.

Mack Sennett and Charlie Chaplin had a lot of fun making a comedy of a prehistoric character, in which Chaplin is a hero of the Stone Age. This is the first time the Keystone players have attempted anything other than modern settings.

Roscoe Arbuckle has been making an unusual comedy at the Keystone studio in which he displays his ability at tight rope walking by escaping from his followers by walking a clothes line across a court of the buildings from one six-story window to another. Of course, the picture fans will think it is a clothes line, but instead of half inch steel wire cable was used to support the 315 pounds of Arbuckle.

A satire on the melodrama of the stage of today is being made by Chester Conklin, for the Keystone release, in the subject, "Curses, They Remarked." "This is not the usual rough-stuff," a Keystone director said concerning the picture, "but is one in which every one will see a lot of good clean fun." One of the big scenes will be that of the stealing a girl from an automobile by the villain who rides horse back.

Ready for the "Golden West"

Members of the Lasky producing company Monday evening saw their work in "The Rose of the Rancho," when the first print of the picture was projected at the studio, prior to being sent to New York. "The Rose in the Ring," directed by Oscar Apfel was finished last week. Cecil de Mille will now take up the filming of "The Girl of The Golden West," featuring Mabel Van Buren.

Los Angeles sweltered in an unusual heat wave recently and this was no doubt felt keenly by photoplayers. The mercury played about the century mark almost every day, and the blazing sun made the screened stages at the studios veritable ovens. In one or two instances it was necessary to discontinue work during the hottest hours of the day.

Don Meaney, who recently came to Los Angeles to do special publicity work for the Universal, relative to the opening of the new Universal City, is now busy compiling a book concerning the only city in the world devoted exclusively to the production of pictures.

While it has not been announced when distribution of this book will be made, it is understood it will serve as Christmas remembrances. The souvenir will consist of between one and two hundred pages, of large dimension, and printed on extra heavy enameled stock. Each page will contain three or more illustrations, pictures of different scenes of the city being used.

"The Sign of the Four," from the play of the same name in which William Gillette starred several years ago, has been filmed under the direction of Francis Forde, who played the lead part. Grace Cunard played opposite Mr. Forde.

Veteran Joins Universal

Charles Manley, the veteran actor, makes his first appearance in pictures in a two-reel picture filmed under the direction of Joseph de Grasse, "The Sin of Olga Brand." Pauline Bush is featured in this and other members of the company are William Dowlan and Lon Chaney.

This is a story of a girl who sacrificed her honor in order that her sister could be provided with funds for a necessary operation. The operation being unsuccessful, the girl goes to another place to begin life anew. There she becomes the wife of a minister who with the deacons of his church play a prominent part in the moral uplift of the community. A white slave motion picture, a replica of the girl's early life, is brought to the village theatre, and the churchmen act as censors.

The minister, while pondering whether the picture should or should not be shown, reads "Judge not that ye be not judged," in the Bible lying open before him, and secures permission for the film to be shown.

“JOHN BARLEYCORN” PACKS LYRIC

Special to Motion Picture News

Minneapolis, Oct. 27.

“John Barleycorn” has won its fight if the record in Minneapolis is a criterion. The film was shown at the Lyric Theater a little while ago to packed houses, and not a suggestion of an attempt was made to have it censored or stopped.

Minneapolis is not a city that is without its power of the liquor interests being manifested when there is a chance for a winning, but in this case there wasn’t a fighting chance.

The people talked of the film long before it was shown. The newspapers carried advance matter purely on its news value in addition to the press notices. Picture houses in Minneapolis have a clean bill and the liquor interests apparently knew that if the play had been killed it was clean, and that if the exhibitor and film man had decided to back it, they would get away with it. The film was popular with all classes, and was well patronized by educators, ministers and others who select their films carefully.

POLITICAL CANDIDATES ON SCREEN

Special to Motion Picture News

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 27.

What is perhaps the first attempt of political candidates, at least in this section, to use the screen for advertising purposes is to be tried in the coming state Arizona election.

A motion picture concern is writing a scenario which will disclose in a reel the several candidates of the party which is to make use of it. The picture will show all of the men who are running for office in a story that will be sent out over the state on a pay basis.

Slides have been employed in many instances for the popularizing of a candidate, but a combined effort along film lines is a new one here. Just how it will meet the end for which it is designed is hard to say. Many things have been accomplished by the "nervous" photographs, so why not sway elections?

New "Neptune's Daughter" Company Out

So great has been the demand for Annette Kellermann in "Neptune's Daughter" from the theatre-going public of the United States and Canada that another company will be sent on the road October 25, opening Scott's Metropolitan Opera House, St. Paul, Minn.

Similar to all the other "Neptune's daughter" companies now on tour the five new theatres will be played by this organization in the recognized theatrical cities. A large fortune has been put into the engaging of this attraction, and the picturesque display of paper is unusual.

A complete and up-to-date equipment, skilled mechanics, well known advertising experts, and theatrical men being employed by these various companies, insure resident managers in all parts of the country the most hearty and effective co-operation. The business for this attraction and all other special features manufactured by the Universal will be handled through the recently established Universal Booking Offices.

Loving Cup Presented to Mary Pickford

Australian Public Shows Appreciation of Her Acting by Sending Gift Ten Thousand Miles—Souvenir Purchased with Thousands of Pennies

A SPONTANEOUS and pleasing demonstration was accorded Mary Pickford, the Famous Players' popular star, when Millard Johnson of the Australasian Film Company, representing the exhibitors and public of Australia, brought her an immense silver loving cup and a big album of autographs from her admirers across the Pacific, as a mark of appreciation of her art.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson arrived at the studios of the Famous Players with the gifts while Miss Pickford was rehearsing a scene from "The Stepsister," one of her forthcoming releases, and Daniel Frohman, representing the company, stepped upon the stage and stopped the scene, to the surprise of star, director and cast, while he ushered on the representatives of the thousands of donors who had contributed to the fund with which the loving cup was purchased.

Mr. Johnson announced his mission, and explained that the idea of tendering Miss Pickford this unusual tribute emanated from the Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Company on the occasion of the star's triumph in "Tess of the Storm Country," and met with a general response from the Australian public.

Attached to the album is the great seal of the city of Sydney, which has, it is said, never before been attached to any official documents. The album also contains the official signature of the lord mayor of Sydney and the official attestation of the town clerk. The signatures in the album are each and every one the bona-fide autographs of "Little Mary's" admirers, who voluntarily placed them there as a tribute to her art and popularity.

The loving cup was purchased with 13,651½ Australian pennies, each one of which was voluntarily dropped into glass jars placed in the lobby of the Crystal Palace for this purpose.

A motion picture was taken of Mr. Johnson's presentation and Miss Pickford's acceptance of the cup and album, which will be sent to Australia, so that the donors of the gifts can see the scene enacted ten thousand miles away from the source of its origin.

On the cover of the album are impressed the words, "The Roll to Honor Our Little Mary Pickford—a Tribute from Australia," and on the fly-leaf appears the following: "Art is universal, human sympathy international, genius the property of the world. Your 'Tess,' Mary, is ours. She will live long in our hearts—we love you for her."
"WHAT'S HIS NAME"
(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

ALL of the factors which are necessary in turning out a good film have been looked after by the producers of this feature in a manner which leaves little to be desired. The result is that, mechanically speaking, it may be said to be a nearly perfect piece of work. This, combined with strength of plot and excellence of acting, provides a picture of unusual merit.

A rather unusual fact about the film is that nearly all of the scenes are interiors. Such stories are the ones that are most often bungled, either by ignorance or parsimony, or both. There is no bungling in "What's His Name," however. The various scenes have been arranged with great care, and this in spite of the fact that many of them are decidedly unusual.

For example, a number of the incidents in the story take place about a soda fountain. Instead of employing a beer faucet stuck into the wall, as has been done for such a set, a real soda fountain with all its appurtenances is used.

The scenes which take place in the theatre, both behind the scenes and in the auditorium, are also unusually well done. These and many other fine settings give the picture a most remarkable degree of realism. The spectator is made to feel as if he were one of the characters, which is the only test of realism.

As mentioned above, the exterior scenes are few in number, but such as there are come up to the standard set by the other parts of the film. Good photography and tinting is found throughout.

The case contains a number of familiar names. The title role is played by Max Figman, who handles a part calling for a wide variety of acting. His work is more than creditable. Lolita Robertson as his wife is equally effective. Although appearing in only a half dozen scenes in the last reel the doctor’s role is played with realism and naturalness.

The story starts in a country town where the soda clerk of the drug store marries the baker’s daughter against the wishes of the girl’s bachelor uncle. After three years of happy but impecunious married life she meets a chorus girl of a show which comes to town, and as a result joins the chorus.

Her husband and their little daughter Phoebe go to New York and the husband keeps house while his wife is attending to her theatrical work. Nellie, the wife, becomes a star and establishes her husband and daughter at Tarrytown. Learning of the advances of a millionaire towards his wife, the husband quarrels with her and is turned out of the house.

He keeps the little girl with him and goes home. Her season ended, the actress goes to Reno to get a divorce. There she learns of the real character of her rich suitor, and bears of her daughter’s illness. She abandons the idea of a divorce, rushes home and there is a happy reconciliation at the bedside of the child, who is out of danger.

This is a good heart interest film which holds the interest from start to finish and should prove of cash value to any exhibitor.

"THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY"
(Thanhouser—Nineteenth Episode)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE actors and actresses that have appeared in the episodes of "The Million Dollar Mystery" have given excellent accounts of themselves. Their work, although requiring less dramatic art than the parts in a plain picture would call for, has been exceedingly daring, and whenever the principals have been called upon to exercise their histronic ability, they have shown themselves equal to any and all situations.

But here in this number, although the principals perform in the same decisive and finished manner, their efforts will be well-nigh overshadowed and eclipsed by the remarkable intelligence displayed by the Thanhouser collie dog. This canine may not care a whit whether he receive credit for his work or not, but be that as it may, he deserves praise, and shall be allotted it.

It is one thing to “sic” a dog on a box-car tourist, but it is entirely another to teach him to attack his friends. We do not know for sure whether the conspirators of "The Million Dollar Mystery" are his friends or his enemies, but it is reasonable to suppose that all the members of the Thanhouser company are his friends. At any rate, he attacks a number of them in the water with visible fierceness, and it is an exciting moment for actor and spectator.

The situation that leads to the startling performance rendered by the dog is that in which Flo has procured some papers, which relieve her father from persecution from the conspirators. She swims away with them from the underground meeting place in a river running sub-terra. Braine pursues her in a rowboat, and when out in the open bay over-
"THE PINES OF LORY"

Reviewed by Clifford H. Pangburn

THIS is a picturization of the novel of the same name, by J. A. Mitchell. The story is an unusual one, and the scenes are laid for the most part on an island near the mouth of the St. Lawrence.

A large number of attractive scenes supposed to be on this island appear in the picture, and add to its interest.

Except for an occasional anachronism, the film, taken as a whole, is a good one, and offers a story which holds the attention closely. Elinor Marshall plays the principal feminine part. Other important members of the cast are Richard Neil, Bessie Lyons and Matilda Barry.

The story deals with two sets of characters who are brought together in a strange way. Patrick, a young Irishman, is banished from home by his elder brother on the death of his father, the brother's reason being that the younger son had practically killed his father.

Some time later Patrick met a girl who was a dear friend of his sister's. The meeting took place on a Canadian steamer. Having heard only the family's side of the story, she was extremely cold to Pat.

Both were bound for the same place, but in a dense fog they were put ashore on a landing at the wrong island. There they found a strange house completely abandoned, but supplied with food.

Later, they found the body of the owner. Left alone on the island the enemies became friends, and then lovers. After various unpleasant experiences they were rescued by the family of the island's owner.

He was a French duke who had fled from his native land and lived the rest of his life on the island. On reaching home Pat is welcomed, and the family do their best to make up for their outrageous treatment of him.

"WHEN HIS SHIP CAME IN"

Reviewed by T. S. Mead

THIS production will prove very popular with the many admirers of Gilson Willets' scenarios. It is an excellently produced drama of the sea, containing many beautiful marine scenes. The part of Neptune, a pretty and vivacious girl of the fishing village is charmingly played by Bessie Eytan. Thomas Santachi as Josh Rollins, her lover, is also very good, and both are ably supported by a cast including Harry Lonsdale, Franklin Hall and Thomas Bates.

Neptune despises the uneventful life she leads with her impoverished grandfather in the small fishing village of Home Port. She longs for the city and money, with all the things it can buy.

Josh Rollins, a sailor on his uncle's schooner, The Maid of the Mist, loves Neptune, but she, in her discontented mood refuses to marry him, because she is poor. His uncle is appealed to, but he thinks Neptune a mercenary girl with out love for Josh, and in the disagreement that follows Josh refuses to sail on the next cruise.

Neptune secretly departs for the city, leaving a note that Josh is not to follow her until, as she puts it, "his ship comes in." A few weeks later, Josh receives word that his uncle has died, leaving him his schooner, which is bound home with a load of gunpowder.

In the meantime, the penniless and homesick Neptune has lost her position in the city, and in the midst of her despair, wanders to the wharves, where she discovers The Maid of the Mist about to sail. She resolves to return home and stows herself away in the hold. During the trip, a fire breaks out. The crew deserts the boat, and its dangerous cargo.

Fortunately, for Neptune, a large wave breaks over the deck, extinguishing the fire before it reaches the powder. Neptune, alone, on the deserted ship, exerting all her nautical knowledge, guides the boat to port, after a twenty-four hour struggle. Then she and her lover are happily united.

"THE OLD FOGNEY"

Reviewed by Clifford H. Pangburn

THIS picture is a fine example of what can be done in American studios by the exercise of a little care. There are no very great demands on the producer in the story, but many of the scenes require settings of a very special nature.

These are the views which take place in and about a circus tent. Settings of just this sort have been faked in some films, with a resultant lack of any faint resemblance to the real thing. The circus scenes in this picture were taken in a real circus tent. It is a small one, but is real, and the atmosphere of the story is thus made convincing.

Another example of the good settings is seen in the part of the story which takes place inside of the private railroad car of the circus owner. This is perhaps the best car setting shown in many months.

An escaped circus lion adds a remarkable touch to a part of the picture. He leaps upon the depraved ringmaster and rolls down a rocky declivity with him in a style which leaves little to be desired in the way of thrills.

A middle aged bookkeeper is invited to the circus by his employer. He dreams of his first circus at which his sweetheart became so infatuated with a ringmaster that she ran away with him. Going to the circus he finds his former sweetheart is there with her lover who has never married her, and is now spending much time with another woman. She has become hardened by her life and regards the bookkeeper as an amusing old fogey. She even gets $10,000 of his employer's money from him by a very old confidence game. Ultimately her false lover, who promised her to the act, is killed and the money comes into her possession. She returns it to the old fogey, but he will have nothing more to do with her, and she goes away broken hearted.

It is an interesting and extremely well done story. In the cast are Sam Cott, Neil Craig and Walter Hitchcock.
"SALOMY JANE"

(reviewed by Peter Milne)

It takes an unusual amount of courage for a concern to produce a western feature. Hatching up Westerners seems to have been the favorite indoor sport of many producers during the past year, so that the market has been flooded with them; some good, some bad; the good ones have gained such a name for their class that they are very often steered cleared.

But with the case of "Salomy Jane" a different story is to be told. The picture is clearly the work of experience. Bret Harte wrote the original "Salomy Jane's Kiss" on which the picture is based.

Paul Armstrong converted the story into a play and from that it was adapted to the picture, which Alex E. Beyfuss has directed. Bret Harte had a clear and concise idea of the West, and no man was better qualified to write about it than he.

That the director was blessed with an artistic nature, will be obvious as soon as the picture has been seen. There is hardly a scene which is not beautiful.

All the exteriors were taken in the giant redwood forests of California, and no more artistic backgrounds could possibly have been found. They would have been completely lost, however, unless they were not supported by excellent photography. Beautiful light and shadow effects have been caught in almost each scene. Photographically the whole production is of the highest order.

The acting, the dramatic end of the picture, equals the technical end. Beatriz Michelena is featured and gives a clear interpretation of the fairy Salomy Jane Clay. House Peters makes a fine "Man"; his build and his actions suit him well to his part. Clarence Arper as Colonel Starbottle holds the comedy role of the picture, and plays it with great understanding. Without the genuine comedy touches that he instills in each scene in which he makes his appearance the picture would lose much of its charm.

There are many others in the cast. Those holding the more important parts are Andrew Robson as Yuba Bill, Matt Snyder as Salomy's father, Harold Meade as Baldwin, Ernest Harte as Governor Clay, and William Nigh as Rufe Waters, the coward of the play, and the one who almost spoils the pleasant romance that only terminates in the last scene.

The story hardly needs relation, but suffice it to say that it is so far above the average Western, that it will stand out like a bright star from its more mediocre constellations. In a few places the producer has caught such beautiful and extensive scenes with the camera, that he has been tempted to lengthen them, so that their length seems unnecessary, but this fact may be obliterated before the picture is released as when he saw it, it comprised seven reels. It is safe to say that "Salomy Jane" will be heartily enjoyed by all who have the good fortune to see it.

"SAFE IN THE VILLAGE."

"THE TREY O' HEARTS"

(reviewed by Peter Milne)

Unless we are decidedly misimpressed by this episode of "The Trey O' Hearts," the serial which now has only one more chapter to run, it has already begun to draw to a close, as two of the characters of the story are already out of the land of the living. It would not come as a surprise if someone told us they were dead in reality, for the fall they take accompanied by an automobile is death-defying in all the senses of the word.

Marrophat and Trine's secretary are the unlucky creatures. The latter loses control of the machine, and it plunges down a steep hill, rolling over and over many times. The hill resembles a wall more than anything else, it is so steep. The machine is smashed to pieces, as likewise are the two villains that were in it. Marrophat shows signs of life when we see him last, but it takes a good stretch of the imagination to believe he is still alive.

Aside from this thriller, there are plenty of others to maintain the great interest that all the other installments have held. The two heroes, Alan and Barcus, and the two heroines, Rose and Judith—for the latter young lady should not be rated in the capacity of heroine as well as her more sympathetic sister—take quite a wild ride on two motorcycles over hill and dale. Alan and Rose take another tumble over the side of a hill when Law avoids a collision with the other sister, and is forced to steer over the embankment, ninety feet in height.

Great suspense is created when the same party of four crawl up a steep declivity by means of a rope. In other words, the chapter is a real thriller, holding up the high standard set by the others, exceeding some, equaling most, and only a notch behind the best.

Even though Marrophat and the secretary are, to all appearances, out of the way forever, and Trine and his evil intents are left alone in the world, the ultimate outcome of the story is still well under cover, which we will look forward to and learn next week. By the way, the temporary title has it, that the caption of this chapter is "Blankety Blank."

"WHAT COULD SHE DO?"

(Edison—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THERE are a number of points about this picture which goes to make it one that will please spectators. There is a strong story of a rather unusual sort, and there is fast action. The fight between the police and the gang of kidnappers is unusually well done and puts many thrills into the picture. There is really no place at which the interest drags.

Each of the three reels tells the adventures of a girl in three different situations. Gertrude McCoy plays the heroine in her usual pleasing style, and is supported by a large cast, which includes many of the Edison favorites.

The story opens in the home of a wealthy Southerner.

He has, as he expresses it to a Northern friend, "brought his daughter up to be a lady." When he dies insolvent she faces the question of earning a living. The Northern friend of her father gives her an introduction that gets her a place as governess in his married daughter's home.

After a time she is dismissed regretfully because of her ignorance of the care and management of children. Left almost penniless she gets a place in a department store. A fellow clerk, who lives at the same boarding house, discovers that a wrretch has enticed the innocent girl to a Chinese restaurant on the pretext that he can get her a good job in vaudeville, and wants to talk the matter over. She rushes to the place just in time to save her friend.

The shop girl is stealing from the firm, and being suspicious of an arrest she manages to shift the blame onto the Southern girl. She knows who is guilty, but will not betray the girl who saved her from worse than death. The police try to break her down, but fail. Finally the dishonest girl confesses. The police inspector, struck by the fine character of the heroine and her ability to keep things to herself, appoints her to a place as a woman detective.

Her first case is that of running down kidnappers who have taken the little sister of a young man who had met her in the South, but had lost trace of her. She had to take a place as maid in the house in order to get on the trail of the crooks. Finally she locates the child and with the help of its brother and the police, overcomes the gang. Then she resigns from the force to marry the young man.

"AMERICA"

(World Film—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"AMERICA" as played at the New York Hippodrome last season was a tremendous success, and this picture is practically an exact reproduction of that spectacle. The scenes taken on the stage of the monster house are almost identically the same, varied now and then with a close up, and an occasional view of the audience, in which is seated a comical "rube," who becomes greatly agitated when the chorus comes on, which puts in its appearance very often.

If this picture is presented with appropriate music, a very entertaining show will be the result. Such a gigantic, fantastical spectacle can hardly fail to make an impression, even though the songs, jokes and dialogues, which are partly responsible for the success of the stage version, are absent.

Naturally anyone who has heard of "America" will take pleasure in witnessing it as a picture, whether he has seen it presented on the stage or not, and considering that it was entirely made on the stage, a wide scope and a large variety of scenes have been obtained.

But of course regarded scenically it will not compare favorably with a picture taken out in the open when the occasion requires. It is really no more than the stage version visualized, with no great changes, which in almost any other case would result in absolute failure. But the Hippodrome shows will all lend themselves to pictures, as they are entirely different from others.

Nothing sensational occurs until the last reel, when an automobile runs wild in the Rocky Mountains and crashes into the lake in the front of the stage. This is a real thriller, and when four or five men mounted on horses plunge in after the car, one has seen something rare in this line.

The numerous performers that appeared in the production "America" all appear and go through their individual acts, which are amusing, clever, or startling, as the case may be. A fine fire scene is staged. The occupants of the house are to be seen jumping from the windows into life nets. This is very well done, and when one considers that it all was done on the stage, it is truly wonderful.

LUBIN INSTALMENT FULL OF THRILLS

THIS adventure of Lord Cecil is quite melodramatic and emphasizes the courage of the quiet Englishman. He is providentially rescued from a railroad wreck and cared for by the cashier of a construction company and nursed by the young man's sweetheart.

A few days later Cecil has the opportunity to discover and circumvent a clever robbery scheme, which probably would have wrecked the prospects and happiness of a very worthy couple. Arthur Johnson is again himself, with his cool force of character, and is equal to a dangerous situation.

REEL FELLOWS HOLD MONTHLY DINNER

Special to Motion Picture News

Chicago, Oct. 28.

THE Reel Fellows Club of Chicago held its monthly dinner, Wednesday evening, October 23, at the Advertising Club. A live attendance and a good cabaret made the meeting an unusually enjoyable one.

The "pep" and enthusiasm aroused in discussing the plans for the coming winter assuages the motion picture organization of Chicago a most successful and profitable season.
The Immorality of Poor Pictures

WHEN "The Avenging Conscience" was shown in Pasadena and Los Angeles, a preliminary leader carried two paragraphs written by the director, David J. Griffith.

The first paragraph, appearing under the title, "A Plea for the Art of the Motion Pictures," is in itself an unanswerable reply to all the censorship agitation, insofar as well produced pictures are concerned.

"We do not fear censorship, for we have no wish to offend with indecencies or obscenities, but we do demand, as a right, the liberty to show the dark side of wrong that we may illuminate the bright side of virtue—the same liberty that is conceded to the art of the written word—that art to which we owe the Bible and the works of Shakespeare."

"The Avenging Conscience" unfolds the conception and consummation of a murder. It is unsparingly realistic.

But so well paralleled is it with elevating, softening scenes and so happy the unexpected ending that its effect is at once artistic, strongly moral, inspiring. It is a fine production!

THE theme of a play or a book does not damn it. Just as soon as our reformers know this truth and accept it, we shall have little trouble with censored pictures.

It is rather the way of producing pictures—whatever their themes—from which we have always most to fear.

JUST recently two photo-plays were shown in New York—two portraying the demoralizing effects of the use of a drug, and the other the photo dramatization of a widely-read novel—and both, in one editorial breath, were frantically denounced by a journal of the trade.

Nothing at all is said of how these pictures were produced. The themes alone are violently assailed.

Anyone who has seen the pictures will seriously doubt if the writer of the editorial in question did see them—so seriously that he will be forced to question the motive of the editor and ask himself if it were not a commercial one.

In all sincerity, we challenge flatly the 9,000 to the whole industry or to the public of this hypercritical and—we are forced to say—hypocritical attitude.

It is neither broad, sane, cultured nor honest.

It is unpardonably restrictive of the art of the motion picture.

AGAIN let us emphasize: the theme of a play or book or of any work of art should not damn it, but only the manner of its production. We daresay that had "Sappho" been written by a bard, it might be a jewelled book instead of one of the greatest lessons of life ever written and a triumph of literary art.

So with the works of Shakespeare, Hawthorne, Hardy, Galsworthy, Tolstoy, Hugo, Murger, George Sand, Flaubert—the list is very long.

Of the manner of picture production, there is enough to criticize—honestly—to fill each week all the editorial pages of all our picture journals. Not a day's releases go by but what there are glaring evidence of inexcusable faults in production.

The complaint of the exhibitor all over the country is against poor pictures, of which there is a wealth, not against the themes which to certain few minds seem immoral. And plenty of these poor pictures with the most exemplary themes, contain unnecessary scenes of a physically revolting character and with no excuse for their production.

Better pictures mean better production.

Low ideals in production—not in selection of themes—constitute the danger of the day—as concerns censorship and the prosperity of the motion picture industry.
Hartford Theatre Takes Rank With Best
Strand, a Monument to the Architect's Knowledge of the Needs of the Public, A Fitting Edifice for Film Drama

Special to Motion Picture News
Hartford, Conn., Oct. 28.

T HE Strand Theatre, which opened in Hartford, Conn., at the beginning of the season, has attracted a great deal of attention on account of its handsome appointments and comfortable seating arrangement.

The impression gained from the decorations and color scheme is first of size and light, a vast spaciousness that is both unusual and refreshing in a theatre of any sort, and is due to its height, the absence of stage boxes and orchestra pit. From the entrance into the lobby to the last detail of the new theatre there are unusual and beautiful details of decoration and arrangement.

The lobby has yellow walls above a wainscoting of marble and the floors of gray and white tiling. The mirrors are in the form of windows, framed and divided into small panes by Circassian walnut. Potted trees and branches of oak are used in decorating.

The general color scheme of the interior is yellow and deep blue, combined with soft pastel tones and a deep warm brown. The side walls are of rough plaster, tinted deep yellow, divided into panels by flat pilasters of oyster white and gold, with capitals of classical motif, matching the trimmings throughout, which use the familiar egg and dart, the acanthus leaf and laurel wreath.

These narrow panels are decorated with a stencilled design of Pompeian motif in soft, flat shades of blue, dull rose, pale green, brown and white. Between the panels and ceiling the egg and dart molding is used, and the frieze above is in shades of blue in a large design.

“Shore Acres” Acted by Broadway Cast
C. A. Stevenson, Conway Tearle and William Riley Hatch Prominent in Coming All-Star Alco Release, Based on Herne Classic

Special to Motion Picture News

SHORE ACRES,” the five-reel feature of the All-Star Feature Corporation, released by the Alco Film Corporation, on October 26, is enacted by a company well known on Broadway.

The work of Charles A. Stevenson has been known to theatregoers for years. In “Shore Acres” he appears to the moving picture world for the second time. His initial appearance was in the support of Ethel Barrymore in “The Nightingale.” Conway Tearle, another Broadway favorite, was with Mr. Stevenson in “The Nightingale,” and is now in “Shore Acres.” Mr. Stevenson plays Nat Berry and Mr. Tearle Sam Warner.

Other players in this film adaptation of the original James A. Harne classic are: William Riley Hatch, Violet Horner, E. J. Connolly, Harry Knowles, Gladys Fairbanks, Philip Trout and Madge Evans, a cast of even quality.

One of the most effective scenes in which Messrs. Stevenson, Tearle and Hatch appear with Miss Horner is that within the lighthouse. In the legitimate theatre patrons held their breath while the brothers Nat and Martin Berry struggled for the mastery of the lighthouse, and the gun which was the key to the situation, for upon the outcome depended the lives of Sam Warner and Helen Berry.

The lovers were out in a small boat close to the reefs. Only the warning light could save them, and the lantern was dark.

In the Thomas production this scene is shown with all the realism of a real storm since the flashes back to the young people in the boat were made off the coast of Maine during a tempest.

"THE TENTH COMMANDMENT"
(Impe-Universal—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ONE is led to believe from the outset of this production, that it is to be a picturization of the disagreeable Long Island murder which stirred the public not so long ago. It is a great and pleasing surprise, when after the picture is well under way, that matters take an entirely different turn and finally end in a somewhat pathetic but satisfactory manner.

The tenth commandment, "Thou Shalt Not Covet Thy Neighbor's Wife," is the forceful foundation of the story.

Being blessed with such a title the picture seems to command more respect and to be elevated from the ordinary society drama, with which, otherwise, the production might be classed. Then, too, Herbert Brennon, the director, has taken great care with the development of the story; each scene leads a step further to the quite unexpected and sad climax.

Perhaps the only fault is that point which is directly responsible for this climax, that is the remarkable fierceness of the conflagration, in the midst of which the doctor and his nurse are operating on a child, whose life hangs in the balance. This point might be changed, the appearance given that the flames are more subdued, as it is beyond the imagination to conceive that three people are in the building.

The doctor manages to finish the operation and escape with the child, but the nurse perishes in the flames, thus proving her undying love for the doctor and his wife, who becoming jealous had previously separated from her husband.

William Shay plays the doctor, Ruth Donnelly, his wife, Violet Mercereau, the nurse, William Welsh, the "other" man, and Hobart Henly, the wife's brother. They all appear at their best.

"THE SEA NYMPHS"
(Keystone-Mutual—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS is the second of the two a month Keystone two-reelers, and features Roscoe Arbuckle and Mabel Normand. Whenever these two appear hearty laughter is sure to be the result, and so it will be here. The picture was filmed partly on the way to the Santa Catalina Islands and partly on them; the result is that some very beautiful scenes have been obtained which form a very desirable background to the farce.

Incidentally the picture presents a fine opportunity for Miss Normand to display how well at home she is in the water, what a good diver she is, and several other things which will be observed when the picture is shown with the young lady in a one piece bathing suit.

Then we have Fatty—not in a one piece suit by any means—but in a garment that seems several times too large for him, impossible as that may seem. He will call for rounds of laughter when he attempts to emulate his more graceful partner in the art of fancy diving.

A great part of the action takes place in the water, and when two of the best comedians start performing in the ocean for the camera there are not many funnier things. Like the first of the two reeles, "Dough and Dynamite," this one is bound to be a success. It just can't help it.

PRESIDENT PEARCE AT WASHINGTON BALL

PRESIDENT MARION S. PEARCE, together with all the officers of the Maryland branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, go to Washington to attend the motion picture players' ball to be held at the Capitol.

In addition to the officers a large number of Baltimore exhibitors, exchange men and operators will attend. The Baltimore contingent motor over in a private car with President Pearce and a party, together with the national vice-president, J. Howard Bennett, and party.

"BEHIND THE SCENES"
(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

WHEN one goes to see Mary Pickford in one of her inimitable characterizations, he expects to witness something out of the ordinary in the general run of films. In the role of the little actress in "Behind the Scenes" little Mary renders one of the best portrayals of her brilliant career.

To say that she acts the part to the life would no doubt sound trite and unconvincing, and yet in no other way can we express our unbounded admiration. It really seems uncanny to sit and watch the different emotions, such as joy, anger, embarrassment in endless variety depicted on her face, and then to come back to earth, as it were, with the realization that it is only acting.

Of the story, by Margaret Mayo, author of "Baby Mine" and "Twin Beds," it might be said that it is particularly adapted for the screen judging by the way it is produced by the Famous Players Company.

The entire absence of so-called padding, the smoothness with which the scenes follow one another, the special attention which has been given the smallest detail, the pains taken by the producers to make the theatre scenes appear "real"; all this taken with the wonderful acting of Miss Pickford makes "Behind the Scenes" a masterpiece. The producer has shown exceptional ability.

James Kirkwood, who played the part of Steve Hunter, husband of Dolly Lane (Mary Pickford) directed the piece, and he is to be complimented on both his acting and his directing.

Dolly Lane, after a struggle between love and ambition yields to the pleadings of Steve Hunter, surrenders her career and goes West. Later, tiring of the quiet farm and Steve's seeming neglect of her for his work, she revolts and returns to the city. Through the illness of a star, Dolly gets her chance, and in trying to forget Steve throws her heart and soul in her work with the result that she is soon the sensation of the theatrical world. She has everybody at her feet.

But success, without Steve to share it, turns to ashes, and when one night the wealthy producer of her play makes advances to her she sees a new light. Despairing and disillusioned, Dolly resigns from the cast and takes the first train West.

In the golden harvest fields, on a sunny day, she again meets Steve and tells him all, and as his forgiving arms embrace her the tawdry glitter of the tinselled past is forgotten and the real drama of life unfolds before them.

Lowell Sherman in the part of Teddy Harrington, Steve's friend, deserves special mention, as do Ida Waterman in the role of Mrs. Harrington and Russell Basset as Joe Canby, the wealthy man-about-town.

There is no reason why "Behind the Scenes" should not take its place as the best Mary Pickford release we have had the pleasure of seeing for some time.

"AFTER MANY CURTAIN CALLS"
"THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD"

REVIEWED BY FRED MILNE

THE World Film Corporation has already shown what it can do with one of Charles Dickens' stories, in putting it on the screen, as was done in "The Chimes." "The Mystery of Edwin Drood," the second picture adapted from Dickens, is every bit as good as its predecessor.

Only about half the story is the work of Dickens, as before he had time to finish it he died. The supplement that appears in the picture is the work of Tom Terriss, who also stars in the picture. His version of the story, which as it stood in its unfinished state, was certainly a mystery, is generally considered more like the ending that we would have supposed Dickens would have written than any other.

The entire story, the work of Dickens, and then again the work of Mr. Terriss, lends itself to screen adaptation remarkably well. The mysterious disappearance of Edwin Drood, coming as it does just when the spectator has gained interest in the picture, will not allow the attention to falter until the very end, when the real culprit is apprehended.

Mr. Terriss, who also assisted Mr. Blache in the direction of the production, appears at his best in the role of John Jasper, who it develops is the real criminal of the tale. Rodney Hickey plays the part of Drood, and Paul Sterling appears as Neville Landless. Vinnie Burns is seen as Rosa Budd; and Helen Landless, who is the one that apprehends Jasper, is played by Margaret Prussing. Faye Casick appears as the woman whom Jasper has ruined.

The costuming and settings have been carefully arranged; never a moment is the correct period neglected. An instance which seems rather small, but which in reality lends a fine atmosphere to the picture, is the fact that in the street scenes a number of people are seen moving about in the background, or passing the principals.

Very often in pictures the principals are seen supposedly conversing on a busy thoroughfare, but no other people are seen in the scene. That this point is not neglected here shows what attention has been paid to small details which escape the mind of a less skilled director.

The fire scene in the last reel is a fine one; it gains headway with startling rapidity, but it's a thriller nevertheless, and brings the picture to a very good close. "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" will surely be appreciated by all, more especially by those who are familiar with Dickens; but those who have never read any of his works will enjoy it, as the story presented is one of the best, made to entertain; and it certainly accomplishes its mission.

WOMAN SEES MISSING BROTHER ON SCREEN

Special to Motion Picture News

A WOMAN's scream, followed by the exclamation, "That's my brother," startled patrons of the New Majestic theatre at Jackson, Miss., recently, while one of the Kalem films was being thrown on the screen.

Investigation followed, and Manager Bowers found Emma Manning, member of a prominent Jackson family, in a high state of excitement. She insisted that one of the leading characters in the film production was Harris Manning, her brother, who had not been heard from by the family for two years.

Several intimate friends of Harris Manning were sent for, and when this reel was again reached in the production they were equally positive that it was the man.

Harris Manning left Jackson shortly after the death of his sister, Mrs. John Mosal, returning to California, where he had resided for several years. Always irregular about notifying his family as to his whereabouts, he had not written to them for a long time.

Several weeks ago he was seen in Atlanta at the Piedmont Inn by a friend. The family endeavored to locate him by this clue, but were unsuccessful.

Miss Manning immediately on leaving the theatre telegraphed to Kalem people, and the investigation which followed resulted in the locating of the missing brother.

"THE OPENED SHUTTERS"

REVIEWED BY FRED MILNE

"The Opened Shutters" has its theme the sentiment, than which no truer words were ever spoken, "As a Man Thinketh, So Is He." It has been elaborated and developed to such an extent both by the author, Clara Louise Burnham, and the director, Otis Turner, that a forcible and telling picture has been presented; one which will cause its witnesses to think.

Hardly no better company could have been chosen to interpret the leading roles than Otis Turner's Rex players. This merit will be better understood when it is said that the film relies solely on its sentiment and the development of it, for the grip that it takes and retains on the spectator.

Sensationalism and rapid action are entirely lacking, and they will not be missed. So that being a picture of this sort, its success really depends on the ability of the leading players in the cast.

William Worthington plays the part of "Thinkright" Johnson in a manner that is worthy of the good name he has created for himself. His part, which might be called that of a perfect man, suits his particular characteristics remarkably well. Frank Lloyd, as Judge Calvin Trent, and Cora Drew, as Martha Lacey, both people who have a decidedly warped idea of human nature, and it is satisfactory, indeed, when, toward the end, it develops that they have learned to "think right," as the picture expresses it. Betty Shade, as Edna Derwent, has a smaller role. She is thinking right at the start of the story and keeps it up in fine style to the end.

Anna Little and Herbert Rawlinson are the lovers in the picture, but the love story is only prominent toward the end.

CRAFT'S RIGHTS TO EACO FILMS BRINGS CONGRATULATIONS

P. P. Craft, general manager of the Strand Film Company, is in receipt of many telegrams of congratulations upon his securing the exclusive American rights for the Eaco Films, Inc., in which Edwin August will be starred.

It is the intention of Mr. Craft to release an Edwin August feature every other week, and a one-reel comedy and single-reel dramatic subject every week. All of the Eaco productions will be under the personal supervision of Mr. August.
ON the stage comedies "with a laugh in every line" exist chiefly in the minds of press agents. So far as lengthy productions are concerned their silent counterpart is even more rare. Here, however, is a four reel picture which is funny from start to finish, and that without any flappstick stuff.

As may be imagined from this fact, it is a film which any audience would regard as a treat. Not only is the story and the acting hilarious, but a series of humorous subtilities written by Montague Glass, on whose story of the same name the picture is based, adds an unusual effect. These subtilities contain bits of wisdom supposed to be contributed by an old hand in the "cloak'n'suit" business.

The film was made in Berlin, and it strikes a death blow at any theory among a lack of a sense of humor among the Germans. The principal characters are "the perfect thirty-six," the senior partner in a cloak and suit firm and his three associates, one of them being a star salesman and another a sort of simpleton. These five parts are all acted in inimitable style by players who make the fullest use of the many opportunities for fun offered by the story.

The settings are of unusual excellence, and are elaborate when necessary. For example, the scenes in the sales rooms of the gown merchants show an establishment which equals any smart atelier along Fifth Avenue. The outdoor backgrounds show glimpses of Berlin streets. The photography is as good as the other features of the production.

The story concerns a girl who goes to work in a small dressmaking shop. A salesman from a big Berlin house sees her, and decides that she is the model his firm is looking for, "a perfect thirty-six."

As she longs for the gay life of the city he has little trouble persuading her to accept the new job. In the city she makes a hit with all of the partners and soon has them dancing attendance to her wishes.

When a princess comes to look at gowns it is the new model who is responsible for a large order. The senior partner finally marries her to keep her with the firm, as he has been offered double her salary elsewhere.

CARYL S. FLEMING IS SERIOUSLY INJURED

Caryl S. Fleming, juvenile leader of the Pierrot Film Company, was severely injured in an automobile accident recently. Mr. Fleming and a number of actors and directors of the company were departing from the studio near Tappan, New York, in an automobile to visit a sick member of the company, when another car crashed into the rear of the one in which was Mr. Fleming.

The actor's injuries were found to be serious and he was taken to his mother's home at 264 Riverside Drive, New York, where he is at the present time. Mr. Fleming is a member of the Screen Club, and both popular and prominent in motion picture circles.

LEARNING THE HIGH LIFE WALK

THE TEMPTATIONS OF SATAN

(Warner's—Five Parts)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THERE is a distinct line between morality plays or pictures that fulfill their purpose, that is, teach a lesson, and those that the producers attempt to shield by asserting that they are morally necessary, when in reality they are so much trash. Such pictures, it should not be necessary to add, are the bane of the business.

This picture makes an attempt to visualize what an innocent boy or girl, let loose in a great city, should or should not do. It merely shows what might happen to the average young person when surrounded by circumstances of an evil and at the same time attractive nature. And although sorely tempted, it gives one great pleasure to see the principals pass through their many adventures none the worse for the experience.

Everyboy and Everygirl are the characters with whom we are most concerned. They were created as personifications of the average boy and the average girl, and the characterization that Joseph Levering and Vinnie Burns give to these parts is not in any way exaggerated as is the case nine out of ten times in pictures that profess to be of a similar nature and usually are not.

The story woven about the two young people is one of great interest, nothing unusual, but always absorbing. During the latter part of the picture the story becomes so entertaining that we are liable to forget the fact that they are personifications, but this fact is only forgotten at times.

Credit may be accorded the rest of the cast, of which James O'Neill is the most important. He embodies the popular idea of Satan and is constantly changing from one character to another, but in all of the parts he retains the same evil countenance which stamps him always as Satan.

Fraunie Fraunholz appears as Justice in the role of a detective, and the part of Avarice is carried off by Mr. Morton, who assumes the guise of a factory boss.
Live News of the Week

George A. Stevenson, for ten years owner and editor of the Chicago Weekly Amusement Guide, and later advertising manager of another theatrical paper in New York City, and now in charge of the publicity of the London Trans-Atlantic Film Company, writes to friends in New York City that business in the United Kingdom is, according to the present British slogan, "as usual." He declares that he is as busy as he ever was in the States.

Charles Brabin, Edison director, in making a fire scene for the first of the "Young Lord Stranleigh" series, "The King's Move in the City," selected Columbus Day for the undertaking. The crowd that gathered, and which Mr. Brabin took advantage of, by placing them in the field of the camera, created the best atmosphere possible, and hereafter Mr. Brabin will try to film his fire scenes on a holiday.

Samples of the paper for the California Motion Picture Corporation's first release, "Salomy Jane," have been received at the New York offices of the Alco Film Corporation. They are from designs by Charles Peters and are in six colors. The work is being done in San Francisco.

Popular Plays and Players, Inc., which releases through Alco, has started work on the picture scheduled to follow "I'M Not a Strogoff." Neither the nature of the production nor the title has been announced.

Reviewers, exhibitors and buyers who flourish in New York City are sighting quite some sighs of relief these days, for they have found the projection room de luxe. This place is situated at 126 West Forty-sixth street, where the Kinetophone has just introduced a goodly number of the aforesaid gentlemen to about forty willow chairs in which to lounge while passing judgment on Kinetophone features.

Carlton King, Edison comedian and character man, is one of the greatest make-up artists in the motion picture field. He is able to portray the most difficult character in the funniest comedy or the most serious drama. Recently he assumed the role of a tramp, and between takes went home to dinner. It is said that his mother mistook him for a real Knight of Road and chased him from the house with a broom.

Mr. Sheerer joined the Edison company, and from there went to the Vitagraph company. Later he played character leads for the Bison, Nestor, Reliance and Crystal companies, and from the latter concern went to Eclair, where he has been ever since.

The Pastime Amusement Company, of Charleston, S. C., announces the installation of a Wurlitzer concert piano-orchestra in the Majestic Theatre. This is said to be the only instrument of this kind in use in this section of the country.

W. S. Scofield sailed recently for Europe. He will handle the Alliance program on the other side. Mr. Scofield is one of the live wires in the film business, and the news of his association with a company of the importance of the Alliance will be received with pleasure by his friends here and abroad.

Don Meany, formerly of the Essanay company, recently arrived at the Universal West Coast studios with his wife, and has taken over the publicity of that branch of the concern. Anything that may be desired in the way of big stories or features will be in charge of Mr. Meany.

Mary Fuller, of the Universal company, is shrouded in deep gloom just now, as her dear little dog, Toby, has passed away. And it was all due to a vile hotel clerk not allowing the canine to pass the night under the same roof with his mistress.

Editor George Hall, of the Eastern staff of the Universal scenario department, is exceedingly busy these days. He and his assistants are selecting some of the best stories of prominent authors, and adapting them to the screen.

With Arthur S. Dickinson as manager, the Alcazar, the newest motion picture theatre at Chattanooga, Tenn., has just been opened to the public. Patrons are lavish in their praise of the Alcazar.

The United Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., owners of the Elmwood, Allen- dale, Colonial and Keith's theatres in Buffalo, N. Y., has opened its new offices at 504 Iroquois Building. Heretofore the members of this company have had separate offices in different parts of the downtown section.

The Family Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., has changed management, and the policies of that house are being guided by E. C. Long.

There has been a big change in Buffalo music circles recently. Herman E. Schultz, for the past four years conductor of Shea's Theatre orchestra, has resigned. "A Millinery Mix-Up." (Edison, Wed., Nov. 15.)—A woman enters her husband's office just as he is having his sternographer her hair. "The Locked Door." (Vitagraph, Three reels. Shown at Vitagraph Theatre.—This picture made in collaboration with the New York City fire department shows clearly the way in which the man got the old. The actress, who in the cast, more of the parts well known, are well suited to their roles.

"The Tangle." (Vitagraph, Four reels. Shown at Vitagraph Theatre.—This is a mili- drama produced in collaboration with Gar- bart, and featuring Naomi Childers and Dar- win Kerr. Although the acting of the cast is good, the inconsistency of the story rather lowers the picture's standard. The weakness of the picture has reference to, is our set-to with Spain, yet the time covered in the production is apparently the present. The plot is cer- tainly a tangle, and is very entertaining, showing the troubles that our Allies in the war brought a great many people. Realism is added to the picture by the introduction of United States troops in a battle scenes.

Universal Program

"Lizzie's Escape." (L. K. O., Sun., Nov. 15.)—The players both try their hands at striking up an acquaintance with a country girl, and both meet with varying success, and then try to take her money, but are frustra- ted. A fair slapstick.

"The Chorus Girl's Thanksgiving." (Ray, Thurs., Nov. 19.)—A comedy, the tale of the man in dire straits who robs to save his money. From the very beginning he finds him at the police, but he gives himself up so she may claim the reward; they are re- uniting and the picture is introduced when we see Ernest Shields grading dogs up into "dogs." In his dreams his dogs attain great size and chase him. Trick photography adds to the amusement furnished.

De Feet of Father. (Joker, Sat., Nov. 14.)—On the scene of the pictures are a man with his feet on the shoulders of a woman. Among the other scenes of the pictures are only the feet of the principals are visible, but no one will say that the pictures are not correct idea. This is novel, but the same idea has been seen by other companies.

"The Silent Peril." (101 Bison, Two reels, Sat., Nov. 14.)—A number of fine thrills have been added to the story of the pictures, which will destroy an entire family of a foreign power. Marie Walcamps, William Childs, and James Petersen will introduce them into their customary roles. The invention is a boat explosion that occurs in an oil field, and the spy destroys it by a contrivance of his own. An absorbing story full of rapid action. A realistic explosion of the boat occurs.

"Sixty Dobbins, Oil Magnate." (Powers, by the grind.)—Fair entertainment gathered from this drama. When the farmer's daughter becomes rich through the discovery of oil on the land, her suitor is afraid that he will be discarded, but she soon gets the idea out of the mind of Edna Maione and Joe King play opposite.

"When the Girls Were Shanghaied." (Nestor, Fri., Nov. 12.)—The plot concerns the husbands whose wives dress as men and go from London to the remote part of the world to proceed to shanghai them. Much fun is furnished on board the ship, in fact, all the way through. Victoria Forde and Jess Meredith imperiously star. The story is well told.

"The Star Gazet." (Nestor, Tues., Nov. 3.)—Murdoch MacQuarrie always makes a picture, but this one boasts of novelty besides. It is set free by the sun's rays concentred through a telescope fastened to the back of the camera. The story is presented; rather weak except for MacQuarrie acting.

"Peg o' the Wilds." (Imp, Two reels, Thurs., Nov. 12.)—An interesting story of a wild mountain girl being found and taken along by a group of men. She is here after a series of adventures, a man proves a criminal, living apart from the rest of the world, but brought to the justice arrested. Violet Mercuria and William Shay star the principals. Hobart Henley is also in the cast.

"His Big Chance." (Vestron, Mon., Nov. 2.)—A foreign prince poses as a mail. She enters the arms of a stranger and is granted any favor. She chooses to entangle a society as an escort. She is proposed to, but when it is learned that the man heads for a marriage engagement. Then it is announced she is a princess, and the man breaks the news to her without telling her. Violet Mercuria and William Shay star the principals.

"Race for a Bride." (Sterling, Thurs., Oct. 29.)—Good comedy of the two suitors for the girl. The girl who brings the justice of the peace to the house first is to win. The race is the most comical feature.

"The Wall Between." (Sterling, Mon., Nov. 1.)—A noble hero falls by the wall and a woman on the other. They guard the windows and children are together and they are reconciled. Quite a pleasant comedy that will please.

"They Didn't Know." (Crystal, Tues., Nov. 2.)—An old idea and poor producing will cause this comedy to appear rather lifeless. Anna Gartland and Ulpiano Herman are attracted by an actress. She strings them along for a time and then her husband appears.

"Her Own Home." (Eclair, Sun., Nov. 5.)—A pretty comedy drama played by Lucile Martin and Herbert P. She takes a house and carries her girl with her. The girl is forced to tell her story. She reveals that she is an old housekeeper. The new owner learns her identity, and they marry.

"The Girl of the People." (Victor, Two reels, Fri., Nov. 13.)—The plot seems weak and poorly constructed, and no great amount of interest will be awakened. Mary Fuller is in the role of the heroine, and she runs away from her father. She joins a gipsy band, but the leader takes too many liberties, and she leaves him. She becomes a great dancer and marries an artist after the blackening of her face. A realistic story to appeal to girls.

"The Jungle Master." (101 Bison, Two reels, Fri., Nov. 12.)—From the stage of a real drama, the introduction of numerous species of wild animals overshadow the plot until the end of the film. Much excitement is caused by the fearful manner in which the characters are introduced. A very novel and entertaining number played by Henry Mack's 101 Bison company.

"The Crucial Moment." (Eclair, Sun., Nov. 14.)—A stage play, the dramatic and crucial story is presented here, and at the crucial moment, the hero dies. An amusing scene comes the cast announcement. A good picture and the "moment" is really left to the imagination of the artist.

"The Vagabond." (Teex, Two reels, Sun., Nov. 1.)—Unconventionally marks this number, which is made and presented in an exceptionally entertaining. The worthless son of the family, played by Herbert Rawlinson, meets his double, and they happen to be the same man. The son dies and his double returns to his home. In the city, he comes to comfort the dying mother, then makes himself known, and later marries the family (Beatrice Van). William Worthington plays the father.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"The Desperado." Broncho. Two reels, Fri., Nov. 12.—A picture showing an old man's devotion for a young man. He is the worst kind of a desperado. The story is put together in the most0n and the result is a perfectly splendid, so that suspense and interest are always present. The only fault of this review is the number and the three following appeared by mistake in the Universal column last week. They are here reprinted in their proper place.

"Stout Heart But Weak Knees." (Key- tone, Sat., Oct. 24.)—Charles Murray and the unknown male are the chief fun makers in this reel. They are fun makers in every scene, especially the last picture will keep one in continual laughter.

"Shot in the Excitement." (Keystone, Mon., Oct. 26.)—We don't know just exactly where the thrill comes from the picture, but we can take it that it is any part of the human body, a falling and throwing consume the greater part of the picture, with some thrilling moments of laughter, especially when a ridiculously slow cannon ball is seen pursuing a runaway couple.

"Left in the Train." (Thanhouser. Sun., Oct. 17.)—A reconciliation of the girl and her father comes when the former's child is left in the train and is brought to the father by his two grand nieces. A very pretty story in which the Thanhouser twins and the kid play important parts.

"Dad and the Girls." (Beauty, Tues., Oct. 20.)—A man opposes his son's engagement to a girl in whose hand he has never set. On the advice of her lover she gets her friend to help in the place in order to get the girl. She involves him in trouble which he is glad to escape from by consenting to the marriage. It is a good, short comedy.

"The Availing Prayer." (Reliance, Fri., Oct. 30.)—The underpaid, hard-working man is tempted to steal the girl's pocketbook. It extracts money from the purse he is carrying to the bank, but is attacked by thieves. Due to the man's ingenuity in saving the purse, and is rewarded. This makes an unusual story, played by Spottswood Aikins and Dorothy Gish.

"The Ruin of Manley." (American, Two reels, Fri., Oct. 16.)—This is an unconventional picture built around the ruins of the Los Angeles pigeon farm, when that place was destroyed. The story is good, and the realism that is instilled by the handling. The stars are Affinito, Greenwood and Ed Coxen appear in the leading roles.

"A Mother's Influence." (Majestic, Tues., Oct. 27.)—Rather an old story but none the worse for that. Cora Sue Walker is Mrs. Mr. Wallace Reid in a convincing manner. The son marries a stenographer, and is divorced by his mother. The star of the picture is the wife who reconcile the man to his son.

"A Flight for a Fortune." (Majestic, Two reels, Sat., Oct. 30.)—A story for the unscrupulous lawyer who attempt to swindle a farmer, who later is employed in their office. A flying machine is introduced with thrilling results. A little too long with the story that would be excellent.

Signe Auern is the girl.

"Our Mutual Girl, No. 4." (Reliance, Tues., Nov. 1.)—A short, film which concerns Margaret the game of love in this number. A little of the scenes are in color. The picture is a masterful work. She now has a charm that will make him a favorite. She now has a charm that will make him a favorite. She now has a charm that will make him a favorite. She now has a charm that will make him a favorite. She now has a charm that will make him a favorite.

"A Madonna of the Poor." (Thanhouser. Two reels, Tues., Oct. 27.)—Married Ostriche in the leading role. Her husband, an Italian laborer, is out of work. She poses for an artist who takes liberties with her, which she does not like, but the man bears her up for these actions, but the woman finds little of interest in his talent. The story will entertain but be unimpressive.

"The Heartless God." (Kay-kee. Two reels, Fri., Nov. 13.)—A picture showing the incidents that changed the religious ideas of a young man. There is a love. A story is written, but the end is a little dull and the story is not as good as it promises.

"Curled by His Beauty." (Keystone, Sat., Oct. 31.)—Charles Murray appears as an ice- man and boasts of a divine figure, which a feminina coming in, the man bears the image of his wife. She plans to seduce a man and comfort this dying mother, then makes herself known, and later marries the family (Beatrice Van). William Worthington plays the father.

"Shotty Falls into a Title." (Broncho. Two reels, Sat., Oct. 24.)—A picture of the circus. This is an exciting and full of sudden turns and action. A chase and a humorous scene which takes place in a unique bedroom.

"In the Clutches of the Gangsters." (Kay-kee, Two reels, Fri., Nov. 6.)—An exciting, crooked melodrama in which one of the gang reforms and after ridding himself of his past he returns to his old haunts, and that are staged of the most realistic variety.

"Bill Joins the W. W. W.'s." (Konic. Sun., Oct. 25.)—The story of the fortune, Young and Timchuck. It tells of Bill joining the We Won't Work for Nothing. One of the good actors, an employer. Among other things the safe had a lot of money, but not quite up to the standard set by others of the series.

"A Blotted Page." (Reliance, Two reels, Sat., Oct. 24.)—A picture in which a husband because he has lost his money. The one evening he left in the house tells him her story. She was once happy, but lost her husband and child through the failure of the bank house run by the father of the man to whom she is talking. "The Tightwad." (Beauty, Tues., Nov. 1.)—A tight-fisted farmer boards his money in the fireproof and scorns all modern improvements, making drudges of his wife and children. A telegraph company places a tree on the premises by his daughter's friends, and the husband is about to buy the instrument by two tramps and brings the doctor in time to save the little girl. The tightwad is completely finished off with all the modern electrical appliances.

"The Ruin of Manley." (American, Two reels, Fri., Nov. 13.)—This is a picture of a less Manley is on the point of making good when a man is about to make a big mistake in the pursuit of his pet hobby, pigeon raising, when a misunderstanding results in a quarrel between brother and sister. This is followed by another catastrophe. His large game farm, built upon much his rivals knew he was dangerous when he sold it, farm, is wrecked by a flood of the river.

ECLECTIC-PATHE

"A World Without Men." (Eclectic. Three reels.)—One of the newest releases of the Eclectic company is the adventure of three sisters who decided that men were snobs and never fell in love with them. The story is certainly variegated, but their principles made it very hard for them to hold jobs, because they were all good looks. Therefore they received many attentions from the opposite sex. A number of scenes take place, but try as they will the sisters find that they are weakening a little towards men. This is due to the fact that they have each encountered one man whom they regard as the greater gentleman from the point of view of other men. They finally become engaged on the same day.

"The Poor Little Rich Boy." (Eclectic. Sat., Oct. 17.)—A little rich boy takes a little girl to a picnic in his pony cart, but he does not have nearly as much fun as the girl. No one asks him to play baseball. When he tells his father he has a baseball suit and is very happy.

"Whiffles Has a Toothache." (Pathé. Sat., Oct. 17.)—A rather good comedy based on the clash of a toothache which would not die. It resulted in a series of unexpected complications, but Whiffles forgets a man who punches his jaw because he ends the toothache.

"Mother's Darling Little Boy." (Pathé. One reel.)—Some good "rough house" action and a number of teasing make this picture one of much merit. A small boy who believes that what is implied in the title shows himself to be otherwise. A gang of hoosiers and their remarkable meeting place. This is a fine comedy.

"Max in a Difficult Position." (Pathé. Split reel.)—On the same reel with "Whiffles' Nightmares." A very funny comedy of a man who sustains a fracture in the seat of his dress trousers while on the way to the circus. There is a wealth of original humor in the piece.

"Whiffles' Nightmares." (Pathé. Split reel).—An unusually good piece of trick photography. Not only does the same actor play two parts, but many other special effects are introduced. The story tells of a miner who refuses to loan his habitually hard up brother any money. The brother pretends to have committed suicide and then "haunts" his victim. A good comedy made more interesting by the presence of the marvelous picture.

"A Soldier's Duty." (Eclectic.) Three reels. —This picture is a fine example of foreign skill and production. It tells the story of a soldier acting as a spy, who had the strength to give up his sweetheart for the sake of the cause. There is interest and beautiful light effects. In one instance a map blown up is shown. The resulting puff of smoke is shown in the moon-dramatic picture, which abounds in fine scores light. This is merely one example of what the camera man has accomplished.

UNCLE SAM NEUTRAL ON "ORDEAL" QUESTION

Goldburg Consults Acting Secretary of State Lansing Regarding the Alleged Life Photo Production Theatre. Their approval was unqualified.

Assistant Secretary of State Phillips, after thoroughly going into the matter with Acting Secretary of State Lansing and Mr. Goldburg, finally determined that the Department of State would not prohibit the exhibition of "The Ordeal," and would not entertain any complaint against it.

Of course they could not endorse that or any other production, it being entirely without their province to issue certificates of approval.

ACTRESS NURSES INVALID SISTER

The home life of Cleo Madison, the clever leading woman with the Gold Seal company, at present engaged in the production of Louis Joseph Vance's "Trey o' Hearts" series.

Miss Madison lives with and is the sole support of her mother and her invalid sister Helen, known to all her host of friends as "Sunshine," because of her cheerful disposition. Helen is twenty years old and for the past seven years has been unable to walk.

The two girls are inseparable and when Miss Madison is not busy before the camera, she may always be found wheeling little "Sunshine" up and down the long shady avenues of Hollywood or sitting reading to her in some pleasant nook on the palm-strewn lawn that surrounds the Madison home.

FIGHT BATTLE IN WATER

It was Herbert Brenon and Hobart Henley who, at great risk, dived into twenty feet of water, where they put up one of the most unique and spectacular fights ever done for the screen.

This forms one of the scenes for "In Self Defense," a two-reel drama produced by the Imp Company, under the direction of Herbert Brenon, up in the wilds of Connecticut.

Hobart Henley, as the brother, pursues Mr. Brenon, who enacts the role of the villain, to avenge an attempted wrong on his sister. The chase leads on to a lake where the two canoes clash together. Mr. Henley is dragged into the water, and, after a terrific struggle, finally succeeds in strangling his opponent.

The remainder of the story concerns the apprehension and trial of the brother and the love which the sister has for a detective.

Violet Mersereau is seen in the role of the sister. Billy Shay plays the detective, while William Welish and Mrs. Walker are seen as the father and mother of the boy and girl.

"THE NIGHTINGALE" MEETS WITH INSTANT SUCCESS

The best evidence of the success of the Alco program from its very beginning is found in the fact that at the present time seven prints of Ethel Barrymore in "The Nightingale" are in use in New York State alone, and negotiations are under way for placing the release in numerous other theaters.

The drama, which Augustus Thomas wrote for Miss Barrymore, has had a big run in Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and other cities. This tragedy of love and music was number one on the Alco program, and hence officials of the releasing corporation and of the All Star Feature Corporation are intensely gratified with these results.

The production was booked at Hammerstein's Lexington Opera House for the week commencing November 1. Negotiations are now pending between the Life Photo Film Corporation and other theatres concerning supplying regular feature programs for the purchase of the rights to "The Ordeal" for the United States and the Dominion of Canada.

"PLAYING WITH FIRE"
(Selig—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY C. J. VERHALEN

A STARTLINGLY true photoplay that might be enacted any day in real life. The story is of "The Moth and the Flame" type, but rendered in a way that gives it a new interest. It portrays a character that is so genuine and so realistic that it makes the photoplay refreshing.

Bessie Eyt or plays this part. She shows the great strength and the great weakness of woman. After playing with fire she sees her wrong. She determines to be true to her husband, and she is, but the forced attentions of the other man which she fears to confess to her husband makes a web of circumstantial evidence that blackens her in the sight of her husband.

And he, when the rival makes a written confession, does not believe it as he had been a scoundrel; neither will he believe her. It makes a very strong finish, just a bit different from the stereotyped kind where everything ends happy, and tends to give the picture a moral. Miss Eyt or and Thomas Santschi play the leading parts.

Mary Ransom, a charming young wife, permits Horton, a friend of the family, to shower his attentions on her. Horton so compromises her that she is embarrassed and would be free from his friendship. John Ransom talks to his wife upon the subject. Horton writes Mary a letter, which is intercepted by John.

Horton forces his attention on her in a restaurant and is discovered by John. For the sake of their son, John tries to believe her when she explains. They go to their cabin in the woods. Horton invents a subterfuge for getting John back to the city. After John leaves the cabin Horton enters. He is later discovered by John. This is the final stroke—the last straw. Husband and wife separate. Horton on his death bed confesses to Mary, who has become a nurse. John will not believe the confession and they continue in their separate spheres.

CINEMA DANCE A SUCCESS

The invitation, reception and dance given by the Cinema Camera Club of American in Pabst Coliseum, on Saturday evening, October 10, proved to be just as successful as was predicted. In January the club will give its annual ball to commemorate the second year of its existence. This affair commemorated nothing in particular, but will bring remembrances of a good time to all those who were fortunate enough to be present.

There were many screen stars in attendance, chief among them being Clara Kimball Young, James Kirkwood and Mary Pickford. The first two led the grand march. Members of the Vitagraph, Edison, Peerless, Universal and Famous Players’ companies were also on hand.

The members of the reception committee who saw that everyone was well taken care of were: Otto Brautigan, Harry Bredson, Emmett Williams, William Forsyth, Lyman Broening and Edward Wysard.

“SALOMY JANE” AT BROADWAY THEATRE

Fifteen hundred invitations were issued by President Walter Hoff Seely and the directors of the Alco Film Corporation for a private exhibition of “Salomy Jane” at the Broadway Theatre on Tuesday, October 27, at 10 a.m. The invitations were sent to prominent film men within a large radius of Greater New York, to writers, artists, professional people and persons prominent in the life of the metropolis.

When “Salomy Jane” was shown in a similar way to the leading men and women of Brook, space at the St. Francis Hotel, the film drama was received with great approbation. “Salomy Jane” is based upon Paul Armstrong’s dramatization of Bret Harte’s “Salomy Jane’s Kiss.” It is the first attempt to present the atmosphere of the California as Bret-Harte saw it, in the picture film.

23 WEEKS’ RUN IS KELLERMAN FILM RECORD

Special to Motion Picture News

Chicago, October 21.

Alfred Hamburger becomes the proud possessor of the world’s record for continuous exhibition of a photoplay.

For the past twenty-three weeks he has been showing the graceful Annette Kellerman at the Fine Arts Theatre in Chicago to a patronage estimated at 200,000 people.

During the last four weeks several big features sought a location in Chicago for a downtown run, but none of them could guarantee to beat the box-office receipts produced by the performing Australian.

CLAWSON AND HILL PHOTOGRAPH “HYPOCRITES”

Two camera men filmed Bosworth’s “Hypocrites,” George W. Hill and Dal-lin Claws.

A previous statement only gave credit to Mr. Hill, who, incidentally, is the personal photographer of Hobart Bosworth.

Dal-lin Claws has been the camera man of the company for two years, and the concern feels that credit for the remarkable photography in this picture should be given to him as well as Mr. Hill.

Mr. Siegel, the Picture Drama Company’s representative in Ohio, Michigan, and Western Pennsylvania, reports that over five thousand persons witnessed “After the Ball,” at the Majestic Theatre, Erie, Pa., when the picture was shown there on October 8, 9 and 10.

Unfortunately on the last day of the showing it rained continuously and this is responsible for a return date.

Mr. O. P. Sammons of Denison, Texas, bought a “Mirror Screen,” and he writes that he cannot take care of the crowds. His picture is simply the talk of the community. A few second-hand screens for sale cheap.

Sawyer War Films Cover Wide Field

Scenes Representing Activities in Austro-Servian Campaign, French Naval Events, Greek Mobilization, and Engagement Near the River Derna

S A W Y E R, INC., worked night and day in order to release on October 19 its "The Only Authentic Films of the War in Europe." The Sawyer office has made no previous announcements, but ever since the beginning of hostilities it has been arranging to secure actual war pictures. The negatives just arrived, and in them is sufficient "live" matter to make either three or four reels, it is said. This absence of "padding" certainly is a feature which will make a strong appeal to the motion picture public.

The Austro-Servian campaign was cinematographed by the royal command of His Majesty King Peter of Servia, the French naval scenes by a French officer, and the Russian operations by an imperial court photographer, with the Czar's permission, it is asserted. Scenes showing the Greek mobilization were made by permission of King Constantine, and Turkish war preparations by authority from the Sultan Mohammed, it is declared.

The films have a thrill from start to finish, although the photography is by no means perfect. Considering the conditions under which they were taken, often at the risks of the camera men's lives, the results are said to be remarkable.

The views of the Servian campaign are said to show all the events from the declaration of war on July 28. King Peter and his staff attend cathedral service to pray for success before going to the front, where the films show him received by the assembly of officers. The engagements near the River Derna and the battle of Shabatz are also said to be shown.

King Nicholas of Montenegro personally leads his troops to the aid of Servia. Naval scenes taken by a French officer show the bombardment of Cattaro, Austria, by the French. By way of Holland a short film showing Russian operations came through, it is said. Mobilization scenes in Greece and Turkey complete the picture.

The pictures present a vivid idea of the dreadful conditions in the war zone.

Alterations and Improvements
J. Koenigstein, a merchant at Eminence, Ky., for several months has been "looking over" the interior of the theatre proposition and has decided to convert a large portion of his store room into a hall suitable for a film house. He has announced that the theatre will be well equipped in every particular with a first-class projection apparatus. The location in the heart of the town is a very favorable one, and as this will be Eminence's first picture theatre, it is believed it will be a success.

Mr. George H. Bauer, manager of the Lawrenceville Theatre, Lawrenceville, Ill., is renovating and enlarging his house. On account of the good business he has been doing Mr. Bauer is compelled to increase his seating capacity, and when the theatre is completed it will be very modern throughout.

The V. M. C. A. building at the corner of Main and West Streets, Brockton, Mass., soon to be vacated by the association for their new building, has been leased for ten years by three Marion men. They are B. E. Waters, of the Marion Gas Company; Isaac E. Miller and Charles Ripley, also of Marion. The assembly hall is to be fitted up and used as a motion picture theatre and will be ready about the middle of December.

Mr. Ogden, a well known hotel proprietor of Springtime, has decided to erect an addition to his existing building and announce that the theatre will be ready for occupancy about October 1. The theatre will be 30 by 100 feet in dimension, and will have a seating capacity of 350 people. In its construction there will be no sacrifice of comfort for additional seating capacity. The interior decoration will be simple in its tones, but the lobby, to be finished in real Italian marble, will be elaborately attractive. The improvements will cost approximately $25,000.

"The Grand" moving picture theatre at La Grange, Ky., has been sold by Mr. R. E. Gumm to Mr. W. L. Crow, proprietor, and will be in operation by October 1. The theatre will be 28 by 100 feet in dimension, and will have a seating capacity of 350 people. In its construction they will be no sacrifice of comfort for additional seating capacity. The interior decoration will be simple in its tones, but the lobby, to be finished in real Italian marble, will be elaborately attractive. The improvements will cost approximately $25,000.

"The Grand" moving picture theatre at La Grange, Ky., has been sold by Mr. R. E. Gumm to Mr. W. L. Crow, proprietor, and will be in operation by October 1. Since taking charge of the Grand last winter Mr. Crow has given his patrons the highest class pictures on the market. Mr. Vaughan promises to keep them up to the present high level of the business. The Luna theatre at Mt. Union, Pa., has changed hands. H. S. Chambers being the new proprietor. Vaudeville and motion pictures will be run in the theatre as of the past.
Clyma Erects Big Plant in California

New Company Incorporated for $100,000 and Backed by Well Known Men in the “Golden West,” Will Produce Elaborate Pictures of Popular Novels by Edmund Mitchell—Buildings Have Latest Equipment

WITH a release through one of the well-established companies contracted; two years' program planned; scenarios prepared; costumes, props and scene sets almost ready; and a new studio with administration building, modern motion picture factory, stage, dressing rooms and other necessary buildings nearing completion, the Clyma Company, Inc., has begun the filming of its first subject.

The company, incorporated in July under the laws of California, is company, founded by W. W. Keller, business man, president; W. L. Valentine, banker, vice-president; Jack Jevne, retail and wholesale grocer, vice-president; Edmund Mitchell, author, traveler and motion picture producer, general manager; and Fred L. Butler, manufacturer, and E. G. Kuster, attorney, directors. All are of Los Angeles. The company is a closed corporation with a paid-up capital stock of $100,000.

The productions of the company will consist of five reel features, from the books by Edmund Mitchell, general manager, and published by Chatto and Winders, London. The first to be taken up will be “Lone Star Rush,” a story of early days in the western part of United States.

Scenarios for others now prepared are “Temple of Death,” “A Tale of Adventure in India,” “The Outlaw of El Tejon,” a typical pioneer western story, and others. For the past two years Mr. Mitchell was connected with the Melies company, and the last half of that period he spent in cruising about the Pacific Ocean.

He arrived here in May from China. He has written fourteen novels, and it is planned that all of these shall be filmed. It is the intention to produce quality and not quantity pictures, and six or seven weeks will be devoted to each subject.

The photography will be in charge of Rene Guissart, five years with the Eclair company in Paris, and for the past few months at Tucson.

Among those selected for the stock company are: Bob Fraser, formerly of Eclair; Charles Arling, late Pathé lead; Rupert Julian, successful English actor until recently featured in Universal productions; Gordon Sackville, formerly of Bosworth, and others. Millie Bright will play leads in some of the productions. The first picture will be released about December 1.

The plant of the company will occupy one city block and is located at 1025 Lillian Way, Hollywood. The property will be the most complete motion picture producing plant in California, when entirely completed. The buildings are of the California bungalow type and the grounds are inclosed in an attractive manner.

The administration building is 30 x 50 feet, and besides the offices contains a 12 x 34 feet projection room, with fire-proof projecting booth at one end and a 12 x 12 fire-proof storage vault for films. The laboratory or factory is 30 x 82 feet and will be equipped with a Bell and Howell latest type printing machine.

The ventilation of this building is a particular feature, all air being filtered through cotton wool. The stage is 50 x 60, scene dock 16 x 50, and scenic artist's studio 10 x 50. There are twenty dressing rooms all connected with hot and cold water.

Flynn Discusses Secret Service Serial

Stories Will Demonstrate the Futility of Crime, and Its Prevention—Film Episodes Promises to Be Unique

THE forthcoming Secret Service serial now being produced by the Film Attractions Company, Inc., and produced under the personal supervision of C. V. Henkel, promises to be unique in many respects. In place of drawing upon the imagination for materials, the scenario is developed from actual facts within the experiences of William J. Flynn, Chief of the United States Secret Service.

Chief Flynn being interviewed, stated that he has repeatedly been solicited to allow the production of his stories (which have appeared from time to time in leading papers and magazines) upon the screen, but until now refused all overtures, fearing that his name and title might be used to exploit mere sensationalism, and depict the various methods of committing crime.

“In my story,” said the Chief, “I do not pretend or desire to preach a sermon, but nevertheless, I have taken particular pains to demonstrate the futility of crime. The function of any police organization is to prevent crime, as well as to detect it after its commission, and throughout the adventures of the various Secret Service operatives in this story I have woven a romance based upon authentic incidents, realizing that the spectator requires more than a mere exposition of facts.

“I have every confidence that Mr. Henkel with his experience will do full justice to the material I have furnished him. I have taken the best of my experiences with the various kinds of lawlessness, including counterfeiting, smuggling, land frauds, violations of exclusion acts, coining, diplomatic intrigues, suppression of revolution, and incorporated them in the twenty episodes of which my photoplay story will consist.”

United Film Service Program Is Complete

Warner's Features, Inc., Set November 8 as Day to Start New Series of Releases—Surprises Are Promised

ON Sunday, November 8, Warner’s Features, Inc., will release the first films on its new United Program and from that date the releasing will be continuous.

The program, to be known as the United Film Service, is produced for Warner’s Features, Inc., by the United Motion Picture Producers, Inc. This concern was organized several weeks ago especially for this purpose, some of the best producing companies in the business uniting to form the central company.

Ever since its organization the producers composing it have been working over-time turning out comedies, dramas, semi-comedies and Westerns. In order to keep up with the work of editing the films the Warner company was compelled to put up a double screen in its projection room and install another machine.

There are many unique ideas shown in the initial United releases. A notable comedy is “Prince Charlie,” produced in Superba films. Charlie goes to sea, is shipwrecked on a cannibal island, and the cannibal princess falls in love with the castaway. Charlie is played by Charles De Forrest, the famous comedian.

“The Gypsy’s Warning,” a Premier drama, shows some unusual effects in both the story and the setting. A mirthful comedy-drama of the uncommon sort is “Brubell’s Busy Day.” This is a Luna film produced by Gilbert P. Hamilton’s company. Some of the weirdest automobile stunts ever seen in motion pictures are successfully performed in this film. Another comedy of unusual character is “The Villain Still Pursued Her,” produced in Starlight Films by the Mintosh Studio.
The Form On The Opposite Page has been designed to aid you in keeping a complete and immediately available record of your "shows." It is arranged for use with the two pages each of "Release Dates for Ready Reference" and "Record of Current and Coming Releases" in every issue.

The chart will occupy one full page in each issue. You can remove it, carry it around in your pocket for the week and then place it in a loose leaf file for future reference on "repeaters," special features, posters, etc.

What Several News Readers Think of It

I am certainly delighted with your idea and can suggest no improvement on it.—Wm. B. Klahre, Ideal Theatre, Johnston, Pa.

I think your form for theatre record very good.—Chas. P. Hoffman, Star Theatre, Carrollton, Ohio.

The sheet shows careful study of the subject and deviling into detail. Is a perfect record.—F. K. Hogan, Mgr., Coliseum Amusement Co., Coliseum Theatre, Toledo, Ohio.

We think this an excellent idea, as it will make quite a novel record as well as a great aid in repeaters.—Murray E. Hall, Dixie Play-House, Fellsmere, Fla.

No chance for improvement, good idea. Something every exhibitor should appreciate.—Jas. O'Malley, Ferguson Theatre, Olyphant, Pa.

In our opinion it is all O. K. and would like to have it in book form.—Savoy Theatre Co., Savoy Theatre, Washington, D. C.

It fills a want that all could use who like a system of doing things.—Fred E. Duffy, Hibernian Hall Theatre, Utica, N. Y.

I certainly think it a fine addition to your most valued "News." The News is certainly our best friend every week.—Glenn W. Reynolds, Princess Theatre, De Kalb, Ill.

It is very cleverly gotten up and think it very useful to an exhibitor. Thank you for same.—W. O. Marshman, Palms Theatre No 1, Indianapolis, Ind.

How to Use It

1. The outside left hand column, headed "Day and Date," is to be filled in, under the name of each, with the date and month.

2. The column headed "Titles of Films Booked" has room for seven subjects every day of each week, with a subject to a line.

3. The next column, headed "Release Date," is to enable you to check up and determine whether you are getting right films. An example: Your exchange should send you twenty-day Biographs. "The Lost Pearl," a Biograph single reel, is booked to you on Monday, September 14. By referring to the list of Biograph releases on the page of "Release Dates for Ready Reference" in the News for two or three issues back, you can find the title of the film, and the date of release. Then you know exactly how old it is when you get it.

4. The column headed "Brand" is to simplify the identity of the releases when you have occasion to refer to the weekly charts at later dates.

   The column headed "No. Reels" is necessary to some exhibitors, but not to all. Its use depends upon what manner of service you are booking.

5. The column headed "Review Appears in Motion Picture News of" you can use either as an immediate guide to the page to familiarize yourself with the story of the film; or to use the review as a basis for booking; to have the story for instant use in your house organ, newspaper advertising, or for the news columns of the papers' motion picture department. The two sub-headings "Issue" and "Page" make the reference easier.

6. The column headed "Posters used and size," if you note the amount of paper used each day, is a check on your paper bill, and a guide to the styles of paper you will get with your bookings.

7. The column headed "Regular or Special" is for you to make a note of each film booked as a special.

8. The next column, headed "Cost," applies only to special films. This gives you an automatic check at the end of each week on the total sum spent for outside features, or special films, and enables you to estimate their earning power when compared with receipts either for the day or week. It also helps you to establish a record of what various features are worth in rentals or on a percentage basis.

9. The column headed "Advertising used; newspapers; heralds; slides; photographs; window cards, etc.," if filled in each day, will help you in determining just how much your various forms of advertising increase your patronage. The same is true of heralds, and all other publicity matter.

   Such a record, on these charts, will be mighty valuable after a few months.

10. The column headed "Weather" will help you in analyzing your total gross receipts each day. In some places weather has considerable to do with patronage.

11. The last column, headed "Total Admissions," with the two sub-headings, "Matinee" and "Night," will give you a positive record of the pulling value of different kinds of film. It will show just what profit there is in all of the other items mentioned on the chart. It will act as the final check on every one of them, and by comparison for several days or weeks, it will prove to you, beyond all doubt, just what certain brands are worth, what size posters "pull them in," what special features can do to boost business, whether newspaper advertising, heralds, slides or window displays are the most effective.

12. By keeping this chart up to date each week, you will have a complete index to your business. A new one will be issued in every number of The News. Each one can be torn out and carried in your pocket for the week it is used, and then filed in a loose leaf binder for future reference.

"THE NAKED TRUTH"
(Complete—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY C. J. VERHALEN

With some pictures it's the photography, with others it's the story, while others still stand out because of the situations. "The Naked Truth," however, is a big film because of the splendid acting of Lydia Borelli.

Her personality is infused in every bit of playing she does. Her prettiness lends an added charm to her work, and the play itself seems to have been wound around this actress, or it might be said she has wound the play around herself.

This production marks her a photoplay actress of remarkable ability, one that is bound to stand out in the photoplay world as one of the biggest stars of the decade.

Without a doubt in her own country her name is blazoned forth from every theatre as an inducement for pictures fans to witness pictures in which she appears. The thing that makes her acting good is the simplicity with which it is done. She does not attempt to overplay any part, she merely bubbles over with the pleasure of living; then again in her moments of trial you know that she actually feels the part. There is no sham in that acting; she plays up to it, not with a rush, but with a delicacy that must be admired. One especially pretty piece of acting is her awakening scene. It is not done with an effort, but slowly, naturally and truly. She does it so well that you feel as though you are intruding.

The play itself is very good. It deals with a delicate subject, but gets away with it well. It contains a thread of interest that travels throughout it, and winds up with a finish that is different, but still satisfying.

In the Latin quarters of Paris Lollette lives, and is known throughout the artist's colony as the handsomest girl in Paris. She poses for Armand Bouchard, only because he befriended her. Pierre Bernard, a close friend of Bouchard, sees all his efforts go to waste because of the lack of a suitable model. He persuades Bouchard to consent to his employing Lollette.

During the days that follow while his masterpiece is in making, a passionate love affair springs up between him and his model. Their marriage quickly follows. The picture wins the grand prize, is sold for a big sum and the couple move to a fashionable part of the city, and Bouchard is forgotten.

As his prosperity increased, Pierre becomes more and more ashamed of his wife's humble origin. He later becomes entangled in a love affair with the Princess Dupont. Lollette suspects, and when finally she seizes the pair alone she is certain that she has lost her husband's love.

She appeals to the aged prince, her rival's husband. He refuses aid, telling her that arrangements have been made for a divorce. She then decides to appeal directly to the woman. For a moment the princess' heart is touched, and she promises to break with Pierre.

Her resolution is short lived, and it is not long before she breaks her promise. She again appeals to her rival but without success. She announces her intention of securing a divorce and hurries home. That evening Pierre finds her lying half dead on the floor, the butt of a revolver clamped tightly in her hand.

Brought to their senses by Lollette's attempt on her own life, both Pierre and the princess resolve to end their liaison, and both promise her to make amends. The woman keeps her word, but the husband soon betrays her unworthiness. Heartbroken, Lollette sends him away, and when she has sufficiently recovered from her wound to leave her bed, she slowly makes her way back to the old studio in the Latin quarter tenderly led by the faithful Bouchard.
WASHINGTON HEIGHTS THEATRE DRAWS BIG CROWDS

Within the past few months a number of new theatres have opened in the rapidly growing section of the upper West Side of Manhattan Borough, New York City, known as Washington Heights. Probably one of the handsomest, if not the most pretentious, is the Heights Theatre, six hundred capacity, Messrs. Landau and Bock, proprietors, situated at 181st street and Wadsworth avenue.

The theatre is up to date in every respect. It has upholstered seats, indirect lighting, two motor-driven Standard projection machines, and "Wurlitzer" music motion picture orchestra.

The radius gold fibre screen, which is raised a little higher than that in the average theatre, is 13 by 18 feet, and is visible from any seat in the house without the usual craning of necks.

The Heights Theatre was the first in that locality to raise the price of admission to ten cents for adults at the matinee performance, and 15 cents for adults and 10 cents for children at evening shows.

The house, which is thoroughly fire-proof, with eleven exits, is doing a capacity business, and the slogan, "We do not object to your bringing the children to see the show, but in justice to our patrons we must insist that you keep them quiet," is not a little bit responsible.

The special feature is run daily, and twice a week. Wednesdays and Thursdays, an added feature is shown. On these two days the prices of admission are raised. A special programme is issued to the patrons which shows the entire week's bill, with coming attractions for the following week.

ANOTHER NEW YORK CITY THEATRE OPENS

The Classic Theatre, 181st street and St. Nicholas avenue, New York City, recently opened, is aptly termed the "Theatre Beautiful," as it is in the announcement of the programme issued by the Classic Amusement Company, lessees of the theatre. The house seats six hundred and is up-to-date in every respect.

Two Powers No. 6a motor driven projection machines have been installed. Indirect lighting system is used. The seats are all upholstered, and the roof is made so that it can be opened in sections during the hot summer nights.

The policy of the house will be "to provide an entertainment of two hours duration, pleasing to the eye, the mind, and the memory, ever mindful of the high moral tone and tastes of its patrons."

The manager, A. P. Waxman, is to be congratulated on securing such a creditable accomplishment for the pictures with a symphonic orchestra under the direction of Maestro A. Frankel.

The house opened with "Cabiria" on Thursday, October 1, for a four days run. Arrangements have been made with Paramount and Alco film companies, and together with the showing of features the management also presents Keystone and Ford Sterling mirth provokers. Pathé, Mutual and Universal Weeklies and the Strand war news are also shown, so that every Classic Program includes a feature of from five to seven reels, a comedy and an "Animated Weekly."

The prices of admission are, matinees five and ten cents, evenings ten and fifteen cents.

HERNE'S DOUBLE IN SCREEN PLAY

James A. Herne drew audiences to him, not only as an actor, but because of his fine personal qualities which "got over" in some mysterious way. His personality and magnetism swayed his audiences. For instance, people went to see him in "Shore Acres" and exclaimed not only over his Nat Berry, but over the personal qualities they felt certain Mr. Herne must possess.

Now this loveable side of James A. Herne has been transferred to the screen through the medium of Chas. A. Stevenson, who plays Nat Berry in the Alco release of October 26, the All Star Feature Corporation's production of "Shore Acres."

Screen audiences are noting the strong facial resemblance of Stevenson to Herne and they are endowing him with all the other qualities of James A. Herne.

Great gratification has been expressed by the admirers of Herne that Mr. Stevenson's portrayal of Nat Berry has been put into enduring form by the Augustus Thomas producing organization, and Mr. Stevenson's many admirers are delighted, too, that the work of this noted player, which began long before he was a co-starred with Kate Claxton in "The Two Orphans," is to have a place in the gallery of the future.

ALLIANCE WARNS TRADE

Editor, Motion Picture News,
New York City.

Dear Sir:—It has come to our attention that a party by the name of H. R. Garson, of Troy, N. Y., has incorporated a company called the Exhibitors All Theatre Film Co., and has issued a prospectus inviting exhibitors to take stock in such company. He offers to give them features for $15.00 per day, and among the films listed is “The Key to Yesterday.”

This company has no connection with the Alliance Film Corporation, which has the sole rights to the Favorite Players production, “The Key to Yesterday,” and has no right to offer our pictures to anybody, at the preposterous price of $15.00, or any other price.

We would thank you to publish this letter in order that exhibitors may not be misled.

Yours very truly,
Alliance Films Corporation,
By Andrew J. Cox,
General Manager.

800 BOOKINGS FOR “AFTER THE BALL”

The Photo Drama Company reports that Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon, in “After the Ball,” have over 800 local bookings in Greater New York and New Jersey still to play, and more additional bookings coming in every day. Reports from the out-of-town offices predict unusually large business.

Steiner and Mahler and Pierce Kingsley, the producer of the photoplay, are receiving the congratulations of the trade from all quarters.
Music and the Picture

Editor's Note.—This department is prepared to answer all questions from exhibitors relating to the use of music in connection with photoplays, and to suggest suitable music for current pictures. Correspondence will be welcomed.

Music for the Picture in Folio Form

By H. S. Fuld

At last! Various music publishers, having arrived at the point where they can see the now insistent demand for suitable music to accompany the pictures, are getting ready to release such music in folio form. A few of them have had a sort of vague idea as to what was needed, and really tried to get out, and did publish so-called "Music for the Picture."

Since the appearance of the article in this department in the October 17 issue, two such publications have made their appearance and three others are in the printer's hands. The first one to come to our attention, while not primarily intended for picture accompaniment, nevertheless seems particularly adapted for such use.

There are thirty-five different songs in it, arranged in dance time and practically all of them being popular, the selection of them by titles from the index should enable a pianist to suit them to the pictures.

For instance, take "By the Beautiful Sea." This would make good for any beach or shore scene and played either fast or slow as the action of the picture would demand.

This folio is published by Shapiro, Bernstein & Company of New York. So many pictures of the present day contain somewhere in their make up a ball-room or reception scene where characters are dancing. All the dances, Hesitation, Tango, Fox-Trot and so on, are shown in this folio.

In fact, all of the present day dances can be suitably played for by using the music from this folio.

In using such a folio, pick out the song titles best suited, in your opinion, to the scenes and then go at it in this way; taking "Bootsie's Baby."

Edison, 2 reels, for example, from the Edison October booklet:

- Bootsie's Baby
  Dramatic. Time, the present. Place, English cavalry barracks.
  6-8 allegretto until Lady standing under tree, Valse lenten until Bootsie leaves card table, Gavotte according to action until Young lady applies for position, Plaintive until

- Latest Shapiro Songs for November

1. Tip-Top Tipperary Mary.
3. The War in Snider's Grocery Store.
4. Just 'Round the Corner from Broadway.
5. The Tango in the Sky.
6. Do the Funny Fox-Trot.

Finish of Part I, Swell to FF until Beginning of Part II, Continue P until.

After lady faints, Slow waltz according to action until Sub-title, "Watching a Race," Galop (short) until Accident, Plaintive according to action until finish.

In this picture the parting scene between the girl and Bootsie is a good place to render "In the Gloaming," "Best for You and Best for Me that We Should Part," and such melodies.

In a box on this page you will find the names of the latest songs for November from the house of Shapiro, Bernstein & Company. This will be a regular feature each week and will contain the names of latest songs.

Popularity of Wurlitzer on the Increase

The popularity of the one-man orchestra manufactured by the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company, Cincinnati, is evidenced on every hand. Letters are received by the concern from pleased exhibitors in practically every mail. One which expresses unusual appreciation of the merits of the Wurlitzer was written by the enthusiastic president of the Hippodrome Amusement Company, Inc., the owner of the motion picture theatre of that name in the same city.

"Everything in connection with the recent installation of your one-man Wurlitzer orchestra has been so entirely satisfactory in all things promised that I am glad to write you this letter. Use it in any way or refer any exhibitor to me.

"Aside from the saving between one man's and six men's salary—an item of some $200 per week—no orchestra could possibly so properly accompany our moving pictures as is being done with your instrument.

"My Hippodrome theatre seats 975, and the music there has been quite a problem and an expense to me. There is nothing mechanical in the tone of your orchestra. The pipe organ quality especially appeals to my audiences.

"In addition to the hundreds of expressions of delight from my patrons my box office receipts have very much increased in spite of the extremely hot weather we have recently had.

"I am convinced more than ever that the music for motion picture houses must be a one-man orchestra. No body of musicians can possibly change quick enough to follow a film.

"This fortunately figures out a money saver.

"Very truly yours,
"The Hippodrome Amusement Co.
(Signed) "I. Frankel, President."

Gentlemen: In reference to the MOTIOGRAPH machine, I bought two of these machines in 1911 and 1912, and both of them are in perfect running order at the present day, and each doing work seven nights per week. During their life neither machine has stopped for one single night.

I consider the MOTIOGRAPH excels all other machines for projection, steadiness, and costs less. No wonder you say, "Cut down your repair bills and get a MOTIOGRAPH."

Have had experience with several other machines, and I would have none other than a MOTIOGRAPH.

Use Posters on Billboards as Well as in Front of Your Lobby

There are a lot of people in your town who never pass your theatre. How are you going to reach them? One excellent way is to use posters on boards where these people will see them. Put up a few twenty-four sheets and watch the result. Legitimate theatres use them and so do some moving picture proprietors. Are you one of them?

Here is a man in Maine and not in a very large city either—see what he did. Take it from him, it pays for he is still doing it.

ST. ELMO
In Six Reels

THIS acknowledged masterpiece—now controlled by the Box Office Attraction Co., of New York—will show earnings in excess of $250,000 before its money-getting possibilities have been exhausted. At the New York Strand Theatre, the largest and finest motion picture house in the world, St. Elmo broke all box office records during the week of its engagement and immediately thereafter repeated the performance at nine other New York theaters. The two, three and four-reel Balboa dramas are proportionately magnetic, the photography is above criticism, the scenes brilliant and beautiful, and the acting superb. The plays and the stories back of them are absorbingly interesting—thrilling—gripping, and never fail to hold the spell-bound attention of the audience. In all of those essentials that entitle motion pictures to a high place among the various forms of public amusement, Balboa Feature Films are supreme.

I am ZUDORA—
the mystic girl detective you've heard so much about. I'm just eighteen. I'm playing the lead in Thanhouser's new serial photoplay—ZUDORA. This will be Thanhouser's masterpiece. It has been created by Daniel Carson Goodman, author, scientist, philosopher. It has been novelized by Harold MacGrath and will appear in 500 leading newspapers.

ZUDORA
Thanhouser's Greatest Photoplay

This stupendous production will be presented in 20 episodes—each a baffling and perplexing mystery. These episodes represent 20 episodes of my life. Each will be complete in itself—although a master plot will run through all. A new episode will be released each week beginning Monday, Nov. 23.

I am ZUDORA—endowed with supernatural powers of deduction, hypnotism and scientific analysis. I will present to the public, beginning Nov. 23rd, the story of my odd powers—an extraordinary recital of science, love and adventure.

I've promised exhibitors bigger box office receipts. I'll be with you beginning November 23rd to make good.

—ZUDORA.

MINNESOTA CONVENTION A MODEL MEETING

Resolutions Adopted by Exhibitors in Minneapolis Go to the Root of Conditions and Prove Members Alive to the Importance of Remedying Existing Circumstances—Exchange Men Participate in “Get-Together” Conferences—Committees Appointed—More and Shorter Sub-Titles Wanted

WORKING with the same earnestness and lack of friction that would characterize the meeting of a board of directors for a successful corporation, members of the Minnesota Motion Picture Exhibitors Association at their fall meeting and exposition put the motion picture business into the big business class.

It is usually considered polite and quite the necessary thing for the delegates to boost a convention whether it really did anything or not. However, when a large group of exhibiting manufacturers ask special permission to go on the floor to thank the convention and to ask them to have another exhibition, there is something more than politeness in the boost.

These manufacturers sold goods, sold expensive goods and lots of them, and the ones who are loudest in praise are the ones who exhibited reluctantly.

Then again, in checking over the list of 347 delegates registered it was found that the majority of them represented theaters that cost an actual outlay of more than $12,000.

When the delegates once got inside the convention hall in the West Hotel business only was considered, and every man left thoroughly convinced that the motion picture business in the northwest is many notches higher than before, that the association is an efficient, service-rendering organization, and that it is strong enough to fight and win any just battle undertaken.

The convention did many things, gave serious consideration to many more, and filled every exhibitor with enthusiasm.

As an example of the harmony, time after time, resolutions were read and one member would say: “I believe it’s too early for the association to try that.”

“I guess that’s right, read the next,” would be the response from all parts of the house, the man who offered the resolution joining in the chorus.

Important Action Taken

There is food for serious thought in the proceedings for manufacturers and exchange men. The action taken was entirely without malice, but indicated a firmness of purpose. The association decided to pay no more return express charges on any films; to use no special feature films of the regular companies unless they are on the regular program.

Other matters decided upon were:

Appointment of a board of review to see all state rights films, and report on condition of film and general subject matter—a small fee to be charged for review and report sent to every exhibitor; the establishment of a commission to adjust grievances and differences between exhibitors and exchanges.

It was also decided to establish a permanent legislative committee in the twin cities to look after all motion picture legislation; to have all members report to the secretary on the price he pays for service, and to see if discrimination is shown.

Manufacturers will be asked to eliminate from films and posters all cigarette smoking, drinking and carousing scenes, and other scenes likely to wrongfully influence the young and increase censorship agitation.

Manufacturers will be requested to adopt standard sizes of posters and other advertising matter that uniform frames may be used, and to discourage the distribution of any films that are not clear.

Manufacturers will also be asked to discourage the use of serial pictures unless they are on regular programs.

The association wants to expand the organization and take members from Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, and make every exhibitor member an organizer and membership solicitor.

Effects of Discussion

The discussion of the big things in the business was an education to every delegate. Each discussion showed that the exhibitor has his side, and that the exchange man and manufacturer has his.

The delegates “reasoned together.” An instance of this was the frequent suggestion that some men were paying more for features than others. They didn’t see the reason.

J. F. Cubberly, manager of the Zenith Feature Film Company of Duluth, and an exhibitor as well, told why this was so.

“There is nothing to conceal about this,” he said. “Two men just asked me for prices on a certain feature. I quoted the same film to one man at $12 and to the other at $20. The man who got it for $12 is in a town of 1,500 population, and the other in a town of 5,000.

“I believe we must adjust the prices in this way, taking into consideration the size of the town and the size of the house when we go outside the city. If we did do this the small man would fail to get the good pictures his audiences deserve. I have worked constantly to give the small towns the best on the market at a price their houses are able to pay.”

Mr. Cubberly dealt with these two men at the same time and said that the exchange men should all work on this basis and be firm about it.
Mr. Cubberley's idea was favored by many with certain modifications, and this question will be one of the important ones to be threshed over by the grievance committee before the next meeting.

Other important suggestions to be considered by committees are proposals to:

Want More Sub-titles
Obtain some special concession or benefit exclusive to the Minnesota association that will make membership something to be desired by every exhibitor.

Ask manufacturers to use more sub-titles and larger type, and simple short words that can be grasped quickly by everyone.

Request manufacturers to announce the names and show pictures of the film stars so the patrons will become better acquainted with them and take more interest in films.

"THE EXHIBITORS' TRADE JOURNAL"

MOTION PICTURE NEWS
New York City.

Gentlemen: I want to tell you that the Motion Picture News was a mighty popular trade journal among the exhibitors who attended the recent convention at Minneapolis.

Exhibitors from the small towns, as well as the cities, were loud in their praise of the News.

"The exhibitors' trade journal" was the slogan they all adopted. I am sorry that my work on subscriptions was largely effort wasted. Nine out of ten exhibitors present already are subscribers.

Very truly yours,

FRED S. MEYER.

Organize locals wherever expedient.

Keep state organization out of national affiliation.

Study, boost and build the motion picture business.

Rumors of proposed censorship bills and other legislation affecting the business is expected to make a midwinter meeting necessary, and that will be subject to the call of the president.

The association found time for many social functions, but none of them interfered with business.

One of the delights of the convention was the address of Mayor Wallace G. Nye. Mr. Nye said the motion picture business had been placed on a high plane in Minneapolis, and he declared that "no licensed calling" gave him as little concern as the motion picture calling.

"I have always found the picture men ready and willing to work for the best interests of the city, and I wish that all other business men were as willing," he said. "Where I have suggested betterments they have been made even where it meant loss for a time at least to the exhibitors. I congratulate you on your efficient organization, your high standards of citizenship, and the city is yours now or any other time."

Everybody Pleased

The exhibitors helped make the exhibition lively. The big balcony and second floor of the hotel was packed with them, and all did business. Those men who deal in any supplies that exhibitors use will exhibit hereafter, and the exhibition was half of the meeting.

Harry H. Green and W. A. Steffes, with their committees, handled the job which many said couldn't be done. The association was appreciative, and so are the civic bodies of Minneapolis and next time the exhibitors of the city want anything other organizations will go out to help them land it.

R. G. MARSHALL.

Sidelights of the Convention

The following committees were appointed:

For the Good of the League: Nicholas, Fairmont, Minn., chairman; Baloo, of Albert Lea, Minn.; Granstrum, St. Paul, Minn.; Abrahamson, Duluth, Minn., and C. E. Van Duurse, Minneapolis.

Grievance Committee: O. C. Stelzner, Minneapolis, chairman; D. F. Eislein, Cloquet, Minn.; P. D. Agnew, Minneapolis; Mr. Bye, of Minneapolis, and Mr. Hagen.

Committee for Ways and Means: Otto N. Raths, St. Paul, chairman; Jas. Gilowsky, St. Paul; Frank Nemec, St. Cloud, Minn.

Executive Committee: W. A. Scott, Red Wing, Minn.; E. A. Nelson, Duluth, Minn.; F. E. Nemec, St. Cloud, Minn.; Christopherson, of Benson, Minn.

Among the manufacturers represented were the following:
Sterling Electric Company, Feature Film Company, St. Paul; National Cash Register Company, Grant Sign Company, Plank Disinfection Company, Milwaukee Poster Mounting Company, Wisconsin Seating Company, Motion Picture News, Arcus Ticket Company, General Film Company, Eccentric Film Company, Alco Film Company, Universal Film Company, Warner's Film Company, World's Film Company, Famous Players Film Company, Great Northern Film Company, Mutual Film Company, George Kleine Film Company, and Box Office Attraction Company.

Just before the convention adjourned to meet at the call of the president, the chairman requested the various exchange men and every one who was present to speak a few words with reference to his exhibit.

"Is the gentleman who is representing the Motion Picture News present?"

Fred S. Meyer, who represents the circulation department in the Northwest, arose, and took the floor.

Chair: (Jas. Gilowsky, of the Alhambra and Gem theatres, St. Paul.)

"Gentlemen: I wish to say one word in behalf of Motion Picture News. I receive all of the trade journals at my theatre and have been getting them for a good many years. Not until lately did I subscribe to the News and I am satisfied to go on record in stating that the News, without exception, is the best and livest trade journal on the market today, and of particular interest to northwestern exhibitors; and you will make no mistake when you subscribe for the News."

Mr. Meyer: "Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: I did not expect to be called upon to make an address, at least not in behalf of the Motion Picture News. As you of course know, I am connected with the Laemmle Film Service, and my associations with that firm prevent me from actually representing the News in an editorial capacity at all times. I realize the fact that at executive sessions it is impossible to be present, and that ground has been, and is supposed to be covered by another gentleman.

HE WOULDN'T BE WITHOUT IT

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 31, 1914.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS,
New York City.

Gentlemen: "From a house manager's standpoint, the Motion Picture News is great, and indispensable, and under no consideration would I be without it."

HARRY L. BECK, Manager,
Wool Point, Mont.

Everybody Agreed

"What I am looking after is the circulation end and it is no wonder that I have again been successful in proving beyond a shadow of a doubt the unusual popularity of the Motion Picture News. I wish to thank you personally, Mr. Chairman, for the words of introduction. From the bottom of my heart I extend my appreciation to Messrs. Steffes and Green, in fact you all have been so very kind, and loyal in your boosting of the Motion Picture News, that I fail to see how I can ever at any time reciprocate and repay you for your kindness.

"With regards to the Motion Picture News, all I can say is that you can consider this paper for the exhibitor, first, last and all the time. An opportunity arose some months ago, when Mr. Steffes (at the time of Mr. Neff's attempted organization of a League at Austin, Minn.) requested me to send a few lines to the Motion Picture News. I did so, but had no idea that said article would be published in its entirety. It was, and I don't think I am mistaken in stating that the Motion Picture News directly, and Mr. Steffes and his wonderful article indirectly, are responsible for the fact that Mr. Neff is no longer president of the national organization.

"I do not wish to dwell upon politics. As previously stated,

WASHINGTON BALL IS BIG SUCCESS

Exhibitors League Function, Looked Forward to with Deep Interest by Members of the Industry in and Out of the Capital City, Proves an Occasion of Joyful Celebration, and Will Be Long Remembered in the Annals of the Association

Special to Motion Picture News

The most unique gathering of the capital of the nation has ever known was that of the ball and reception given on Hallowe’en night by the local Motion Picture Exhibitors League and the Washington “Post.” Convention Hall was turned into a fairy palace with palms, bunting, flags, and electric lights, amid which moved an animated throng in beautiful attire.

A large orchestra, under the direction of A. J. Manwell, furnished a concert program until 9 o’clock after which dancing began and continued until midnight. At least three thousand attended the ball, whose informal nature created a congeniality which added to the thorough enjoyment of all.

The chief point of expectancy was the entrance of the players, which occurred at 10 o’clock in the form of a promenade grand march led by Earl Williams and Clara Kimball Young. Then followed the other players—heroes and heroines, comedians, villains and adventurines, sweethearts and lovers—who from the screen have endeared themselves to the public.

Those from the various studios were as follows: Earl Williams, King Baggott, James Morrison, Hughie Mach, Marc McDermott, Ben Wilson, Harry Myers, Wallie Van, Alan Quinn, Howard Mitchell, Earl Metcalf, Robert Cornes, John Smiley, James Daly, Lloyd Lonegran, Edgar Jones, Harry Morey, Douglass Sihole, John Jace, Donald Hall, Lilian Walker, Rosemary Theby, Anita Stewart, Leah Baird, Kate Price, Norma Talmadge, Edith Story, Mary Maurice, Clara Kimball Young, Marion Xenbit, Gertrude McCoy, Mabel Trumelle, Clary Lambert Daly, Florence Hacket, Justina Huff, Rosetta Brice, Lillie Leslie, Ruth Bryan, Elsie Woodward, Mildred Gregory, Clarence J. Elmer, William Perry, Kempton Greene, Ormi Halley, Mayme Kelso, Romaine Fielding, Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Smith, Samuel Spedon, H. A. D’Arcy, and Frank Mann.

Open regret was expressed at the non-appearance of Francis X. Bushman, from whom a telegram was read, stating that special rehearsals prevented his coming. There was also present a contingent from the Baltimore League, headed by Marion Pearce, president of the National League.

An interesting feature of the ball was the taking of a motion picture of the grand march of the players, as well as the public who followed in the procession. This will be shown at the local theatres. It is needless to say that the motion picture actors and actresses were fairly besieged by the enthusiastic public. There was no partiality:

All were equal favorites. As each was introduced by Fulton Brylawski, secretary of the local league, the players expressed happiness to know and meet so many friends and admirers.

A banquet followed the ball at which about one hundred and fifty covers were spread. The many favors were emblematic of the occasion and the spirit of Hallowe’en prevailed. This was a gathering of beauty, animation and good fellowship.

The toastmaster was John Smiley, and those who were called upon to address the assembly were Marion Pearce, Wm. P. Herbst, King Baggott, Harry Myers, Kate Price, Harry Crandall, Fulton Brylawski, Marc McDermott, and Romaine Fielding. Mr. Pearce took this occasion to present to the Washington League a souvenir of the Dayton convention, consisting of photos and badges of this gathering appropriately framed.

The whole affair was a huge success, but it must be admitted that Fulton Brylawski was the moving spirit of the event. Every exhibitor gave his support and it was these united efforts that will make this first "Movie Ball" long remembered by the public of Washington.

PECK ASSISTANT MANAGER FOR BALBOA

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Nov. 2.

Charles Mortimer Peck, former newspaper man, and until recently connected with William Fox’s Box Office Attraction publicity department, has arrived on the West Coast and taken up the duties of assistant general manager of the Balboa Amusement Producing Company at Long Beach, Cal.

It is understood that H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer, owners of the company, will in the near future open an office in New York City and one partner will be there all of the time, and both a part of the time; thus the management of their producing company on the West coast will be looked after in their absence by Mr. Peck.

Chairman of Los Angeles Board Asserts Pictures Have Improved So Much They No Longer Need Supervision By the City Authorities

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Nov. 2.

The manufacturers of motion pictures have so improved their productions in the past three years that for men and women to sit as a board of censors now is a pure waste of time and energy. This at least is the opinion of Mrs. E. K. Foster, chairman of the Los Angeles municipal board of censors, who for the past three years—or since the board was established by the passage of a city ordinance—has held that from what might be termed filth, there are a few who desire to profit by producing shoddy pictures that appeal to a very small class. American pictures—generally speaking—are far superior to foreign made films.

"Yes, so-called thrillers and slap-stick have a place. They serve as amusement to a class that should be entertained for their health's sake. There should be no censorship, with reference to children, for parents and guardians should see that their children do not go where they should not.

"Los Angeles board members are not of the same class as those of Chicago and Philadelphia. This is not a censorious board. We have aimed to act as a health department for pictures, removing the filth and leaving all recreation and educational features.

"All members are believers in the saying of Herbert Spencer, 'Protect men from their follies and you breed a race of fools,' and have practiced the doctrine of censoring films."

It is very probable recommendations will be made to the city council in the near future pointing out the lack of need of the censor board, and recommending that an inspector be appointed by the mayor, whose duty it will be to supervise films, or urging that the matter be taken charge of by the state or nation.

Prosperity Paramount In Omaha Territory

Demand for Higher Grade Service Increases—Better Machines Ordered—Improvements and Alterations Everywhere

Special to Motion Picture News

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 2.

The fall prosperity of motion picture houses in this territory is being realized more than ever this year. Exchange managers report increased demands for higher grade service. Every building in the territory that is in any way fitted for a motion picture theatre is being used for that purpose, and all of them are enjoying prosperity.

C. E. Jones, at the head of the repair and supply department of the Mutual exchange, says there is a continual stream of orders for better and higher grade machines, more improvements and general signs of prosperity. Jones, in going about to visit the various exhibitors, has personal talks with nearly every one of them during the course of his work. "Everybody is delighted with their business this fall," he said.

A new theatre opened in Omaha October 24, and one opened in Council Bluffs, la., just across the river, on October 28. Of all the state, repairs, improvements and new theatres in the way of building have been listed in nearly every town. The motion picture exhibitor population of this territory, heretofore lower in proportion than most other states, is gradually increasing. This winter is expected to give the business such an impetus that this territory will be a boom one within a year.

The war has not affected this territory, as it has elsewhere. In the manufacturing cities there has been a let-up in general prosperity because of decreased exports, resulting in a smaller demand for manufactured goods. Here in the breadbasket of America the food—always needed—is produced, there is a prosperity marked in contrast with other parts of the country. Nebraska's prosperity is and has been for several weeks a national subject. Better crops than for years were produced, and they brought better prices than for four years.

"MAN FROM HOME" NEW LASKY RELEASE

"The Man from Home," the famous Lasky Company Astor Theatre success which was booked for the Strand Theatre, is the most recent output of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, and has at the head of the cast Charles Richman.

In the photo play The Lasky Company spared neither pains nor expense to make the production even more massive and magnificent than the stage production. In addition to Mr. Richman, the cast contains James Neil, Theodore Roberts, J. W. Johnston and a new find of the Lasky directors, Florence Dagmar, who plays one of the principal roles.

"The Man from Home" is scheduled for release on November 9, and will have its first showing in New York at the Strand Theatre.

OLGA PETROVA LATEST STAR OF POPULAR PLAYERS

Ramsay Morris's play, which in turn was based upon Mr. Morris's novel, Madame Petrova is playing in New York in "Panthea." Her appearance as a moving picture star is thus made possible at this time by her presence in New York. Each morning the actress will go to the new studios of the producing organization at Fort Lee.

In "The Tigress," her managers declare, Madame Petrova has been fitted with a vehicle which exactly fits her temperament. The actress has many strong scenes to do in the vein in which the general public is accustomed to think of her and so her admirers and friends believe that she will be very successful as a motion picture star.

Baltimore Astir Over Philadelphia Meeting

Special to Motion Picture News

Baltimore, Nov. 4.

There is much interest at the Baltimore headquarters of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America regarding a big meeting of exhibitors expected to be held shortly in Philadelphia.

While this meeting will be strictly a Philadelphia or Pennsylvania exhibitors' gathering, it is expected that all of the prominent officers of the league will be invited to be present. The meeting will be of a general get-together nature to discuss the welfare of the motion picture industry in the Keystone State.
THE fact that motion pictures are now engaging the careful attention of advertisers in every city and town throughout the country, from coast to coast, is not new, but the extent of advertising everywhere, coupled with the amazing record of actual motion picture advertising achievement, has brought into transient being a host of alleged motion picture advertising specialists who either intentionally or ignorantly are making ordinary film and preposterous circulation claims decidedly detrimental to the best interests of this field.

Motion picture manufacturers realize that it takes more than a camera, a pint of Kodak expert ink, and an unbacked ambition to make films photographically good. Any student of advertising knows well that the science of advertising consists of more than parroted ideas and a superficial vocabulary of selling phrases.

Era of Specialization

Ours is an era of specialization. Now that motion pictures have an established place in the list of advertising media, the introduction of the film advertising specialist is accomplished in the same manner the advertising world was made to accept and value the individual or company announcing as their specialty copy writing, direct merchandising, newspaper, magazine, billboard or poster advertising.

Motion picture advertising is too big and important for a side-line. To be a capable manufacturer of good film, or to be an able advertising expert, is each in itself a splendid achievement.

On the other hand, there are many advertisers using, or intending to use pictures for indirect advertising, special propaganda work or sales promotion purposes who can, without the services of a recognized moving picture advertising specialist, make a creditable showing and a good film investment, provided their moving pictures are taken by some one of the reputable manufacturers who can and do back their proposition by something more tangible and satisfactory than absurd assertions.

The maximum of moving picture advertising efficiency can be secured by doing business with a reliable moving picture advertising specialist who has the advertising ability and experience, the necessary moving picture manufacturing ability and experience, factory, field and service organization, plus an honest intention to sincerely “make good” the fulfillment of contracts when signed to the extent promised when soliciting the business. Moving picture advertising results can also be obtained where the advertiser delegates his advertising or sales manager to direct the work and then has it done by one of the film manufacturers whose name is a well-known stand for real moving picture quality. Where this course is pursued, of course, there will often be a lack of footage economy and the advertiser will have to furnish the raw stock, work up the sheets and plan the whole advertising output on the film right, and will have all details of special exhibitions and circulation to handle.

Until recently the moving picture industry has been pleasantly free from stock jobbing schemes, but the wave of popularity and publicity given the animated pictures has attracted the Wallingford promoters, whose records in most instances can be summed up in the phrase “successful promoters of unsuccessful enterprises.” The “dear public” holds the bad and where the schemer turns to the industrial and advertising field some advertisers are bound to do it holding themselves.

Firms Using Picture Publicity

In the list of big users of motion pictures for advertising, commercial education or industrial exploitation, are such organizations as the Winchester Repeating Arms Company, Postum Cereal Company, Du Pont Powder Company, Northern Pacific Railway Company, Peabody Coal Company, United States Gypsum Company, Imperial Oil Company, American Cyanamid Company, Old Taylor Whiskey Company, United Auto Workers Association, Barber Asphalt Company, International Harvester Company, Peabody Houghteling & Company, Ford Automobile Company, United Shoe Machinery Company, Shredded Wheat Biscuit Company, and other organizations of both near and far circulation, all engaging the services of the-well-known advertising specialists and their ability and policy to buy good and safely, and whose selection of motion pictures as an advertising means is in itself sufficient to prove that this form of advertising comes through the acid test. O.K. pictures have a place in advertising. Motion pictures are undoubtedly the superior illustrative force. The tendency in advertising copy is to suggest or state the magnitude of the advertiser’s organization, the factory back of his trade mark or name, the care with which his product is made and distributed.

Mere words cannot adequately do this, but where these advertising claims will stand for pictorial proof, moving pictures can be utilized to show in motion, comprehensively and convincingly, all that the advertising copy attempts to conjure to the mind’s eye.

On account of certain restrictions with which reputable film manufacturers and honest moving picture advertising specialists are familiar and acknowledge advertising films cannot be shown in all of the picture theatres in this country. But a goodly number of these houses can be induced to give adm films splendid and far-reaching circulation if the subject is properly produced and presented through channels known and open to those who have gone into the business on the right basis.

Moving picture ads on the screen engage 100 per cent. eye and mind attention, for where the pictures are shown there are assembled people in their most receptive mood who are there to see and are undisturbed by diverting or distracting influences.

There is a world of romance behind every business name and trade mark. The capable and thinking moving picture advertising specialist can find this romance in practically every product, before the public in a manner that will attract, entertain, educate and at the same time deliver an advertising message in a manner decidedly favorable to the advertiser.

Motion picture advertising can be directly connected with merchandising schemes; it can be made to move merchandise. In fact, it can be made to do most anything that appeals to the eye, but it takes more than mere talk and intentions to deliver.

Film Advertising Possibilities

Moving picture advertising possibilities have been postponed and perverted by solicitors who brazen their way into the advertiser’s office and either through ignorance or ulterior motive claim and promise circulation that cannot be delivered.

Many a good prospect has been “killed” by the employing of firms unable to make good films.

More than one advertiser has been disgusted and shaken back into the future prospect file by a presentation of glaringly false claims which were apparent even to him, a layman, and a reflection upon his business intelligence.

There are instances where the advertiser has had good motion pictures made, and then because his contract did not buy service he has found good reels on his hands which he knew not how to place where they could earn dividends.

Judging from the quotations that have been given to prospective advertisers, the price for pictures is more elastic than a rubber band. As a matter of fact, there should be a standard price. It is possible to induce an advertiser to pay $2.50 a foot for film. Of course, this is exorbitant, and a firm taking advantage of the average layman’s ignorance of such matters cannot hope for success very long.

On the other hand, there are quotations of as high as $500 a foot and these are on the top quality of pictures which are below the proper cost and cannot possibly be made profitably if this price includes any advertising or circulation service, unless the film company takes business at this price leads up the customer with a lot of “dead action” and repetition, which is unnecessary footage.
On this basis of figuring, the paramount purpose must be to concentrate and accentuate the important features of the subject, so that its advertising power is developed to a maximum and the customer does not have to pay for waste film footage, which is an extravagance.

There is sufficient advertising value in motion pictures. There is no need for misrepresentation. It is not necessary to make exaggerated circulation claims to get a customer. Motion pictures constitute the greatest advertising forces ever conceived. Wherever a moving picture advertising contract is secured and fulfilled on a safe, sane and sincere basis, the advertiser makes a wonderfully profitable and advertising investment, and the specialist builds stronger for the future, for isn’t it true that the proof positive of any proposition is the record and face value of the people who make it and the aftermath the opinion of those who accept it?

Seeing is believing; hence, moving pictures for advertising—but, SWAT THE LIE IN MOVING PICTURE ADVERTISING.

MONTANA PRESIDENT IN R. R. ACCIDENT

Special to Motion Picture News

Butte, Mont., Nov. 2.

Philip Levy, manager of the Ansonia Amusement Company of this city and president of the Montana Exhibitors League, was killed Wednesday in a railroad accident, the crack train of the Northern Pacific, in the Cascade mountains.

Just as the train pulled slowly out of a long tunnel in the mountains, the driving rod broke and the cars came to a sudden stop, caused by the severed rod sticking in the ground.

Because of the slow rate of movement, there was no accident but the jar and the smoke filled carriages, caused by the tunnel ride, gave out the impression for a moment that the train was a fire. In pajamas, Mr. Levy and others tumbled out of bed to ensure the accident. Ascertain the truth they returned to bed and slept for the three hours while a new engine was being procured from a nearby station.

Mr. Levy was returning home from a business trip to Seattle.

Screen Club Organized in San Francisco

Exhibitors and Exchange Men Launch Association for Purpose of Bringing Pacific Coast Members of Industry in Closer Touch

Special to Motion Picture News

San Francisco, Nov. 2.

THE Screen Club of San Francisco has been organized here by leading exhibitors and film exchange interests, following a series of discussions on the subject at the informal luncheons held each Saturday by members of the trade at a prominent downtown cafe.

The need of a social organization to bring exhibitors, exchange men, producers and equipment agents into closer touch with each other has been apparent for some time, and for several weeks plans have been under way for the formation of a permanent body of this character. A formal meeting was held on the evening of October 19 at which an organization was affected and officers chosen.

Following the initial meeting, a couple's canvass for membership was made and during this time fifty charter members were secured, making a splendid nucleus for the organization.

Arrangements are now being made for opening club rooms and by the opening of the exposition year the club hopes to be in its own quarters and in a position to properly care for visitors of note.

Funds for the furnishing of the club rooms are to be raised through the medium of a ball to be held at the Coliseum rink on the evening of November 28, and the initial plans for this event indicate that it will be one of the most unique events of the kind ever held in this city.

The publicity end of the affair is being handled by Joseph Huff, of the Odeon and Unique theatres, thus insuring something new. The ball is in the hands of the following committee:

J. T. Turner, of Turner and Dahmken:

Leon Bories, General Film Company; M. L. Markowitz, California film exchange; Charles Stillwell, Silver Palace theatre; J. MacArthur, Majestic theatre; F. L. Hudson, Eclectic film exchange; Joseph Huff, Unique and Odeon theatres; Jack Partington, Imperial theatre; Marion H. Kohn, Apex Film Company; Sol Lesser, Golden Gate film exchange; Tom North, George Kleine Attractions, and Fred Dahmken, Turner and Dahmken.

The officers of this late addition to the screen clubs of the country are:

President, Sid. Grauman, manager of the Empress theatre and part owner in Grauman’s Imperial; vice-president, Chas. Stillwell, manager of the Silver Palace theatre; secretary, Nate K. Herzog, of the Pastime theatre, assistant secretary, Ralph L. Marks, secretary of the Exhibitors’ League of San Francisco; treasurer, J. T. Turner, of Turner and Dahmken; directors, Sol Lesser, of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc.; Tom North, manager of the San Francisco office of George Kleine Attractions; O. V. Traggardh, of the Union Film and Supply Company, and the Supreme Features Corporation; Joseph Huff, manager of the Odeon and Unique theatres; Ralph L. Marks, of the Acme theatre on Stockton street.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK GOOD, SAYS HORKHEIMER

Balboa President Is So Impressed with General Industrial Conditions That He Plans to Build Another Film Producing Plant and Organize Five New Studios for the Increased Demand for Pictures Bound to Follow the Upward Trend of Trade

Special to Motion Picture News

Long Branch, N. J., Nov. 2

RAISING President Wilson’s peace policies, declaring that European nations are placing unparalleled, record-breaking orders in the United States for supplies of all kinds and predicting that a golden era of prosperity is impending in North America, H. M. Horkheimer, president of the Balboa Amusement Producing Company of Long Beach, California, recently spoke of his investigations of business conditions in New York, Chicago, St. Louis and other cities during the last two months.

When he returned to the Long Beach studios of his company he announced that as a result of his highly successful trip to eastern localities the Balboa corporation would immediately complete plans to build another film producing plant in Long Beach, as a greater annex to its already large studios in this city and that five additional new organizations of players would be formed within the next several months to produce the Balboa Feature Films.

“During my stay in New York,” said President Horkheimer, “I found that all the large banking houses had an abundance of money, in fact they are carrying from fifteen to fifty per cent of funds over the surplus necessary for them to have.

“While some people may believe that the banks’ substantially solid conditions may be due to political reasons, I am still a very firm supporter of the present national administration, and I know that there are no reasons whatever for financial institutions to hold up money, as some of them doubtless are doing.

“Tremendously large orders are coming to United States manufacturers from Europe for clothing, foods and ammunition—in fact, in every line of business. While I was in New York I met agents of European concerns who had commissions to buy everything from a clothespin to a white elephant—and the foreign powers are paying the bills in gold.

Sees Era of Great Prosperity

“I have always heard and read of the solidity of the Rock of Gibraltar—of its strength as a bulwark that could not be penetrated—and I know that the New York money market is equally impregnable. With the gold pouring into the United States business houses as it is at present, there is certainly coming the greatest era of prosperity the United States has ever known.

“Concerning the trend of the motion picture producing industry,” continued Mr. Horkheimer, “I can say that the popular demand at present is apparently for the filming of famous books, celebrated stories, and time-tried successful plays.

“This demand is doubtless due to the fact that all the American film producers have raised the standard of excellence in their output. I believe, however, that just as good pictures can be made out of new, original and novel themes as from the recycled narratives.

“As I understand the motion picture art it was first introduced for the amusement of the masses; i.e., the people of the universe. I therefore believe that we will always have with us the five-cent and the ten-cent theatre, and the owners of these popular-priced houses cannot, of course, afford to pay fancy prices for their films.

“Hence, there will always be a market for one-reel, two-reel and three-reel feature releases, for the amusement of the tired business man, or the person with a half-hour to spend in recreation and relaxation of the mind by going in to see a short and snappy photoplay. The great, long productions do not appeal to quick transients.

“The Great War has, of course, eliminated a number of the foreign selling fields of films.

“Americans now have the Australian, Canadian, Mexican and South American film fields all to themselves, with no competition from the former foreign producers. What we have had cut off in the continental selling fields has been about equally balanced by the additional new and exclusive markets in the countries I have named. The Australian field is now wonderfully large and profitable.

Censorship Plan

“In regard to municipal censorship of films the Chicago board continues to pursue its notably radical policy of rejecting and abridging releases. I believe that film producers should not stage pictures that are distasteful to the public generally. The best plan of censorship, however, would be, I believe, one which would award a national committee of censors composed of representatives of all the largest cities—and this commission could view the films and judge them properly. Motion pictures are a great deal in the same class with newspapers—and censor boards do not, of course, reject and abridge the news publications.

“Many gigantic organizations of capitalists have lately entered the motion film producing field, and this is due no doubt to the great amount of profit made in the industry, if a company succeeds. The film making game, however, is a millionaire’s task.

“There have been many failures, because of limited capital, lack of stick-to-it-iveness, incompetent camera men and other shiftless workers who did not take the proper amount of interest in their employer’s aims. Any educated man with capital could start in the film industry today and make money, but he would have to have a lot of original ideas, be willing to work hard and have with him a lot of honest and loyal employees.

“Slapstick comedy continues to maintain its hold on the amusement-loving public, especially the women and children. Refined slapstick comedy will always be a seller, but the refinement must be in it. Thirty Balboa Prints a Week “While some of the large American producers have recently raised the price of films, I do not contemplate elevating the rates for the Balboa output. The present returns we receive for Balboa films pay us a large profit on our investment.

“We have laid plans to have the Balboa studios release 6,000 feet of negative every week, with a minimum of thirty prints, which would be a total release each week of 180,000 feet of positive prints. We are also about ready to close a gigantic deal whereby we will have direct connections with one of the largest selling exchanges in the world.”

Los Angeles Suburb Bars War Films

Rigid Censorship Exercised Over Photoplays, Photographs and Posters—Experiences of Exhibitors With the Police of Long Beach

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Nov. 2

WAR films—either genuine or made-to-order—are not to be shown at Long Beach, California, if exhibitors there follow the instructions given in a letter from the office of the chief of police. And furthermore, fire arms are not to be shown even in lithographs or photographs displayed in the lobbies of the theatre.

Exhibitors at Long Beach—which in Los Angeles is referred to as the home of the majority of the long-boxed individuals—have been advised that pictures depicting war, preparations for war, or anything pertaining to war must not be projected. The order came following the showing of the following films: The Kaiser’s Challenge, The Famous Battles of Napoleon, and the Strand war pictures. Exhibitors have not so far attempted to show pictures, and it is very probable that no attempt will be made to do so.

Lobby displays have been receiving careful censorship by the Long Beach police department. When “War is Hell,” an Eclectic, was recently shown at the American Theatre, the police instructed Manager A. A. Frist to paste small pieces of paper over the pictures of guns and exploding bombs. Manager Martin of the Bijou had a similar experience when displaying pictures for “The Kaiser’s Challenge.”

All of the motion picture theatres at Long Beach are located on The Pike, a street along the ocean front. According to reports business has not been good, and this in all probability, has caused the exhibitors to abide by the ruling of the Los Angeles police.
Cincinnati to Have All Feature Theatre
Strand, Modeled on New York House of Same Name, Ready December 1, First of Its Kind in City

Special to Motion Picture News
Cincinnati, O., Nov. 3.

As the result of an elaborate theatrical deal involving several large film houses in Cincinnati, there will be established here the first large exclusive picture theatre in the city. On December 1 the Gayety theatre, which has been devoted to burlesque, will be operated by the Strand Amusement company and will be known as the Strand theatre.

The company was recently incorporated for $25,000 by B. L. Heidingsfeld, I. Libson and E. J. Babbit.

It will be modeled after the Strand theatre in New York. The B. F. Keith interests, it is understood, are backing the project. Until two years ago features in motion pictures were unknown in Cincinnati. At that time Clay Brehm, now manager of the World's Special Feature Corporation in this city, induced Charles Weigel, manager of the Altambra to try a feature in which Brehm appeared as one of the characters and scored a real hit.

Weigel has been showing features ever since and they have gained a strong foothold in the city. Weigel is now showing features exclusively, as is J. J. Hennegan of the Lubin and a number of other houses.

I. Libson, one of the incorporators of the company, is at present the manager of the Family theatre, one of the most successful motion picture theatres in the city. He has been showing there a high class three-reel program. Last summer he tried features at the Grand theatre and was successful with them.

The Gayety last summer was also used for features but did not make money, and Tom Corby, who was in charge at the time, was forced to close up after a few weeks.

Sentiment in favor of features is being felt throughout the city according to film men and it is expected that the new feature house will be successful from the start.

Frisco Plans Uniform Convention Rates
Hotel Men Agree to Prevent Exorbitant Room Rent as Inducement to Bring National Gathering to City Next Year

Special to Motion Picture News
San Francisco, Nov. 2.

At the recent state convention of motion picture exhibitors held at San Francisco a committee was appointed to investigate hotel rates and details connected with the proposed holding of the national convention in this city in 1915. The chances of this city being selected as the meeting place depend largely upon the accommodations that could be secured.

It will be interesting for the trade throughout the country to learn of the extensive plans that have been made by local hotel owners to accommodate visitors in 1915 and to prevent raising of rates. The hotel men of this city have formed the San Francisco Hotel Bureau, with a membership of about four hundred hotels and apartment houses, representing almost seventy-five thousand rooms.

Rates have been established at from one dollar to three dollars a person, European plan, and from $3.50 a day and up, American plan. The bureau will guarantee reservations made at the specified rates and has posted a large forfeit with a trust company to insure perfectly fair play.

An official tabulation of the accommodations to be found here shows that there are over 2,200 hotels, apartment houses and rooming places, with a total of about 120,000 rooms, with a large number in course of construction.

William Kessel, Pioneer Film Man Dead
New York Motion Executive, the Second of the Kessel Brothers to Pass Away in Six Months, Well Known in Industry

William Kessel, a pioneer film man and brother of Adam and Charles Kessel, of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, died suddenly Friday, October 30, at 10 a. m. at his home, 179 Decatur street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mr. Kessel was very well known in the manufacturing end of the film industry, at different times being a manufacturer, state rights buyer, exchange manager and exhibitor. In fact, he has been everything in the motion picture business but a director. At the time of his death he was doing confidential work for the New York Motion Picture Corporation. It was the late William Kessel’s report on European affairs which guided the Articles of incorporation have been filed at San Francisco of the Randolph Feature Film Company, the capital stock being $200,000. Those interested in the new enterprise are F. W. Randolph, A. Gale, O. E. Coom, F. A. Wilhelm and J. Gale.

Lasky Prize Winner Begins Course of Study
A new and wonderful future opened before little Blanche Austin of Dayton, O., who arrived in New York recently to begin a course of instructions under David Belasco, preparatory to becoming a member of the photoplay stock company of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company at Hollywood, Cal.

The arrival of Miss Austin in New York, is the last whispering recollection of the exhibitors’ convention at Dayton, Ohio, during which time the Dayton Herald, through arrangement with Samuel Goldfish, conducted a beauty contest, the winner of which was to be given an engagement at the Lasky studios.

Miss Austin was successful in competition with twelve hundred other Dayton girls, and will begin her instructions next week under Mr. Belasco, with whom she will spend one hour a day. Miss Austin is but seventeen years of age, frail and with features that should register sympathetically upon the screen.

General Manager Samuel Goldfish of the Lasky organization selected Mary Charleson as chaperone for Miss Austin during her month’s stay here, and Miss Charleson has mapped out an excellent program of entertainments. Miss Austin will probably make her first performance in one of the Lasky-Belasco productions, early in December.

No More Merry Road Life for Cook

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 4.

Frank Cook, who so successfully pushed “The Spoilers” during the past few months, has grown tired of the road, with its sleeping cars and hotels and has returned to Saxe Brothers, being in charge of their Princess Theatre.

“I have had too many years of tramping,” said Mr. Cook, “to go back to the road at this day in my life so that when a position that would keep me at home offered itself you can believe I jumped at it.”
EDITOR’S NOTE.—It is the desire of “Motion Picture News” to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. Address: Editor, “Motion Picture News,” 220 West Forty-second Street, New York City.

COURTESIES THAT COUNT

“THE patrons of this theatre are your real employers, and they pay your salary. Treat each customer just as though he personally handed you your check each week.”

This is a part of the general instructions that all employees receive on entering the service of the New Lake Theatre, Nicollet avenue and Lake street, Minneapolis, and the patrons are treated just that way.

The employees are also told that the motion picture business is largely personal and neighborly, and that the employees should know the patrons and learn their likes and dislikes.

When one stands at the entrance of the New Lake any night after 7 o’clock, waiting for a chance to get in, he will hear the door man and the ushers arranging to care for the persons in line.

“Mr. Jones is here with his family and he wants to sit well back,” one of the ushers will say to another.

Mr. Jones hasn’t the best eyes in the world and he must sit back to enjoy the film. Smith may be near sighted. The door man knows he is waiting, and the door man has learned it by talking with him while he has waited in line.

Some can’t stand draughts and some are fresh air fiends. There is a place for them all, and the ushers try to get acquainted and learn these things while the house is crowded and no one is passing out.

This policy, carried out with the greatest care, explains in part why the firm of Green and Agnew have got to build a new theatre.

The recent one, the largest in the residence district and less than two years old, is far too small, and plans for the new place or a general makeover are being discussed.

The good part of this policy is, according to the proprietors, that the employees like it just as well as the patrons.

MAKING ONE’S OWN LOBBY SIGNS

COMBINING his ability as an artist and sign writer with his duties as manager of the Victoria theatre, 220 West Fifth street, Cincinnati, Clarence McCormick has inaugurated a unique advertising campaign for his picture house.

In addition to his posters displayed in the lobby frames, Mr. McCormick advertises each new feature with huge signs, suspended across the front of his lobby. These signs he writes himself. Their attractiveness is added to by the fact that the signs are embellished with original illustrations, Mr. McCormick’s own hand-work.

Recently he featured a Ford Sterling comedy. The sign was three feet wide and over six feet long. In the center was a picture of Sterling in one of his characteristic attitudes. Patrons of the Victoria have come to regard McCormick’s signs as part of their entertainment and they have received a great deal of favorable comment.

GENEROSITY THAT PAYS DIVIDENDS

A NOTABLE piece of enterprise.—It is an enterprise, though the motive behind it is broader than that in its scope—originated in the mind of Walter H. Golding, manager of the Imperial Theatre, King Square, St. John, N. B., and is now a temporary feature of the house policy.

Motion Picture News readers, to grasp fully the significance of the idea, must realize that we are living in war times, and that Canada, as well as England, is at war. St. John has sent some five hundred or more men to the front, and it is their going that gave Mr. Golding the idea, and won him new friends for the Imperial.

Figuring that many of those who went from here to fight England’s battles were in but ordinary circumstances, and left little behind them to keep wife and kiddies in comfort and necessities, and realizing what the “movies” have come to be in the life of those whose amusements must of necessity be low-priced, he has thrown open the doors of the Imperial to the wives and families of the St. John soldiers who have gone to the battlefield. This means something directly cut off from the theatre’s nightly receipts, but there is a fine spirit back of the move, and there is popular acclaim for this thoughtful course.

The Imperial will stand higher than ever in popularity and, though this was not what dictated the plan, there is little doubt that good results will accrue to the theatre, apart from the satisfaction of doing a kindly act.

Special non-transferable tickets have been prepared and are issued on proper credentials being presented. They are good while the war lasts. If this is not getting increased business at the moment, it is popularizing the Imperial anew.

A 1,200 WEEKLY INCREASE WITH MAILING LISTS

R. C. ROGERS, press agent of the Walnut Theatre, Louisville, Ky., has been trying out an advertising campaign which has proven very successful in getting the public acquainted with the film attractions this house offers.
Several weeks ago Mr. Rogers secured mailing lists of customers of department stores and sent out letters to these persons, enclosing a pass for two, and inviting them to be the guests of the management on a certain night.

The first week 6,000 letters were sent out and returns were received from about 3,400. The following week the paid admissions at this house increased 1,200.

Every week since, the actual paid admissions have increased, according to Mr. Rogers, who says that he regards this as a highly successful method for getting the public acquainted with the quality of entertainment provided and securing a resultant steady patronage for a theatre.

The Walnut Theatre has a large seating capacity, and experimented on a large scale, but it is the opinion of the management that a smaller house, trying out the same plan on a smaller scale, would get good results.

A LIVE WIRE IN CALGARY

Unique business getting methods adopted by Manager Aylesworth, of the Princess theatre in Calgary, Alberta, have made this theatre one of the most popular in the city. The Princess is the latest picture house built in Calgary, and in addition to the showing of movies it is equipped with a stage which enables the management to have a series of vaudeville acts at each show.

The latest business boosting schemes adopted by Manager Aylesworth is a “country store” night and a “baby contest.” Both these have been big attractions and are proving to be real business getters. The baby contest, which is run by means of votes, has also proved a big business booster.

Another weekly feature at the Princess theatre is a newboys’ pie eating contest. This night is looked upon by patrons as a real “laugh” night. Several big, juicy pies made up with fresh blueberries or strawberries, or whatever fruits are in season are given to the boys, and the result is a scream. A shoe-lacing contest has also been put on at this house with as good success, and these novel business getters are proving to be very popular with Princess patrons. Other similar schemes are being devised.

STRENGTHENING WEAK NIGHTS

Joseph Green of the Wigwam Theatre, has adopted a novel idea for equalizing the attendance at his theatre through the week and building up the “light” nights wherever possible.

He has had printed strips of tickets, seven ten cent tickets for 50 cents, and seven five cent tickets for 25 cents. Each ticket is good only on a certain day of the week. So that the purchaser must see a show each day of the week to get his money’s worth.

The first ticket reads, “good any Monday night,” the second, “good any Tuesday night,” etc.

The ten cent tickets are printed on blue stock and the five cent tickets on yellow stock to distinguish them from the regular tickets.

Combining to Wage War on Legalized Censorship

Managers Protective Association Joins Hands With National Board of Censorship in Strong Campaign Against Political Supervision of Films

An important step in the fight against legalized censorship in any form, local, State or Federal, waged by the national board, has been taken in the union of forces between the National Board of Censorship and the United Managers’ Protective Association, an influential body whose membership includes at the present time the managers of more than 2,700 theatres.

According to the terms agreed upon at the meeting of representatives of both organizations in the office of J. W. Binder, director of publicity for the National Board of Censorship, last week, the United Managers’ Protective Association will cooperate in all manner possible for the purpose of freeing exhibitors and film manufacturers from the trammels of political bodies in the exercise of undesirable censorship.

The United Managers’ Protective Association has also agreed to subordinate its efforts in this direction by leaving the plan of campaign to the discretion of the National Board of Censorship. The managers’ organization has promised hearty co-operation along lines peculiarly its own in the fight against statutory censorship conducted by the national board.

The understanding between the two organizations brought about at the conference in the office of Mr. Binder followed the resolution adopted by the board of governors of the United Managers’ Protective Association at a recent meeting of the managers’ association.

The officers of the United Managers’ Association are: President, Marc Klau; vice-president, Lee Shubert; second vice-president, E. F. Albee; third vice-president, H. W. Savage; fourth vice-president, Sigmund Lubin; treasurer, Sam A. Serbin, and secretary, Charles A. Bird.

On the executive committee (motion pictures) are J. Stuart Blackton, Carl Laemmle, Samuel Long, Adolph Zukor and P. A. Powers.

CASINO GETS ALLIANCE AND SAWYER

The Casino Feature Film Company, Detroit, has added the Alliance Program and the Big Features of the Sawyer Corporation. Harry Goldberg, sales manager of the company, states that he is now supplying films to over 125 theatres in Michigan alone, and that there is hardly a new theatre going up that has not applied to the Casino company for service.

“Our business is forging ahead beyond all expectations. In the past few weeks we have been forced to turn down six big houses because our service had been previously contracted for by other houses in their territory. And in this connection, I want to say that there is one thing we aim to do and that is to take care of our old customers as long as they care to stay with us and give us the same square treatment as we try to give them. The Casino company is now releasing each week two Paramount features, one Alliance, one “big” Sawyer and one Apex.

PREFLER GOES TO WORLD FILM

William C. Prefler is now the manager of the Minneapolis office of the World Film Corporation. Mr. Prefler has been the manager of the feature department of the General Film Company, in Minneapolis, and has also managed the Eclectic Film branch in that city. J. M. Kuhn, who has been the manager of the Minneapolis office of the World Film Corporation, has been made special representative for the Minneapolis district.

N. H. Spitzer, manager of the Kansas City branch of the World Film Corporation, was called to New York on account of the death of his mother, spending three days in the city.

ALCO, LOS ANGELES, OPENS

The Alco Film Exchanges was opened in Los Angeles, Monday, November 2, in charge of E. H. Emmick, who has been manager of Sol Lesser's Golden Gate Film Exchange in this city. This will have exclusive control of all Alco releases—which includes the All Star Corporation's products—for California, Arizona and Nevada.

Elegant furniture has been made for the offices, and the exchange has class A equipment throughout.

In addition to managing the new exchange Mr. Emmick will also continue to supervise the Golden Gate Film Exchange, which will continue at the present location.

A WELCOME ARRIVAL

There is a new film man on the West Coast. He weighs nine pounds, and is the son of Ernest Brn, Los Angeles manager of the Apex service.

EXCHANGE MEN REPORT BIG “AFTER THE BALL” BOOKINGS

Al Cross, of Pittsburgh, reports the highest rentals ever paid in his city. A. Seigel, of Cleveland, has three copies booked solid. Sam Cohn, at Philadelphia, is doing a land office business with two prints. Arthur LaGann, at Toronto, Canada, is booked solid in high class theatres from Montreal to Toronto. E. A. Westcott, of Rochester, New York, has two prints working every day.

Sam Silverman, at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, has booked every high class house in Wisconsin and Minnesota. Frank Dicehouse, now playing the picture at the Mary Anderson Theatre, Louisville, Ky., reports numerous bookings, coming in for that territory. J. Abrams, at Dallas, Texas, says: “Send two more prints.” F. Duryea is working over-time out of New Orleans, La.

Geronimo Film Company, of Stamford, Conn., has the state covered, while the Photo-Play Productions Releasing Company, of Chicago, report the greatest ever. This is the second winner within a year, produced by the Photo Drama Company, under Pierce Kingsley’s direction. With the above fleet of sure-to-goodness film men, and Bill Steinier and Jim Mahler handling the local bookings from the New York office. It sounds like real success.

SCATES IS DIVISION MANAGER

W. R. Scates is now division manager of the World Film Corporation with headquarters in Chicago. Mr. Scates’ territory gives him supervision over the following branch offices: Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit, Indianapolis, Chicago, Minneapolis, Omaha, Kansas City and St. Louis. Mr. Scates has been associated with Louis.

NEW BRANCH MANAGER FOR ECLECTIC

Edward Auger, one of the best known film men in the business, has been appointed manager of branches for the Eclectic Film Company, vice Arthur S. Kane, who has resigned.

Over ten years ago Auger became interested in the motion picture business and soon graduated from the ranks of the exhibitors into the exchange end, becoming general manager of the Quinetoscope Film Exchange in Montreal. An engagement with the Kinetograph in Canada followed during which he traveled from New Brunswick to British Columbia.

The General Film Company then offered him the management of their St. Louis branch, which he accepted and held for a number of years. When the Eclectic Film Company started opening up their own exchanges Mr. Auger was tendered the position of inspector of branches, which position he held up to the moment of his promotion.

Few men in the film business are as well known as Mr. Auger. From coast to coast and from Winnipeg to New Orleans his acquaintances and friends are legion. Their good wishes follow the big man with the smiling face as he takes up his new duties.

SCENICS BECOMING VERY POPULAR

The “See America first movement” has been keenly felt at Milwaukee film exchanges and they all report a very surprising and unusual demand for scens of America and its possessions. Where pictures of this sort were pretty much a drug on the market four weeks ago they are today as difficult to secure as good comedies, in fact more so, as the supply of them is not over adequate.

“The demand for scens has been unusually large in the past few weeks,” said J. R. Freuler, vice-president of the Mutual Film Company, and head of the Western Film Exchange of this city. “The only way I can account for it is that the ‘See America first’ talk which is sweeping the country since the European war broke out is getting the people interested in our country, and that the demand for the scenic pictures is but a forerunner to a wholesale western emigration of tourists next summer.”

AIKEN WINDS UP COAST TRIP

F. C. Aiken, the special representative for the General Film Company, with headquarters in Chicago, visited the Butte, Montana, theatres recently. He has been on the coast for the past three months calling on the various theatres that are running his company’s releases.

He says that the moving picture business is in better condition than any other business he is aware of.

WARNER'S Features, St. Louis, have moved from their quarters in the Benoist Building at Ninth and Pine streets, to a handsome suite of offices on the ground floor of the Polar Wave Building in the 3600 block on Olive street. This block has earned the right to be known as Exchange Row, since three of the largest exchanges for the distribution of moving picture films in St. Louis are located there. Warner's Features new offices are midway between the General Film Company's exchange, which occupies the building at 3610, and the Box Office Attractions exchange, which is at 3632, same block.

$18,000 LABORATORY SCENE IN "ZUDORA"

entire circus outfit, horses, wagons, tight-ropes, and tents were used in the first episode of "Zudora," Thanhouser's forthcoming serial. The wagons loaded with the impedimenta of the road circus, the pulling and hauling of "props," the tight rope stretched across the ring, all were in place. Even the side show barkers, busy with their "hally-hooing," had their place in the scene, which on the screen is cut almost to a flash.

Laboratory appurtenances valued at $18,000 were used in one scene of "The Mystery of the Frozen Laugh," the second episode of "Zudora," Thanhouser's big serial which has its first release November 23.

The scenario, created by Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, demanded a complete equipment. It was necessary to lay an entirely new floor in the west studio of the Thanhouser New Rochelle group to permit the installation of heavy tanks of liquid air.

This is the first time that the tremendous power of liquid air has been demonstrated on the screen.

Indications are that the bookings on "Zu-dora" will exceed the record interest manifested by the exhibitors in "The Million Dollar Mystery." These exhibitors who filled their houses during the summer with the Lonergan serial are anxious to get booked up on this latest of big serials. The inquiries being received are very flattering to the Thanhouser management and demonstrate the power of their serials.

"Little Lord Fauntleroy" Released Through Alco

THE Alco Film Corporation announces that its next release, that of November 16, will be Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's story of child life, "Little Lord Fauntleroy." The story was published in 1888 and created gradually an impression which deepened until it became a furore.

So strong was the effect made that it even influenced the style of little boy's dress.

To their intense discomfort a whole generation of small boys was dressed in peculiar knickerbockers, sashes and coats. Many children were taught to call their mothers

"Dearest." In fact, in the late '80's two types of boys began to develop. Those who affected the Lord Fauntleroy modes and those who threw dirt upon the first class.

But aside from all its frivolous effects,

"Little Lord Fauntleroy" is one of the modern classics of the English tongue. Its theme of mother love, boy's devotion to a mother and a certain idealism of youth, struck a response in not only the United States, but in England and other lands.

The vogue of the story speedily spread to the stage. At one time there were some twelve Fauntleroy companies touring the country or playing long engagements in the large cities. Various infant prodigies on the stage had their rise in "Little Lord

Fauntleroy." "Tommy" Russell and Eliza

duction, another of Richard Harding Davis' stories, entitled "The Last Chapter." The story as originally written is called "An Unfinished Story," but this title has been changed to more suitably fit the photoplay, and the new name is an apt one. In "The Last Chapter" Carlyle Blackwell has a role which calls for emotion, and which is strongly dramatic; in fact, as powerful a role as he has ever undertaken. The psychological interest running through the theme makes splendid character studies for the members of the cast. The story takes the action into the heart of Africa, as well as into American and English society. Some wonderful scenic effects are being studied the expressions of approval were numerous. The locations selected for the exterior scenes are beautiful in the extreme, and the interiors are especially rich and pleasing to the eye.

Another promising success following that of "The Path Forbidden," which was presented by the Excelior Feature Film Company, will be "When Fate Leads Trump," a four-reel production, from the book by John B. Hymer, featuring Octavia Handworth in the title role, French and American stars; Ogden Hymer, a Russian actor known to all filmdom; and William Dunn, famous in heavy "movie" leads, are among those featured.

"The Span of Life," the second of the big Kinetophone releases for the month is none other than the late Sutton Vane's famous old melodrama of the same name, which has been picturized by Catherine Carr. Lionel Barrymore is being starred in the piece as Richard Blunt. Gladys Wynne has the role of Kate Heathcote and Lyster Chambers is the heavy.

The part of the little cripple is taken by Ogden Childs, a well known child actor. The famed scene in which the acrobats make a human span of their bodies so that the heroine may escape to safety across a deep chasm has been done with strict attention to detail.

In "The Coming Power," a story of political intrigue and retribution by Catherine Carr from the story of Walba Waldo, the Kinetophone has chosen a goodly list of stars who are known everywhere. Lionel Adams, who is now playing in "Kick In," was starred in "The Man of the Hour," is the young radical of the film story.

Edith Luckett has the part of the girl who is the inspiration of the young candidate and Ata Rose is the daughter of an ex-judge and political henchman. William Crimmings, a Belasco player and recently featured in "At Bay," has the part of the wealthy power in politics, known as "The Vulture." "The Coming Power" is in four parts and is about ready for release. The production was made under the direction of Edward Mackay.

TRIO OF FEATURES FROM KINETOPHOTE

The Kinetophone is announcing a trio of releases for this month and is featuring a long list of stars who are well known both in the film world and to theatre-goers.

A big success is predicted by the Kinetophone for "The Spirit of the Poppy," by Catherine Carr. In this production Edward Mackay, present chief director for the Kinetophone; Edith Luckett, leading woman with Chauncey Olcott; Anna Rose, a favorite of Kinetophote goers, Lionel Mackay, the famed idol, and Nicholas Dumaev, a Russian actor known to all filmdom; and William Dunn, famous in heavy "movie" leads, are among those featured.

CABIRIA is soon to be offered to the regular motion picture theatres, according to the rumor confirmed this week by Harry R. Raver, who is exploiting the Itala success throughout the United States and Canada.

This announcement seems likely to cause a flurry among exhibitors who realize what prestige the presentation of "Cabiria" in their theatres will mean, after the advertising the photo-play has received and because of the fact that it has been played at leading theatres in almost every American city at prices of admission ranging from twenty-five cents to two dollars. Thus, the Itala company believes it is logical to state that any exhibitor booking "Cabiria" advertises his theatre as a theatre which dares to book the best, well aware that the prestige accruing therefrom will mean many dollars to him in days to quickly follow, and quite worth while the ignoring of big profits from the immediate booking.

Famous Actress In "Hearts and Flowers"

Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, Whose Stage Career Dates Back to 1869, Will Have Leading Role in Cosmos Feature

When the Cosmos Feature Film Corporation release the five part photo-play "Hearts and Flowers," there will, undoubtedly, be many who would like to know more concerning that delightful old lady, Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, who plays the leading role. To those this brief resume is respectfully dedicated.

For forty-six years Mrs. Thomas Whiffen has been on the stage, and most of those years have been devoted to playing old lady parts in conjunction with some of the best known stars in this country. In 1869 Mrs. Whiffen went to America from England and early resolved to make a specialty of old lady parts. She had the distinction of playing "Buttercup" in the original production of Gilbert & Sullivan's "Finestore" in the old Duff Opera Company in New York.

Later, she appeared in the famous Hazel Kirke production, when that play ran for 486 nights in New York; in this production Mrs. Whiffen played Mercy Kirke, the wife. She was also associated with the Madison Square Company; in association with E. M. Holland, Jeffries Lewis, Eben Plimpton, George Payvan, Herbert Kelcey and other players of equal note.

Next Mrs. Whiffen joined the Lyceum Company, which will be remembered by many Chicago theatre goers, playing the part of the blind mother in "The Charity Ball," in which she created one of her best roles. As Mrs. Talcott, an elderly companion and chaperon, with Ethel Barrymore in "Tante," Mrs. Whiffen proved a delight beyond words.

At the present writing Mrs. Whiffen is delighting audiences at the Lyceum Theatre, portraying the part of Mme. De Treville, Helen's grandmother in "The Beautiful Adventure," a new comedy in three acts.

Pearce Starts On Tour of Principal Cities

Special Eastern Representative of Bosworth Will Act as Ambassador to the Newspapers in Behalf of Motion Pictures

Carl H. Pearce, special Eastern representative of Bosworth, Inc., recently started on an extensive trip to investigate the various exchanges in the big cities, handling the productions manufactured by his company.

The mission of Mr. Pearce, who is probably one of the most progressive men in the film industry, judging from the live wire quality of his suggestions to facilitate the distribution of the products of Bosworth, has been undertaken for the purpose of studying conditions with particular reference to signs of hostility toward motion pictures.

Mr. Pearce intends to make himself known to the various newspapers and expects to establish an entente cordiale.

Among the various cities visited by Mr. Pearce will be Pittsburgh, Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Louis, New Orleans and Dallas. Boston will be the first stop of the Bosworth special representative.

THAT it was not, is entirely due to the manner in which the story was handled, "the way it was produced," as we say in film circles, and not at all to the theme itself.

TRUE of works of literature as this is, it is especially true of drama, whether on the stage or on the picturescreen.
It is the same thing that makes the difference between "Hamlet," by William Shakespeare, and "Hamlet," by the average, "hand-me-down" playwright. The latter would, with precisely the same story, have made Hamlet a rip-roaring detective melodrama, or a "sins-of-society" problem play.

THE "shame" of the motion picture business—to use a Steffens phrase—is not the immoral or harmful picture, real or alleged.
The motion picture screen has purged itself of them, and powerful agencies at work within the business are on constant guard against them.
The real menace of this industry is the cheap, tawdry, shabbily costumed, badly acted, incorrectly and inarticu-ately produced picture, as was emphasized in last week's editorial.

THOSE are the pictures that have kept the better classes away from the motion picture theatres.
Those are the pictures that have withheld the sympathy and support of the best elements in the community from the photoplay houses—sympathy and support which has only recently been offered to the exhibitors in any degree whatsoever.
One such picture does more harm to the reputation of the industry in the minds of the theatregoers than ten masterpieces of the photoplay art can correct.

MOTION picture production is no longer in the crude, faulty stage of experiment. It is to-day both a perfected art and an exact science.
The fact that pictures of the highest quality in every respect are being frequently and regularly produced proves that there is no possible excuse for the poor picture.
There is no EXCUSE, be it repeated. And there is only one EXPLANATION.

THE producer who deliberately puts a poor picture on the market does so because he is determined to make more money than he could make by turning out an article up to the standard.
The "get-rich-quick" virus is in his veins.
Such a producer is on a level with the manufacturer who sands his sugar, with the dairyman who sells oleomargar-rine for butter, with the clothier who palms off cotton for all-wool, with the green-goods man who sells a gilded brick for gold. He is a man getting money under false pretenses.

HE is the enemy of every exhibitor who is duped into renting his films, because he is deliberately destroying the asset of the audiences' good-will, which is of cash value to that exhibitor.
His films are libels on the industry.
Every such picture he releases makes it harder for the high-grade producer to retain his clients' confidence, and for the exhibitor to keep the confidence of his patrons as he should.
The "gold-digging" producer is the "yellow peril" of the business.

The Peril of the Photoplay Industry

PROBABLY no single literary or dramatic work of the last hundred years exerted the widespread, irresistible moral influence that "Uncle Tom's Cabin" did.
Its effect on public opinion just before the Civil War is a matter of history.
That it brought the horror, suffering and degradation of human slavery with terrifying clearness before tens and hundreds of thousands of Americans is common knowledge.
That the influence of Harriet Beecher Stowe's novel was in any instance anything but educational and uplifting one would for a moment assert.

AND YET—
The theme of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the material of which the story is made, could have been treated in such a manner as to make it as revolting, suggestive and depraved a book as was ever confiscated by the United States postal authorities.
Instead of making abolitionists, it might just as easily, in other hands, have been designed to breed Simon Legrees.
Instead of being the most damming indictment of slavery ever penned, it might have been made a handbook for slaveholders and a first primer for dealers in human flesh.

Elise Janis Signs with Bosworth, Inc.

Actress Leaves New York for Pacific Coast Studio, Where She Will Begin Rehearsals for "The Slim Princess"

Bosworth, Inc., has just signed up Elise Janis, James K. Hackett, Dustin Farnum, George Fawcett, Maclyn Arbuckle and several other noted artists, who will appear shortly in Bosworth releases through the Paramount Program.

Bosworth's Quintet of Stage Celebrities

Elsie Janis, who left recently for Los Angeles, with her mother, a retinue of servants and her chauffeur, in accommodations that practically amounted to a private car from coast to coast, will probably appear first in "The Slim Princess," and also in an original scenario written by herself. Not only will she star in these productions, probably playing opposite Courtney Foote, but she will learn a new art. Frank A. Garbutt, V. P., of Bosworth, an aeronautical expert of two continents, will teach Miss Janis to fly, and will place her fleet of aeroplanes at her disposal.

When asked if she was not afraid to begin this sport, which is commonly considered dangerous, Miss Janis replied:

"No. Mr. Garbutt tells me his machines are as stable in the air as my automobile is on land, and as Mr. Garbutt is a man in whose word I have implicit confidence, I shall try out the sport for myself and see how I like it. Probably it will prove to be a new sensation and very very fascinating indeed."

It is not improbable that Miss Janis will weave an aeroplane flight into one of her new scenarios in which she will be seen as the pilot. Mr. Hackett will appear in one of his most popular stage successes; Mr. Fawcett, the first college man said to adopt the stage, will probably act the leading part in his London success, "The Great John Ganton"; Mr. Farnum will probably be seen in "Captain Courtesy" and "Texas"; while Mr. Arbuckle, the well-known "Jedge," will doubtless play some of his popular pieces, one of which will be written by himself with Irvin S. Cobb as collaborator.
In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

Special to Motion Picture News

VACATION days are over for the leads of the Ford Sterling Motion Picture Company. Mr. Sterling having arrived home from New York, Manager Fred Balshofer, from a hunting trip with ex-champion Jim Jeffries, spent at Bakersfield; and other leading people are back at work.

"The Dog Raffles" is a one reeler recently made at the Sterling studio, in which a trick dog plays the leading part of a crook story. The canine jumps through a window opened by his master, carries a stick of dynamite near a safe, strikes a match and lights the fuse, and then places it on the knob of the safe door. After the explosion the dog carries out the bags of—washers—and performs other stunts. The picture was directed by David Kirkland.

Robert Thornby, of the Sterling camp has finished filming a kid black hand picture, in which George Jaeschke, made a successful thriller by jumping from a broken down auto being towed by another, top machine passing at the rate of fifty-miles an hour. Jay Becker, another Sterling daredevil, rode the now famous one lung, 1901 model Oldsmobile of the studio police force down Cahuenga pass—which has a very steep and extremely long decline—without the use of brakes, that feature of the car's equipment having disappeared years ago. According to Director Beverly Griffith, it was possible to make photographs of this scene because yellow takes white photographically.

W. S. Campbell, formerly with Keystone, Mace comedies and R. B. producing companies, in capacity of scenario editor, is now sole occupant of the script room at Sterling studio.

Griffith Preparing Important Picture

Director General D. W. Griffith is rehearsing a company composed of Mae Marsh, Robert Harron, Marion Cooper and F. A. Turner, at the Majestic studio, for a two or three reel picture, but announcement has not been made of the title or the character of the picture, though it is expected soon.

"The Little Country Mouse," with Blanch Sweet playing the part of an unsophisticated country girl, the daughter of a clergyman, who succeeds in the gay social whirl at Newport, is being produced for Majestic release by Donald Crisp.

Reid is playing opposite Miss Sweet, as an army officer. Director Crisp has just finished filming "Another Chance," in which a tramp saving the life of a newsboy is rewarded by the lad preventing him being railroaded to prison.

With this the part of the tramp, and the supporting company included William Lowery, Wallace Reid, and Mary Alden. The scenario was by George Hennessy.

The western garb has been hanging in "cell No. 3" at the Reliance studio and Arthur Mackley is producing the first picture of other than western atmosphere for a year or more. This one reeler is "They Never Knew," a heart interest tale, a romance of childhood sweetheart.

Florence Crawford, Vester Pegg and R. A. Walsh are the principals.

Helen of the Herald—Miss Irene Hunt—is appearing before the camera at the Reliance for the fourth newspaper story. The title of this is "The Hop Smugglers," and in it the "sob" sister materially aids the revenue officers in locating Chinese opium smugglers, secures a big beat for her paper, and incidentally, of course, plays a star part in a pretty romance.

Rex, Bull Terrier, Featured

The activity of Rex, the Boston bull terrier owned by Fay Tinch, in stealing men's hats and taking them to his mistress' dressing room at the Majestic studio, led Director Eddie Dillon to film "A Corner on Hats," in which Rex is featured.

The jealous husband, so the story goes, beats up several men, dynamites the police station, and numerous other desperate deeds when he finds a number of men's hats in a closet of his home, with no solution as to how they got there. The scenario was prepared by Anita Loos, the 18-year-old photo-playwright, of San Diego, following a visit at the studio here where she saw Rex perform.

Joseph DeGrasse has filmed "The Peacemaker," at the U studio, from the scenario by Ida May Park. This is a pretty drama, which the uncle leaves to his niece and prospective husband, a beautiful old man. Before death he gave to each a key. A few days before their wedding a scandal monger tells the maid of stories being heard concerning her intended husband. She decides to hide herself in the old mansion until talk regarding the broken engagement subsides. Jack decides to go there and drows his troubles in some of the rare wine left by the old man, who had been the peacemaker for them in several quarrels.

They arrive at a time crooks are ranting the place, and following the departure of the burglars, the vision of the old man appears and their differences are righted. The picture features Pauline Bush, William Dowling and Charles Manley.

Taking the advice of his former college chum, now a doctor who is about to leave for a vacation, and desires him to accompany him, Henry Peck, played by William Franey, in "The Doctor's Orders," produced by Allen Curtis for Joker release on U program, leaves his wife in the care of mother-in-law. The ocean trip, spoken of to his wife, consisted of a stay at the beaches. Then comes news of the sinking of the liner the men were supposed to sail on and wife thinks herself a widow.

The men, to explain matters, rig up a life savers row boat and put to sea, that they may be rescued. They are brought ashore by a steamer and gain much publicity by stories of their escape and battle with the elements. The ocean liner, supposed to have been sunk, docks safely and the pair find themselves unable to explain.

The Brand, a two reel Indian war drama, with an unusually pretty romance, is being completed by Henry McRae and company, including William Clifford, Sherman Bainbridge, Marie Walcamp and Lule Warrington. The story, by H. G. Stafford, is in three episodes.
"The Master Key," Universal serial, Rex company, including Robert Leonard, director and lead, Ella Hall, Allen Forrest, Harry Carter and William Higby, went to San Francisco, Monday, where they made scenes for the fourth and fifth installment of the serial.

As an appreciation of the aid rendered by Manager Isadore Bernstein to the Hollywood Board of Trade and Chamber of Commerce in the recent celebration held in the foothill city the two bodies have presented the Universal officer with a handsome cut glass vase standing nearly three feet in height and weighing twenty-five pounds, and have elected him to honorary membership in their organizations.

Superintendent Bob Stevens and crew of auto repair men of the Universal garage spent two days removing valuable parts of the auto wrecked for "Trey o' Hearts," No. 14, on a steep incline in one of the canyons north of Hollywood. At first it was attempted to remove the car, but finding this impossible the parts of value were removed.

There is a new photo player in Hollywood, and as a result acquaintances of William Worthington, character lead for Turner Special Feature Company at the Universal studio are smoking black cigars. William S. Hart, originator of the character of Cash Hawkins in the original stage presentation of "The Squaw Man," has arrived at the New York Motion Picture Company studio, Inceville, at Santa Monica, where he has begun his work as director and actor. He will remain at the studio permanently, a long time contract having been made.

Mr. Hart appeared in two other Ince features, playing the lead in the Grand Canyon picture, "The Two-Gun Man," and he supported Robert Edeson and Rhea Mitchell in "On the Night Stage," both of which have been completed but not as yet released.

Ince Insures Players

Thomas H. Ince is the first west coast director to insure his players, he having purchased a $25,000 policy for George Beban. This action was taken following a recent accident in which Beban nearly lost his life under a street car, after falling from an automobile.

George Beban, J. Frank Burke, Clara Williams and a number of other members of Inceville stock company are at San Francisco, making scenes for "The Italian," D. J. Beban, chairman of the state senate docks and wharfs' committee, and Louis G. Beban, associate surveyor of customs at San Francisco wharf, are brothers of the actor, and this relationship will prove of value to the photoplayer and supporting company. Reginald Barker is in charge of the production at the Bay City.

Director Walter Edwards, Frank Borzage, Jerome Storm and other members of the New York company who have been in Bear Valley—at an altitude of 8,000 feet—for the past few weeks, filming "The Panther" and "In the Land of the Otter," have arrived home with tales of winter weather, snow storms and zero temperature in the mountainous country eighty miles from Los Angeles where the days for the past two weeks have been uncomfortably hot for both man and beast.

"Shorty Hamilton is being featured in another Shorty comedy under the direction of Richard Stanton at the Inceville studio. The title of this is "Shorty's Secret," and like previous releases of the series will be of a semi-western character.

Realism? Egg-sactly!

Expenses do not matter to Inceville producers, as will be shown by this picture, for they are going to have an egg fight with real eggs. Mercy! And they're forty-five a dozen, too.

Director Jay Hunt and producing company have just completed "The Spirit of the Bell," and have begun filming "The Fortunes of War." Both are stories of Mexican life, and the company will penetrate the warring neighbor's territory, and spend several days there in order to secure correct settings. Enid Markley and Charles Ray play the leads in both pictures.

"The Flower of the Desert," a melodrama depicting the sad life of a baby girl, buffeted about by an unworthy mother and renegade father, is being made under direction of Scott Sidney at Inceville, with J. Barney Sherry, Leona Hutton and Harry G. Keenan playing the principal parts.

Director Marion De LaParelle, in charge of the production of the Masterpiece Film company, recently began production of the second picture, "The Truth Wagon," which like the first release of this organization will consist of five reels, and feature Max Pigman and Loilta Robertson.

Other members of the cast will be A. W. Filson, formerly with the Griffith and Selig companies, as Francis Sullivan, king of Tammany Hall; Dick Rossin will characterize the degenerate reporter and Edward Harley will play the character part of the disheartened owner of the newspaper that failed by telling the truth.

One of the features of the picture will be a balcony scene in which a number of Hollywood and Los Angeles society women will take part. One woman learning the picture would need such a scene, graciously offered the use of her home to be used in place of sets, and will invite her friends to take part in the scene. There will probably be eighty or more to take part.

"Advice to the Lovelorn"

Elliot Clawson, who is preparing the scenario, is finding so many clever bits of conversation in the original play that he is having a big battle with himself to decide which shall be used for subtitles in the form of conversation. He has added one very important character—that of Cynthia Grey or Beatrice Fairfax, who deals out advice to the lovelorn.

Col. William N. Selig, president of Selig Poloscope Company, arrived in Los Angeles recently for a stay of two or three weeks at the Edendale and Jungle Zoo studios, watching the progress of the filming of "The Rosary," by Director Colin Campbell, who, as he was in charge of the former, and superintending the finishing touches of the buildings and grounds at the Selig Jungle Zoo at the latter.

This is Mr. Selig's first visit to the West Coast since early in the summer, and since that time he has spent several months in Europe; in fact having arrived home but a few weeks ago. It is his intention to return to Paris as soon as the Zoo is opened to the public, and he completes some business matters in Chica-

Frank D. Williams, in charge of the most recent addition to the Balboa Feature Film studios at Long Beach, Kids Komedy Company, has the distinction of being director, cameraman and sometimes gets another crank turner to take his place while he takes part in a scene, all in addition to being his own scenario writer.

Of his company Little Olive Johnson, age three years, is the star, and Violet Raldfife, age five, plays the lead boy part opposite.

This is not Olive's first engagement for she has been with a number of other local producing companies, where she learned to swim, ride and do many fancy dances. Director Williams has had a world of experience, being connected with Pathe in France, and Keystone, Alco and Essanay in this country.

Director Colin Campbell, Kathryn Williams and several other members of the Selig "Rosary" company autoed to near Ridgecrest, where symbolic scenes with Miss Williams protagonist at the foot of the famous timber cross on top of Ribi-

Pacific Studio for Horsley

That David Horsley will soon begin production on the West Coast is the message brought to Los Angeles, in a telegram to Charles C. Fais. In this the owner of the Centaur company advised his former purchasing agent to locate a suitable piece of property for the largest studio in the West, and report to him by wire.

When Mr. Fais received this message he was in the employ of a newly organized producing company, but within five minutes he had tendered his resignation and was on the way to find site for his former employer. It is very probable Mr. Horsley will arrive here soon and complete arrangements for his new plant.

The Work Family, including Willie, Helen and May, the children, are soon to appear in comedies. A series is now being made by the Rolin Film Company, releasing through Sawyer, Inc., at the Court Street studio, under the direction of H. E. Roach. Harold Lloyd is the leading comedian, playing the part of Willie.

Arrangements for the release of the Lothian feature films, featuring Arthur Maude and Constance Crawley, through Sawyer, Inc., have been completed here by the Rolin Film Company, acting as agents for this releasing company. The subjects are all of four reels and include “The Virgin of the Rocks,” “The Massacre of St. Bartholomew’s” and “Thais.”

A two reel picture, “Lure of the Windigo,” has been made under the direction of F. J. Grandon, at the Selig jungle zoo. This is a Canadian north woods subject in which Lamar Johnstone plays the part of Kiawa, an Indian, and is supported by Edith Johnson, Frank Mayo and Barney Fuery.

Funny Bachelor Film

The Thomas Santschi Company has made a newspaper story picture, “Just Like a Woman,” written by W. C. Clifton, of the Selig scenario department.

Bingo, the Merry Bachelor, is a comedy made by the Norval McGregor-Selig company, which deals with the attempts—and success—of insurance men to sell the bachelor a policy. John Lancaster and Lillian Leighton plays the leads.

“The Lure of Adventure,” is a comedy of club life, in which the wealthy young member makes a bet with friends that he will not have an unusual experience within a certain time.

His friends see to it that he does, and soon he is enticed to a supposed counterfeiter’s den by a girl he thinks the daughter of the counterfeiter, who in reality is sister of his friend at the club. William Stowell and Mary Werner are playing the leads. E. A. Martin is director.

Capt. Wilbert Melville has arrived home from a trip of six weeks in the East, and work of production was begun at the Lubin western studio by Director Paul Powell. The stock company of the studio includes Velma Whitman, Melvin Mayo, L. C. Shumway, George Roule, and Robert Grey, and this week the company is filming “An Ambassador from the Dead,” an industrial subject dealing with the conflict between capital and labor.

Durham-Smithman

Dan Cupid is working overtime at the Inceville studio at Santa Monica. The latest victim is Lewis “Bull” Durham, ex-giant pitcher, who was wedded Monday evening, October 26, to Edith Carmen Smithman, a musician of Los Angeles. When Bull, as all his friends at the studio call him, was sixteen years old, in company with his uncle, he spent a week at Remersburg, Pa.

At the house next door was a little four year old girl, and for want of other playmates he teased the little tot. Two years ago the former star pitcher, and popular leading man of today, came to the West Coast and opened a grocery store. One of his patrons introduced him to Miss Smithman, and through this acquaintance they learned they had played together years ago.

Oz Completes “Last Egyptian”

The Oz company players have completed the fourth subject, “The Last Egyptian,” consisting of five reels, and the first screening examination will soon be made. All the members are enthusiastic regarding this production from the well-known novel by L. Frank Baum. The settings are described as being as elaborate as those of previous releases, “The Patchwork Girl” and “The Scarecrow of Oz,” even though this picture is not of the fairy story type, but all scenes being laid in either Egypt or London.

Members of the producing company of the Favorite Players, a number of photographers, directors, exchange men, and exhibitors witnessed the first projection of the most recent production, “The Man Who Would Be King,” from the story of the same name by Richard Harding Davis, made by Carlyle Blackwell, Friday evening, October 23, at Clune’s Auditorium Theatre, after the regular evening programs, and Monday the negative and positive were shipped to the factory in New York. This will constitute the November offering of the Favorite Players for Alliance.

The story of this picture can best be described as a story within a story, it being the portrayal of a young author, Champneys Carter (Carlyle Blackwell), writing a story for a publisher, and shows by double exposure photography and otherwise the vision of the young man at the typewriter. His story is largely one of past and almost present experiences, in which romance, speculation, adventure and strife for success play important parts.

The leading parts in addition to that taken by Mr. Blackwell are: Jackson Carter, a gambler, Hal Clements; Count Lecoff, a fortune hunter, William Brunton; Rev. Orlando Stone, John J. Sheehan; Spink, Chester T. M. Strong; Sol. Burbanke, a broker, Thomas Delmar; Herbert Ingram, Henry Kerne; and his daughters Dolly and Melisse, Ruth Hartman and Gypsie Abbott, respectively.

The company has begun the production of “The Last Chapter,” from Mr. Davis’ novel, “The Unfinished Story,” scenario for which was prepared by Richard Willis.
VERSATILE BETTY HARTE HAS VARIED CAREER

Betty Harte, one of the most beautiful actresses on the screen today, started her theatrical career in a stock company in Los Angeles, and after two successful seasons, decided to try her hand at motion pictures.

She applied for an engagement and succeeded in entering into a contract with Selig as the leading woman in the Western company, where she worked opposite Hobart Bosworth.

She first became famous in Selig's two animal pictures, "King of the Forest" and "Bounder." Feeling that her talents as an emotional actress did not find full scope with Selig, she joined the Edison company, where she was promised a greater opportunity.

DALLAS EXCHANGE TAKES KINETOPHOTE OUTPUT

Scott Will Control "Markia," "Spirit of the Poppy," and Others for Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, and Arkansas

T HE K. C. Booking Company, Incorporated, which handles all of the features made or otherwise controlled by the Kinetophone Corporation of 120 West 46th street, New York, has signed contracts with C. R. Scott, of the Dallas Film Company of Dallas, Texas, to take all of the output of the Kinetophone for Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Mr. Scott was very optimistic about conditions in the Southwest. He remarked that the exchanges in that large slice of the United States were expecting the biggest business in years this fall and winter.

"And I want to say right here," he added, "that the exchange with the big features to book is the one which is getting composed of better known, especially in Texas. I am pleased with the offerings of the Kinetophone, especially with 'Markia' and 'The Span of Life.' The first is a second "Cabria" to my way of thinking and will take as well with our people, because it has a heart interest stronger than that found in 'Cabria.'

"The Span of Life," is known to everyone in our smaller cities, because nearly all of our people have seen the road companies in Sutton Vane's melodrama. Then, again, the name Barrymore has a potent appeal to all of our theatre goers, and with Lionel Barrymore in the film, 'The Span of Life' will be a big drawing card in our territory.

"With 'The Coming Power,' we will do much business because every Southerner loves a story of political intrigue. And 'The Little Jewess' will prove a winner. 'The Spirit of the Poppy' is a great big moral lesson which I expect to see taking well with the exhibitors in our section of the country."

HENRY PESSERS TAKES TRIP TO AMERICA

Leaves London to Study Conditions in the New World, and Complete Plans for Further Distribution of Balboa Films

HENRY PESSERS, a director of the Bishop, Pessers and Company, Ltd., will arrive in New York shortly.

This is Mr. Pessers' first trip to America, but he has been wanting the opportunity to visit our shores for many years past, and it has at last come.

Previous to forming the company, Mr. Pessers had become interested in exhibiting and four years ago built one of the finest provincial picture theatres in England, costing $100,000. Since the formation of Bishop, Pessers and Company, Ltd., he has taken a hand in film taking business generally and has had the satisfaction of seeing this company established in a very strong position in Europe.

It specializes principally in Balboa films, which are rapidly coming to the front in the United Kingdom. It is partly in connection with some large and ambitious plans for distributing Balboa and other films in Europe, that Mr. Pessers has made the trip.

The firm is already a force to be reckoned with in London and we have every reason to anticipate a very rapid advance to one of the leading positions in the film world that side of the Atlantic.

Albany, Syracuse, Buffalo, Rochester, Watertown, Ogdenburg, Binghamton, Rome, Amsterdam, Gloversville, Corning, Cornell, Troy and many other cities are now taking the Alco program. To one theatre in each city the service is given exclusively. The new palace, Buffalo, which opens in December, and the Gordon, Rochester, N. Y., both have signed for the Alco program.
SOMIE SECOND MRS. TANQUERAY"
(Warner—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

Production in motion pictures of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" is another proof that the far-sighted producer real-told stage productions will not miss their mark now. It remembered that this same play created much comment on in New York, and gained a widespread name for therefore it seems reasonable to assume that it will gain fame for itself as a picture wherever pictures are known.

THE SHOT IS HEARD

The story is a tragedy, and in the short space of two reels ample opportunity has been given to develop some unusually tense situations. These opportunities have, for the most part, been utilized by the two leading persons in the cast, Arthur Maude, who plays Tanqueray, and Constance Crawley, who plays the part of his second wife.

Miss Crawley's characterization of her role is of the spirited emotional style of acting, while Mr. Maude is more controlled, but none the less expressive.

The rest of the cast perform in excellent manner and accord Miss Crawley real support.

On the screen the story seems inoffensive and particularly interesting. It is true melodrama, and due to its remarkably well built situations will keep a firm grip on its audience throughout its entire length. The settings, although nothing extraordinary, are in good keeping with the story and present just the background for the drama.

The photography is distinct and the light good.

The central figure of the picture is a woman with a past, and a very gay past at that. She marries a widower, and becomes greatly attached to his young daughter. A Captain Ardal falls in love with that young lady, and when the young woman introduces her husband-to-be, the second Mrs. Tanqueray discovers that he is no other than an old lover of her own. She returns to her room, and soon after the occupants of the house are startled by a shot, and they learn that the woman has taken her own life so that her step-daughter may be happy with the man she really loves.

"THE WISHING RING"
(World Film—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

There is something engaging, something fascinating about this pretty little comedy-drama that results in it being unusually attractive, even though the whole story could have been told in far less space than five reels embrace. And beyond a don't its magnetism lies, for the most part, in the excellent interpretations rendered by the leading players of the cast.

Featured in the production is Vivian Martin. To her falls the part of Sally, the parson's daughter, who very naturally is poor but at the same time happy. The performance rendered by Miss Martin is delightful, to say the least, and if she appears before the public in many more roles so suited to her personality, it is a safe guess she will become a great favorite.

The opposite part is played by Chester Barnett as Giles, the son of the Earl of Bateson. A part has been given him which suits his appearance and actions perfectly. He is seen first as a carefree schoolboy, so carefree that he is expelled from school. Then he quarrels with his father, and finally after he has grown to love Sally, he and his father are reconciled because of her efforts.

Alec B. Francis appears at his best, which is excellent, as the gouty old earl. He, too, is well suited to his part, and it seems after witnessing his performance that if it were held by any other it would lose much of its color and charm. For the rest, John Hines is one of the jolly boys, and Simeon Wiltisc as the parson are the most important. A large supporting cast appears.

"THE PERILS OF PAULINE"
(Edelstic—Seventeenth Episode)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

If the terrors which beset the much persecuted Pauline seem to become worse with each installment, her fiancé becomes correspondingly more heroic. In this chapter, episode seventeen, he overcomes some eight or ten burly ruffians singlehanded, and snatches his sweetheart from their midst. Later his marksmanship appears to be much at fault, but as this makes a fierce hand-to-hand conflict possible it only adds to the excitement.

One of the most interesting features of the picture is a small white bulldog, who acts with an intelligence considerably in excess of that manifested by some human players who have appeared on the screen. After a long series of surprising stunts ilhe caps the climax by running for a long distance, carrying in his mouth a supposed bomb from which a lighted fuse is trailing. With this he jumps from a bridge into a river and swims a considerable distance. The extent to which he ambles about alone in the scenes is really remarkable.

Pauline's dog is stolen by a friend of the chief villain. She advertises for it, and follows up an answer only to fall into a trap. The dog escapes and brings the redoubtable Harry to the scene. He rescues her, but the motorcar in which they are escaping breaks down, and they have to take shelter in a cabin. There the pursuers are kept at bay until help comes.

“SLICE OF LIFE”
(American-Mutual—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

LOSS of memory through physical accident has been used as the basis for many interesting stories, but to put such a story across on the screen requires a lot of histrionic ability. Ed Coxen, playing the role of Jim in the “Slice of Life,” has proved himself entirely equal to the difficult task.

Winnifred Greenwood in the part of Betty Norse takes full advantage of her many opportunities to make this an unusually interesting production. A good cast supports these principals, and particularly excellent is the juvenile acting of Cupid Cavenes.

With the aid of such a cast the story is cleverly developed from the point where we see the accident that results in the unknown Jim’s loss of memory to the, at least not too obvious, climax where Jim accidentally stumbles upon his wife and family and recollects all the incidents of his past life.

During this time our attention is cleverly held by an abundance of human interest, centering around the gradual growth of love between Jim and Betty. Literary talent, which they both possess, throws them constantly together. Jim, however, is too honorable to speak of marriage until the mystery of his past life has been cleared.

At this point we see a mother and two children forced by poverty to give up their pretty home for a tenement room where they are having a hard time to eke out a bare existence. Betty discovers this pitiful family and brings them much-needed assistance. A few days later, thinking that she has discovered material for a real story, she takes Jim with her to visit the tenement.

At sight of Jim, the mother rushes forward with the cry of “My husband!” Jim’s memory surges back and Betty realizes that the man she has grown to love is lost to her forever.

“THE TREY O’ HEARTS”
(Gold Seal-Universal—Fifteenth Chapter)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE last chapter. Alan Law has now no more cause to worry about his life and the mysterious death sign, “The Trey o’ Hearts,” which was forever being placed in his path by his bitterest of all enemies, Seneca Trine. And that most villainous of all villains is now out of the way, and never will be in the way again, as this last chapter puts an end to his evil life. And as one of the sisters had to be disposed of in some manner, it comes as no great surprise that Rose was the unlucky one, as Alan’s attitude has been growing warmer toward Judith in the latter chapters.

Marrophat and Trine’s secretary were disposed of in the preceding instalment, and Trine and Rose, who are struck by lightning here, make the total of fatalities four. It develops that the interrupted wedding between Alan and Judith which took place some episodes back, was not interrupted soon enough to nullify the marriage, so for the last few chapters Alan and Judith have really been man and wife, although not many suspected it.

The three reels that this chapter embraces make a fitting finale to the thrilling serial. The introduction of Bess Meredith, the scenario writer, and Wilfred Lucas, the director, is a very excellent idea. Everyone who has followed the story will be extremely glad to get a glimpse of two of the persons, who have been responsible for so much of its success. Then again most of the scenes of the three reels were filmed in the beautiful rooms of the Mission Inn at Riverside, California.

In the wedding of Alan and Rose, which is only interrupted at the last moment by the stroke of lightning which takes the life of Rose and Seneca Trine, a very impressive and elaborate affair has been staged. And Trine was not a happy spectator of the ceremony. Far from it. Through a lucky fall he had regained the use of his long paralyzed limbs and was about to shoot our hero when the bolt from the clouds interfered.

But all good things come to an end. And instead of bemoaning its close we should stop to thank all who were concerned in its production. To Cleo Madison, George Larkin, Tom Walsh, Ray Harford and Ed Sloman, the principals of the cast, the heartiest praise is extended.

The numerous stunts they performed were never less than hair raising. Wildred Lucas, the director, is not to be forgotten. His name, like that of Francis Ford’s, will long be remembered by motion picture goers. And the author, Louis Joseph Vance—well, he’ll have to fly pretty high to surpass the mark he set by this story.

“HIS TRYSTING PLACE”
(Keystone-Mutual—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

CHARLES CHAPLIN again, playing opposite Mabel Normand in a two reel laugh maker comprising the third multiple reel Keystone release. Charles Chaplin’s work need not be described. He plays his part here, the irate and slovenly husband, who at length has to acknowledge his wife as the boss, in his usual way. His actions, his facial expression, what little there is, and his inimitable walk, are just as funny now as ever.

Mabel Normand plays the busy wife, and roundly abuses her husband more than once. And the way she does it, and the manner in which he accepts the abuses are uproarious.

Narrowed down, the story is the one of the changed overcoats in the restaurant and the contents of the pockets causing trouble. The characteristic incidental actions which Chaplin introduces are enough to cause one to forget the plot’s conventionality.

Imagine this: He saunters into an eating place, an old man is seated at the lunch counter devouring a plate of crullers or some other form of dough. Our hero naively picks up one and tries it. Not finding it suitable to the especial requirements of his palate, he throws it down and swallows it with on the old man’s beard, to the latter’s great surprise and disgust.

The picture is full of just such little incidents as this, all of which are equally humorous, and unite to make the production one of the best of its kind.
THE BURGLAR AND THE LADY

(Warner—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THERE is always a welcome awaiting a well-known person whether he appears on the screen or the stage. It matters little if the person can act or not, his prominence will more than likely overlap any dramatic shortcomings. But this production boasts of both the renowned person, and aside from that, good acting rendered by all the people in the cast.

James J. Corbett is the central figure of the plot, and he doesn’t play the part of a prize fighter, but a role even more entertaining has been allotted him, that of a gentleman burglar and a detective.

Part of the time he is ready with a smile and a cigar for the police captain, and the rest of the time, which is considerably greater, he is ready with jimmy and skeleton key and all the other accompaniments of a Raffles.

THE PERFECTION OF NONCHALANCE

Anyone who has ever seen Mr. Corbett will realize that his manner and bearing suit him remarkably well for the part, and as he played the same role on the stage several years ago, his acting carries a finish and polish that would otherwise be lacking. Claire Witney plays the girl who is responsible for Danver’s reform, and Fraunie Fraunhoz, Danver’s assistant in crime. The rest of the performers, including Stone, the detective and the father of the girl, are well cast.

Under the direction of Herbert Blache the photographic and lighting effects have been well taken care of. A great part of the action takes place in a dim, mystifying light, which creates a fine effect. The story is so well constructed that the attention is not lost for a moment.

We have been overwhelmed with crook stories as we have with Westerns of varying degrees of merit, but even though this one may be built along lines that are more or less conventional it comes far from being a bore, and the chances are that everyone will be delighted with it.

No greater praise could be accorded it than to say it is the best that Warner’s Features have offered for a long time. It will be remembered and appreciated.

In the adventures of Danvers, the Raffles detective, a wonderfully strong and well-built story has been presented. He turned crook by no wish of his own, and his detective work acts as a shield for his more shady pastime. Stone, the other detective, tries very hard to bring Danvers to bay, but however near he may come to his mark he is never successful. Danvers gives himself up to him in the end, serves his term, and then returns to the girl that was the cause of his reform.

FAMOUS PLAYERS SECURE RIGHTS TO “ZAZA”

DIRECTLY following the important announcements that the Famous Players Film Company has secured two such celebrated dramatic successes as “David Harum” and “The Old Homestead” comes an authoritative statement from that company that it has now obtained the film rights to the emotional drama, “Zaza.” This stage triumph was the starring vehicle of the noted French actress, Mme. Rejane, and our own American stage celebrity, Mrs. Leslie Carter.

In this film version the Famous Players will star Pauline Frederick, who has won unusual distinction in the current success, “Innocent,” and who has already completed engagements in two forthcoming Famous Players productions, “Sold” and “The Eternal City,” the first of which will be released during the next two months. As contained in a recent announcement, Miss Frederick is under exclusive contract with the Famous Players Film Company for a series of film characterizations.

This production will be the first release of the Famous Players Film Company in affiliation with Charles Frohman.

“THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY”

(Thanhouser—Twentieth Episode)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ALTHOUGH the mystery remains in practically the same secluded state in this episode as it has remained heretofore, a very small ray of light is given. It is so small, however, no definite conclusion can be formed from it. It is, perhaps, the beginning of the end, which is due to arrive after six more reels have terminated.

It is the note which the conspirators stole from Florence, and which she in turn stole back from them which causes all the trouble in this chapter. After Flo has been rescued from the water by Jim and the dog she gives the precious note to her lover. In making his toilet Jim conceals the paper in his tie, and then sets out to visit the girl of his heart.

His precaution serves him well as he enters the grounds of the Hargreaves mansion he is attacked by Braine and a number of his band. They beat him up in a general way, but are unable to find the note, even though his tie is pulled off in the scuffle. Jones, the faithful butler, comes to the rescue, and Jim is taken to the house where the paper is examined.

It is found to be absolutely blank, but when Jones holds it over a candle hand-writing appears telling that the Russian ambassador has in his possession papers which will disclose the whereabouts of the vanished Hargreaves. Jones repairs to the hotel to see the ambassador and explains matters. He receives some papers from the Russian, but their contents are not disclosed.

The two leave the room, and Braine who has spied on the butler enters and searches for the papers. Jones and the ambassador return, having forgotten something, and then follows one of the realistic fights that have been so prominent in the entire production. Braine comes out victorious, and escapes from the room, locking the door and trapping his enemies.

Perhaps those who have made a study of the serial will be able to foresee what the papers contain in the way of reading matter. If they can they are much nearer the solution of the mystery. But the chances are that they will be as much in the dark as ever.

It is evidently the intention of the producers to conceal the ending up to the last moment, and perhaps not to give any termination whatsoever, leaving the guessers to form their own conclusions, and then announce it later. But whatever their intentions, they are certainly as mysterious as the far famed story itself.
Minneapolis Convention a Model Meeting
due to my affiliation with a film exchange, this is a very delicate matter to treat upon.

"Again I want to thank each and every one of you, ladies and gentlemen present, for what you have done. This convention as you will know, has been a most wonderful success and the greatest ever, and in behalf of Mr. Johnston, the Motion Picture News, and myself, I again thank you very much indeed.

The Banquet started at seven o'clock. A splendid surprise was bestowed upon B. N. Judell, manager of the Mutual Film Corporation, Minneapolis, who was recently married, and had just returned from his honeymoon, and it was so arranged that he would be the last one to enter the banquet hall. Just as he approached, the organ played Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," among cheers and applause.

James Gilowsky acted as toastmaster. Rev. G. L. Morrill offered prayer and the feed was on.

Convention "National Hymn"
The first speaker called upon, was Harry H. Green, president of the M. P. E. A. of Minnesota. Mr. Green shortly dwelt upon the wonderful success of the convention, and the splendid gathering assembled at the banquet, and read off the following song which was unanimously adopted as the "national hymn" of the M. P. E. A. of M.:

This is what I'll tell to you,
Best Convention that ever grew;
M. P. E. A. will be fair,
1915 is the time.

The next speaker to be introduced was Chief of Police Martinson, a man who at all times has been fair and square in his dealings with the local exhibitors. Mr. Martinson mentioned the fact that he considered moving pictures today the best educator on the market, and concluded his talk by saying that: "As long as you exhibitors put on the kind of pictures you have in the past, and co-operate and work with us in the same manner, you will have nothing to fear from the police department, I assure you.

B. N. Judell of the Mutual Film Corporation started to make a speech, but everybody insisted on seeing the bride, and so his intended oratory was short but sweet and pertained chiefly to his honeymoon rather than anything else.

Tom Gleason, local moving picture censor, was next called upon, and spoke along the same lines as did his superior officer, Chief Martinson. His speech was received with equal enthusiasm.

The next speaker, and by the way, without a doubt the headline on the program, was Rev. G. L. Morrill. I have heard Morrill so often and know him so well that I can't appreciate his talk any more than I did on previous occasions. That would be impossible. That man can say more in five minutes than I could write in a day, and the applause that followed his speech lasted for fully five minutes. It takes Morrill a long time to get through when he starts, but when he is through no applause will ever get him back.

The toastmaster then called upon James V. Bryson, manager of the Laemmle Film Service, but was excused by Fred S. Meyer, assistant manager, who made a few well chosen remarks, thanked those assembled in behalf of the Laemmle Film Service, as well as Motion Picture News, for the opportunity of being in their midst on that occasion when the fact was mentioned that A. Steffes, secretary of the League, was without a doubt entitled to 90 per cent of the credit in making such a wonderful success of this convention, cries of enthusiasm arose from everybody, and three cheers went up for Mr. Steffes, and then three more for Mr. Meyer, the man who has helped make the Universal program, and at the same time the Motion Picture News so popular in this territory.

Film Men at Executive Sessions
Billy Merrill, manager of Warners' Features, Incorporated, spoke a few words and expressed his desire that the time would soon approach when film men may be admitted to all executive meetings. "Your success means ours, and if we don't work hand in hand on this thing, neither one of us will succeed."

The toastmaster then called on C. E. Van Duzee, the father of the motion picture business of the Northwest. "Van" told about the "good old days" when a two-hundred-foot subject was considered a big feature; days when film was lying all around the balcony floor.

And then followed Dick Ferris, local theatrical favorite, well known and equally liked everywhere. Mr. Ferris spoke of the time when motion pictures were a miracle, not a reality, and the traveling 10-20 and 20-30 photographies traveled over hills and dales; over streams and wide rivers to explore countries hitherto practically unknown.

Coverly, of Duluth, amused the assembly with a "Flea" story, but "Bingo" was not there.

The next man called upon was D. G. Rodgers, treasurer of the M. P. E. A. of Minnesota. Mr. Rodgers speech was along the same lines as the one he made during the afternoon session of the league, when he told Dr. C. B. Storrs, dramatic critic of the Minneapolis "Tribune" where to get off at. Mr. Storrs is the man who remarked that every minute he ever spent at a moving picture theatre was time wasted. Most anybody could have answered him, but Dave Rodgers is the only man who could do it right—he did.

Barnett of the Famous Players, Preller of the Eclectic, were the other film managers to be called upon, after which the big dinner was ended.

Fred S. Meyer.

"THE LAST CHORD"
(Savoa-Warners—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE
PROBABLY there is nothing which affects the human emotions more than the sight of a mother distracted over the loss of her child. The sufferings of a child will arouse great sympathy, but it is about a draw with the suffering of its mother after the child has passed out of existence. The main scenes in this picture deal with the latter case, and are carried off very well by the foreign actress, whose name is not known. Emotionalism marks the entire rendition of her part, and for that style of acting hers is excellent.

Some may think the scenes in which she is seen in her ravings are slightly too long, a little too long to create the effect they would if they were shortened. But as they stand now they are most impressive and appealing. The leading actress is given support of the same high quality.

The Savoa brand of pictures has created a name for itself in remarkable and beautiful photography, and this production is marked by good photography. We have seen better in the same brand of pictures, but the photographic work of these three reels is above the average. Unusual and artistic scenes and sets have been obtained, and used to good advantage. Winter scenes always show to good effect on the film as they do here, and the scenes with the bay for a background are equally as pretty.

The plot deals with the villainous revenge taken by a disappointed lover. He poisons the child of the women he once loved. Her husband, who is a great violinist, receives a telegram, just after he has played to a large assemblage of persons, saying that his wife is distraught from the death of her child.

He returns home and finally succeeds in comforting her. She tells him the perpetrator of the deed, and it seems wholly justified when he forces the villain to a duel with him. The husband's shot is the true one.
New England Exhibitors Plan Gala Ball

Event Will Be Staged at the Boston Arena, December 2; Committees Hard at Work on the Entertainment Features—Serials Popular Throughout the Territory—Project on Foot to Organize New Hampshire Exhibitors—What Educators Are Doing with Films in New England

Special to Motion Picture News
Boston, Nov. 4.

The Exhibitors' League of New England has appointed committees to take care of preparations for the second annual ball, to be held on December 2 at the Boston Arena.

Labor Dispute at Lowell

Lowell, Mass., has been the seat of a labor dispute between the Musicians' Union and the exhibitors. The union has tried to prevail upon the theaters to install an orchestra varying from four to ten pieces, according to seating capacity.

But the theater men have been employing non-union musicians, or going without, until the union has decided that it could not force the exhibitors to change their policy.

The larger houses have not settled the question yet, but the union men are back at their old places in the straight picture houses.

Serial pictures have won a lasting supporter at the Whittenton Theatre, Taunton, Mass. Joseph C. Lamoureux was discouraged at the business outlook, when Mr. Hirsch, of the Thanhouser Syndicate, Boston office, called on him and suggested that he start "The Million Dollar Mystery." Mr. Lamoureux mailed a personal letter enclosing a herald to the families in his neighborhood. He also advertised that he would give a photographic of the audience taken on the opening night of the serial. The result of his advertising campaign was the beginning of a steady increase in patronage.

Theatre Notes and News

The Broadway Theatre, Derry, N. H., opens November 31 under the management of Kelley and Cote. This theatre is equipped with a Power's 6A, and will use Mutual service.

The Empire Theatre, Salem, Mass., has changed hands. The new owners open with Alco service, and have installed Mr. Frank Brown as house manager.

The Milford Opera House, Milford, Mass., is playing stock along with its policy of using large feature pictures. The pictures used are Famous Players and Universal Service. This house is one of the finest in New England with a seating capacity of 1,200, and is doing a good business since Messrs. Grant and Campbell have taken it over.

The popularity of serial pictures in New England is shown in the advance bookings of the Universal "Master Key" and the Thanhouser Syndicate "Zudora." Every theatre which has used the preceding serials from these exchanges has signed for the coming ones. Many New England theatres are using such a serial on the market, and are satisfied with the result.

To Start League in Granite State

The following letter to Mr. W. H. Bradley, manager of the Serial Film Exchange, will interest exhibitors throughout New England. Mr. Bean deserves all praise and support.

PASTIME AMUSEMENT COMPANY.
Franklin, N. H., Oct. 18, 1914.

Mr. W. H. Bradley,
Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir—Will you mail me your mailing list of theatres in New Hampshire. I have been unable to reach the manager and owner, and would like to send a letter and try and organize a State Exhibitors' League in this State. We have got to get together, as I am very much afraid of bad legislation for the moving picture houses in this State.

Trust you will mail this to me at once and thank you for your favor, I remain,

Yours respectfully,
(Signed) C. H. Bean.

Pictures in Educational Circles

The Y. M. C. A. of Fall River is carrying on a very successful series of motion pictures Saturdays. These are in charge of Mr. H. E. Dodge, the general secretary, and are especially planned for the children. Every picture is censored, and the shows are valuable additions to the educational plans of this association.

The Women's Educational and Industrial Union of Boston, Mass., has arranged to start a Saturday morning performance of motion pictures for children at Tremont Temple. The plans are in charge of Miss Florence Lincoln, and promise to be unique and interesting. Miss Lincoln is the author of "The End of the Bridge," the successful drama which won the John Craig "Harvard Prize," and which ran for a long time at the Castle Square Theatre, Boston.

The "Saturday Mornings" will open in December, and the programs will be published at an early date.

St. Mary's Church, Cambridge, Mass., has inaugurated a weekly motion picture day, on Wednesday. Rev. Father Lydon, who has charge of these, says that the patrons like the four and five reel feature, and he has signed up several of the best of these for the season.

The Cambridge, Mass., Y. M. C. A., has opened a regular motion picture show at its hall in the Association Building. The film "Evangeline" was shown there this week, and proved to be a drawing card. This is the first New England Y. M. C. A. to establish a regular theatre program, as a competitor of the regular picture house.

Changes at Box Office

E. L. Knight, of the new Bijou, Springield, was in Boston this week in the interests of The New England Motion Picture Company. Mr. Knight is treasurer, and E. F. Farnsworth president of this enterprise. The plans of the company promise an interesting announcement in the near future.

The Box Office Attractions announces a change in management at its Boston office. Mr. Levin will go to Philadelphia, and Mr. Frank L. Meade, of Boston, will take charge of this office.

E. MacEvoy, formerly connected with Asco, Inc., has joined the Phoenix Film Company. "Eddie" is well known in this territory, and has many friends who hope for his success. The Phoenix Film will handle the Sawyer releases here, and has established a very convenient and pleasant film headquarters at 129-131 Columbus avenue, Boston, Mass.

F. J. Peters, of The Phoenix Feature Film Corporation has returned from a trip to New York, where he purchased ten new high class features, among which were "The Factory Girl Magdalen," which was produced in Providence. "The Life of Shakespeare" is another release he has secured.

Lewiston Theatre Doomed

The Gem Theatre, Lewiston, Maine, will pass out of existence about January 1, 1915. The property has been sold to a mercantile firm, and will be torn down to make room for a large dry goods establishment. Mr. McCarthy has no future plans at present for the continuation of his motion picture interests. Mr. Clark, of the Huntingdon Avenue Theatre, Boston, Mass., is at present revising leftover stage after the new theatre which he is building there, and which is fast nearing completion.

"Cabiria" is still running at the Tremont Temple. F. Samuels, who is handling this film in New England, reports that this picture is still drawing good sized audiences.

The Boston Opera House had motion pictures on its program for the first time in its history during the current week. The cancelling of the regular opera season allowed the opening of a high class program of pictures and music.
“READY MONEY”
(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THE stage success “Ready Money” proves to be fully as entertaining on the screen as it was behind the footlights. It is a story which is well adapted for the films because of its wide variety of scenes and its touches of comedy. In the matter of settings, the usual advantage of the films is brought out very strongly. Both in exteriors and interiors there are some unusually fine effects. The street crowd celebrating the new year with confetti, paper ribbons and the other implements of warfare so popular on Times Square on that occasion is a novel and decidedly well done scene.

Fitzhew creates a small riot in the cafe, while Paquita, a singer, gets a photograph of Mrs. Fitzhew from the pocket of the new “well lighted” broker. Mrs. Fitzhew, with the district attorney’s nephew, visits the place, hoping to confront her husband with his domestic sin. But the broker is dragged out, radiating good cheer from every pore. The place is raided, Mrs. Fitzhew is arrested, but upon her companion’s pledge to the police, is permitted to go. Believing her husband to be at home, she flees to a railroad station to await morning to bear out her proposed trip to her mother’s home. Fitzhew gets into a fight with a hansom cab driver, and is arrested and sentenced to thirty days on Blackwell’s Island for attempting to influence the night court judge. A detective accompanies him home to prepare for the trip. The next morning Mrs. Fitzhew arrives, and is informed by her spouse of an immediate thirty-days trip to Mexico, “for his health.” His excuse is accepted and then follows a series of well-staged incidents of a pleasing character to the end.

Humor, clean and clever, prevails. Barrymore is exceptionally good in the role of Mr. Fitzhew, and receives able support from every one of the principals. “The Man from Mexico” will provoke laughter, loud and long, wherever it is shown.

“THE BELOVED ADVENTURER” TO THE RESCUE AGAIN

AGAIN “The Beloved Adventurer” undertakes to straighten out the troubles of a worthy couple, and although the game is a dangerous one, he is eminently successful. On the ship that is bringing him back to England he encounters a bridal couple just returning from their honeymoon. The young husband gets into the clutches of a pair of poker crooks, and is not only cleaned out of his own money, but also $10,000 belonging to his employer.

The situation is so desperate that the heartbroken bride is about to jump overboard when Cecil saves her and bears the story. He calms the little girl down, and promises that all shall be well. Crooks are favorite “game” for the Englishman, and he not only gets all of the money back, but makes them feel that they have encountered a cyclone.

THE DYNAMITER DISCOVERED

The views in and about the mine are also effective. Another New Year scene shows the interior of a big New York restaurant, where the diners are eating and drinking the old year out. This is as good a restaurant setting as has been on the screen in some time.

The incidents of the story which take place in the Western mining town are also realistic to an unusual degree. The cast is headed by Edward Abeles, who will be remembered by film fans for his work in “Brewster’s Millions.” The other players are well suited to their parts and handle them well, Theodore Roberts being particularly good as the miner, Mike Reardon.

The story concerns the adventures of a young mining engineer, who, with Mike Reardon, buys an abandoned mine from which he eventually makes a fortune. Before he meets with success, however, he has many unpleasant experiences, including an arrest as a counterfeiter’s accomplice.

“THE MAN FROM MEXICO”
(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Parts)
REVIEWED BY E. J. HUDSON

THERE is a sufficient variety of comedy in John Barrymore’s characterization of “The Man from Mexico” to appeal to every class of motion picture patrons. The Famous Players Film Company, in addition to accomplishing this fact, has manifested an attention to detail in sets and the action of the story which gives it an air of quality that is above the average.

The story is unfolded in a commonsense way. Each separate unit of humorous action stands out clear and distinct, and yet is so artistically blended in the final assembling that the result is unique.

Exhibitors will find abundant advertising material in the production. John Barrymore as Mr. Fitzhew is typical of almost every married man, while his wife is true to the emotions, characteristics and suspicious of her sex in marital harness.

Fitzhew, a stock broker, takes his first lesson as the driver of his own automobile en route from his office to his home. He just escapes running down his bosom friend.

The two finish the journey together. Mrs. Fitzhew is about to spend the night with her mother, arranging the details of a trousseau for her sister. Fitzhew seizes the chance to visit a notorious café. Mrs. Fitzhew, returning to get her pocketbook, overhears the plot. She enlists the aid of the district attorney’s nephew.

Thus the newlyweds are made happy and Cecil adds one more number to the list of adventures.

"The Fable Proving that Sponges Are Found in a Drug Store." (Essanay. Wed., Nov. 18.)—George Ade very cleverly shows the trials of a couple of young newly marrieds, whose household will bear a close resemblance to that of the real couple. The end is equally amusing. "The Last of the Hargraves." (Biograph. Wed., Nov. 28.)—A revelation in drama releases, in that it truly reveals the problem with a new way. The story of the feud is brought on by a series of scenes which lead up to the story itself. Gertrude McCoy is the scene in the role of the mountain lassie, Virginia Hargrave, who has sworn to carry on the old-time feud every time she marries. By her own children being taken down with the dreadful disease, it brings her to her senses, and she is finally made to see the error of her ways and makes the required alterations. "The Turn of the Tide." (Imp. Two reels. Made by Famous Players.)—This revolving reel picture of a trail that narrows down to the old tale of the lover un-awakened by the father of the girl but whose incriminating causing him to appear new and refreshing. In the final reel King Bagott, who plays the leading man, is warned that he will not prove from this water. A following scene clears the man of this blame and he readily consents to his daughter's marriage.

"The Bachelor's Baby." (Rex. Sun., Nov. 22.)—An excellent comedy-drama with Herbert Rawlin-son and Beaufort in quaint parts. A child is kidnapped, the father, another two-loved sons, who save the girl, is then found in the dead body of his body, and his son is henceforth the hero of the romance. Heiskel saves the drunkard without giving offense, and his antics are un-expected.

"The Stolen Masterpiece." (American. Wed., Nov. 11.)—A wealthy young clubman proves his worth to the girl he wishes to marry by solving the mystery of a stolen masterpiece. After a night out Ernest is quite the wears. He dreams of the Stone Age, when force ruled humanity, and when he is wakened from his dreams by the girl who holds him in the dark of the night, and forces her father to let him have his consent. Sabina saves the drunkard without giving offense, and his antics are unsurpassable.

"Motherhood." (Beauty. Tues., Nov. 10.)—A very artistically produced, semi-allegorical picture with a moral. The baby picture of its girl without motherhood is conquered by a dream in a dream. Sabina, the daughter of a well-known artist, brings a child into the world, who is unwelcome. This rather delicate theme is so beautifully handled by the art that the plot is brought to the most prudish. The vivacious Margarita Fisher plays the part, and opposite Harry Pollard particularly well. Kathie Fisher makes a very charming little copule.

"Max's Money." (Royal. Sat., Nov. 7.)—Louis Calvert and the lovely girl that is a hand-the scene remains in order to inform him of his good luck, as he thinks the law is after her.

"The Tear That Burned." (Majestic. Two reels. Sun., Nov. 8.)—A story woven about crooks that is so far out of the ordinary that it appears as new. Little Girl reappears on the screen, after a long absence, in the title role. She is ably assisted by W. E. Lowery and John Dilks. How her phonophonic is turned off her safe is because of the cruelty of her father, and how she becomes the victim of a city thief, who used her as a tool, and how she finally is adopted by a respectable woman is the story. It is most excellently produced by Jack O'Brien, a picture that is worthy the name of "feature."

"A Woman Scorned." (Reliance. Two Reels. Sat., Nov. 7.)—Another excellent screen play by Eugene Pallet, Sam De Grasse, Jack Preem and Mary Allen. The detective and a reporter work to solve a murder mystery and the girl. She is aided by a woman, cast off one of the crooks, assisted and directed by his Jockey.

"The Stolen Masterpiece." (American. Wed., Nov. 11.)—With the help of a servant thieves steal a valuable painting from a chateau. They are discovered, and the original recovered by the owner's daughter, who is restored to favor. The good scenes and acting add to the interest.

"A Slick of Life." (American. Two reels. Mon., Nov. 9.)—A novelist loses his memory as a result of a train accident and marries a girl who collaborates with him on some new writing. He recovers his memory and discovers who he is and restores him to his wife. Winifred Green wood and the principals. There are a number of attractive and realistic scenes.

"The Mine's Peril." (Reliance, Wed., Nov. 4.)—An exciting adventure story in which two Mexican steers are captured by the crooks and brought to the United States. The scenes are especially beautiful and are supported by photography of the highest order.

"The Turning of the Road." (Thanhouser. Two reels. Tues., Nov. 3.)—A crook story a little too long for comfort in their interest. The crook's steerswoman is reformed through the belief that she has a child. The scenes are especially beautiful and are supported by photography of the highest order.

"The Dead Line." (Princess. Fri., Oct. 30.)—A complete and a most entertaining story. An old bill is brought to crooked ways, but is frustrated by his wife, who shoots him.

"Mexican Hatad." (Miller Brothers. Three reels. Wed., Nov. 4.)—A Western that contains slightly too much unnecessary religiosity, but otherwise is quite good. The collected cattle rustler is the main character, and his efforts to live straight are thwarted by his old man and the crooks. The scenes are beautifully rehearsed, and the music of the film. Otherwise very good and pleasing.

"Warner's Features." (Rainbow's End. (Miller Brothers. Three reels. Wed., Nov. 4.)—A Western that contains slightly too much unnecessary religiosity, but otherwise is quite good. The collected cattle rustler is the main character, and his efforts to live straight are thwarted by his old man and the crooks. The scenes are beautifully rehearsed, and the music of the film. Otherwise very good and pleasing.

"The Terror of a Great City." (Mittenthal. Three reels.)—A regular old-fashioned melodrama. The siren villain, the represented hero, and the hero's trap friend are all important characters. Besides this, most of the principals are army of officers, ostensibly of the German army. The plot is absorbing, acted fairly well, but in some scenes the signs of poor producing are quite evident. The Teror" mentioned in the title is an earthquake, which, in melodramatic style, kills the villain and all his confederates.

"A Mountain Goat." (Albuquerque.)—A good, funny offering aided in beautiful surroundings. The unapproachable mountain goat is used, with its love for its lover in a nearby camp. This man is always in the way, and finally is caught in a very compromising situation with an old maid, she claims him her husband, but he makes good his escape the next day.

Lillian Walker
FREE

TO YOUR PATRONS

These richly colored portraits on heavy Art photo-board, to stand on a bureau or mantlepiece will not require framing as embossed design frames them.

A new pose—rich in color. The most beautiful and artistic colored photograph ever made of this popular star with the famous dimple.

Mr. Exhibitor: This offer is made for one purpose only. To place at our expense in the home of every one of her admirers a portrait of Miss Lillian Walker, who ranks with Mary Pickford and Alice Joyce in beauty and popularity.

Through you alone can we accomplish this purpose. Hence our liberal offer. These portraits are the equal of those sold in art stores at one dollar. Nothing but her name appears on the portrait. There are no strings or conditions beyond those stated in the coupon. We hereby guarantee to immediately return without question the small sum asked for packing and express charges, if the colored photographs are not found to be as represented in every particular.

Show one in your lobby, or run a slide reading: "A $1.00 Photograph of Lillian Walker with every Ten Admissions", or distribute according to whatever plan may seem to you best to increase your box office receipts.

Your patrons will be eager to secure so valuable a portrait of such a favorite player. You can reorder on the same terms.

FOR KING AND COUNTRY

(Picture Playhouse—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ALTHOUGH the plot of this offering was once worked to death it has been absent from the screen for some time. Its revival will be welcome. It is a story of the heir to the throne being kidnapped by jealous parties in the state, so that one of their number might be made the ruler of the land. Just as the well laid plans of the conspirators seem to be taking effect they are dashed to the ground by the reappearance of the heir and his father, who was also made captive.

In all the six reels of the picture hardly a fault can be found with the photographic work. Foreign pictures have always been noted for their superiority in this line of the production, and here the photography seems even better than the best. Beautiful exteriors have also been caught, and the beauty of the entire picture is materially enhanced by excellent tinting of the film.

The acting of the cast is of the highest grade also. It is of the emotional variety, characteristic of all the Italian players, and what is more to the point, it is the best sample of its kind.

A Capozzi plays the leading male part. He appears as Sergius, the Crown Prince of Servia, who, with his little son, is kidnapped by the party of the conspiring Regent. Princess Ruspoli appears in the opposite part as the wife of Sergius, and in a role that requires much dramatic ability. Luigi Mele is the heavy of the story. He has been in these films before, and plays a role here well suited to his. Michele Ciausa furnishes what little comedy the picture boasts of. The rest of the cast act commendably.

The story with its many sub-plots is of an interesting nature. Nothing sensational appears, and the action is almost always slow. It could be condensed, and it will be to some extent. As it stands at present it is slightly too long.

30 POLICE DOGS WILL "ACT" IN THANHouser FILM

THIRTY German police dogs are being used in "The Center of the Web," a two reeler now in the making at the New Rochelle studio of the Thanhouser Film Corporation. These dogs only recently arrived in this country from Germany where they had been used successfully in the tracking and apprehension of criminals.

Closely resembling wolves the dogs made a queer looking pack as they awaited Director Harvey's bidding. Heavy collars with sharp nails are used to discipline them.

When a dog becomes unruly this collar is turned so that the nails quickly restore him to better temper and obedience. The man in charge of the dogs spoke to them in German as they are not trained to commands in English.

One of the dogs however, understands directions given him in French. This animal was sold for $1,600, but represents such a splendid type of his breed that permission was given by the new owner, a wealthy German woman, to work him in the picture.

RIFKIN WILL HANDLE ALLIANCE PROGRAM

It was announced by Andrew J. Cobe, General Manager of the Alliance Films Corporation, that arrangements have been completed whereby the Eastern Feature Film Company, Inc., will handle the Alliance Program in the New England territory.

Herman Rifkin, president and general manager of the Eastern Feature Film Co., Inc., with offices at 57-59 Church street, Boston, Mass., is well known to the exhibitors in New England and the news of his having secured the Alliance Program for that territory will be greatly welcomed by them.

They will have to start with, "The Hoosier Schoolmaster," starring Max Figman, "The Key to Yesterday," "The Path Forbidden," "At the Old Cross Roads," and "McVeagh of the South Seas." One big production a week will be released by the Alliance Films Corporation.

Exhibitors of that territory should get in touch with Mr. Rifkin for the Alliance Program for their theatre.

VACATION FOR CLEO MADISON

NOW that she has passed without serious injury 32 reels of imminent death in the production of the "Trey o' Hearts" series, Cleo Madison the plucky little lead with the Luca Gold Seal Company, has decided to do what she has said she would never do. She is taking a week's vacation.

The Great Secret Service Serial

Every hazard and risk encountered by Secret Service Operatives, every form of crime and law-breaking which they fight, is included in the twenty episodes of this wonderful serial. Each episode will average three reels. Each release will tell a complete story, but the same principals—a man and a woman—have the stellar parts in all of the twenty episodes.

Chief Flynn is writing the narrative for each release. One newspaper in every city and town in the country will publish each of the twenty stories.

The shrewd exhibitor, linking this publicity close to the dates he shows the serial, utilizing Chief Flynn’s name, the wonderful advantages it and the productions give, is going to make money.

The productions are being staged under the personal direction of C. V. Henkel. This serial is being marketed entirely to state rights buyers. It is the first legitimate, bona-fide thing they have had to compete with the highly successful program serials.

Certain territories are still available. Bookings already are being made.

RELIANCE COMPANY CHANGES FEATURE POLICY

A NEW policy was recently established by the Reliance Company relative to special features, when the announcement was made that in the future the special features that have been made will be sold on a state right proposition instead of being released through their affiliated organizations.

“The Avenging Conscience” or “Thou Shalt Not Kill,” a six reel D. W. Griffith special feature, and “The Escape,” Paul Armstrong’s wonderful dramatic production, also produced in film version by Mr. Griffith, in seven reels, are the first two of these special features that will be sold in this way.

In an interview with H. E. Aitken, president of the Reliance and Mutual Film Corporation, Mr. Aitken said:

“I have always felt that such features as D. W. Griffith has produced are far too beautiful and wonderful to handle and to do justice to by so large an organization as I am associated with. When it is remembered that Mr. Griffith is considered to be the premier director of the picture business today, I have decided that really the only way to do justice to pictures of this caliber is to sell the rights to reputable state rights people who will exploit them in a manner befitting their importance.

“There have been so many state rights propositions on the market that have hardly come up to the average of the regular program material that it is time proper attention were devoted to this part of the industry. The state right field today is not unlike the small jobbing business of old, inasmuch as it is over-run with the riff raff of the industry. If more attention were paid to this end, or the end of purchasing proper and lasting subjects this branch of the business would not be looked down upon.”

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY AT THE FRONT

T HE German war office has just recently granted the Great Northern Film Company official permission to take pictures at the Franco-German front, is the announcement made by the company. This is considered quite a distinction, as, it is asserted, it is the first time any company has succeeded in obtaining permission to photograph actual battle scenes of the great conflict.

The Great Northern camera men went from Copenhagen to the seat of war in automobiles, accompanied by military escort. It is expected that some very remarkable pictures will be the result of this expedition, and it is the company’s intention to continue taking pictures on the firing line for an indefinite period.

A series will be inaugurated, the plan being to release one reel of these war pictures at a time. The first scenes that have been photographed are now on the way to New York, and will be released within the next two weeks.

The DC Compensarc lowers the voltage of a direct current supply to that required at the lamp without needless waste.

The AC Compensarc cuts $\frac{2}{3}$ from your lighting bill if you use alternating current.

The AC to DC Compensarc will transform alternating into direct current and reduce the voltage at the same time without needless waste.

No matter what current you have—Alternating or Direct—or what voltage or frequency, one of the will enable you to secure a light that will give those clear, bright pictures that everybody now demands.

What's the use of paying extra money for special screens, projecting machines, and first run films and then spoil the whole result with poor light? With the Fort Wayne Compensarcs you can get any kind of light you want regardless of the kind or quality of your current supply.

The Compensarcs will give you

STEADY LIGHT. No flickering, no sputtering, even when changing intensities or from one machine to another.

WHITE LIGHT. No yellow streaks, no ghosts.

BRIGHT LIGHT. Three times the light with two-thirds the current.

They are safe, efficient, easy to operate, fool proof and reliable.

What “Accessory News” Means

THIS is the day of the modern picture theatre, finely and fully equipped, and efficiently run.
Which, briefly, is the reason why we have added
“Accessory News” to Motion Picture News.

WE have been planning “Accessory News” for some time.
It has seemed to us that such matters as theatre construction, equipment and operation are important enough to demand a new magazine devoted wholly to this field.
We have felt that they deserved more than a mere department and much more than casual editorial interest—that they should, by no means, be pushed out of sight by the mass of film news, reviews and advertising.

SO we hit upon the idea of “Accessory News.”
It is not separate from Motion Picture News, but it is, nevertheless, a magazine within itself.
It has its own manager and its own separate staff of writers.
It has its own cover or title page in color and in every way is made to stand out prominently and distinctly as it should.

IT is the writer’s opinion that “Accessory News” will grow till it rivals—and perhaps outdoes—that part of Motion Picture News which is devoted to pictures and picture making.
The making of pictures is of the utmost importance.
But so also is the showing of pictures. The latter problem, however, has fallen far short of the attention it deserves.

A MAKER of screens has shouted insistently, for the past several years, that what the exhibitor is really retailing to the public is picture light.
So he is.
He doesn’t merely retail pictures. The best pictures ever produced are of little use to him—they will not gain and hold patronage—unless they are well projected on the screen and well reflected from that screen.

IN other words, the successful exhibitor is the man who also sells good picture light.
He must sell other things, too, beside pictures.
He must sell an attractive and comfortable interior, which means a great many things, such as ventilation, pleasing lights and decorations, comfortable chairs, excelcent music, courtesy from employees—service and efficiency all along the line.

And to bring his patrons in, he must have an attractive lobby.

THE lack of all this may have been well enough in the days when theatres were only converted shops, when exhibitors were merely speculators with a new and untried amusement; but today these elements of theatre service and efficiency are necessities.
The public has been educated up to well-shown as well as well-produced pictures.
They demand a pleasing environment. Among the exhibitors of the country, a stern survival of the fittest is in progress of which the mismanaged, poorly-equipped theatre is fast dying and by which the modern picture theatre finely and fully equipped is becoming more and more of a big and important institution.

AGAIN, there is the growing importance of motion picture technique.
All the faults of projection today are charged upon the projection machine and the screen.
These important facts are not taken into account: that we have no standardized methods of film perforation, camera work, developing and printing, etc.
Until we achieve this standardization, we shall not have perfect picture light.

THEN, too, among other things, is the question of furnishing and equipment contributing to the comfort of patrons. The right kind of seating has a great deal to do with attendance, and its importance has commanded the attention of manufacturers.
It has been a long way from the crude chairs of the “store shows” to the luxurious upholstered seats of the present motion picture theatre.

PROPER decoration is now recognized as a big asset in a theatre’s popularity. The highest skill is employed in rendering the walls and ceilings pleasing to the most critical eye.
The best carpets and draperies, formerly used only in the more pretentious places of amusement, now grace the temples of the new art.
The demand for furnishings of this character from motion picture theatres has considerably augmented the business of firms in this line, and called upon the services of experts who make a specialty of estimating on the outfitting of photo play houses.

“ACCESSORY NEWS” aims to take up all these important matters—competently and continuously—for the benefit of the progressive exhibitors and operators, for the prospective theatre builder—and for the betterment, we trust, of the problem of picture exhibition.

The New Era in Film Construction

Peculiar Requirements of Motion Picture Houses, Since the Establishment of Photo Drama on a Permanent Basis in the Amusement Field Have Made Necessary a Class of Architects Who Study the Needs of the Exhibitor—The National, of Los Angeles, Built by Valk Brothers, an Example of This Type

The permanency of motion pictures in the amusement field has resulted in specialization on photo play theatres by architects. Expert planning, based on the peculiar requirements of picture houses, has solved for the exhibitor numerous problems formerly confronting him in the erection of a satisfactory theatre building.

The specialist devises ways and means for his clients whereby the cost of construction is materially reduced without sacrificing any essential requirement to cheapness. In numerous cases owners have been saved money on buildings which if planned by the average architect, would far exceed reasonable figures. Such a saving amounts to no insignificant sum with the price of building material mounting higher and higher.

The reduction of construction cost to the lowest possible level means a great deal to the exhibitor. The owner, in basing the rental of the theatre to the manager, is naturally influenced by the first cost of the building. If the architect saves him a few thousand dollars he is disposed to ask for less rent. For this reason a manager negotiating with the owner of a piece of property for the lease of a proposed theatre, finds a dollar-and-cents interest in the qualifications of the architects submitting specifications.

Consequently a manager in consultation with an owner for the purpose of making suggestions should be familiar with the capabilities of various architectural firms likely to draw plans for the theatre. Under those circumstances, a word in the right direction would mean less expensive and more efficient work—and an ultimate saving to the manager as well as the owner of the property.

The same thing applies to the remodeling of a motion picture house. Anybody can figure on alterations, but only a specialist is able to give satisfactory service at the minimum expense.

A firm knowing the requirements of motion picture theatres is that of Lawrence B. and A. Lawrence Valk, of Los Angeles, Cal. They have gained a reputation as "theatre specialists" extending beyond their own state.

These architects have planned numerous picture houses causing wide comment for the up-to-date ideas embodied in the structures.

A recent example of their success is evidenced in the new National Theatre of Los Angeles, one of the handsomest and best equipped in the State of California.

A glance at the illustrations of the exterior and interior views and a scrutiny of the ground plans will bear out the commendation of local residents.

This firm is prepared to supply clients with complete plans, details and specifications of theatre buildings of almost any size, ranging in cost from $12,000 to $100,000.

The National has been built on a site costing $30,000, and the cost of the structure amounted to $19,000. The lessee pays an annual rental of 10 per cent, or $1,825. His fixed charges are reduced, however, to about $875 per month by the privilege of renting three stores, netting him about $950 a month. As the building is located in the business section the stores are practically never vacant.

The building is 60 feet wide by 140 feet long, and is built entirely of brick with white artificial stone front, and cost complete, without the opera chairs, stage scenery, carpets, curtains and draperies and the electric signs, and projection machine, $19,000. This included the sidewalk for the entire front, 12 feet wide; also the bill boards at the curb. The exterior lobby is 20 feet wide with octagon plate glass box office in copper frame. There are also eight one-sheet poster frames with glass doors, four on each side of the lobby.
The lobby is lined all around with marble, three feet six inches high, including the box office. There is a balcony suitable for a band of music directly over the box office. There is also a large foyer back of the box office, with toilets for men and women, and every convenience for the public.

INTERIOR, NATIONAL THEATRE, LOOKING TOWARD THE SCREEN.

The operating room is directly over the foyer and is nine feet wide by 20 feet long. The equipment consists of two Power's 6-A machines, one dissolving stereopticon, one spot light, and a motor generator set. All the lights on the stage, such as foot lights, border lights, are controlled from the operating room on dimmers, so they can be raised and lowered at will; likewise the indirect lighting system in the ceiling of the main auditorium of the theatre.

There is also a stage switch board which controls the lights on the stage separately if desired. The ventilating system is by the intake and exhaust system, consisting of two intake and two exhaust electric fans, which supply the required amount of fresh air to each person in the audience.

The theatre has a total seating capacity of 760. An indirect lighting system consisting of X-ray hanging fixtures is part of the equipment.

The emergency lights are in small baskets in cusps, readily seen in the interior views.

A Universal program is in use, and the admission price is five cents.

REGULATING THEATRE TEMPERATURE

With a temperature of 110 degrees outside it is possible to keep within the theatre at 75 degrees, with the humidity at only 50 degrees. This same principle works in cold weather with the heating system.

In cooling the theatre the fresh air which is taken in at the top of the building goes direct to the basement, where it passes through an air washer of 14,000 cubic feet capacity. This consists of a succession of sprays of cold water between which run pipes connected with a carbon dioxide ice-making machine exactly similar to those used in a cold storage warehouse.

The air, which has had all the dust and dirt taken out of it by the water and cooled to the desired temperature, is passed into the theatre under each of the seats at a rate which will entirely change that of the entire house in ten minutes or less, according to the size of the house. The foul air is taken out through the roof by means of ventilators in which motor-driven fans are installed with the same capacity as those on the intake.

AUDITORIUM, NATIONAL THEATRE, FROM THE MUSICIANS' PIT.

The heating arrangement works in the same manner as the cooling, except that the air, after passing through the spray, goes over heated pipes and is then sent all over the theatre.

The great advantage of this system is the fact that the air is absolutely free from dust and dirt.

This system has been installed in many of the progressive houses by the B. F. Sturtevant Company, of Boston, with great success.

To Which Wire Should the Rheostat be Connected?

By Herbert S. Anden

WHY should this question puzzle any operator? Still it has, and very recently at that. A licensed operator of long experience was unable to answer in the affirmative, when asked if it made any difference to which wire a rheostat is connected.

If one has a clear understanding of the principle involved in current flowing in a simple closed circuit, there should be no time lost in answering this question. Ohms' Law, given in books on elementary electricity, may be stated in these words: That the current is the quotient by dividing a resistance to the flow of current by the pressure against it, and clearly implies that in a simple closed circuit the current must be of the same strength in all its parts.

Then we cannot have, say, 50 amperes at the carbons and only 25 amperes in the rheostat, when the positive wire is connected directly to the carbons, and before it passes to the rheostat. For, according to this law, governing the strength of current in a closed circuit, it has to be the same in all its parts.

Any operator can easily verify this fact by the use of an ammeter, if he is fortunate enough to possess one. First, connect the ammeter in series with the circuit at the switch on the positive wire, then in series with the other, or negative, wire. It may also be connected on either side of the rheostat. The several readings will be the same, provided the separation of the carbons is the same at the time of taking each reading.

That part of a moving picture circuit within the operating booth where the rheostat is generally connected is represented in diagrams (a) and (b). This part of wiring a machine the operator has to do. And here the operator connecting up a machine may ask himself which wire goes to the arc lamp and which goes to the rheostat.

Starting with the positive wire marked “plus” in diagram (a) the current goes in the direction indicated by the arrow directly to the rheostat. After passing the rheostat it goes to the positive carbon of the arc lamp, across the act to the lower carbon, back over the other wire into the circuit.

The resistance within the rheostat checks or limits the current, and the current flowing is of such a strength as the resistance allows to pass, plus the resistances of the wire and the arc. Generally this combined resistance of the wire, rheostat and arc limits the current approximately to 25 amperes.

Referring to diagram (b) we see that the current goes directly to the carbons, and then passes on through the rheostat. The

NEW SIXTH STREET THEATRE OPENS IN ST. LOUIS

THE Strand, a handsomely appointed all picture theatre on Sixth street between Locust and St. Charles, St. Louis, opened Monday, October 26. The new house seats five hundred people, uses a five and six reel General, Universal and Mutual first run program, changes daily, and charges ten cents admission.

The Strang is next door to the Columbia Theatre, the leading vaudeville house of St. Louis, and within sixty feet of three more moving picture houses, but since its location is in the heart of the downtown shopping district, in the middle of the busiest blocks in town, it is assured of a good patronage.

Mr. D. Wemple is manager and Chas. J. Vollmer, former manager of the Princess, at Grand and Olive, before that theatre went over to burlesque, is the assistant manager.

To Which Wire Should the Rheostat Be Connected?

combined resistance is identically the same as in diagram (a).
So it makes no difference whether the rheostat is connected in before the current reaches the arc, or after it has passed it; there cannot be more amperes at the arc than in the rheostat.

Whenever the circuit is closed by touching the carbons together, and then separating, as is the usual practice, a current of electricity flows over the positive wire and endeavors to return to its source over a path of the least possible resistance.

The current finds but one path to follow, and this is over the copper wires. These wires lead through the rheostat in both sets, no matter where it is connected, and is always a part of the circuit. If it did make any difference to which wire, positive or negative (plus or minus) the rheostat was connected, what would happen when using alternating current? It then would mean there would be more current at the carbons when the current was flowing in one direction, and less when the direction was reversed. This is not the case, as operators know.

A case can be recalled where the rheostat was located on the stage near the switchboard, and the wires were run to the balcony to a machine located there. This was before the days of operating booths.

Such an arrangement was made to facilitate matters in the balcony, and to avoid danger of fire from loose film touching the rheostat. In those days the operator stood knee-deep in film after a show; no take-up reels were then used. So it does not matter even if the rheostat is more than a hundred feet away from the lamp. It is a part of the circuit, and the current has to be of the same strength in every part of it.

A bucket having a small valve located on the side near the base is filled with water. This valve has a small opening, and offers a certain resistance to the flow of water from the bucket.

The valve may represent the rheostat, and the flow of water the flow of electricity in a circuit. Now suppose this valve be taken form the bucket; then a short length of pipe inserted, with this same valve placed at one end, instead of at the base of the bucket. By such an arrangement, when the valve is open, the flow of water between the bucket and valve is greater than before, even if this pipe be of any length or of any diameter. The flow or quantity of water passing the valve within the pipe can be no greater than this valve allows.

The valve is the resistance, and regulates the flow of water.

The flow of water within the pipe is governed thereby, though there is comparatively no resistance to its source of supply, the bucket. Its only path leads through the valve.

Apollo, a Model Theatre

THE Apollo Theatre, Peoria, Ill., is one of the handsomest and best equipped houses in the state. Its every appointment has been studied with a care shown by the results of the completed structure. The cost complete at the day of opening figured $86,000.

The designer has taken excellent care that the ground occupied by the theatre should have a definite income aside from that of the theatre in order to defray overhead expenses. The ground floor has a store on either side of the lobby, and the two upper floors directly over the lobby is given over to offices. The entrance as shown in the accompanying photograph is plain as compared with the interior, though this very plainness adds to its attractiveness and drawing power.

The interior, as shown in the illustration looking toward the stage, is unique, for it is faced with dark brick. Another unique feature is the gray stone pillar on each side and the arch about the stage. This whole effect gives the lower part of the theatre a dark appearance except right around the stage, which is instinctively the focus of vision.

This is overcome by the distinct contrast of the ceiling, which is white, and, with the indirect lighting, reflects a beautiful soft light throughout the house. The darkness of the lower part is relieved by beautiful paintings by Gustav A. Brand, of Chicago, electrical equipment which are necessary for the up-to-date picture house. The use of these two machines allows an uninterrupted showing of motion pictures.

The stage, of considerable depth, is equipped with a mirror screen 16 x 18 feet, from which fine results are being obtained. The decoration about the screen, which is so essential in properly setting off the picture, is admirably taken care of. Vines have been used most artistically wound into a lattice work in a way which gives the appearance of an arbor.

The “Washed Air Purifying System” has been installed with the result that the theatre is cool during the summer and amply warm during the winter. By ventilating the theatre in this way and passing the air through a series of sprays, all dust and dirt is taken away and the air becomes absolutely pure. This is an asset to any house and should not be overlooked when remodelling.

The lobby is finished in mosaic blocks with marble columns. Mirrors are placed at intervals on the wall. This form of decoration is becoming more popular and adds greatly to the effect.

THEATRE DE LUXE IN ST. LOUIS

THE West End Lyric Theatre, at Delmar and Euclid avenues, St. Louis, is the dernier cri in motion picture houses. From the embroidered cable net curtains that adorn the glass doors of the lobby back to the screen, the furnishings and equipment is characterized by elegance and good taste.

The lobby is particularly pleasing; there are three Oriental rugs on the mosaic floor, a large Etruscan vase filled with ferns and living foliage, flanked on either side by smaller urns, and in the foreground a receptacle that is replenished daily with cut flowers.

The house seats eleven thousand persons, and gives a program of high class features. A five piece orchestra and a Vierola furnish the music. Mrs. J. W. Cornelius is the manager. A new five hundred seating capacity theatre is being planned for the southwest corner of Jefferson avenue and Hickory street, St. Louis.

OPERATORS’ BALL SET FOR NOVEMBER

THE third annual ball of the Moving Picture Machine Operators’ Protective Union of New York and vicinity, Local 306, I. A. T. S. E. of the United States and Canada, will be held at the Palm Garden, 58th street and Lexington avenue, New York, Saturday evening, November 7.

Neither time nor money has been spared in the effort to make this event the one big affair of the season. All the leading manufacturers will be represented and prominent stars of the playhouse world will be present in person. The city officials have been invited as well as the international officers of the I. A. T. S. E. In fact, Local 306 have never as yet made an effort to do anything quite so ambitious in the social line.

A MILLIONAIRE’S THEATRE

THE new motion picture theatre on Colorado street, at Pasadena, Cal., being built by Frank Dale of that city, will be opened some time between November 15 and the first of December, under the management of Jack Root, a well known Los Angeles man familiarly known in sporting and financial circles.

THEATRE BUILDING BOOM IS ON IN MILWAUKEE

MILWAUKEE is experiencing the first throes of its annual fall photoplay theatre building boom. Simultaneously with the first touch of frost come the announcements of new theatres and alterations to the value of $84,000.

All of the new houses will be of the latest and most perfect type of photoplay theatre building requirements are very strict and the men who are putting their money into the houses seem to be anxious to put up buildings that will be of credit to the moving picture industry.

John Radike will erect a theatre at the corner of Astor and Brady, costing $25,000, while H. Trinz will erect a house with seating capacity for 1,026 and costing a like amount at Twenty-seventh and Center streets. The permit for this house was taken out by A. Peters, as announced recently, and though he is interested in the house it will be run by Mr. Trinz, well known as an exhibitor in that city.

C. F. Mertz is erecting a house to cost $12,000 at the corner of Hopkins and West Twenty-fourth streets.

Samuel Mergolen will spend $8,000 for alterations on his Olympic Theatre at Walnut and Eighth streets, while A. Trinz will spend $14,000 for alterations on the Rainbow Theatre, Twenty-seventh street and Lisbon avenue.

Mr. Trinz is enlarging his theatre, adding 350 seats to his present capacity and putting in a stage.

HANDSOME HOUSE TO BE BUILT IN MINNEAPOLIS

GROUND has been broken for a new theatre, at Fourteenth avenue southeast and Fourth street. This new theatre will be built by Mr. Harry H. Green, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Minnesota, also president of the Crystal Theatre, Minneapolis.

This new theatre will have a seating capacity of 900, and its advantage will be that each and every one of the 900 seats will be on the ground floor. Judging from the architects' plans, this new theatre promises to be one of the most beautiful houses in the outskirts of Minneapolis or any other city of its size in the country. The opening is expected to be a gala one.

THEATRES HERE AND THERE

Lester J. Osborn has started to lay the foundation for the new moving picture palace on the board walk, Beach Haven, N. J., to be completed by June 1, 1915. There will be stores and flats in front of the theatre building proper, and it is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $15,000, including the land.

Swampscott, Mass., will have its first moving picture theatre on Twenty-seventh and Pine avenue, nearly opposite the Boston & Maine railroad station. Harry B. Lombard, from plans by Penn Varney, will erect the building and lease it to Allen B. Newhall, manager of a Lynn theatre, and George H. Newhall, his brother, will be the operators. The building will be of brick and have a seating capacity of about 750. It will be ready for occupancy in November.

Permits have been issued by the city building inspector, of Milwaukee, Wis., for the construction of a $25,000 theatre at Astor and Brady streets and for the erection of another one, costing $10,000, at Twenty-fourth and Hopkins.

Arthur Greene, former supervisor, will build at Twenty-fourth and Hopkins and the theatre on the Northeast side will be put up by John Radike.

The Gem theatre, a new house in Charleston, Mo., is soon to be opened, under the management of J. E. Loch, formerly of Sikeston, Mo. The new theatre will have a new Simplex machine, and will have a seating capacity of 300.

Plans have been drawn for a new moving picture theatre seating more than 1,000 people, to be erected on Franklin street, near Public Square, Watertown, N. Y., within a few months. It is said that the new theatre will occupy the site above the Lamon block in Franklin street. It will be two stories high.

Gulfport will in about six weeks or two months have another moving picture show if the plans of its two promoters, C. A. Simpson and Saul Streiffer, are successful, as they feel certain will be the case. These two men have been working out the details of the proposition for some time past and their enterprise is beginning to assume tangible form.

According to the promoters, only first class films will be shown, the men having made connection with a reliable New Orleans moving picture exchange. In addition to moving pictures, there will be shown at the new house in all probability vaudeville acts.

A new motion picture theatre to cost $3,500 will be erected at 1607 Plymouth avenue, Minneapolis, Minn., according to a city building permit issued recently to J. E. Anderson and H. A. Wimperis, owners. The building will be 115 feet deep with 45 feet frontage, and of frame and plaster veneer construction.

St. Paul, Minn., councilmen, after listening to a long and acrimonious discussion, went on record recently as favoring motion picture theatres on streets that have been devoted to a considerable extent to business, and granted to G. L. Graham a license for a motion picture theatre at 287 Maria avenue. There were seventy-two petitioners for the theatre and eighteen against it. The opponents are more interested in the property as the block where the theatre is to be placed.

Fred Zollman, well known as an attorney for the brewers of the state, appeared for the protesters, many of whom were present in person. Louis T. Herman led the opposition to the building of the theatre.

M. B. Hartmann, in pleading for the theatre, said that it will be an educational institution of distinct advantage to the neighborhood.

W. W. Henderson, contractor, has just finished an ornamental motion picture building at Military avenue and Yates street, Omaha. It is specially constructed for the purpose and has a seating capacity of 500. It will be opened in the near future. Just a block away, at Forty-second and Hamilton streets, the Delite theatre has closed. It was opened in a store building two years ago.

Louis J. Dittmar, manager of the Majestic theatre, has announced that a new motion picture house will be erected in the near future on Third street near Avery, a populous residential section of Louisville, Ky. Two sets of plans are being prepared by architects. One is for a theatre, the estimated cost of which is $43,000 and the other for a combination theatre and apartment house to cost $80,000. Mr. Dittmar says that a number of Louisville men will be associated with him in the enterprise. If a combination building is decided upon, the apartments will be for bachelors. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,100 and will be similar in appearance to the Majestic.

Use Films to Aid Nebraska Legislation

Sociological Subjects Shown on Screen with Gripping Realism Expected to Stir Up Public Opinion on Grave Questions

Special to Motion Picture News
Omaha, Neb., Nov. 3.

THE showing of the Mutual film, "Dope," at the Empress theatre here just now promises to open up a new field for the influence of motion pictures in this State.

There has been considerable agitation for more strict laws in Nebraska regulating the sale of drugs. This agitation promises to culminate in action by the State Legislature during the session, which opens January 1.

Education of the public to better understand the situation and decided opinions one way or the other toward the traffic in "dope" is inevitable after the showing of the film here.

Strict laws regarding the attention of feckle-minded children who may develop into murderers if censured at any time, will be taken up. There have been pictures shown here that probably gave rise to wider discussion and more intelligent opinions on that subject throughout the community.

The effect of quack medicines, the misuse of professional names and many other conditions that need remedying in this State furnish a demand for pictures to educate the public along lines the legislature will consider.

That pictures dealing with these Nebraska problems will enjoy a wide sale over the State and will command wide attention is obvious. And their influences for the betterment of conditions are manifold.

Lee Wertheimer, of Buffalo, owner of moving picture houses in that city, has leased the property at 918-24 St. street, Erie, Pa., from the Selden estate for the purpose of erecting a photo-play house there, according to Mr. Hayes, real estate dealer. The property was leased for ten years at $8,000 annually, and the building to be constructed will cost $30,000. According to Mr. Hayes, it is expected that the theatre will be opened next summer.

Effective Playing for Comedies

To imitate a violin or mandolin strike A and E together, or D and G together. For imitation of a calliope, street organ or music box, play some old piece, such as "Rainbow," "Want to Be in Dixie" in treble clef with both hands, accentuating left hand loud and jerky.

Thunder or heavy seas can also be used for short struggle scenes; bass clef, "right hand" F, don't use any; sustain with left pedal, a chromatic run with left hand. To break the monotony, if scenes are too long, play F sharp, A natural and C sharp (right hand) tremolo, F sharp octave or trill (left hand); crescendo, diminuendo, or both, according to picture.

For an absurd kiss, slap hands together quick. Don't do this unless it is a quick kiss, such as a man kissing a man or some other foolish situation. It can also be used when one party slaps another. This will get many a laugh if done at the right time.

For a fall, slide or anything on this order, make a glissando by running your third finger up the keys of the piano, or thumb down the keys.

The way I work this is when a party comes from the background to the center of the picture I come down from 8Va treble with thumb. When the party goes from center of picture to background I go up from bass clef to treble with the third finger; such as a horse, auto or like backing up. Gage this glissando by the action of the picture.

I have two sand blocks; one is stationary on a chair; the other I use with right hand for sneezes and so forth.

There are quite a few traps that a pianist can use, such as ratchet, whistle or auto horn; this must be worked with the foot on an old time auto horn.

Don't try to work any effects if you have to stop playing any longer than half a second or so; if not done at the right time it will spoil the picture. Now bear this in mind. Try any of the above mentioned effects unless the situations are ridiculous. It must be done at the right time and quickly.

Don't stop playing and wait for these certain parts, but work them and play, too, so to speak. Understand, I do not use the effects on all pictures; just occasionally. Where there are too many of these situations in a picture, like some of the Keystone comedies, don't work too often, as they become monotonous.

Some of these things can be used more often in the cities than in the smaller places. In the smaller town one has to play to the same people night after night; one has to be careful and not do the same thing over and over again.

This applies to your music also. We all know there is quite a difference in playing pictures in the city from a town of say, 4,000 or 5,000.

In the smaller cities the pianist has to cater to the same patrons, while in a city one can use the same music quite a number of times before it gets tiresome to one in the audience. But where you have to entertain the same people week after week (and try to hold down the job by the year) you can not use the same music often, but have to have new material right along and lots of it.

This amounts to something. It is also very hard to find suitable music, unless one gets the best kind and it does not always fit the picture.

This grade of music is a little too extraneous of the pictures.

I use only my better grade of music, such as the "Melody in F," "Fifth Nocturne," or "Fossett Goodbye" and the like, on only really good pictures, because you realize it isn't every picture that these pieces can be fitted to. According to some suggestions offered by the film producers, use such music for every little solemn scene in the picture.

The way I arrange this class of music is as follows. Never use such music unless I can finish playing at least half of it or more. If I can't do this, I wait until I get a scene long enough, so that I can play it. In this way I don't spoil a good piece of music by only playing just parts of it.

Here is another thing to take into consideration. In using some of the better music, or, in fact, any kind of music that is set to words. Take, for instance, the "Rosary," which nearly every one knows is very pretty, both words and music. There are a lot of people who know the words, and it would be out of place to play it for some scenes; say, for instance, where a soldier is dying or anything of this order.

While the music would suit such an occasion, the words would be out of place. We should try to connect the scenes as much as possible with the words. When "The Manger to the Cross" picture was exhibited at this house, some two years ago, I was asked and advised to play the "Holy City," but had to explain why this could not be used in any part of the picture.

The music was appropriate enough, but not the words, and you know it would be improper to play "Hosanna in Excelsis" for any of the picture, except at the "Entrance into Jerusalem," and especially where the music suggestion sheet advised, which was "On the Way to Calvary.

Now, some will probably object to this, but this is my idea of playing the pictures. But if the proprietor wants the music played, do it that way.

In regard to popular music and its use in this line of work, it all depends upon how your employer wants you to use it. Some exhibitors want the popular hits played regardless of the pictures.

I use the popular music between shows, and also for the opening and closing, weeklies, educationalcs, scenes and some comedies. That is where they fit the pictures. Not in the spirit of criticism, but as an illustration. In one of our nearest and most up-to-date picture palaces in the West, the orchestra played "Brass Band Ephram Jones," "By the Saskatchewan" (from the "Pink Lady") and "Funkinville Boys" for a comedy. Here is where my idea of playing the pictures would get a severe jolt.

To me it doesn't make any difference how popular a song is. I don't use it unless it can fit a picture or be played by some of the aforesaid rules.

I have a certain piece of instrumental music in my cabinet that I have only played three or four times pop music, but semi-classic. When I can fit it to a picture it sounds 100 per cent better, than to just play it any time.

About old music (popular), it is well to have quite a number of pieces memorized, if not all of the melody just enough to let the audience get the drift of it.

One can use just the title of these popular songs or the first few lines of the chorus, as "He's a Devil" or "I'm the Guy" (just that much), to better advantage sometimes than the whole song.

I don't believe it is necessary to memorize all the late hits this way, but just the big hits, as there are a lot of people who don't know all the late popular music.

In playing in small towns it is sufficient to know what are the hits just in your own locality; music in the rage in Chicago or New York, because some pieces are played out in these cities before they reach the small towns.

A pianist can play a song hit for a month or more in one of the smaller towns where there is no way of popularizing a song, and unless it is sung, he could never make it as popular as a singer could.

Music and the Picture

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the first article of a series to be run in "Accessory News" describing the leading musical instruments adaptable to the motion picture theatre.

The up-to-the-minute exhibitor has found that a successful house, in addition to its film service and first-class equipment, must offer music to its patrons to harmonize with the rest of the theatre. The music question has been a problem to many exhibitors and various methods have been tried for pleasing the patrons. The piano is the instrument most to be found in the smaller houses and while it is claimed, renders sufficient enjoyment, there can be no doubt that it is not adaptable to the modern house of ordinary seating capacity. The orchestra of from three to seven pieces may be found in many houses, but almost every one concedes that it does not always harmonize as it should with the pictures. This is because it is impossible for from three to five people to accurately follow the rapidly shifting theme of the action of a photoplay. The question of economy as well as the dependability of an orchestra practically places it in the same class as a piano for all picture purposes.

The most reliable music for an up-to-the-minute exhibitor is a musical instrument of high tone and quality, combining all the effects of an orchestra, yet controlled by one person.

The instrument is offered in three different styles and sizes adaptable to the needs of different sized theatres.

The fotoplayer is a beautiful product of fine material and workmanship and is built to withstand the gruelling strains of a motion picture theatre. The fotoplayer contains a player piano of high grade, a pressure reed organ and organ pipes of 85-note range.

In addition to this there are violin, cornet, cello, and flute pipes for orchestral effects.

The fotoplayer, of course, is equipped with orchestral bells, bass drum, pistol shot, cymbal, tom-tom, and all those traps and accessories that go to make up a successful orchestra, and allows the operator at all times to follow every action of the picture from start to finish.

The fotoplayer is easily handled by one operator, rendering at all times music that harmonizes with the picture. It is a musical instrument, giving magnificent and beautiful orchestra and organ tones, and up to date as an example of technical instrumental construction.

One of its many features is the fact that it may be played by a musician of ordinary skill, who may thoroughly control the instrument by hand playing manually or by using the ordinary 88-note player piano music which can be purchased at any music shop at a nominal figure, giving a repertoire of many thousands of musical selections.

A unique feature of the fotoplayer is the so-called doubletracker device, which carries two rolls of music at one time as shown in the accompanying illustrations and by a simple turn of the lever the operator may change instantly from a light, snappy selection for comedies, to the music of tragedies or long photo-dramas.

An instrument of this type will ultimately be in general use in motion picture houses. It is built to fit the pit, can be installed on short notice and in the event of a sale of a theatre, may be removed without damage to instrument or theatre.

Many of the most beautiful theatres throughout the United States are now using the fotoplayer as well as some of the smaller houses in different parts of the country, where the exhibitor realizes that music of the right kind is essential to the successful theatre.

REMARKABLE LIGHTING EFFECTS FROM WINFIELD-KIRNER LAMP
Special to Motion Picture News
Los Angeles, Nov. 2.

THE last series of "The Trey o' Hearts" Universal serial, from the story by Louis Joseph Vance, which was to consist of two reels, has been increased to three, following a series of telegrams to exchange men in all parts of the country who approved of an additional reel.

The cause for the added footage is a remarkable success of a newly applied electric lamp which made it possible for Director Wilfred Lucas, of the producing company, to make very unusual interior scenes, and secure lighting effects heretofore impossible. The last three reels were made at Riverside, Cal., where all interiors were made at Mission Inn, perhaps the most elegantly furnished and finished hotel in Southern California. Success was obtained by this company after numerous other directors had signal failure.

The credit is rightfully given to Edward Winfield, engraver on a Los Angeles newspaper, who is inventor of the Winfield lamp used since 1907 by engravers in all parts of the world. But recently Mr. Winfield applied his invention to motion pictures, in the filming of "False Colors," by the Bosworth-Smalley company at the Majestic Theatre.

The scenes were very successful, as are also those of "The Trey o' Hearts" film. One particular effect secured was that of a lighting scene, showing the interior of a parlor at the inn. When the lighting flashes, trees and shrubbery thirty or forty feet from the building are shown in the film through the windows.

The lamps are portable, may be attached to any socket carrying 25 amperes, with 110 or 220 voltages, either direct or alternating current, and are being manufactured by the Winfield-Kirner company of Los Angeles.

The first positive print was projected Saturday and the negative shipped to the New York factory. The picture was the talk of the Universal studio.

THIRD BLEACHMAN THEATRE IN BALTIMORE
Special to Motion Picture News
Baltimore, Nov. 3.

ANOTHER new downtown motion picture theatre will be built in Baltimore, Md. It will be strictly a motion picture house, and will be erected by Joseph Bleachman, who at present controls two picture houses in this city. The property is located at the northeast corner of Eutaw and Marion streets.

The new theatre will have a frontage of about 40 feet, with a depth of 150 feet; it will have a seating capacity of 300. The entire structure will contain the very latest in ventilation, lighting and heating.

Work on the new structure is to be pushed to completion as soon as possible, and it is hoped that it will be ready for the opening shortly after the first of the year. Mr. Bleachman now controls the Picture Garden, 31 West Lexington street, and the Blue Mouse, 28 West Lexington street. Both of the latter houses are within five or six squares of his new venture.

Bleachman has only been in the motion picture business about one year, and is rapidly forging to the front as one of the big motion picture theatre owners in Baltimore and indeed in this entire state.

ONE NEW THEATRE A MONTH IN LOUISVILLE
Special to Motion Picture News
Louisville, Nov. 4.

THE Cherokee Theatre, Louisville's newest motion picture house, was opened to the public for the first time October 29. The Cherokee is a handsome structure located in the Highlands, one of the most aristocratic sections of the city.

The theatre is artistic in design with a seating capacity of about seven hundred. It is thoroughly modern, fireproof and perfectly appointed in every way for the comfort of its patrons. The heating, lighting and ventilating facilities, according to the management, are as perfect as scientific methods in this advanced age can make them.

The Cherokee will be devoted to the exhibition of motion pictures exclusively, and only high class films will be shown. The new theatre is the seventh motion picture house to be opened here in the last six months.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX AND JACK ROSE ALLIED WITH WARNER'S FEATURES

THE poetess, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, has been attracted to the motion picture field. At the same time comes the announcement that Jack Rose has also become a convert to motion-pictures and will depict on the screen social conditions as he has seen them in the underworld. The output of these notable additions to the moving picture authorship will be released by the United Film Service. (Warner's Features, Inc.) The first subjects are almost ready for the market.

After Rose organized the Humanology Film Producing Company, he approached Mrs. Wilcox with the object of adding her to his literary staff, and Mrs. Wilcox, appreciating the vast good to come from a filming of her master lyrical efforts, consented to the converting of her poems into pictures.

The organization of the Humanology Film Producing Company was effected at Boston recently, with Rose as president. W. W. Clarke, a former member of the Massachusetts Legislature, is the first vice-president, treasurer and attorney of the new corporation. D. W. Rovertson, a pioneer in the motion picture industry in America, is second vice-president. E. V. Finch, for years on the staff of Colonel Goethals, is secretary. The company is capitalized at $250,000 and has acquired five acres at Medford, Mass., where it has just completed a large studio building.

Rose has spent several weeks in New York with the object of contracting with a service firm for the marketing of his films.

RUMORS OF HUGE COMBINE FOLLOW SELZNICK'S FLYING TRIP

Special to Motion Picture News
Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 4.

THERE is something doing in the air and that current is growing very strong. Just how far the deal has gone is impossible to state at this time but still there is something doing.

Louis J. Selznick, of the World Film Corporation was in Pittsburgh last week and hurriedly went to Chicago from this city. It is said he went there to confer with big interests regarding an amalgamation of some of the large feature film corporations of the country.

Mr. Selznick is also said to have taken a flying trip to St. Louis and then returned to New York for a conference with some of the big men in the film business.

NO CONNECTION BETWEEN THESE COMPANIES

In an article in the October 10 issue of Motion Picture News, entitled "Manchester's $10,000,000 Film Vision Vanishes," it was stated: "Two other concerns, the Topical News Company and the Daylight Screen Company, are lost in the shuffle.

On account of the prominence of Day and Night Screens, Inc., whose products are well known to the trade, a number of readers confused the name of this firm with that of the Daylight Screen Company. There is absolutely no connection between the two concerns and we trust this explanation will settle the matter.

K. C. Marshals Exchanges Across Country

Offices Now Arranged in Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Chicago, Atlanta, San Francisco, Denver, Seattle, Portland, Dallas and Los Angeles

THE K. C. Booking Co., Incorporated, has closed contracts with enough big independent exchanges to cover the entire country with its exclusive program, which now includes the releases of the Kinetophote Corporation and other features which have been obtained from independent producers.

In New England, the K. C. will book through the American Feature Film Co., of 162 Tremont street, Boston. The Eastern Booking Offices, with branches in Pittsburgh and Cleveland, will take the K. C. offerings in every instance. The Eastern head office at 1237 Vine street, Philadelphia, will book for Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey, Virginia, Delaware, and the District of Columbia. The Pittsburgh branch of the Eastern company at 432 Wabash Building, will take care of Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia. The Eastern company's Cleveland branch is 218 Columbia Building and will handle the K. C. films for the entire state of Ohio. The K. C. is also opening a branch office in Chicago for Illinois and Wisconsin.

In the South, the Atlantic Service of Atlanta, Ga., will look after the K. C. interests in Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina and Florida.

The Far West and coast territory will be covered by the service of the California Film Service Corporation, with offices in San Francisco. This company will distribute in California, Oregon, Washington, New Mexico, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, Nevada, Arizona and Utah. The California Corporation has opened branches in Salt Lake City, Denver, Seattle, Portland, Ore., and Los Angeles.

As announced last week, the K. C. has signed contracts with the Dallas Film Co., of Dallas, Texas, to take over the booking of features for Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Arkansas. For New York State and Northern New Jersey, the K. C. headquarters at 126 West Forty-sixth street will be the distributing center.

PANORAMA OF LEADING EVENTS IN GREAT WAR

A unique war film has been brought out by the Feature Films Company, Candler building, New York City. The producers have assembled scenes of the European conflict in a picture called "The War of the World" in panoramic form.

The purpose of the film is to present a complete pictorial view of the leading events, free from bias, from the assassination of Crown Prince Ferdinand of Austria to the battle of Luneville.

The picture is characterized by a sweeping breadth of action and a wide variety of scenes. There are four parts, divided into eighty-nine scenes, comprising every phase of the mammoth struggle.

The film will prove popular wherever shown. It will serve as a kind of pictorial chronology in aiding an audience to recall the fragmentary reports of the conflict appearing in the daily press.

In small towns particularly, where information concerning the events of the war has been scanty in comparison with the columns at the disposal of cosmopolitan readers, this visualization of the great war will meet with grateful acceptance.

No situation capable of picturesque and graphic treatment has been neglected in this motion picture record of the war.

The paper issued by the manufacturers is well adapted for effective display. It comprises six sheets showing troops charging a fortress, three sheets depicting dirigibles and aeroplanes dropping bombs on a cruiser; and one sheet containing portraits of the rulers of the warring countries.

Because the producers have prudently avoided anything that might excite racial and national prejudice it can be booked by exhibitors with the assurance that it will not offend any of their patrons.

Mr. Bryson of the Laemmle Film Service of Minneapolis says:

"Universal Film Manufacturing Co.
New York City.

Gentlemen:

It is very easy indeed to tell you what not only this office but our customers, the exhibitors in general and the public think of the Morgan Lithographs. They are par excellence. In fact we have never seen a single sheet of paper made by the Morgan people that has not been far superior to its nearest competitor. I do hope you are not thinking of making any change on Lithographers.

Respectfully yours,
The Laemmle Film Service,
J. W. Bryson"

And here is what an exhibitor, Otto Fees, of Parsons, Kansas, has to say in a letter to his Exchange.

"Dear Sir:

I am glad to say I think the grade of posters sent out by the Universal, compares very favorably with my competitors and is very superior to those sent out by the Mutual Film Corporation.

Yours with kind regards,
(Signed) Otto Fees, Parsons, Kansas."

WHAT COULD SHE DO?

A Drama
By Gertrude Lyon

Sylvia Fairfax, a young graduate, upon the death of her father is brought face to face with the hitherto unthought of problem of earning a livelihood. Brought up in affluence she is bewildered by the sudden change of circumstances. She answers an advertisement for a governess and secures such a position in a well to do family only to discover soon, that she is utterly unable to control the children of the family. She is discharged and seeks the city, bag in hand. Her varied experiences in the ordinary boarding house, then in a Department Store lead to a thrilling climax in the Police Inspector’s office. She is at last acquitted of theft and engaged as a detective on the police force. Her first case—one of kidnapping—proves what she could do, for she outwits the kidnappers and wins back the stolen child. A thrilling reel.

Julius Caesar

Master of spectacles, the mightiest of a long line headed by "Quo Vadis?"

"Julius Caesar" is an epoch. Beside it, all of filmdom's great creations shrink by comparison. We, who launched "Quo Vadis?", "Antony and Cleopatra" and "The Last Days of Pompeii", find no existing standard by which to gauge "Caesar."

Yet it is only six reels in length requiring, at normal speed, but one hour and a half to project.

Into this ninety minutes of entertainment have gone eighteen months of steady labor, the services of twenty thousand people, and a sum of money representing several fair sized fortunes.

THE KING'S MOVE IN THE CITY

Being an Adventure of Lord Stranleigh

By Robert Barr

Lord Stranleigh's meeting with Lady Sinclair brought the young nobleman out of the atmosphere of boredom which had surrounded him for a long time, and he soon found that life was really worth living after all. His proposal to her was met, however, with a declaration on the young lady's part that until he should prove himself really worthy by accomplishing some real good in life, she could not entertain his suit. On his way home from a reception his first opportunity occurred as they passed a house on fire. But his bravery didn't satisfy her. Later on, possessed of an enormous fortune, he heard of the McKellers who had been caught in a mining scheme and were about to be swindled out of their investment. The McKellers were in despair when young John Hazel happened to drop into the office. On learning the facts in the case, Hazel insisted upon giving Peter a card of introduction to Lord Stranleigh. Peter called upon the young nobleman and explained the whole affair. Stranleigh at once decided upon a scheme. Accompanying Peter to his father's office, he told him to give orders to twenty brokers to buy in a certain amount of stock when offered, and in this manner, not only was the scheming group defeated, but the market value of the property was greatly enhanced.

What You Owe the Exhibitor

TWO years ago one of the leading film makers made a thorough test of advertising to the public—and found it a complete failure.

The public responded and the exhibitor responded—in fact, every advertising result looked for was had. But not a single extra print was sold of the picture for which a demand was successfully created.

A NUMBER of other leading manufacturers are using the picture journals now—in their estimation—with about the same negative results.

Advertising to the trade does not bring them any results, they assert—that is, where their pictures go to the exhibitor as part of a program.

In proof of which, they call attention to the fact that much advertising or little advertising in the trade press for any length of time makes no difference whatever in the number of prints sold.

TO all of which there is but one answer; any business man will give the same—namely, that if no extra sale can result from an exceptional product exceptionally well advertised, then there is something exceptionally peculiar about the method of distribution.

WE have no desire to meddle with this rather big problem. It has been meddled with a good deal.

Those directly concerned with it know more about it than any journal does; and, at any rate, we may be sure of this—that forces bigger than men will eventually work it out successfully and satisfactorily.

We do wish, however, to present the exhibitors' side of the matter—and also our side—for the consideration of these same manufacturers.

TO every exhibitor who books your pictures you owe something beside the pictures. You owe him service.

You owe him, for instance, the regular business announcements that any manufacturer sends out.

What he wants and what he must have is authoritative information from you sufficiently in advance, to enable him to make as much money out of your pictures as he possibly can, and as is due him.

Advertising—to the public—pays him. But how on earth can he advertise what he does not know about?

THE Motion Picture News offers you an avenue for the distribution of these important weekly announcements cheaper than the letter postage rates—and ever so much more direct and certain.

This is economy for you. But there is still more.

Our readers look to us to carry these announcements for them. They charge it up to us if we don't get them. They are right. It is part of the service, a most important part, which we owe them.

Perhaps this light on the matter will explain in large measure why we solicit you so persistently for your advertising.

You often look upon it as a species of extortion on our part; we regard it as an absolutely necessary part of a comprehensive, efficient—well, just a good—trade journal.

You place your advertising, you say, purely as a matter of habit, or precedent, or sentiment: we regard it as a necessity for our readers.

You must remember this—that the reader comes first with this publication. We make it for him.

We owe you service, too; our success with you and for you will depend a good deal upon this. But, after all, the very best service we can give you is circulation—it's everything in fact—and we cannot give you circulation unless we put the reader and our service to him first.

He wants thorough, fair, dependable estimates of your pictures, your release dates, interesting news—real news—about your productions and plans—all sufficiently in advance; he wants your signed advertising announcements, wants them more than we do.

This is all part of the service which acquires circulation, and which only acquires circulation. Study carefully this issue of Motion Picture News and see the other service we give the reader.

The journal that offers you a big write-up in connection with your advertising isn't giving you real service.

Of what use is the write-up if the journal has no circulation? And rest assured of this fact—the "write-up" journal never had, never will have a circulation. It puts you first and the reader last. It wants your advertising for itself, not for the reader.

In conclusion, then, your advertising problem is not complex, whatever your manner of distribution. If you feel you owe your advertising to the exhibitor as a service, as a part of your pictures, and as a matter of selling and distributing expense, all you have to do is to select the medium which reaches him. Then you will reach him.

The medium which reaches him is the one that puts his interests first—that is genuinely and completely an exhibitors' publication.

Special to Motion Picture News

Newark, N. J., Nov. 10.

A CRY is being raised here against the "bicycling" of films, and it is a loud one, so loud that it has several times reached the ears of the distributing agencies. But, according to local house managers and exchange men, it was unheeded and the bicycling continues. It is not caused by bad business conditions, but by the desire of a few men to gobble up all the business in sight, and they aren't a bit particular what means they use to achieve their purpose.

"As far as bicycling is concerned," said Leo Singer, manager of the Special Feature Film Company of 288 Market street, "the conditions in Newark and vicinity are worse than in any place where I have ever done business."

"It is hurting the manufacturers, the exchanges, and the theatre men themselves. The manufacturers aren't getting paid for the extra wear and tear on their film. The exchange man can't get a reasonable price for what he has to sell, and exhibitors who try to play fair is unable to meet the cutthroat competition and sees his business floating away from him."

"The bicycling here is generally done with regular program service. I know cases where three houses subscribing for Universal, Mutual and Association programs swap films, and each gives a twelve reel show for the price he should be paying for a six or seven reel entertainment."

"Complaints have been made to the New York exchanges, but they are unheeded. It is about time I think, that the exchanges got together and put a stop to this business."

"I am a member of the Feature Film Renters' Association of New York and New Jersey. If we find an exhibitor bicycling our films, without permission, we charge him up for the full amount of the stolen service. If he refuses to pay, we won't let him have any more films, and he can't get them from any member of the association."

Fever of Stock Promotion/Rages in Detroit

Within Ten Days Half a Dozen Companies Are Organized to Produce Features and the Investments Seem Attractive Until the Public Learns That Those Engineering the Deals Lack Knowledge of the Business—Musicians' Union Demands Settled Satisfactorily

Special to Motion Picture News

Detroit, Nov. 10.

Detroit and Michigan exhibitors, and those interested in the motion-pictures industry, note this in your date: Motion Picture News will have its headquarters at the Hotel Pontchartrain. Drop in any time and ask for Mr. Thornburg, or you can get him on the phone, Main 6380. Always glad to get news items and meet the fellows personally.

Within the past ten days the writer has been informed that there are at least a half dozen companies being organized for the producing of feature pictures. The men promoting these enterprises are not familiar with the actual workings of a motion-picture producing company, and yet they manage to tell prospective stock purchasers what other successful producing companies have done.

As yet none of these proposed companies have done ten cents and it is to be hoped that none of them will materialize unless men are placed at the head of them who actually understand the business.

No less than a half dozen companies have failed in the past eighteen months because of the utter lack of experience and ability to properly manage and carry on the work, and today the only company that is producing in Detroit is the Esperanto company.

Men who buy stock in a producing company without knowing who is going to manage it might just as well write the word "stung" across the face of the certificate, and use it as a souvenir for their den.

Sunday Opening Defeated

The Sunday theatre proposition in Kalamazoo, Mich., lost out at the polls November 3. The complete vote showed 3,148 in favor of Sunday shows and 3,808 opposed to it. While it has not been definitely announced, it is understood that petitions will be prepared and that the question will be re-submitted at the municipal election next spring. The theatre owners feel that the question was not thoroughly understood by the people and many people failed to cast their votes either way.

The Detroit Theatre Managers' Association met on Saturday, October 31, to take final action on the sale of 5 per cent of the Detroit Manager's Union, who had made demands of a 25 per cent increase. The theatre managers discussed the subject pro and con and came to the conclusion that an increase, if any, should not be greater than five per cent.

This proposition was put to the union the following Monday and accepted. The new scale goes into effect at once. In the future the wages will be as follows for musicians playing in the picture theatres.

Where the price of admission is not exceeded ten cents and location is within half a mile of the city hall, 49 hours per week, $24.15; 52½ hours per week, $25.20, and 56 hours per week, $26.25, with leaders receiving $5 extra. Outside of the half-mile circle and inside of the mile circle, $1.50 less per week. Outside of mile circle, $3 less per week.

It should be noted that every theatre manager to keep an eye on his electric wiring. Of late inspectors from the Public Lighting Commission have been calling at the various theatres to see if the electric wiring was satisfactory, and in more than one instance they were forced to ask that changes be made in order to comply with the city ordinance.

Fire Marshals Make Inspection

A number of deputy fire marshals have been in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan the past two weeks making inspections. In a number of cities complaints were made against theatres where the exits were kept closed during a performance. In several instances fines were imposed.

Dave and Nichols, of Ann Arbor, Mich., are making quite a success with motion pictures of "live doings" at the University of Michigan. At this season of the year, the thing of greatest interest is football. Pictures were made of the Pennsyvania game, and will also be made of the Cornell football game. Later these pictures were shown at the local houses, and attracted great student crowds.

It would be nothing new to say that Mary Pickford in "Behind the Scenes" broke all records for attendance in Detroit.

Gentlemen: I have received my first copy of Motion Picture News and am highly pleased with it.

Yours truly,

R. D. Willis,
Del Rio, Texas.

This picture was shown the week of November 1 at the Washington, and it is safe to say that over 50,000 people paid admission to see it.

Miss Pickford is getting more popular every day, and it won't be long before even the Washington will be too small to hold the crowds that will want to see her. In this connection a word of praise might be said in behalf of the Famous Players company, producers of the Mary Pickford features. The plays are well chosen, and the photography in all of them is excellent.

The New Alhambra Theatre at Woodward and Kenilworth avenues, Detroit, opened on November 14. John H. Kunsky is at the head of this new house, while T. D. Monte will be the house manager.

Rosedale Seats Thousand

The new Rosedale Theatre at Rosedale and Woodward avenues, Detroit, according to its proprietor, William F. Klatt, will be ready to open about Thanksgiving Day. It will seat over a thousand people and play pictures exclusively.

The Detroit Crammy Theatre Company rented the Grand Theatre on Thursday afternoon, November 5, and gave a special exhibition of the silent "A Trip Through Dairyland" for the benefit of their drivers. The picture was made some weeks ago by H. A. Nelson. The picture shows how milk is put through the various processes of filtering, pasteurizing and bottling.

Eddie Murphy, manager of the Bijou Theatre in Saginaw, Mich., was a recent visitor in Detroit. His wife has been very ill, but is now on the road to recovery. As soon as she is strong enough she will take up her permanent residence in Saginaw. Mr. Murphy, who was formerly assistant manager of the Columbia in Detroit, has purchased the Bijou.

ELECTRIC CUTS PRICE OF FEATURES

Special to Motion Picture News

Philadelphia, Nov. 11.

The Electric Theatre Supply Co. announces a radical reduction in special feature films.

In future their price will be only $1.50 per reel. This will place the best features within reach of the smaller theatres, and enable them to please their patrons without loss.

ANOTHER THEATRE FOR FRISCO

Plans are being drawn by Architect William Beasley for the erection of a four-door class A theatre and store building to be erected at Fourth and Market streets, San Francisco, Calif., for interests represented by Sid Grauman. The Peerless Theatre, conducted under the management of Nate Herzog, occupies a portion of the two-story structure now on the site.
FRANK LLOYD MADE DIRECTOR OF NEW UNIVERSAL

Because of the excellent showing he made while directing the Turner Special Feature Company during Mr. Turner's trip east, Frank Lloyd is soon to be given a post as director of a new Universal company organized especially for him.

George Larkin, present masculine lead with the Gold Seal Company, is to be made Mr. Lloyd's lead. Playing opposite him will appear Helen Leslie, one of the youngest of the Universal stars, who, though less than four months in pictures, is already on the high road to success.

Mr. Lloyd himself will play the heavy character leads and Marc Robbins, formerly of the Kerrigan-Victor company, will also be enrolled with the new company as character man.

The films are to be released under the Rex brand.

AFTON MINEER, BEAUTY UNDER-STUDY, MAKES HIT

Afton Minear, the charming understudy of Margarita Fischer, of the Beauty Company, recently played leads in the Beauty productions and proved herself exceptionally popular from the start. She will appear more frequently in the future for the delectation of film fans.

In “The Tightwad” Miss Minear does some very clever dramatic work in emotional parts.

The subjects are in great demand here as well as abroad.

Rolfe-Alco Role Requires Spirit and Daring

And Mabel Talifero, an Expert Horsewoman, Proves Equal to the Demands of a Difficult Part in “The Three of Us.”

MABEL TALIFERRO, who is to star in the Alco release of December 14, “The Three of Us,” is exceedingly athletic. And it is well that she is so. Many of the scenes of the former Madison Square success are laid in a mining camp. Rhy MacChesney, the role which Miss Taliferro plays, is a girl well able to hold her own amid her Western surroundings. She rides, and on one occasion there is a spirited race with a railroad train. On the little stage of the Madison Square, which had more than the usual limitations of the legitimate, such scenes were impossible. But in the photography, which the B. A. Rolfe forces are preparing, the Western adventures are presented in detail.

Miss Talifero began her career at the age of two in “Blue Jeans,” and became a very popular child actress. She was with Chauncey Olcott and Katie Emmet. Other engagements as a child actress were in “Patent Applied For,” “For Fair Virginia” and “The Price of Peace.” Her first big success as a young woman was in Israel Zangwill’s “The Children of the Ghetto.” Later she joined the Irish Players of Lady Gregory. Under this noted Irishwoman’s direction Miss Talifero appeared in a number of plays of William Butler Yates, the Irish dramatist and poet.

On her return to America she found herself firmly established. One of her first parts was the title role in “Lorna Doone.”

She next appeared as Lovey Mary in “Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch.” Stardom came to her with her appearance in “In the Bishop’s Carriage.” She followed this with Robert Browning’s “Pippa Passes.” In 1908 she made a notable hit as “Polly of the Circus.” She played this role for three years. Then came her engagement in “Springtime,” by Booth Tarkington, which made an instant hit.

Morosco and Cort Allied with Bosworth, Inc.

Junction of These Two Producers With Coast Firm Gives Paramount Program Greatest Array of Theatrical Magnates in the Field

A further indication of the remarkable development of the feature film, it is now officially announced that John Morosco and Cort, under the name of the Oliver Morosco Photo Play Company, have at last entered the film producing field, having just effected an affiliation with Frank A. Garbutt, of Bosworth, Inc.

This is one of the most significant alliances ever effected between important theatrical and motion picture interests, and attaches greater prestige to Bosworth, Inc., by reason of the fact that these producers have been approached at various times by the leading motion picture producers of the country with offers for a similar junction of interests.

Among the dramatic triumphs that have been produced by John Cort and Oliver Morosco, which will now be presented to the motion picture public are “Peg o’ My Heart,” “Bird of Paradise” and “Help Wanted.”

As is commonly known, Bosworth, Inc., together with the Famous Players Film Company and the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, comprise the Paramount Pictures Corporation. The Famous Players Film Company are affiliated with Daniel and Charles Frohman, and Henry W. Savage. The Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company are associated with David Belasco and The Liedher Company, and with the addition of John Cort and Oliver Morosco in association with the Bosworth, Inc., as reported above, it may be now positively stated that the Paramount program will now distribute the dramatic output of the greatest number of powerful theatrical producers that ever contributed to a single film program.

A Firm That Will Interpret the Spirit of the West

California Motion Picture Company Will Produce Plays Imbued with the Atmosphere of the Pacific Coast, Its Romantic Aspect as Exemplified in Bret Harte's Masterpieces and the Distinctive Temperament of the People Whose Influence Has Helped to Mould the Country

HERBERT PAYNE, president of the California Motion Picture Corporation, and Alexander E. Beyfuss, general manager, recently spent a few days at the Ritz-Carlton. Mr. Payne came from the war zone in Europe. Mr. Beyfuss came from the West Coast. The latter brought with him the prints of the second production of the California corporation, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." "Mrs. Wiggs" and "Salomy Jane" were exhibited privately at the Alco projection room for the benefit of Mr. Payne.

To a reporter at the Ritz-Carlton, Mr. Payne and Mr. Beyfuss told something of the origin, plans and ambitions of the big Western producing ally of the Alco Film Corporation.

They are in touch with Alexander E. Beyfuss, who is one of the live wires among the men of affairs in San Francisco. They determined to go into the production field upon a large scale.

Effect by Able Co-operation

So the California Motion Picture Corporation was born. Mr. Payne became its president and Mr. Beyfuss its general manager. Henry T. Scott, chairman of the board of directors of the California Motion and Telegraph Company; president of the Mercantile Bank of San Francisco; a director of the Bank of Burlingame; Crocker National Bank; the Oakland, Antioch and Eastern Railway Company and the United Railroad Company of San Francisco, became vice-president and treasurer.

Charles Templeton Crocker, president of the Crocker Hotel Company, and director of the Crocker National Bank, became a member of the board of directors; Arthur Payne, brother of President Payne, and secretary of the Payne Estate Company; and Christian De Guigne, of the Parrott Estate Company, also became members of the board.

Then the work of organizing the forces began. A strong company was at once engaged for the initial production "Salomy Jane," headed by Beatriz Michelenla as the star.

While the company was being selected, business agents of the California Motion Picture Corporation purchased a large tract of land on the outskirts of San Rafael, which is about as far from San Francisco as some of the more distant towns of Staten Island. Eight acres were set aside for studio and laboratory purposes. The entire tract, available for production purposes, presents an unusual variety of scenery.

It is an open secret that many of the artistic effects in "Salomy Jane" and the forthcoming release, "Mrs. Wiggs," are due to the general direction of Mr. Beyfuss, but he will not admit the fact.

"We got the effects which the public seems to admire so much in "Salomy Jane" through the able sort of co-operation," said Mr. Payne. "During the progress of 'Salomy Jane' we had many conferences which were participated in by our two head camera men, our directors, the heads of our various departments, the star, Beatriz Michelenla, and, as the occasion demanded, laymen and other members of the company. We got the benefit of many minds, all working for one purpose, to portray for the entire country the spirit of the West as we know it and love it, and as Bret Harte pictured it.

"There is one thing I wish to impress upon you. We are ambitious to make the California Motion Picture Corporation the best and most artistic producer in the country. We realize that we could only do this by attention to detail. Consequently nothing was too small for us to overlook. Some of the film critics have spoken of the 'crystal' photography of 'Salomy Jane.' That crystal photography was attained in this way: We never took a picture on a bad day; we waited until the conditions were perfect.

"In 'Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch' the public will see again that we have given every attention to detail. When the usual producing organization puts on a court-room scene, the staging is usually left absolutely to the director. We did not do this, however. When we were ready to proceed with this scene we engaged one of the leading lawyers of the Pacific Coast, Theodore Roche, to supervise the detail.

"Blanche Chapman played Mrs. Wiggs in the legitimate, when the Liebler company presented successfully for a number of years the 'Wiggs' play, written by Annie Crawford Flexner, and founded upon Alice Hegan Rice's stories, 'Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch' and 'Lovey Mary.' Miss Chapman played Mrs. Wiggs for us. In accordance with our system of attention to detail we had Miss Chapman supervise the scenes of the legitimate play which had been specially admired and which we were using in the play photoplay.

The Public's Verdict

"In 'Salomy Jane' we have had the verdict of the public. Attention to detail, as well as attention to the big things, pays. We believe that in 'Mrs. Wiggs' we shall have a similar verdict.

"We shall give to the public 'Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch' and 'Mignon,' with Beatriz Michelenla as the star, and then we shall return to western themes. In these two productions we plan to show the public that we can compete with any eastern producing organization. But aside from this, we believe that we have a peculiar field. We are native Californians, filled with the spirit of California, and we wish to present to the world in picturesque form in such a way that it will live—the heart and essence of California and the golden west.'

Omaha Suffers From Unjust License Law

Ordinance Not Sufficiently Elastic to Give Managers Taking Out Application After Months' Privilege

THAT an unjust license ordinance operates to restrict the erection and opening of motion picture theatres in Omaha every fall has been brought before the city legal department. As yet the city has taken no step toward remedying the situation. The problem exists in every other city the same as here, they contend, and no better system is known.

When Jacob Marks opened the Clifton Theatre at Yates and Military streets recently, he had to pay the same license charge as if he had opened it last January. And his license, the same as if he had secured it last January, will expire the first day of 1915.

When C. M. Sheeley opened the Wonderland Theatre at Thirty-third and Vinton streets a few weeks ago, he had to pay thirty-five dollars for a license that had less than four months to run. William Bock, when he opened the Bock Theatre in Council Bluffs, encountered the same unjust ordinance.

Unless they secure such a license, the ordinance provides, they can be arrested and their theatre closed.

In the fall is the ideal time for motion picture theatres to open. The latter part of the summer is an ideal time to build them. But to many, just starting in the business, the unfair proposition of paying the license fee for only a short time means a loss they can not well afford. Every man who starts a motion picture theatre is not a millionaire, and to many their investment represents all they have.

Concentrated action would help. The present state of competition, however, does not look favorable for such action. The problem is a serious one here, and is becoming more serious every year.

Box Office Engages Array of Broadway Stars
Farnum, Richman, Breese, Dorothy Donnelly, Claire Whitney, Edward Jose, Richard Buhler and Stuart Holmes to Appear in Fox Photoplays

A NOTABLE galaxy of stars now forms The Box Office Attraction constellation at the William Fox Studios. William Farnum, appearing with great success in "The Battle Cry," and Charles Richman have recently joined the other leading lights there.

William Farnum will appear in "Samson," one of Henri Bernstein's great achievements. "Samson" offers him an excellent opportunity. The play revolves about a financial giant who effects his own ruin in order to wreck his vengeance on the man who tries to destroy him. Edward Jose, the producer, expects to make the "pit" scenes the most realistic ever staged in moving pictures or on the legitimate boards.

Charles Richman, being featured by Daniel Frohman in "The Man From Home," will star in the production of "The Idler," by C. Haddon Chambers. This is one of the most elaborate picture plays coming from the William Fox Studios.

Frank Powell, the eminent producer of features, who has recently come back to the William Fox fold, left on Monday for St. Augustine, Fla., with a company of stars. Mr. Powell is now engaged in the picturization of the original Klav & Erlanger production of "A Fool There Was," the Porter Emerson Browne masterpiece. Mr. Edward Jose, often referred to as the Richard Mansfield of the "Movies," has been engaged to play the role Robert Hilliard took in the original. Mr. Powell has chartered a private yacht to take his company to the land of sunshine.

Pittsburgh Screen Club Well Under Way
Dresner and Herring, Exchange Men, Head Movement—First Entertainment Held November 15 at Fort Pitt Hotel—Banquet Follows Business Meeting

The object of the club is to promote better feeling between the exchange men and the exhibitors and they want to see their get-together policy established on a solid footing and that as quickly as possible.

The first affair of the organization is to be held at the Fort Pitt Hotel, Pittsburgh, on the evening of Sunday, November 15, and a number of prominent persons, including Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong, have been asked to address the gathering.

The affair will be in the form of a banquet and business meeting. Rabbi J. Leonard Levi has also been asked to address the gathering and as he has always taken a lively interest in the motion picture industry from an educational standpoint, it is possible that he will accept the invitation.
EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. TOMMY THOMPSON’S PROGRAM POSTER AND ITS RECORD

TOMMY THOMPSON, manager of the Columbia Theatre in Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, has originated an idea that has assisted materially in drawing the crowds into his theatre. Tommy always was ready with the boosting proposition and the result has been one of big financial gains with regard to his motion picture theatre.

He has arranged a large poster which he uses in the form of a special bulletin. He takes a small part of his morning to arrange the material, such as stills taken from the reels he is running that day, press notices, a synopsis of the plays and pictures of the actors in the plays of that day. These he arranges in a manner most attractive and has it in the center of his lobby besides his other posters.

It is surprising how many persons stop and look the special bulletin board over and then go into the theatre. There is something attractive in the scheme and Tommy says he has greatly increased his receipts since he started using it.

The Columbia Theatre has been renovated from top to bottom and repainted and is now one of the most attractive theatres on the avenue. Thompson says it is a real nickelodeon now.

CATERING TO THE HOUSEWIVES

A ll day long, and especially in the morning hours, neat rows of baskets, bags and bundles and a few go-carts are seen lined up before the Leader Theatre, Washington, D. C.

"Yes, I cater to the housekeeper," commented Nat Glaser, the manager, surveying these wares, "and I find it a paying proposition. It is not comfortable for shoppers to sit in the seats laden with bundles or have some one pass them with protruding packages, so by relieving my patrons of these, they can enjoy the show more readily.

"We are the only house opening at 9 o’clock in the morning, and you would be surprised at the attendance we have during the next two hours. A good portion of these are housekeepers doing the day’s marketing or the early shoppers of the shores.

"In some cases these patrons are suburbanites, who would have no other chance of seeing motion pictures, and in some cases they are the busy housekeepers of the resident section who believe in getting an early start in everything, including entertainments.

"Saturday nights we wish our lobby were much larger, as it is the night for family buying and our reputation for looking after bundles and baskets is heavily taxed. We are pleased to have this patronage of the housekeepers."

HE NEEDS TWO BOX-OFFICES

TWO separate box offices is the scheme Manager George Fischer, of the Alhambra, Milwaukee, has hit upon to dispose of more of his twenty-cent seats. In the front of the theatre in the usual little coop sits the girl who sells the ten-cent tickets.

On this box office is a sign announcing that the twenty-cent reserve seats are on sale on the inside. Just at the end of the long lobby is situated the regular theatre box office and it is here that the twenty-cent seats are sold.

This distinction in the place where the tickets are purchased makes it out of the question for the average American man to buy anything but the best seats, especially if he is with lady, and the result has been that Mr. Fischer has almost doubled the sale of his reserved seats since he opened the two box offices. Even after a ten-cent seat has been purchased, many of his patrons change them for twenty-cent seats when they see the box office.

$500 A WEEK FOR THEATRE PUBLICITY

A n average of $500 per week is to be spent for local newspaper and billboard advertising for the feature pictures shown at the National theatre, Los Angeles, the largest Main street house, located in the retail district according to a contract made with Manager Bert Lustig by H. E. White, of the Nat A. Magnar Company, Los Angeles branch.

The National, which was opened last February, has always been a five-cent house, showing regular and Universal and Mutual program. With the change in policy to features, Mr. Lustig will follow the trail of managers of all the larger theatres of this city and increase the price to ten cents.

This contract sets a new record for progressiveness on the part of the film renter with regard to advertising, and, in fact, instances where the exchange spent anything for advertising films—unless they were placed in the theatre on a per cent—have been very rare.

The advertising through the newspapers will be very beneficial to the exchange with reference to the smaller cities of this state and Arizona. It is held that better prices can be obtained from the small town exhibitors if the pictures are advertised and the public generally becomes acquainted with them.

The first two weekly programs will consist of "The House of Bondage" and "Strangled in Paris," to be followed by "The Key to Yesterday," and all other releases of the Alliance program.
Mary Pickford Captures Philadelphia
Crowds Block Traffic in Effort to Enter Stanley Theatre for View of Star While She Sees Herself on Screen

Special to Motion Picture News
Philadelphia, Nov. 10.

TALK about your live wires! All who know Stanley Mastbaum need not be told that he is a daring and original exhibitor, but at last he has "out-Stanleyed Stanley."

It was no easy task to manage an overnight visit from such a busy and popular personage as Mary Pickford, but after untiring efforts for a month, every obstacle was overcome and all details arranged.

Mary Pickford has been in Philadelphia, spent an evening at the Stanley Theatre, has seen herself on the screen in "Behind the Scenery" and incidentally gave to the Stanley an evening's business unprecedented in its history, besides filling all the other large Market street houses with those who could not for "love or money" obtain admission to the Stanley.

"Little Mary" is a great favorite in Philadelphia, but this visit has proved that she is a magnet of the strongest drawing power. That Miss Pickford "came, saw and conquered" is but putting it mildly. Her presence packed the theatre to the doors from 7 p.m. until 11 p.m., and then there were literally hundreds outside patiently waiting a chance to see her idol. Miss Pickford, accompanied by her mother and Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players, were escorted to the Bellevue-Stratford.

Here they were the guests of honor at a dinner given by Stanley Mastbaum to twenty people, including dramatic critics of the Philadelphia papers. Right after dinner the party motored over to the Stanley, where four stalwart policemen were holding the impatient throngs in check. Clapping a bunch of American beauties as large as herself, "little Mary" posed for the flash light man right in front of the theatre.

A spontaneous burst of applause attested the enthusiasm of the vast audience which vociferously demanded a speech. Miss Pickford, in a few graceful words, expressed her appreciation of the demonstration, her happiness at meeting so many Philadelphians, and her pleasure at witnessing one of her favorite roles, Dolly, in "Behind the Scenes." The crowd outside was made happy by the presence of the star for a few minutes in the box office, where she made another little speech.

Just as the last scene of the play was flashed on the screen, the audience made one wild rush and so surrounded Miss Pickford that with the aid of four escorts she could hardly reach her taxi-cab.

For fifteen minutes traffic was held up on busy Market street, while the crowd surged hither and thither, trying for a last glimpse of their favorite.

This was Miss Pickford's first visit to any Philadelphia motion picture house, though she has been on a previous occasion a guest at Mr. Lubin's suburban home. Miss Pickford, who has just signed a contract for $1,000 a week with the Famous Players Company, was so simply gowned that a little stenographer was heard to remark, "Well, she makes in one week what I do in one year, and just look, I am more dressed up than she is. Can you beat it?"

The Pickford party was entertained at the L'Aiglon after the performance and left early in the morning for New York. On this occasion the Stanley management did not issue any reserved seat checks, the admission price being twenty-five cents straight for any seat or stand you could find.

Lasky Signs Valeska Suratt for Two Years
First Picture Will Be a Subject Having a Modern Society Setting with Actress Gowned in Gown of Gorgeous Costumes

Another recruit to the ranks of prominent stars in the photo play realm is General Manager Samuel Goldfish, of the Lasky Feature Play Company, secured the signature to a long term contract of Valeska Suratt.

Mr. Goldfish, for the past two months, has been endeavoring to persuade Miss Suratt to put her name to a contract, but without avail. Undoubtedly one of the best known and most widely advertised of woman stars, Miss Suratt demurred owing to her pending engagements. She opens within a few weeks at a Broadway Theatre in an entirely new show, in which she will star.

There is a contract pending with the United Booking Offices calling for Miss Suratt's appearance for many weeks at a salary of two thousand dollars per week.

When "Bouffe Varieties" were produced by Miss Suratt, in which she was supported by twenty-five prominent players, the vaudeville world accorded her a plan for elaborate costuming. Her "Black Crepe and Diamonds," which served as a vehicle all last season, cost in the neighborhood of forty thousand dollars for hanging pieces and costumes alone, it is said.

The contract with the Lasky company stipulates that her first picture must be a modern society subject, staged in the proper environment and that Miss Suratt is to select her own costumes.

The contract runs from November 1, 1914, to November 30, 1916, and gives the Lasky people the exclusive rights to her services for as many pictures as they desire. Miss Suratt is the big star feature at the Palace Theatre which will probably be her last vaudeville appearance until after her first picture.

The Suratt pictures will be staged at the Lasky studio, Hollywood, Cal., by Cecil B. De Mille.
Looking Ahead With The Producers

“MRS. BLACK IS BACK,” NEXT FAMOUS PLAYERS RELEASE

America’s foremost comedienne, May Irwin, in the title role of the film version of the most celebrated of all her stage triumphs, “Mrs. Black is Back,” by George V. Hobart, is the next Famous Players subject to appear on the Paramount program, scheduled for release November 30. May Irwin is inimitable as the irrepressible Mrs. Black, who deceives her husband about her age, and who goes through a period of comic anguish as the result.

Miss Irwin appeared in the original stage production of “Mrs. Black” for many seasons, and in the five-part Famous Players feature this distinguished star even surpasses the merits of her stage performance.

Kinotophone’s “Coming Power” Soon Released

ONE of the most powerful political stories ever written for the screen is about to be released by the Kinotophone in “The Coming Power,” a story of corruption in high places, written by Catherine Carr from a script by Raymond C. Hill.

The film tells a story of the power of money in politics and of the persistent and successful pursuit of an ideal. The love tale is woven into the plot with considerable ingenuity, and ends with an unconventional surprise which is effective.

The picture is directed by Edward MacKay, who is now chief director for the Kinotophone. In the cast are Lional Adams, now with the “Kick In” company, who was featured in “The Man of the Hour”; Edith Luckett, who is leading woman with Chauncey Olcott this year; Anna Rose, a favorite motion picture lead; William Crimmins, a Belasco player, and others.

Digby Bell In "Mr. Pipp" Coming Soon

THE Alco Film Corporation has set November 23 as the date for the release of Digby Bell in "The Education of Mr. Pipp," the production of the All Star Feature Corporation, and made under the personal direction of Augustus Thomas. It is a picturization of Mr. Thomas' play of the name, which is based on the famous Gibson drawings. The moving picture scenario was written by Mr. Thomas himself. Digby Bell, the star of the picturization, played Mr. Pipp in the legitimate for three years.

In the case of the legitimate play some effort was made to cast the play according to type. In the photoplay this idea has to be carried out more carefully. Each member of the picture cast has been chosen because of the marked resemblance to the Gibson original. The idea of the Gibson pictures has also been carried out in another way, for all of the localities which Gibson sketched in as background have been utilized in the photoplay. Something of the history of the Pipp family and their doings in Pittsburgh has been put upon the screen, and the house which they acquired in New York is shown in its proper Manhattan setting. Darlind's Riding Academy, Central Park, and all the other resorts of the Pipp family appear.

Digby Bell, the star of the Alco release, "The Education of Mr. Pipp," makes his screen debut in that photoplay. He was born in Milwaukee in 1851, the son of a banker, a connection that few actors have obtained. Later he became a banker himself, and followed this by becoming a member of the Stock Exchange. He was general passenger agent of the White Star Line in New York as a very young man.

While closely engaged with business, Mr. Bell found time to study music. He soon discovered that he had a fine natural baritone voice, and in 1872 he went to Italy determined to study for the career of a grand opera singer, which made a strong appeal to the young man.

Several years later he returned to America to appear as a concert singer at Chickering Hall, New York. A tour of the principal American cities followed. While this tour was very satisfactory Bell soon felt that he had had enough of music that is popularly termed classical. He turned to light opera in the John D. Martinez English Opera Company. After a tour of the United States the company struck difficulties in Montreal, Canada.

Bell followed his initial success in comic opera with many other instantaneous successes. He was John Wellington Wells in "The Sorcerer," and delighted the public in "Trial by Jury." A three years' engagement with the singing company of the late Augustus Daly followed. He was successful in "Zemina," "The Passing Regiment," "Needles & Pins," "Americans Abroad" and other operas.

In 1884 he was King Charles in "Nell Gwynne" at the Casino. Then came four years with the McCaul Opera Company, during which he sang leading parts in "The Black Hussar," "Indiana," "Boccaccio," "The May Queen" and many others. Ko-Ko in "The Mikado" was a part which has always been peculiarly associated with Mr. Bell. Other Gilbert-Sullivan pieces gave Mr. Bell many opportunities.

Comic opera stardom came to Bell in May, 1892, when he appeared in the title role in "Jupiter" at the Casino. He was successful in "The Princess of Nicotine" and "Giroflé-Girofla," "Nancy Lee" and numerous other now forgotten pieces.

Having sung and played in grand and comic opera and light opera, Bell now showed another phase of his versatility. He turned to the legitimate and was just as successful as he had been in the musical realm of the footlight world.

THANHOUSER ANNOUNCES "ZUDORA" EPISODE NAMES

Much inquiry has attached to the titles of the episodes of "Zudora," Thanhouser's forthcoming serial. Mr. Daniel Carson Goodman, creator of this new photoplay, has exhibited in his title selections a faint hint of the mysticism and surprising revelations to be expected in this production. For the first time, the titles of the first five episodes are now made known. They follow: "The Mystic Message of the Spotted Collar;" "The Mystery of the Sleeping House;" "The Mystery of the Dutch Cheese Maker;" "Mystery of the Frozen Laugh;" and "The Secret of the Haunted Hills."

In each of these episodes the author carries along his master plot through varied themes and wondrous diversity of situations. Dr. Goodman's work represents a new school in motion picture play-writing. This is a school of modern realism, and is said to be the greatest step taken so far in the motion picture industry toward the elevation of the silent drama.
In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

Special to Motion Picture News
Los Angeles, Nov. 9.

ILLIAN and Dorothy Gish, of the Majestic-Reliance companies, for the first time in their motion picture experience of several years are co-stars in a picture of their own. The picture is entitled "The Sisters," and is being produced in two reels by William Christy Cabanne. The sisters play the parts of unselfish, country sisters. One becomes worldly wise, and the other retains her simplicity. The plot portrays their girlhood days and their motherhood. W. E. Lawrence and Elmer Chilton play prominent parts in the picture.

Inceville has had a real fire, caused by a cigarette stub being dropped in the dry grass near the projection room. A blaze soon kindled, and the fire was first discovered. Great clouds of smoke were pouring from the structure. A volunteer fire department was organized at a moment's notice, and by the aid of plenty of water the fire was soon extinguished. The damage was slight.

Walter Edwards has just completed the filming of "The Cross in the Desert," a tale of hobo life, at Inceville. In this Mr. Edwards plays the part of a tramp who aids a young easterner to reach his dying wife in the west. The young man, forced to leave the train by orders of the superintendent, faces death on the desert.

The tramp, befriending the unfortunate man, compels the superintendent to exchange clothing with the tramp who proceeded on his way. In the clothing of the tramp the superintendent is denied accommodations by his own railroad, and after wandering about the desert comes upon the dead body of the young man he caused to be ejected.

Arthur Maude, an English actor, is to make his debut as leading man for New York Motion Picture Company releases in "The Master of the House," a drama of modern society life being filmed under the direction of Richard Stanton, at Inceville. Mr. Maude plays the part of the brother who induces his sister to wed a wealthy westerner (Richard Stanton), and then by the aid of mother and sister proceeds to abuse the husband in every manner possible. The westerner, however, becomes the master.

Life in Holland
Frank Borzage, Lewis Durham, Herschel Mayall and Elizabeth Barbridge play the principal parts in "A Romance of Old Holland," which is soon to be completed under the direction of Jay Hunt. It is a story of life in Holland written by Thomas H. Ince.

Messrs. Borzage and Durham, together with Leona Hutton and Gladys Brockwell, will form the cast for "A Crook's Sweetheart," an underworld story to be filmed by Scott Sidney. This depicts the fate of a double-crossing crook at the hands of a rival for the hand of a girl.

George Beban, engaged by Thomas H. Ince to play the name role in "The Italian," has been sent to Italy to make fifty-odd scenes for that production. Mr. Beban was accompanied by an Inceville cameraman, and will go direct to Naples from New York, and from that city to Venice, Italy.
TERRANCE O’ROURKE COMPANY IS STORY-TELLING IN THE BALKANS

The Terrance O’Rourke company is sojourning in the Balkans, in the making of the fourth two reel picture of the series which will appear under the title of “The King and the Man.” Several out of the ordinary sets have been prepared for this, and the natural scenery at the New Universal City will serve for the picture.

SAVES TWO LIVES

In making the final scenes for No. 4 of “The Master Key” series at Universal City a test saved the lives of the two leading people. The explosion in the gold mine sent an ore car careering on the trestle seventy-five feet above the ground, and she was rescued by Robert Leonard hanging by his knees from a mine bucket suspended from a cable crossing the track of car. Before the scene was rehearsed the car was first shot out of the mine twice. First it ran off the track on one side, and after being ballasted it ran off the other. The cable was tested by 500 pounds being placed in the bucket and shot across the canyon. When this was done it broke when about in the middle. The company is now making the fifth instalment.

The O’Rourke company, under the direction of Frank Lloyd, is filming an unusual comedy, “A Double Deal in Pork,” written by Ruth Anne Baldwin, of the Universal.

The Sterling comedy makers under the direction of David Kirkland have filmed “Noodle’s Return,” in which Mr. Henpecked Husband comes into his own by the proper display of will power. The Frank Griffin company has made “Doc’s Elopement,” in which three autos were badly smashed. Bobbie Gould, late of the Oz company, and now permanently with the Sterling, is featured in this picture. The other Sterling picture of the week is “A Bear Escape,” directed by Bob Thornby and played by the Kiddies. A make-believe and a sure-enough bear caused a rupture of a love affair.

Lumber Trust in Films

Calder Johnstone has written a very pretty one reel story, “At His Own Terms,” in which the lumber trust attempts to force an old squatter to evacuate, but when he finds and cares for the little son of the lumber king conditions are changed. The picture is being made by Director Charles Giblyn, of the U studio, and the cast includes Murdock MacQuarrie, W. K. Wilson and Agnes Vernon.

K. Hackett, George O’Brien, and Universal Jokers are making a beach comedy, “The Water Cure,” in which two jealous wives in an attempt to fool their husbands become too gay—entirely—for the beach police, and are locked up. The husbands, left on an island—that is an island when the tide is low—by the wives, are finally rescued but not until after the “better halves” are badly frightened. The cast includes William Farney, Gail Henry, Jack Francis and Louise Pazenda.

Hal Roach, at the Rolin film company studio, is back the other third of the Work family comedy series. In this “Willy Work Buys a Harem.” The comedies are released through Sawyer, Inc.

Hobart Bosworth and company are still at Banning making exteriors for “Buckshot John” from a Charles Van Loan story of the same name, and according to letters had some real time in making a lynching scene in which five men were hanged. The trouble was caused by the horses not being accustomed to work of the kind, and the poor victims had to undergo the ordeal five times before the correct picture was made.

HUTCHINSON IN SANTA BARBARA

Work has commenced on the Bosworth Company picture featuring Ethel Janis. The production of this is in charge of Phillips Smalleys and Lois Weber, and the feature will consist of four reels. What picture will be taken up first has not been announced. It is understood that James Hackett, George Fawcett, Madyn Ar-buckle and Dustin Farnum have also been engaged for pictures to be filmed in the near future.

The Santa Barbara Motion Picture company has begun producing under the direction of A. M. Kennedy, who has just returned from the East, where he made arrangements for the release of a comedy each week and a three reel feature every two weeks on the Standard program. There will be two companies organized, one for comedy which will be directed by Mr. Quirk, the other for drama to be in charge of Mr. Kennedy. The first release will be made about January 1. Mr. Kennedy was formerly manager of the Universal west coast studios.

S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, with studio at Santa Barbara, Cal., spent a few days here with Manager Johns, of the Pacific Mutual Film Exchange, while on his way to Santa Barbara. It is understood there are to be changes made in the policy of the American company, and that several big pictures will be taken up in the near future.

Neilan in Charge of Kalem

With the suspension of production by the Albert E. Hale Kalem company at the Santa Monica studio, because of Mr. Hale accepting the direction of a musical comedy company in the northwest, the studio has been taken charge of by Marshall Neilan, director manager of the Kalem Hollywood studio.

An additional company has been formed by Mr. Neilan, which is being directed by C. E. Ward, Marin Del Sais, who has been with the Kalem dramatic company at Glendale, is now with the Ward company, and Ethel Tear, formerly with Mr. Hale, is playing under the direction of Mr. Neilan.

The U zoo is short one Siberian wolf hound, Bingo, which tried to become friendly with one of the wolves encaged at the Universal City. Bingo had never been whipped before, and no one knows how long it took the wolf to do the job as Bingo broke into the cage at night. But Bingo is no more.

Francis Ford and Grace Curd and other members of the company are at Catalina Islands, where a new studio is being made.

G. A. R. Picture Full of Sentiment

James Dayton, in charge of the Universal studio department, is taking a vacation which he is spending at San Diego.

“Seven and Seventy” is the title of a one reeler made by Charles Gilby, of the U studio at the Sawtell soldiers’ home. It shows an old soldier winning the heart of a lad, and the parents of the boy taking the veteran to their home that he may act as companion for the lad. While the boy and parents are absent from their home on a summer trip, the G. A. R. member passes away.

William Garwood, who has been directing and playing leads at the American studio, Santa Barbara, signed with the Imperial company and finished his work on the west coast last week. Mr. Garwood has gained a reputation for being one of the best dressed men in pictures on the west coast, in addition to being a very capable director and actor, and he will be greatly missed here.

A Kite in Motion Pictures

Russell E. Smith, of the Majestic-Reliance scenario department, has introduced a kite in motion pictures as a way of sending a message for help. In this instance the playing is found on a narrow ledge by a victim of fate. He ties a note to it, and it falls at the feet of his sister, whom he has not seen for years. The hero of the picture, played by Wallace Smith, is rescued. Irene Hunt is the sister and the picture is being produced by Fred A. Kelsey under the title "On the Ledge," a picture which will not fail to please the public.

"Who Shot Bud Walton?" is the title of a mystery film being made at the Reliance studio, with Sam DeGrasse as the scientific detective-sheriff, from the story of the same name by George Patullo. The mysterious murder is committed by a woman, and the murderer is slain in the home of the woman's mother, assisted by R. A. Walsh and Eugene Pallette, gunmen, who have established a reputation for crook parts. The direction is in charge of Jack Adoff.

Heart Interest Civil War Story

After the lots of two sons in the Civil War, a mother prevents her only other son from enlisting by the use of a gun. This forms the nucleus of the plot for a heart interest Majestic two reel picture being made by Donald Crisp. The part of the mother is played by Josephine Crowell. The son, Elmer Clifton, is court martialed for cowardice, but pardoned by General Grant.

Doping a decanter of whiskey in order that he may not be prevented from attending a masked ball by the interference of his wife, Baldy Belmont, who plays the name part in the Majestic comedy, "Her Brave Hero," gets away with a lot of new fun of the sober sort, and besides stealing a policeman's uniform when the officer is under the influence of the liquor, arrests a real crook who has tasted thereof, and, despite the fact that he attended the ball and returned, he becomes the hero, and is worshiped by his wife. Playing opposite Baldwin in this entertaining picture is Miss Billie West.

"A Lucky Shot" is a Reliance Western single reeler in which the sheriff attempts to capture an outlaw. The bullet misses and chases off a piece of rock exposing a rich vein of gold. This incident brings about a pretty romance, a hold-up and a reformation of the outlaw. Arthur Mackley is playing the lead part and directing the production with his accustomed vigor and expert stage management.

Universal Revives Glories of Ancient World

"Damon and Pythias," the Immortal Story of Indissoluble Friendship, to Have Vivid Presentation in Elaborate Production

The establishment of the Universal booking offices is considered to be one of the most progressive moves in the history of motion pictures. Realizing that big feature films such as "Damon and Pythias," of the ancient Grecians were duplicated and everything done to create proper atmosphere. The leading parts were given to Cleo Madison, Anna Little, Henry Worthington, Herbert Rawlinson and Frank Lloyd.

Nothing need to be said of the efficiency of these artists as their work is known the world over. To support them, 1,000 season motion picture actors were employed. The actual staging of the production was a tremendous undertaking. There were sensational chariot races, whole cities were set on fire, vast armies clashed and the many other colossal scenes presented countless obstacles for the camera and director.

Knights of Pythias all over the United States and Canada have endorsed the film, recommending that everyone see it and digest its wonderful moral. In each case the production has been proclaimed "one of the most wonderful pieces of work ever witnessed."

This feature will be shown simultaneously in New York, San Francisco, Boston, Chicago, and other large cities, following which the Booking Offices will send the

An interesting show was staged and motion pictures of scenes about Fordham, taken by the Edison cameraman, were exhibited. A novel feature was the club contest in which talented members of local social organizations staged sketches in hopes of winning the prize, a silver loving cup. Mr. Phillips was selected as judge, and awarded the cup to the Washington Minstrels.

FILMS WILL BOOST "MADE IN AMERICA"

Motion Pictures Expected to Become a Strong Factor in Nation Wide Movement for Booming Industries of the United States—Corporations with an Aggregate Capital of a Hundred Million Pledge Co-operation—Of This $10,000,000 Represents Photo Play Manufacturers

THE reception accorded the plan to establish a national open-door holiday to be known as Made-in-America Day, to be brought about by a monster publicity campaign which involves the filming of all America, has been a surprise even to the most enthusiastic boosters behind the idea.

With hardly a week devoted to the pro-mulgation of the idea, the response has been so great that the movement is now being placed on a solid footing by the organization of a national executive committee.

Endorsements have come from chambers of commerce, women's organizations, industrial bodies and prominent individuals from all parts of the country. General delight is expressed that at last the preachment of the patriotic American business man, "Patronize American Industry," is to be crystallized into a practical form of expression in the organization of a Made-in-America Day. The co-operation pledged has the ring of spontaneity.

Corporations whose capital aggregates a hundred million dollars have swung into line behind the Made-in-America Day banner bearers. Of this, $10,000,000 represents capital invested in the motion picture industry.

It is noteworthy that for the first time in their history the motion picture concerns, of whom fully a score have combined forces to further the movement, have put aside all ideas of competition, appreciating the fact that in the realization of a Made-in-America Day their industry, as well as all other established or future forms of American enterprise, will gain to an incalculable extent.

Details of the Movement

In reply to manifold inquiries as to details of the movement, publicity headquar ters has issued the following bulletin:

"In view of the spontaneous pledges of support received from thirty nationally-known corporations to date, the movement to secure the establishment of a calendar holiday devoted to furtherance of interest in American-made goods, to be known as Made-in-America Day has been formally launched. The corporation funds include the Supplee Hardware Syndicate, the United States Lithographing Company, Warner's Features, Inc., the United Film Service, controlling fifty exchanges; Morgan Lithographing Company, United Motion Picture Producers' Association and twenty other motion picture companies, are preparing to secure the publishers, printing firms, mercantile and commercial corporations, with daily accessions to the list being received.

"Earliest efforts of the moving spirits in the Made-in-America Day propaganda have been directed toward securing the support of the above organizations as representing various phases of business life especially helpful in a practical sense in giving the movement its initial impetus.

"For instance, the motion picture firms which have become affiliated with the movement will share equally the expenses connected with the making of the gigantic film serial, "America," an enterprise which necessitates the sending of an expedition into all parts of the United States and which will be released in weekly sections to all the important motion picture houses throughout the country in furtherance of sentiment for a Made-in-America Day.

"The lithographic firms will contribute thousands of stands of striking posters heralding the coming of the party of boosters which will be part of the filming expedition and will co-operate with local organizations and the newspapers in the respective cities visited in arranging for a concerted expression of the population in favor of a Made-in-America Day.

Weekly Exhibition of Films

"Picture making firms and picture exchanges will make arrangements for the weekly showing of the Made-in-America films in the cities where they are located. Financial interests will use their powerful influences in insuring the co-operation of leaders in the business life of the points touched by the campaign.

"Women's organizations will have a big part to play in the event, and their special task being the organization of receptions for the Maid of America, as she will be known, the woman to be so advertised, to be chosen by contest for her qualities as a propagandist for the movement.

"At a general meeting of the heads of the New York corporations already pledged to the movement it was agreed to place J. Arthur Nelson, father of the Made-in-America Day movement, in charge of general arrangements. Nelson will accompany the staff of motion picture technicians and operatives to be sent on the filming tour in a private car, and the films will be made under the joint direction of himself and the Chamber of Commerce interested in exploiting the advantages of the particular territory to be filmed. The Maid of America, to inject a note of human interest, is to appear in these films, supported by a select company of motion picture players, who will be employed in enacting film playlets that will serve to accentuate the particular resources and unique claims to favor of the localities included in the 'filming America' operations."

It is not Mr. Nelson's idea that Made-in-America Day should be set aside as a legal holiday, in the sense that its observance involves the closing of shops and factories and cessation of public business. Mr. Nelson said on this point:

Means for Raising the Money

"Made-in-America Day, as its name suggests, is to be a day for American trade to show itself at its best. Attention is to be attracted to American-made goods by every means open to the ingenuity of the wide-awake advertising man.

"The city government will suspend ordinances prohibiting street parades, or taxes on which method of advertising, for the benefit of merchants and manufacturers who may want to combine in arranging a trade pageant. Extra special bargain sales, souvenir and free sample distribution and special musical and other entertainment in the department stores would be other forms of attracting notice to American manufactures.

"Made-in-America Day would be the day of inaugural events in fashion show or auto show weeks. There would be special photo-play features exploiting home industries.

Chicago's Mayor Sees "Julius Caesar"

Chief Executive Expresses Keen Interest in Huge Kleine Production Depicting the Life of the Greatest Man in History

Special to Motion Picture News

Chicago, Nov. 11.

MAYOR Carter H. Harrison, of Chicago, and the Rev. M. Lawrence, publisher of the Chicago "Examiner," were guests of George Kleine at a private exhibition of Mr. Kleine's big, new six-part spectacle, "Julius Caesar."

The mayor was delighted with the picture and expressed his amazement at the monster scenes. He was particularly impressed with the tremendous climax which occurs at the end of the fifth reel where twenty thousand people, clad as Roman soldiers, Egyptians, Gauls and the representatives of all Rome's captive nations, made their entrance to the battle scene.

In actual footage this scene measures 276 feet. Through aisles of cheering,贯通ating people march the costumed thousands ten abreast. The steps, walls and roofs of a score of temples as far as the camera's eye can reach, present a picture of massed humanity that cannot be easily forgotten.

George Kleine's, "Spartacus" was shown Pittsburgh newspaper men at a private exhibition in the New Mills Theatre, C. H. Miles, in association with Marcus Loew and Sullivan-Considine, has opened up the old Pitt Theatre as the New Mills, using vaudeville and pictures.

Jane Addams, of Hull House, Chicago, is one of the many educators who are anxious to see George Kleine's big new multiple, "Julius Caesar." The famous Chicago woman expects to show "Caesar" to the poor children embraced by the charitable works of Hull House, in the very near future.

The magnitude of the spectacle and its strong human interest features make it highly appropriate for children as well as adults.
As soon as the public understood that the films were to be with them always, they demanded improvement—then and there. The manufacturers were willing enough—they all wanted to boom their business.

Since, quality of motion pictures has increased to an amazing degree. But, inconsistently, the public is still paying practically what it did in the days of the first crude "store-shots."

This is a condition unprecedented, unparalleled in any other industry, except where improvement of product has decreased cost of manufacture.

As everyone knows, the production of the better class films has been attended by tremendous increase in manufacturing costs. This is one of the points most strongly emphasized by Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Company, in his recently inaugurated campaign for higher prices.

Mr. Laemmle urges that exhibitors pay higher rental for their films and charge higher admission prices to cover the difference.

This is the argument which Motion Picture News has advanced for months. It is not a move solely for the benefit of the manufacturers, as it might appear to the un discerning.

It is something absolutely necessary, if the film industry in all its branches is to be kept healthy, prosperous and constantly moving forward.

If better pictures are to be produced, the makers must have more money with which to meet the heavy expenses. The ultimate consumer of motion pictures is the person who pays to see them.

He is now demanding the best, and he is willing to pay for it.

This is the important fact every exhibitor must appreciate. Give your audiences the best you can get, and charge them accordingly.

As soon as the manufacturers see that exhibitors generally are taking this course, they will be glad to spend more on production.

The increase then will not come from the exhibitor, but from the public.

It is obvious that admission prices can be raised only when the exhibitors are well organized. If each man is trying to run his theatre regardless of the common good—which means his own permanent good—prices will be kept down and even cut. This is destructive of all progress.

Already numerous examples have been cited in the columns of Motion Picture News of theatre owners who have successfully raised admission prices.

In many cases exhibitors have been led to raise prices through an efficient local organization. The success which has attended such movements can easily be duplicated elsewhere.

By state and national organization along solid lines it can be made even more certain.

The one thing necessary is that the exhibitor look to the future.

Organization may mean a small sacrifice of time and money. In the end it is sure to prove an advantage to every manager.

The exhibitor who refuses to ally himself with his companions is only hurting himself in the long run. Why be so short-sighted?
Milwaukee Man Predicts Dollar Pictures

Manager Saxe Sure New York Will Not Be Only Place Where Admission Price of This Figure Can Be Obtained—One-Cent Shows for Schools

Special to Motion Picture News
Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 10.

A PROFOUND sensation was created in photoplaysdom recently by an interview that Thomas Saxe, head of the Saxe Amusement Company, gave to the local papers, in which he predicted that the time was not far distant when the public would pay one dollar for a photoplay as readily as they now pay $1.50 for a musical comedy or a dramatic production, and that the dollar photoplay house would not be confined merely to New York, but would soon be in every city.
